Apathy

By William A. Johnston

HAVE the season's pictures been sold? Apparently not.

Exhibitors are not buying—especially in block. They are watching product with a wary eye. They want facts, a lot of facts, before they buy.

Naturally.

How, may we ask, are they getting this information?

* * * *

In last week's issue of this publication, three current release features were advertised to exhibitors by as many companies.

Another company called attention to the fact that two so-called road show pictures are to be included in its program for the year.

Two newsreels referred to Lindbergh.

And this comprises the advertising news of the week in a representative trade paper.

This is the offering to some 15,000 picture houses by a trade which spends several hundred millions a year in making and selling pictures.

This is to be the reflection abroad of the one American industry which at present dominates a world trade, and has its own selling exchanges all over the globe.

* * * *

In considering this situation let us, at once, put completely aside all thought of the trade paper—its welfare, present and future.

That is, comparatively, an exceedingly small matter.

The issue is the welfare of an exceedingly large business, and one in which advertising is a major economic factor.

And the query we put here is simply this: why this all but negative effort to promote the distribution of several hundred million dollars' worth of merchandise?

* * * *

Is there no competition between the distributing companies?

Apparently there is.

Sales conventions have just been held by all the distributors from Atlantic City to San Francisco. The combined cost of these gatherings was, probably, close to two million dollars.

Their object, of course, was to furnish an army of salesmen with the spirit and equipment of the year's selling campaign.

We assume that the salesmen are now busy. I should think, however, they would feel rather sick when they observe their companies' support given them in the trade papers.

* * * *

So much for the new pictures.

What about the pictures contracted for and being played?

During a week in which 15,000 theatres are expected to collect some ten million dollars from the public no service whatsoever is offered the exhibitor on any picture by any company in any trade paper.

Most of the people who pay in the weekly millions at the box-office are brought there by advertising.

And the exhibitors who do the advertising for the trade take trade papers, we happen to know, to get information and ideas which will help them advertise.

Very well. There are, we repeat, five pictures mentioned in the advertising pages of our last issue. And they are merely announced. No booking or exploitation service is given.

Pictures which were made because of exploitation advantages are flopping right and left. They are not being advertised.

The country right now is aviation mad. Exhibitors everywhere have been fighting to get the Lindbergh newsreels and have cleaned up on them.

Yet only a single aviation feature is advertised in Moton Picture News.

If a trade paper is a reflection of its trade—and if not, what on earth is it?—it would appear that advertising effort at its headquarters in New York—the fountain head of trade information—has just lain down and died.

* * * *

This is an amazing and a serious situation.

So serious that it calls for the best and coolest thought of the men at the top of this trade.

We are keen, just now, to check the unbridled ex-

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

THE question before the house of motion pictures today is whether the public wants picture entertainment or an amazing conglomeration of vaudeville, jazz and circus stunts.

Isn't it about time we found out?

James R. Quirk seems to be pretty sure of his own public. In the July issue of Photoplay he says:

"What this country needs more than good five cent cigars is good twenty-five cent movies.

"If I want acrobats, Swiss bell ringers, contortionists, clog dancers or mammy sobbers I can go to a vaudeville theater. If I want second-rate Italian baritones or German sopranos I can go to grand opera and be bored. If I want symphonies, I don't want to hear them murdered.

"I like my pictures straight, and I am but echoing the voice of millions of cinema enthusiasts when I cry out for a theater where I can get a fairly good movie and three reels of news pictures for fifty cents.

"Big exhibitors have gone daffy on fantastic architecture, symphony orchestras, prologues, toe dancers, and other forms of cinematographic sauces. A chap wants a nice square meal of steak and fried potatoes with a large cup of coffee, and he has to wade through a banquet beginning with hors d'ouvres and ending with fromage avec creme fouettee and demi-tasse, or goes hungry.

"I love to go to the movies, but I am tired of hearing the '1812 Overture.'"

"When the drums begin to bombard Moscow and the Kremlin starts to blaze I burn up.

"Sometimes I sigh for the good old days when I could slip into a seat to see 'Tillie's Nightmare,' and see Tillie's instead of the theater manager's.

"The best of the picture palaces are worthy enterprises, marvels of diversified entertainment. You can take your vaudeville or leave it, and you can telephone and learn the exact hour at which the feature is shown, enjoy it, and leave the toe dancers and operettas for the folks who don't dare to go home because Pa is trying out a new loud speaker on the radio.

"But the Lord preserve us from those second rate movie palaces which initiate high class presentations like the little Japanese imitate American-made locomotives. They imitate everything, including the defects, and the result is a combination of twenty German street bands in plush dinner coats and vaudeville acts that never got beyond Little Rock, Ark."

Sidney Cohen's Screen Press also explodes editorially as follows:

"In every large city in America you will find elaborate motion picture theatres in which the pictures themselves are the least important features of the program. These programs have symphony orchestras, jazz bands, soloists and choruses, ballets, Black Bottom contests, vaudeville headliners, atmospheric (?) prologues, and all manner of acts and stunts to entertain the patrons. These theatres are nominally motion picture theatres; actually, they are nothing of the kind. They are glorified vaudeville houses, with motion pictures thrown in as a sort of afterthought."

And this observation is followed by what seems to us a most practical statement, one that an exhibitor would make:

"It is the vast public which patronizes the neighborhood houses and the thousands of theatres in the smaller communities that make possible the profits of this industry. These theatres have little but the picture to offer this public. If the chief makers of pictures, therefore, are indifferent to the quality of the pictures they turn out because of their own big theatres, in which the picture is not the thing, they entirely overlook the fact that these big theatres of theirs represent only about 3 per cent of the theatres of the country, and that the other 97 per cent will never tolerate a continuous supply of inferior pictures."

It is our own belief that a lot of communities today are merely suffering vaudeville to see some pictures or else staying away in good measure because a lot of people simply cannot stomach such downright cheap and tiresome attempts at entertainment. We believe that a lot of theatres will soon be faced with opposition —new and more attractive houses offering good music and featuring the excellent short subjects with which the market abounds.

But let's find out.

Theatres can go direct to their public with questionnaires, and find out what the people want.

That will tell the truth quickly enough.

EXECUTIVES of a theatre circuit in upper New York State propose to establish a school for the training of young men in the business of theatre management, as related in an article in this issue.

More than ever competent management is needed in the theatre business, for no matter how attractive the theatre architecturally, no matter how excellent the technical equipment, no matter how appealing the pictures and supplementary units of the program, it takes sound, efficient management to bring these individual elements into proper balance and harmony.

The problem of training in theatre management for the young man turning to this work to make his mark and fortune in the world is an important one, and possibly the school conducted by theatre operating companies will provide the solution.

No less important is the need for the constant extension of knowledge and grasp of the business of management by those actively engaged in the work. For the longer a man serves the more responsibility is saddled upon him, the more is expected of him by his organization and the public to whom he caters. For such the way is clear. It lies through the path of contact, information, news concerning the accomplisments and activities of other men similarly occupied. "Business reading" is one of the most important phases of this "graduate work".

The trade paper, and perhaps particularly those specialized features of the trade paper service---among which "The Showman" occupies a place of marked prominence---supplies a means to greater knowledge and accomplishment which forward-looking and ambitious theatre men are using to their own advantage and that of the business in which they are engaged.

CAMERA VIEWS OF NEW YORK'S LATEST NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE

BUILT from plans by Thomas W. Lamb, architect, the new F. F. Proctor theatre in the heart of the Yorkville section of New York City, is a playhouse of beauty and elegance combined with modern improvements and equipment.

This theatre is located at Eighty-Sixth Street and Lexington Ave. The playhouse and the office building of which it is a part stands out as the most imposing and pretentious structure in that vicinity.

The interior decorations and furnishings, arranged under the personal supervision of Mr. Edward F. Albee, head of the Keith-Albee Circuit, with which this new theatre is affiliated, are one of the distinguishing features of this newest addition to the palatial neighborhood houses in New York.

The color scheme is a rich rose and gold, with draperies of gold hung in Italian style. Ebony and gold chandeliers with crystals and flame tint lamps provide a warm and restful illumination in lobby and auditorium.

Below—The mezzanine promenade, fitted with comfortable chairs and divans, a pleasing and restful lounge

Above — The smoking room, another luxurious lounging place provided for patrons of this Yorkville neighborhood house

On the right is a view of the ladies' cosmetic room at Proctor's Yorkville Theatre

Decorations of the theatrical type are often successful for treatment of a casual room. An especially fine example is the "Sheik's Harem," pictured above, which serves as the ladies' rest room at Loew's State Theatre in St. Louis.

Above is shown a corner of the men's smoking room at Loew's State, St. Louis. The mantelpiece is constructed of stones indiginous to the locality and is one of the outstanding features of this comfortable and artistically arranged public room.

CHICAGO'S NEW MARBRO PROVIDES LAVISH SETTING FOR PICTURES

ANOTHER magnificent picture theatre, designed by Levy & Klein, architects of Chicago, and built by Marks Brothers at a cost of $3,000,000, was opened to the Chicago theatregoers the latter part of May with the formal launching of the Marbro, located on West Madison St. near Crawford Ave.

The Marbro has a seating capacity of 4,100 and, with its addition to the houses operated by this circuit, brings the Marks Brothers into the front ranks of de luxe theatre operators in the Chicago territory.

The theatre is massive in its proportions, and colorful as to design. The architecture is an interpretation of the Spanish Renaissance style.

Luxurious surroundings are provided for hold-out crowds in the spacious and magnificently decorated grand foyer, and the auditorium likewise presents a scene of splendor.

The opening of the theatre, at noon on Saturday, May 28th, was accompanied by a celebration, which included a street pageant staged by local business organizations. The Marbro programs will feature motion pictures, music and stage presentations.

The exterior of the Marbro features the rich detail and massive proportions which distinguish this new playhouse in Chicago.

OUTDOOR EFFECT FEATURES NEW CLEVELAND THEATRE

Hilliard Square is Beauty Spot of Residence Suburb

THE Hilliard Square theatre, the newest link in the Universal-Brody chain of local motion picture theatres, and recently opened to the public, sets a new high standard for neighborhood houses. Located in the residence suburb of Lakewood, at the intersection of Madison Ave. and Hilliard Ave., the $350,000 building stands out as a beauty spot. There are two entrances into the main foyer. One is on Hilliard Ave. and resembles the average entrance to a theatre. The other, however, is unique, in that it opens on Madison Ave. and the foyer is reached by means of a fascinating arcade way in which tapestry brick is arranged in fancy patterns. This arcade entrance smacks of foreign lands and is a fitting introduction to the theatre itself.

The theatre offers something entirely new to Cleveland. It is strictly Spanish in style. Once in the auditorium you think you are in a true Spanish patio. Everything is done to obtain an outdoor effect, starting in the foyer, which features circular staircases with small grilled windows at different heights to break the line of the stairway.

There are 1,700 seats in the new Hilliard Square theatre—1,100 on the main floor and 600 in the balcony. Everything in the auditorium is planned with the idea of getting the outdoor effect. The walls are done in exaggerated antique plaster, such as is generally used for exteriors. The exit doors are topped with marquees and exterior door overhead decorations. On one side of the wide stage are columns two story high, and on the top is a roof garden such as is found in Spanish homes. Trees stand forth. Pots of flowers and hanging flowers are in evidence. And embroidered Spanish silk shawls hang over the balustrade of the balcony. A red tile roof extends over this balcony, adding color and reality to the effect. Small balconies also decorated with flowers and Spanish shawls break the wall on the opposite side of the auditorium.

A National Institution

A Message to Builders of Better Theatres—

Who will be responsible for the mechanical correctness of your theatre when finally its doors are opened to the public?

Can you check that responsibility up to ONE INDIVIDUAL or ONE FIRM or will it be necessary to rely on as many different firms as there are different articles of equipment in your house?

Through the NATIONAL ONE-CONTRACT EQUIPMENT PLAN, this great organization of theatre equipment specialists is ready to assume full and final responsibility for your ultimate satisfaction.

National Engineering Service insures a correct start through a pre-conceived plan of procedure. And then on through the entire process of making a superb theatre out of four bare walls and a roof, National Service relieves the builder of wasted time, worry, expense and the possibility of errors in construction or selection of the equipment.

Service before and after sale—service at installation—service in maintenance. Is there a more logical appeal to your good judgment?

Any National Representative Will Explain to You the Economy, Efficiency and Many Other Advantages of the One-Contract Equipment Plan.

Fox Detroit Theatre of Massive Design

Palatial Cinema Seating Over Five Thousand, Adapted From Oriental Architecture, Will Be Located in Large Downtown Office Building

WHEN construction on the new 5,027 Fox theatre is completed, Detroit will have the second largest theater in the country.

Several novelties in theatre building are introduced in its design. Seating arrangements of the older-type theatres have been eliminated by the inclusion of a 3-foot aisle in front of each row of seats, allowing passage for patrons without making it necessary for those seated to rise. Escalators, or moving stairs, will carry theatre-goers from the lobby to the mezzanine and balconies. These will be erected in addition to the regular stairways required by law.

The large elaborate lobby is planned to house a special organ for the benefit of people entering the theatre or waiting for seats. Its dimensions are 65 feet wide, 125 feet long and 80 feet high.

Interior design has been adapted from the Oriental style of architecture, both sides of the auditorium spanning a distance 175 feet in width and 110 feet in height being flanked by large colonnades and behind these a promenade where patrons may stroll will be situated.

The auditorium's main ceiling will be erected as a huge canopy and decorated in the magnificence of the Durbar. Lighting effects in the sky above this canopy and behind the column will give the theatre an atmospheric effect and a glow that will cause the house to be practically lighted in such a manner that the decorations may be appreciated during the usual dark periods when films are shown.

An elevator platform, raised and lowered by pneumatic pumps, will seat the 100-piece orchestra and a similar mechanical device will change the stage's position for unusual effects.

The theatre and office building costing $7,000,000 is a unit of the chain of houses to be operated in St. Louis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and other large cities. S. L. Rothafel, it is understood, will have full charge of all productions to be shown here.

The building is being constructed for the Colwood Company of Detroit. It will be of face brick with terra cotta trim and granite base, in rough color and texture. The architects are C. Howard Crane and his associates, Elmer George Kiehler and Ben A. Dore.

The Detroit theatre will be one of the key houses in the greatly expanded Fox circuit, which is planned under an ambitious building program now being carried out by the company.

Detroit now has a total of about 132,000 seats in theatres coming within the classification of picture houses, and this addition to the capacity of the city's cinema resorts is not regarded with the alarm among theatre men that the Fox theatre for St. Louis, on which excavation has been started at a site at Grand and Washington Boulevards, has aroused in picture circles in that city. The St. Louis house is to have a capacity of 5,000 seats, according to the annuonced plans.

According to reports current since Fox acquired the Roxy theatre in New York, it is likely that presentations of the Roxy type, and possibly personally supervised by Roxy, will be offered to Detroit theatregoers when this new cinema palace is completed, for it has been rumored that stage divertissements arranged and produced at the Roxy will be circuited to other de luxe theatres in the Fox chain.

A Complete Service

Edison MAZDA Lamp factories, warehouses and distributors are so located that an immediate supply of all types and sizes of lamps is always available in every section of the country.

Sales offices are located in seventy-five cities. Lighting engineers at these offices are ready to lend advice and assistance on any matter pertaining to the lighting of a theatre. Free service on theatre lighting and projection is offered also by the Edison Lighting Institute at Harrison, N. J.

Edison MAZDA Lamps are of the highest standard of quality. Through MAZDA Service the benefits of world-wide research and experimentation carried on by the General Electric Company, are given to the manufacturers of MAZDA Lamps.

Winning New Patrons With Plain Facts About the Pictures

F & R Booklet Informs Public Concerning Picture Industry

FINKELSTEIN & RUBEN, which controls more than 100 moving picture theatres in the northwest, has set out to educate its patrons in the problems of exhibitor, in the intricacies of the movie business, and incidentally to win many new friends and picture-goers in the territory which it now serves.

To this end Ben J. Ferriss, general manager of advertising and publicity for F. & R., has prepared a 16-page booklet which the firm is distributing to its patrons. A first edition of 50,000 copies is already off the press and in the hands of the theatre patrons, while a second edition is being prepared.

The booklet is an attractive publication titled "What the Public Doesn't Know About the Movies," and has the smiling face of Colleen Moore upon its cover page. Under the heading of "Making You Happy," the book's purpose is explained to the reader in this fashion: "We designed it [the booklet] primarily to acquaint the 500,000 weekly patrons of our theatres with some of the inner workings of the movie business. Its second purpose is to interest and inform the people of this community who are not regular movie patrons. You'll know a lot more about the movies when you have finished reading the following pages."

This last sentence is not an idle boast. The booklet actually contains dozens of facts which are of extreme interest not only to the casual theatre-goer but to the person who makes pictures his hobby. Various phases of the exhibition game as well as of the industry itself are covered thoroughly and in a very interesting way. Under the heading "Friends of Millions" there is a short sketch of the history of moving pictures, with a reference to the fact that "movies are now being shown in 20,000 theatres in the United States" and that "fifty-five million fans, or half the population of the country, enjoy the movies every week. Here, too, the reader is told that the business employs 300,000 men and women, and represents an investment of a billion and a half.

Under the next heading, "Miles of Amusements," the public is told of the great number of pictures produced, and of the efforts which are made to select those which will have the widest popular appeal. In this connection the book says: "So you see that we must purchase all kinds of pictures to meet the varying demands made upon us by patrons from every walk of life. We buy pictures to suit your tastes, not ours. We want you to have the best on the market. Therefore we contract with all of the recognized and reliable leading companies of the movie industry."

"Where the Stars Twinkle" explains that the booking of pictures is a very complicated matter. The firm explains that it must book about 15,000 feature pictures, comedies, scenics and other special movie subjects each year, and that certain types of pictures must be booked for certain types of theatres. "You may not always agree with us that a certain picture should have played a certain theatre," the book goes on to say. "However, you may rest assured that a particular picture was booked only after careful consideration of the public's preference. We want you to see the pictures you like best in your favorite theatre."

50,000 copies of this booklet, designed to acquaint the public with some of the inner workings of the movies have been circulated by F&R. The first edition, with the picture of Colleen Moore, First National star, on its cover, is titled "What the Public Doesn't Know About the Movies!"

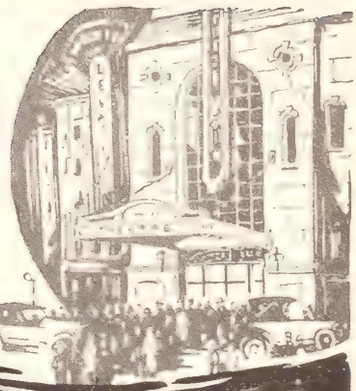
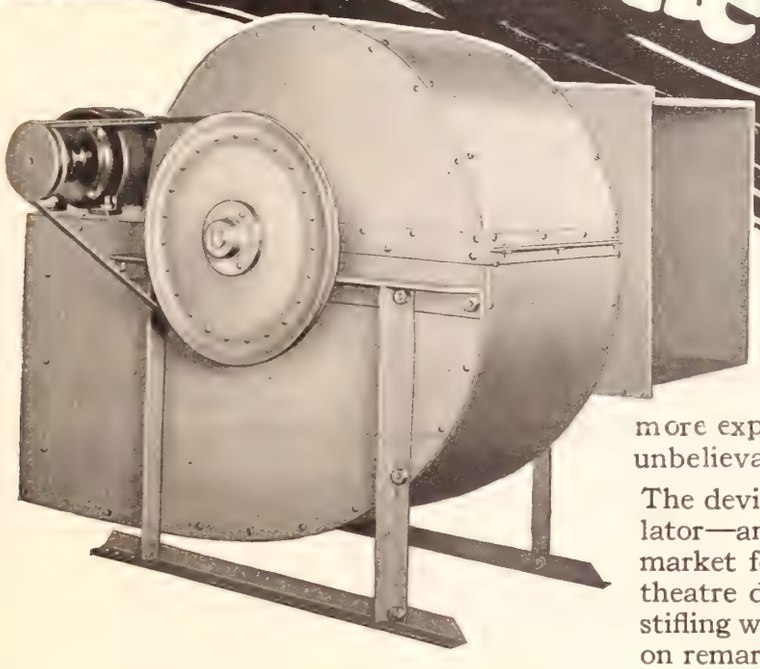
The next section of the book deals with "First Run Pictures." Here the difference between "first run," "second run" and "general release" is explained. Here, too, it is pointed out why Finkelstein & Ruben is unable to procure certain "first runs." "Sometimes we are even unable to buy 'first run' pictures," the book reveals. "This was notably the case with 'The Big Parade.' When it played 'first run' in the Twin Cities we were asked why Finkelstein & Ruben did not show it. Pictures like this are not offered to us for 'first run' showing. They are put in the 'road show' class by their producers." The book then goes on to tell what a road show is. This section will no doubt be particularly effective, as many often express wonderment that the legitimate houses are able to show the biggest pictures while F. & R. must sometimes wait for months until they can be shown.

Under "Key City Advantages" the booklet explains why "some pictures play the smaller cities on the Finkelstein & Ruben circuit befort they are shown in Ruben circuit before they are shown in the Twin Cities." The answer, it says, is simple. "Theatres in the smaller communities change their programs three and four times a week." The film companies, it points out, cannot hold back pictures from the country districts to enable the larger cities to play them first. And, since the country districts use film at a faster rate, they often obtain the pictures first. This section also states that the northwest often sees pictures before they are shown in Chicago, and that in the case of "It Must Be Love," the northwest was introduced to the picture before New York.



"Artists in Person" deals with the vaudeville acts which are shown in connection with the movies at many of the F. & R. houses. It tells how much time and effort are expended getting acts of merit, and of the great cost connected with this end of the business. "Single acts, and by that we mean acts with one person, get anywhere from $250 to $3,000 a week," the reader is told. "In the case of Gilda Gray, the noted dancer, more than '8,000 was paid for one week's appearance in one of our Twin City theatres." The uncertainty of this phase of the business is likewise stressed: how Lee Morse, the blues singer, suffered a sore throat during her Twin Cities engagement and how one of Gilda Gray's dancing girls injured her ankles, detracting from the effectiveness of the act.

"To the Kiddies" is the title of the next section. Here is related the story of F. & R.'s effort to please the children, of the special matinees it has staged for the youngsters, of the gifts it has given away to them, and of the opportunity it has afforded talented children to get stage experience through the annual Kiddies' revues staged in Minneapolis and St. Paul.



"It's a Gamble" tells how the box-office value of a picture can never be definitely gauged in advance; how some of the pictures which promise the biggest things flop the hardest at the box office,

It keeps theatres CROWDED

because it keeps them COOL

At last, a sure shot attendance builder for the summer months, at a price every exhibitor can pay. Does everything a more expensive cooling system can do—and at an unbelievably low price.

The device is the quiet Lakeside Cooler and Ventilator—an amazing invention. Nothing like it on the market for the money. A size that will keep your theatre delightfully fresh and cool during the most stifling weather is offered, ready for easy installation on remarkably easy terms.

A little a day for one year and it's paid for Successful exhibitors consider cooling and ventilating as business insurance not expense. And the quiet Lakeside has no competition on that basis. Set aside a small sum a day and in one year the size you require is paid for. It will keep on giving dependable service for year after year. It's unreservedly guaranteed. All metal construction.

Leading engineers endorse it highly

Nobody can offer you a cooling system at quiet Lakeside low prices that equals the quiet Lakeside for efficiency. With its low speed motor, S K F ball bearings and Tex-rope drive you have to strain your ears to hear it running. Engineers say that this feature plus its special improved method of deflecting air without drafts puts the quiet Lakeside in a class by itself. All the air that the quiet Lakeside takes in is circulated through the theatre—none stays in the drum.

Reserve one now—mail the coupon—no obligation

At these prices we expect to be oversold before the summer half starts. If you want to make sure of getting a quiet Lakeside, mail the coupon and it will act as a reservation order without obligating you to buy. Remember your theatre needs ventilation all year as well as cooling ventilation in hot weather. Your quiet Lakeside circulates fresh warm air as efficiently as fresh cool air —meets ventilating requirements of all health boards. Take a real step in the direction of net profit protection. Why Not Project Your Press Book

Its Mission is Best Fulfilled When it Serves as Slave and Not Master of the Showman

By Victor M. Shapiro
Advertising and Publicity Director
United Artists Corporation

THE showman who only projects his film and fails to project his pressbook is doing his pocketbook a great injustice. Just as film has the power to entertain when light hits it, so do pressbook ideas have power to draw when a showman's imagination shines through it.

Today, in showmanship, the idea is the thing. Ideas are dollars. But ideas asleep between the covers of a pressbook with a desk weight as a blanket are useless. Showmen can and should give "light and more light" to pressbook ideas, thereby transmitting ideas into cold cash.

Consider the pressbook. It is of three kinds. First, there is the useful pressbook without any attempt at embellishment or beauty; secondly, there is the pressbook that combines beauty and usefulness; and thirdly, the pressbook which is just a beautiful thing.

For the purpose of this article, we shall consider only the useful pressbook—beauty being a matter of taste, anyway.

What is the purpose of the pressbook? Does it fulfill its mission to the showman? How can a showman get the most out of it?

Every film has at least one distinctive idea which makes it attractive to an audience, says Mr. Shapiro, and around this idea the creator of a pressbook usually centers his ticket-selling ideas.

Try those questions on your "Ask me another" man.

In general, the answer will be its purpose is to provide a groundwork for the most effective exhibition of the film. It fulfils its mission when the contents of the pressbook are sensibly applied. A showman gets the most out of it when he adapts pressbook ideas to his own experience and to local conditions which he is best situated to appraise.

Why is the pressbook created? In particular it is meant:

First, to help, aid, assist in putting over films with dollar delivering ideas.

Second, to present money-making ideas which will be practical and useful to the greatest number of exhibitors.

Third: To give showmen adequate idea of what the posters, lobby, ads and cuts look like.

Fourth, to present the selling points, ideas, stunts, ballyhoos, catchlines, mail campaign, accessories and the news stories in a crisp, concise, readable and interesting manner.

The pressbook should express the spirit, mood, temper and tone of the picture and convey the exploitation punches and attraction highlights in picture and story form. It must be a glorified catalogue of everything and anything pertaining to film. It must tell how the keynote of the film can register inside the mind of prospects.

Created with this service competently rendered, a pressbook gives the exhibitor his basic material for a campaign on the picture:

How well does the pressbook fulfill its mission? Is it easy to handle? Is it easy on the eye and easy to read? Is it practical? Is it full of facts? Is it short? Is it concise? Is it interesting? Is it full of ideas? Are these ideas money ideas? Do the stunts appeal to the imagination? Do the press stories stimulate? Do the ads have urge? Do the posters and lobby and other accessories tempt and lure one to the attraction?

Is the material distinctive and original? Does every accessory, from the 24-sheet to the slide, pique the interest and create a desire for people to part with money to see the attraction? Has it a concentrated, high-power introduction that tells in the fewest possible words all the exceptional appeal to be found in the film? Does it present ideas to develop this appeal—ideas such as are found in logical sorts of presentations, preludes, ballyhoos, front, lobby and house decorations, cutuouts and all varieties of attention attracting devices?

Does it suggest tie-ups or parallel publicity with all appropriate standard books, photoplay editions, sheet music, records, public libraries, merchandise and social or official organizations? Does it present original ideas for contests that will help the film through human interest in competitions and a popular desire for rewards? Has it these ideas in form to use by any exhibitor—that is to say, fully worked out and in ready form? And are they of a nature acceptable to newspapers or organizations likely to cooperate?

Has it specimens of original cartoons, or of unusual art, suitable for reproduction, that relate to the star or to the story? Has it within its covers forceful and clever copy for circular letters, postcards and programs? Does it carry a selection of catchlines or slogans that will put punch into every set of printed or painted advertising matter? Has it graphic and faithful illustrations of the lithographs which are depended upon to attract the public? And of the lobby cards, insert cards, slides and those other aids which rely upon pictorial merits? Has it a liberal and enthusiastically planned series of ads covering the needs of the greatest number of exhibitors? Are the ads shown in exactly the way they will look when reproduced on the amusement page of the exhibitors home newspapers? And do they comprise first class art and business pulling text in the right proportions?

Has it a well chosen variety of intriguing and sharply etched scenic illustrations and star portraits? Does it offer an adequate amount of cut and mat material for delivering the service outlined within its pages? Does it give a complete key to the still photographs available?

Has it a sample of the film's heralds attached? Does it carry a full price-list and description of posters, heralds, win-

Standard Equipment Available for Stage Lighting

The Operation and Function of Various Special Devices Required to Produce Natural and Bizarre Effects

By A. L. Powell

Manager, Engineering Department Edison Lamp Works of G. E. Co.

STAGE lighting in general exemplifies many of the principles of correct illumination, for instance, we never see a brilliant glare light source on the stage. Footlights, border lights, floods, etc., are invisible to the audience. The stage manager knows that unshielded lamps distract the attention, fatigue and annoy. When he finds it necessary to have a chandelier, portable lamp or bracket fixture as part of the setting, he is clever enough to provide merely enough light in this to render it luminous and does not depend on it for any actual illumination of the scene. A single glaring light will destroy the effect of the most pleasing set. In order that the picture may appear natural, the mechanism of the lighting is entirely concealed from view. One does not even see the reflectors or lamp housings. They are "masked" by some part of the scenery. In spite of this, full advantage of the possibilities of light are not yet universally realized.

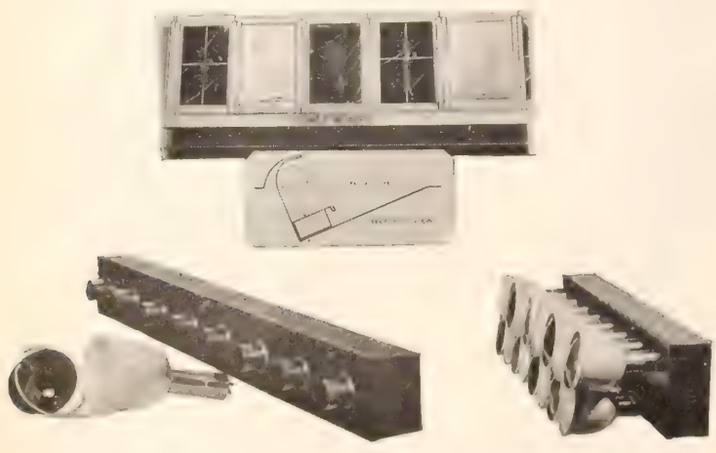
In order to supply lighting on the stage, it is necessary to know what mechanisms are available or standard for stage lighting, how they operate, what they can do, why they are useful and how they can be applied. With a knowledge of these features one then can adapt standard equipment to the requirements of a particular problem.

At best, stage lighting is a "cut and try" proposition, and its solution cannot be had by following any set rules. Experience in the handling of light and lighting apparatus is an essential as in no other field. One must have the light just where it is wanted, just when it is wanted. For an artistic production, the distribution must be accurately controlled, and skillful manipulation of dimming devices, following every line of the play or movement, is necessary.

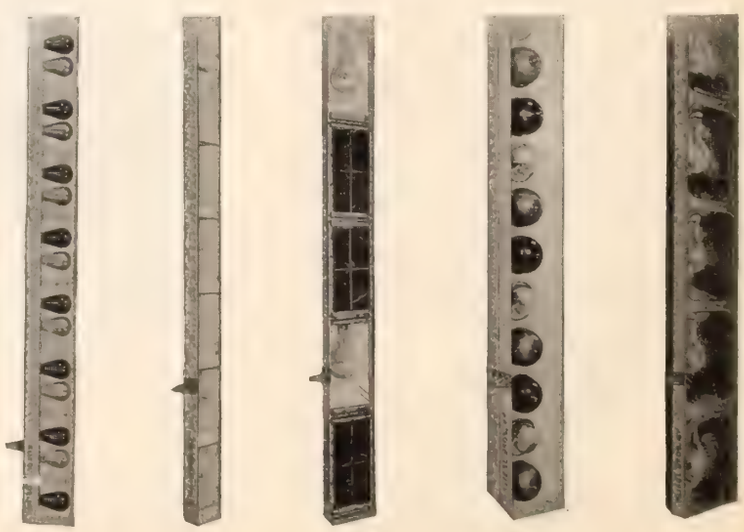
Standard equipment probably will not always fill the bill, and in many instances it is necessary to construct special apparatus.

STAGE lighting devices may be divided in two main groups, those for providing general illumination and those for providing localized lighting. In the first grou pfall the foot, strip, proscenium and border lights; in the second, the bunch and spot lights and effect machines or sciopticons.

The footlights direct a rather strong light from below which intensifies the facial expression and assist to a great degree in holding the attention of the audience. However, such lighting tends to reverse natural shadows and while still an important factor, is much more subdued than in the early days of the art. Some of the most artistic productions of recent years have been well lighted without the use of footlights. It is doubtful whether this practice should be universally applied and it is always well to provide suitable footlights for use when necessary. The actor must take into consideration whether or not strong footlighting is in use and adjust the make-up to compensate for the reversal of shadow effects.



The footlight in common use a few years ago consisted of a sheet metal trough painted white and fitted with porcelain receptacles close together. In many cases the design of this was given but little consideration and the distribution of light secured was not of the most desirable character, in other instances the lamps were visible to persons sitting in the balcony. Such equipment is open to severe criticism. An inverted form of footlight with the lamps burning base up and concealed by an overhanging ledge was sometimes used to overcome these difficulties. But with either type, colored lamps were mingled promiscuously and purity of color was out of the question for much of the light was modified in passing through adjacent bulbs, either directly or after being reflected.



AT best, the old style footlights were inefficient. The more modern type of footlight employs MAZDA C lamps with individual reflectors. This prevents the mixing of color, and also more efficiently directs the light where needed.

In one of the most recently developed types 100 or 150 watt MAZDA C lamps are used in small bowl shaped, spun aluminum reflectors, pointing toward the scene, the lamps burning at an angle of about 45 degrees. A glass color plate fits across the opening.

Another type consists of white pyramidal shaped boxes with the lamps burning vertically with gelatin color screens across the opening. A third type uses mirrored glass reflectors with glass or gelatin color screens.

The choice of reflecting material for theatrical apparatus will depend on the effect desired. White paint is efficient, but must be renewed frequently to maintain its good qualities. It has the property of giving splendid diffusion and thus reducing sharp shadows. It cannot be used where accurate control of distribution is desired. Aluminum reflectors are also efficient and permit of a certain amount of light control. Mirrored glass or polished metal must be used where a very accurate control is necessary or where concentration is important.

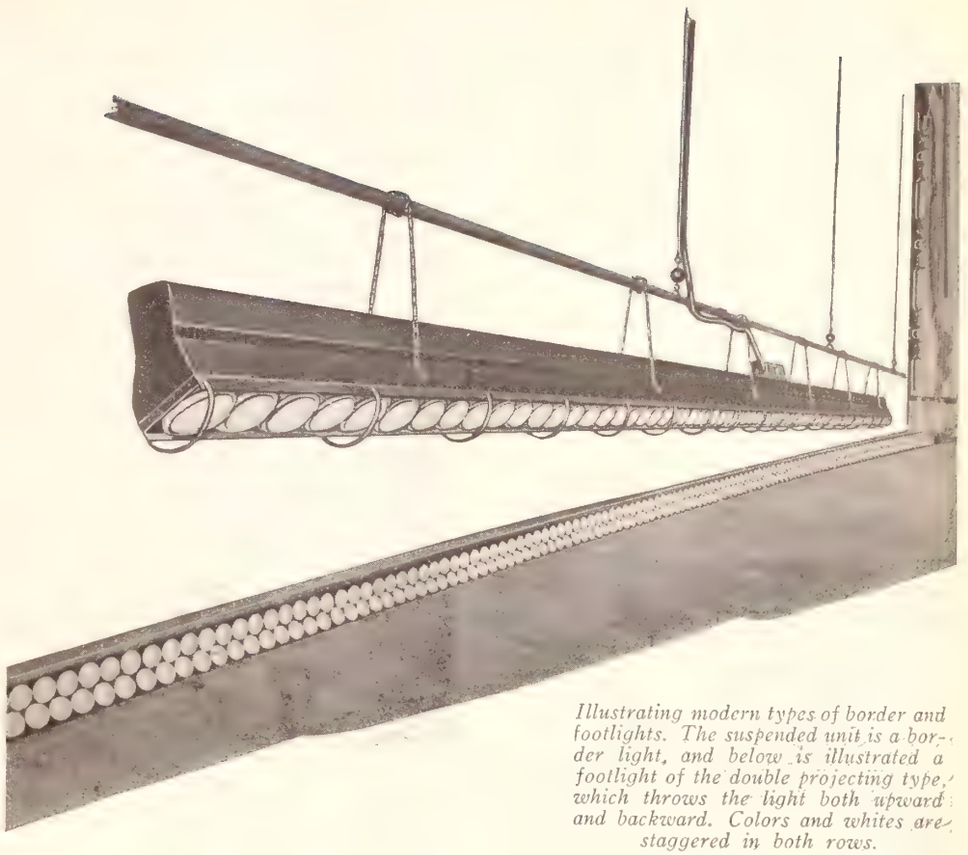
At least four and preferably five circuits should be provided for the footlights, so that red, green, blue and unmodified (white light) may be available, with the fifth circuit for amber or yellow. Some of the most artistic results are secured in those theatres where the electrician or scenic artist understands the fundamental principles and uses green light in its proper place.



THE footlights should be divided into at least three sections and preferably three, rather than having one circuit run the entire width of the stage. With this sectional arrangement, one half may be darkened and the other half light—one half may be of one color and the other of some other tint. With the three-section arrangement, it is evident that still greater flexibility can be secured.

The border lights furnish general illumination from a natural direction, that is, overhead. They are therefore a necessary part of the stage equipment. Border lights formerly in use were virtually inverted footlights, suspended from the gridiron structure in such a manner that they could be raised and lowered. The number of sets in use will depend on the depth of stage. Some of the theatres, for example, the Metropolitan and Manhattan Opera houses, employ seven or eight rows.

The size of lamp used for the border will depend entirely on the character of the production. In practice, we find from 25 watt round bulb MAZDA B lamps in miniature mirrored glass reflectors for lighting an interior to 100 watt MAZDA C lamps in the average theatre and 1,000 watt MAZDA C lamps in such show houses as the New York Hippodrome.

The old style border light is open to the objection stated above in connection with the footlights in improper distribution of light, low efficiency and mixing of color. The newer forms of border lights employ individual reflectors with MAZDA C lamps. They control the light to a certain degree and enable one to employ the higher efficiency MAZDA C lamps. These make it possible to get greater illumination (generally the desire of the producer) for the same wattage. Gelatin screens or glass color caps are ordinarily employed with this equipment to obtain color modification, and special precautions should be taken to have a suitable holding device for this to prevent its being knocked out of place or punctured as a drop is being raised.

For certain productions it is desired to control the light from the borders to a still greater degree such as is obtained through the use of lens equipment. Borders are in use which are virtually rows of small spot lamps with concentrated filament lamps and remotely controlled color filters.

Illustrating modern types of border and footlights. The suspended unit is a border light, and below is illustrated a footlight of the double projecting type, which throws the light both upward and backward. Colors and whites are staggered in both rows.

The remarks given under footlights as to the desirable number of circuits and division into sections apply with equal force to the border lights.

Proscenium and strip lights are virtually border lights hung in vertical positions, and assist in reducing the sharp contrasts which might prevail in the vertical plane. Individual reflectors and lens lamps are now being successfully applied to this service.

A most useful device for lighting a given area to a greater intensity than the rest of the stage is the bunch light, often known as the "open box" or "olivette." Handfed arc lamps were formerly used for this service, but with the introduction of the high wattage MAZDA C lamps, arc equipment has been replaced by the 1,000 watt unit. Its advantages are remote control (direct from the switchboard), ability to be dimmed and simplicity of operation, which facts materially reduce the number of operators for a given production. Spun aluminum or white painted reflectors are commonly used in the bunch lights although some reflectors are built up of sections of mirrored glass to obtain more accurate light control. Color modification is obtained by the use of gelatin screens. The units are portable and adjustable as to height and direction, and can be plugged in at will from any stage pocket. Open box lights also prove very useful suspended from the gridiron to illuminate cycloramas.

When it is desired to draw the attention of the audience to an individual performer, a group, or a special part of the scene, it is common practice to illuminate this area to a very high intensity of light relative to the surroundings. This is accomplished by means of the spot lamp which directs a strong, concentrated beam of light. The spot lamp is fitted with a single condenser lens which enables the operator to adjust the size of the spot at will. For the very highest intensity the direct-current hand-fed open arc is still used. For most purposes, concentrated filament (floodlighting and stereopticon) MAZDA C lamps with a spherical mirror behind the filament to obtain a higher utilization of light are used. The direction of the beam can be changed at will and a performer moving about the stage "followed with the spot." The handle at the base of the housing permits one to move the lamp toward or away from the lens enlarging or decreasing the size of the spot. Color modification is obtained by the so-called color wheel or by individual gelatin screens fitting in grooves directly in front of the lens.

One of the most useful recent developments in stage lighting equipment is the suspension type spot lamp which uses a 500 or 1,000 watt concentrated filament MAZDA C lamp and, as its name implies, is hung from the gridiron or other support. A color screen holder will be noted at the base of the unit.

One can readily picture the effects which are produced with the general lighting of a moderate intensity in color and spots of different colors of higher intensity superimposed on the general

Schools for the Theatre Manager

Special Courses for Student Managers and Manager Students Increasing; Saenger Summer Session Completed—Schines Plan Beginner's Course

IN an age of specialization and under the urge of an economic situation which finds millions invested in theatre enterprises—very business-like and efficient—theatre management becomes a science, or at least a branch of the science of big business, and exists as a "game" only in isolated cases and instances, which are lessened in number almost daily.

Training schools for managers are growing in number and importance. Within the past few days, one large circuit completed its summer course for managers, and another announced the formation of plans to conduct a school for young men wishing to enter upon careers as managers.

The graduate course recently completed was held in Bay St. Louis, Miss., by the Saenger Theatres, Inc., and was conducted by John F. Barry, director of the Publix Theatre Managers' Training School.

The Schine Brothers, operators of a circuit of houses in upper New York State, are preparing to open a school to train new material for positions as managers.

The summer course held by the Saenger company extended from June 6th to the 16th. One hundred and twenty-five managers and executives of the organization attended the course of lectures arranged by Mr. Barry. The managers were addressed by leading men and women of New Orleans, which is fifty miles from Bay St. Louis, and by officials of the Saenger corporation.

The word "intensive" perfectly describes the course. The hours were from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with from four to eight hours at night for "home work." Few colleges can boast of such strenuous pursuit of knowledge.

FOLLOWING a meeting of the district managers of the Schine organization, held in Syracuse on Friday night, June 10, all plans have practically been completed for the opening of a school for theatre managers which will be maintained by the Schine organization during the coming months.

The school will open the latter part of June and it is expected that there will be an enrollment of at least thirty-five persons. While it is hoped that the majority of those enrolled will be college students or high school graduates, there will be no limitations either as to age, previous experience or locality. Persons will be accepted from anywhere in the entire United States, although their applications will be passed upon by James Carrier, of Utica, a general manager in the Schine organization, or by Harry Long, his assistant, both of whom are connected with the Avon theatre in that city.

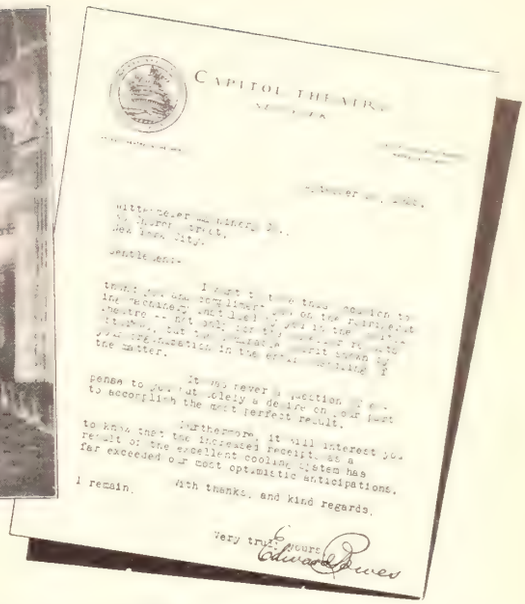
One hundred and twenty-five Saenger officials, department chiefs, and managers at Elmwood Manor, Bay St. Louis, Miss. John F. Barry is addressing the meeting, one of several held during a intensive course in theatre management and operation recently concluded.

The exact date on which the school will open cannot be definitely fixed at this writing, owing to the fact that sufficient applications must first be received to determine the date for the opening. It is generally expected that the school will be conducted in Rochester, where the Schine organization is operating four theatres. There is a possibility, however, that divisional schools may be maintained in Utica and in Watertown, for the Schine organization has four houses in each of these cities. This is a matter that will be decided at a later date.

The only qualification demanded by those behind the movement is that applicants must possess a certain amount of ability along the lines required. The school will be conducted in a most practical manner. The students will start backstage and will do everything from pulling the rope on a drop to dressing a set. They will be shown the value of lighting effects and will also be required to figure this out for themselves in a practical way, doing the actual work.

FROM backstage the students will be taken through the theatre and will be required to obtain a knowledge of the best methods of cleaning carpets. They will be instructed as to the preparation of all sorts of advertising and exploitation, the value of fronts, the value of outdoor advertising. The students will be called upon to address the doormen upon their duties and methods that might be employed to better their work. The students will address the ushers, the cashiers and, in fact, every department of the theatre.

The students will be taken into the projection rooms and before they graduate from the school, they must be able to not only operate a machine, but also to repair one. Students will be obliged to do the booking for the house. In fact, the whole thing simmers down to requiring students to operate a theatre as though the house was their own and represented their own investment. Students will be obliged to arrange their budgets, do their banking, count their cash. They must be perfectly conversant with all fire prevention methods and all fire laws.



IT is expected that the first class will be graduated in September. While some of the students, by their own work, will demonstrate, perhaps, that they are not fitted as executives, but are better qualified to serve as projectionists or floor managers, others will be graduated and given positions at once as managers of Schine houses.

There will be no string tied to the students insofar as their work is concerned after the graduation. If they are not measuring up to the demands of the Schine organization, they will be so told and permitted to seek a position where they can find one. But if they come up to the Schine requirements there will be no questions as to their being given a position with the Schine organization.

Editors of the trade papers will be asked to appear before the students and give practical talks. High officials of producing organizations will be invited to

CAPITOL THEATRE

The Capitol Theatre, Broadway, New York is cooled with a Wittenmeier-'Vitolyzed-Air' System

About Cooling Your Theatre

The question of cooling your theatre in Summer is not a matter of philanthrophy but of cold dollars and cents.

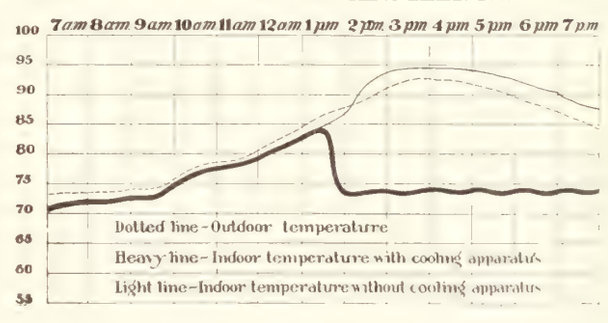
Put yourself in the theatre goer's place for a minute—look at it through his or her eyes and decide what you would do under similar conditions.

Take a steaming hot night in August. Suppose there are two theatres in town—one equipped with air cooling apparatus, the other not. In the unequipped house the thermometer rises steadily up into the nineties. The humidity increases. The perspiration streams down your face and body. Your collar wilts. Your handkerchief becomes damp and soggy. So does every stitch on you. You start out for pleasure and end in misery.

In the artificially cooled house, no matter how crowded, no matter how hot out-of-doors, it is delightfully cool and comfortable, no perspiration, no undue humidity, no wilted clothes. You see a good show. You are far more comfortable than you would be out-of-doors or at home. You are highly pleased. You have a kindly feeling in your heart for the theatre and its management and you tell your friends.

To which of these theatres would you go?

You would go to the artifically cooled theatre just as the crowd does.



As it is working out, the theatres not having air cooling equipment are paying in lost patronage for the equipment in the theatres that do have it. So, if you are going to pay for it anyway, why not have it?

From coast to coast, all over the country, Wittenmeier-'Vitolyzed-Air' cooled theatres draw capacity houses. Among the oldest and strongest concerns in the air conditioning field, we have facts, figures and detailed information about theatre cooling and the results it brings that can easily mean many thousands of dollars in increased box office receipts to you each year.

We will furnish it gladly upon request without cost or obligation to you.

In the above graph the dotted line represents outdoor temperature on a moderately hot day in summer. The heavy black line shows the corresponding indoor temperatures of a theatre equipped with cooling apparatus which opens its doors at one-thirty P.M. During the morning while the apparatus is inactive the indoor temperature rises, but at one-thirty when the cooling system is turned on the temperature abruptly drops to any required degree and there remains. Without cooling apparatus the indoor temperature as indicated by the fine line continues to rise to a suffocating degree. Is it any wonder the public prefers artificially cooled theatres?

Novel Radio Presentation Inspired by "News" Editorial

Ingenious Interpretative Effects Add to Appeal of Feature

"UNLESS you put your ideas into practice there is no use having ideas" is a favorite expression frequently uttered by leaders in all lines of endeavor, and the stimulating force that drives the idea from the theory into the practical phase is often as important to accomplishment as the invention itself—a fact forceably illustrated by a recent stroke of ingenious showmanship that resulted in profit for a theatre and the manager who executed it.

The case in point involves an idea developed by an enterprising theatre manager, and an editorial—the stimulating force which encouraged the manager to go ahead with his novel plan—written by William A. Johnston and published in the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS dated May 20.

Harry F. Storin, manager of the Leroy Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., attracted by the fight scenes in "Oh Baby" and the fact that the picture showed Graham McNamee, celebrated radio personality, at the microphone giving a blow-by-blow description of the glove contest, was intent upon developing this feature in some novel presentation number. He hit upon the plan of giving more realistic effect to the scenes by interpolating a radio presentation in conjunction with the scenes. He worked the plan out in some detail but then other matters engaged his attention and his interest in the presentation idea was diverted.

"I was about ready to lay aside and forget the plan when I read the editorial in MOTION PICTURE NEWS," Storin writes. "It served as an inspiration to go ahead and put into practice an idea which proved a popular novelty and a good box office asset."

The editorial referred to was the concluding article of a series written in Hollywood about the production activities and studio developments there, and dealt with experiments in sound effects for presentation with "Wings," the new Paramount special.

The presentation which Storin staged with "Oh Baby" is described by him as follows:

"In reel five of the picture, Graham McNamee is shown announcing the fight from the ringside at Madison Square Garden. The fight sequence runs through part of reel five, practically the entire footage of reel six and into the opening of the seventh.

"We have at the theatre quite a bit of radio apparatus and the thought of presenting this fight in 'ringside-radio' fashion occurred to me. I am more or less familiar with McNamee's style of announcing fights, at least sufficiently so to give me confidence to essay an impersonation of him broadcasting the fight.

"I had the radio man at the theatre rig up a microphone offstage, and run another pair of wires from the radio control room down to the stage and set an ordinary loud speaker down near the foots.

"We had a little trouble at first because in using sufficient amplification there was much static. So we hooked up another amplifier, which overcame that difficulty.

"I took over the microphone the instant the picture showed McNamee on the screen and proceeded to give a running account of the happenings about the ring and, when the fight started, to give a blow-by-blow description.

"This feature of the show won considerable applause at each performance and, owing to the realistic effect obtained by combining this bit of actual broadcasting with the screen action, the interest of patrons was aroused to a point which brought the theatre much valuable word-of-mouth publicity."

The presentation of interpretive effects similar to those which Storin offered with "Oh Baby," though proving most popular as occasional novelties, nevertheless indicate the need for further development along the lines urged in the editorial which encouraged this enterprising exhibitor to go ahead with his idea.

Many showmen regard this phase of motion picture presentation the next important feature to occupy the attention and interest of the creative minds now engaged in all branches of the industry.

Wide experimentation and considerable progress have followed the introduction of successful synchronization of sound with pictures by the Vitaphone and other processes.

It was during the past year that the enlarged screen, reflecting images greatly increased in size, had its first practical application to a presentation. This was used for some of the spectacular marine views in "Old Ironsides," and it made a tremendous impression on first night audiences at the Rivoli theatre, New York, where that picture had its world premiere. The same device, worked out in the mechanical method now being used at the Rivoli and the Criterion in New York by Harry Rubin, chief projectionist of the Publix organization, was employed with equal success for the stirring stampede of elephants which forms the climax of "Chang," current attraction at the Rivoli.

News reels with synchronized sound recordings, as presented by Movietone features included in some recent Fox news reels, are proving a great popular success, particularly in connection with the celebrations accorded Colonel Lindbergh in Washington and New York.

The stimulant to greater activity in the development of the mechanical resources in projection is having its effect. That this important feature of showmanship is receiving the attention of picture producers as well as the engineers is evident in the experiments made in conjunction with the production of "Wings."

An important part is being played by the exhibitors who evolve original and novel presentation effects. Interpretative effects supplied by musical arrangements and special devices had their beginning in the theatre, being developed by showmen intent upon increasing the entertainment value and appeal of product from the studio. As their value to the picture demonstretes itself these ideas often find their way into the studio and the laboratory, where they are applied as integral features of the pictures or mechanical devices for general use in conjunction with presentations.

I DID not add, by the way, in speaking of "Wings" that out at the Paramount lot, and under cover, a good deal of experimental work is going on with sound effects. The droning of the aeroplanes will be reproduced—the varying makes of machines, and at varying distances. Also there are to be some brand new and startling projection tricks.

Don't minimize the importance of these mechanical developments—by any means.

We have been admirably progressive with the camera, but pretty deficient with projection. And while musical and stage accompaniment has been highly developed, almost over-developed, we have not as yet put the interpretative effects—and how important they are!—into the picture itself.

DOES anyone recall the Regent Theatre in New York, in 1913, when Roxy first made there his bow to the New York public; back-of-the-screen-shout when the columns crashed down in "The Last Days of Pompeii?"

Not a great advance, surely, from then to 1927 and the reproduction of the weird noise of an aeroplane.

Control

"Control is the factor in baseball—and nearly everything else, I've found—which makes for continued successful accomplishment."

the vital factor in accomplishment

BASEBALL is quite a game. Fans are nearly as loyal in their attendance to the various ball parks scattered over this country as are theatre-goers to their favorite playhouse.

Arguments concerning the exact reasons for the popularity of baseball are usually futile. But we all agree that there is color — a dash of the romantic — and a fair amount of excitement in a well played ball game.

The fact that the "Babe" socked the ball for a home run or two in yesterday's fracas is a good story. However, when the winter league argues how the Yankees won—or lost—the pennant, Babe's feat is not so important. It was the coordination of the entire team's efforts and "inside stuff" that counted.

For the whole of the season a flick of the wrist or turn of the head from that slightly gray man on the bench directed the day's campaign. Planned every play, most probably.

But the paying customers don't see it. They're not supposed to. A fan would enjoy a game no more by knowing that Alex was pitching a low ball to his man because a statistician figured the odds were even that he'd miss it.

You know the importance of "inside stuff" in the successful presentation of theatre performances. Cues are not given for the audience to hear and the wisdom of entrance from left center or right is not decided on the stage.

Lighting control apparatus is one of the most important factors in the successful operation of your theatre. Is it helping you "put over" performances as it should? Is the control of lighting it affords flickerless —accurate—complete?

If you are planning a new theatre, if your present dimmer equipment is inadequate or obsolete, get in touch with Ward Leonard Engineers. They have had more than a quarter of a century's experience in the solution of theatre lighting control problems. Their services are freely at your disposal. May we help you?

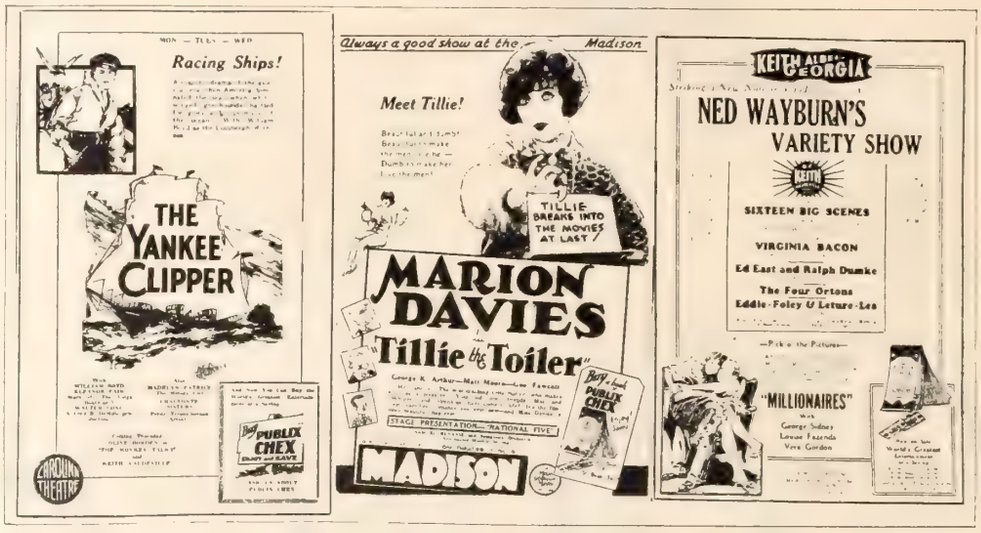
Merchandising Entertainment on A National Scale

"Buy Publix Chex and Save" Sales Slogan of New Publix Plan

"WELL, the boy certainly has grown bigger. But why shouldn't he? He belongs to the family of picture theatre showmanship, and showmanship has grown bigger—maybe better, but certainly bigger—in these past few years!"

Remarks, those, of a veteran showman commenting in reflective mood on the newest move in "merchandising" picture theatre entertainment on a national scale by means of the "Publix Chex" books recently introduced by the Publix Theatre organization.



It is quite true that Publix Chex, purchasable at any one of the Publix theatres and good for admissions at any of the Publix theatres wherever located, is basically only an old idea, whose humble beginnings were in a small town in the middle west, grown bigger, and decidedly more useful as a national figure.

The Publix Chex were introduced only after many months of planning, investigating and preparing. The feasibility of the idea, which would offer to Mr. Collins, of Columbia, S. C., opportunity to budget his entertainment expenditures and assure him that his Publix tickets, bought at a saving, would be good for admissions to the Paramount in New York, the Palace in Dallas, the Granada in San Francisco, and hundreds of other theatres in cities scattered throughout the country, as well as at the Ideal Theatre in his own Columbia, was looked over, turned inside out, weighed in the scale of "Good Business Practice" and submitted to all sorts of tests accomplished with sharp pencils and merchandising theories and principles before the Publix organization engaged in this newest of plans to sell admissions and promote prestige of a national circuit.

There are few of the progressive individual theatre owners and local chains who have not at some time or another used coupon books to good advantage.

As a special plan for the holidays, used to provide another item helping to solve the gift problem, the coupon books have figured prominently in several of the metropolises of the country. The Skouras Bros.' theatres in St. Louis developed the plan to a high point, the B & K theatres in Chicago have used the holiday coupon books for several years, in San Francisco they have had a successful career, and numerous individual theatre owners in large towns and small villages have made holiday profit out of the coupon idea.

Some time ago the Saxe Enterprises offered its patrons a 'Thrift Book" system of admission as a regular year-'round feature. Books containing $5.75 worth of admissions are sold for $5.00. The coupons, in various denominations, five, ten, twenty-five and fifty-cent tickets, are good for admission to any one of the eleven Saxe theatres in Milwaukee.

A trio of newspaper ads used by Publix Theatres in local papers showing how the "Publix Chex" are being featured in the displays for current attractions at these houses.

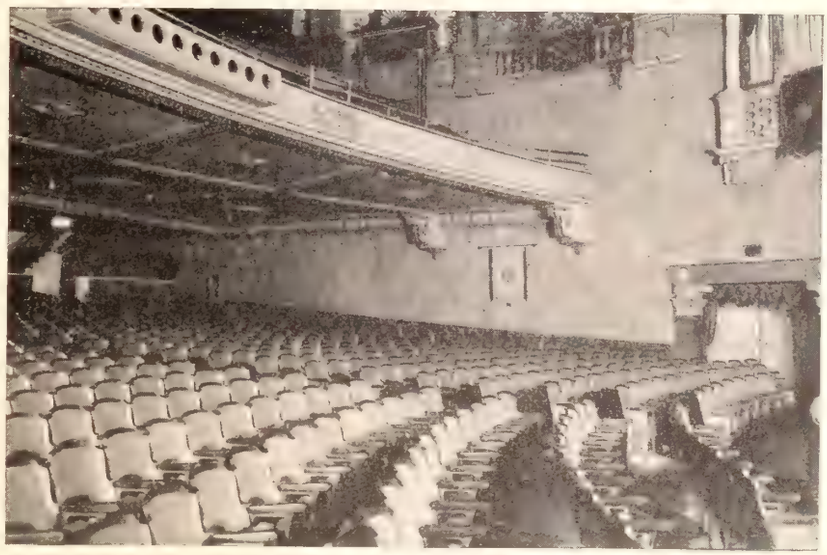
The Publix Chex follow the same plan, only with the national angle to give it possibly more "advertising flash."

The books are issued in three sizes, a $10 book selling for $9, a $5 book selling for $4.50 and a $2.50 book selling for $2.25. Each book contains 25-cent, 10-cent and 5-cent coupons which may be exchanged for their face value when presented at the box office for any performance.

EACH book contains, in addition to the coupons, a complete list of all the publix theatres throughout the country where the coupons will be honored. Almost without exception the regular admission charges at these theatres does not require the payment of an additional tax. In the few exceptional cases where the admission charge is more than 75 cents, necessitating the collection of a Government tax, the amount of the tax is to be paid in cash at the box office when the coupons are redeemed.

A home office department under the supervision of L. L. Edwards is maintained to operate the new Publix Chex book enterprise. The selling plan worked out by the home office outlined many advertising ideas for the use of theatre managers of the circuit in making their local campaign.

Screen trailers and announcements launched the selling drive for these coupon books, and small cuts for incorporation in the regular newspaper displays of the theatres were prepared. The newspaper ads of the theatres have been carrying announcements of the plan for some time, and many of the managers are reporting very favorable reaction.



The points stressed are that the Publix Chex are good for any theatre on the circuit, enabling the traveling man and the occasional tourist to enjoy a convenience and a saving not hitherto provided the picturegoer.

The saving to the patron is a point of leverage used in the selling matter on the books. The purchaser saves ten per cent. But for selling purposes on this point the books are quoted in terms of dollars and cents—the patron gets $10 worth of theatre admissions for $9. The appeal in this direction is strengthened by tying up the books with family budget systems. In cities where there are more than one Publix theatre this feature has added appeal, for different members of the same family may attend different shows—with the head of the house dealing out coupons, bought at a reduced price, instead of coin of the realm, for the coupons are "good if detached."

Probably the most salient point is the gift angle of these books. They are promoted as ideal suggestions for birthday gifts, bridge prizes, Christmas presents, etc. Several of the Publix managers are making great capital of the books as bridge prizes. Special advertising in newspapers, direct mail appeals, and screen announcements have brought especially fine results along this line of appeal.

New Type Light Source Now Ready

High Intensity Arc Lamp Constructed on Reflector Arc Principle Recently Demonstrated Indicates Success of Development

A DEVELOPMENT that has been promised for some time now appears to be a reality. A high intensity arc lamp constructed on the reflector arc principle recently was demonstrated in Chicago and practical tests in local theatres seem to indicate that success will be the ultimate result of the various efforts to bring about greatly increased efficiencies with this type of light source.

Looking at the problem in a purely general manner, there would seem to be no reason why such a lamp should not be a logical development and one to be expected in the natural course of events.

Theoretically, it would involve but a simple substitution of high intensity carbons for those used with the ordinary reflector arc. Practically, it would involve a mechanical arrangement which would provide for such things as proper feeding of the carbons, regular burning of the crater, and a reduction of heat at the aperture plane and mirror location.

The last named item of cooling is an important one and undoubtedly has acted so far to retard more rapid development of the high intensity reflector arc. The method of accomplishing this in the lamp referred to above is by means of a motor driven air fan placed on the floor beneath the projector and supplying a blast of air, conveyed by a pipe, to the aperture plane where a wide, flat nozzle forces a stream of cool air past the aperture.

In order to protect the concave mirror, which intercepts the light from the arc and then condenses it to pass through the film, a disc of heat resisting glass, as large as the mirror itself, is placed slightly ahead of it and a second air line from the fan on the floor is brought into play between the protecting glass disc and the mirror.

In this manner the film is kept relatively cool and the mirror is shielded from the intense heat of the lamp so that little trouble, so far, at least, has been experienced in the matter of mirror breakage.

With the earlier forms of experimental lamps it was estimated that the mirrors would have to be replaced on the order of two or three each week. The more enthusiastic supporters of the new lamp have always contended that a small item like two or even three mirror replacements a week would be as nothing compared to the other economies which such a device would bring about. With mirrors listing at fifteen dollars apiece, however, a thirty dollar weekly mirror expense would hardly seem like a practical solution, not to mention the annoyance resulting from such constant replacements.

The solution of the mirror breakage problem, therefore, was of major importance and represented a distinct step forward in the evolution of a truly successful lamp.

Some method for cooling the film as it passed the aperture of the projector was a foregone conclusion, since this has been a much discussed factor in connection with even the low intensity lamp, and the higher operating temperature of the high intensity arc would, therefore, make this a point of vital importance.

The effect of the light (and heat) from the old form of high intensity arcs in even the lower current sizes is well known.

The effect of the highly efficient reflector arc form of arc may, therefore, well be imagined, since its increased efficiency will be by no means confined merely to its light transmitting properties, but will include that of heat also.

It is necessary, therefore, to make proper provisions for the cooling of the film with this new lamp.

Efficient operation of the high intensity arc calls for the maintenance of a well formed crater of the proper depth, since this crater acts as a receptacle for the incandescent gas ball which serves as the real source of light. Any irregularities in crater formation are almost certain to affect the resultant screen illumination. With a stationary positive carbon it is almost unreasonable to expect the projectionist to exercise the necessary care in aligning the carbons so as to obtain proper crater formation, since even with the present condenser form of lamp it seems as though all efforts to make it fool-proof are defeated by projectionists who either carelessly or ignorantly persist in advancing the positive carbon too far forward.

IT hardly seems possible, therefore, to avoid rotation of the positive carbon in order to obtain symmetrical burning of the crater and it is surprising, in view of this, that the lamp demonstrated in Chicago lacked this necessary adjunct to its mechanical equipment.

Reports of still another lamp, soon to be brought forth for public view, are to the effect that positive rotation will be one of its features, so that this point does not seem to be entirely overlooked.

Aside from the various mechanical features so far discussed, there seems to be a serious doubt in the minds of some concerning the need for a high intensity arc on the reflector lamp principle.

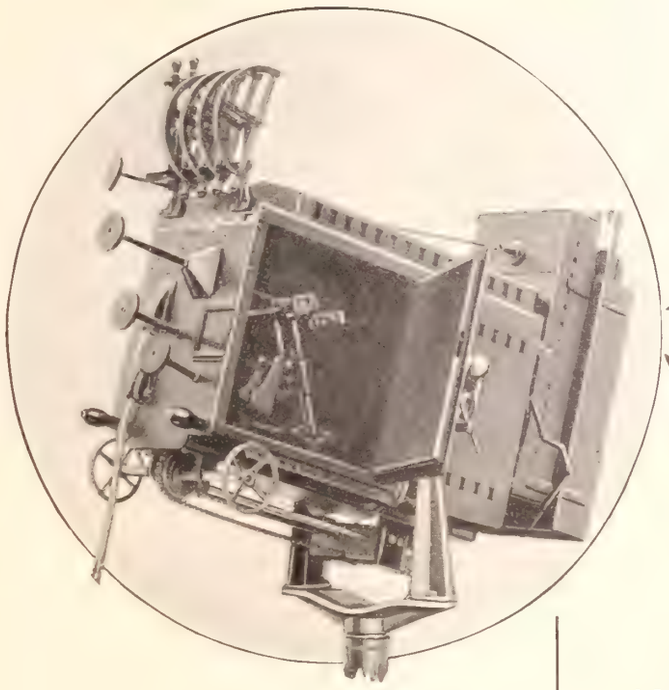
These people argue that from a current economy standpoint such a device would be quite the thing since it would do, with 50 amperes, the same work now being done with 150 amperes on the present form of lamp.

An increase in screen illumination with the new lamp is already being claimed—and certainly such a claim seems reasonable in view of what has already been said on this point in past articles.

BUT after all, is this extra illumination really required for satisfactory presentation of pictures in even the larger city houses? True, there are some theatres so large as to require the utmost in the way of screen illumination since great projection distances usually call for large pictures and the total area of the screen along with the projection distance are the two things that determine, in the final analysis, the demands made upon the light source and the optic system.

Large houses, therefore, are great consumers of light and, by the same token, small theatres do not require nearly so much as their bigger brothers.

The great danger with the high intensity reflector arc rests in its ultimate application in theatres. If it is confined to the so-called de luxe houses having large seating capacities and thus requiring commensurate degrees of screen illumination, all will be well, since such theatres will then have the advantage of somewhat greater screen light along with great reductions in current consumption.



If, however, this lamp is installed indiscriminately in all sizes of theatres regardless of their requirements, then all will most certainly not be well since there are even now many small houses operating reflector arcs at such currents as to render the viewing of the picture exceedingly uncomfortable.

The most effective means for establishing a line of demarcation, or rather a barrier between the different sizes of theatres, is by the current required to operate the various projection devices used by each size class.

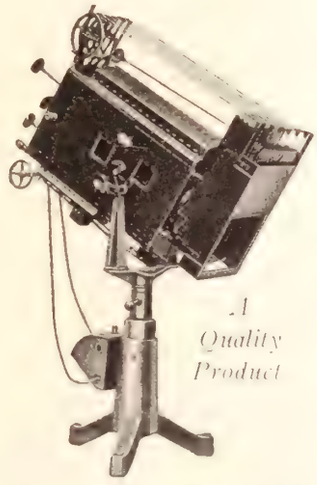
Under the old conditions, a theatre which normally would require about 60 amperes with a condenser form of arc would hesitate a long time before installing a 120 ampere high intensity arc because of the greatly increased cost of operation and maintenance.

Now, however, with a difference of only 25 amperes between the reflector arc and the new high intensity lamp very few theatres are apt to quibble about expenses for current, especially if they feel that by using this nominal extra current they can obtain the absolute maximum in the way of screen illumination.

Here, then, will lie the ultimate danger in the indiscriminate application of this new form of lamp to theatres in general.

Spot or FLOOD

At the twist of your wrist!



No single lens spotlamp can produce both spots and floods to the best advantage. One of these conditions must be slighted in order to obtain favorable results on the other since the optical conditions for spots differ greatly from those for floods.

The practical solution to this problem lies in the use of two lenses—one for producing small spots, the other for bright floods.

The BRENKERT C-14, therefore, is a true form of spot-flood lamp as it possesses two different lenses, each selected to give maximum results, whether on spot or on flood.

A twist of the wrist will place either lens in use so that precious seconds need not be sacrificed to obtain this desirable feature.

A post card with your name and address on it will bring complete information regarding this lamp.

Study the Other Fellow's Ads And---Don't Copy Them

Develop Your Own Style and Don't Be Afraid to Pay a Good Artist His Price for Making a "Seller" Says

Harold B. Dygert

Advertising Director Stanley-Davis-Clark Theatres, Pittsburgh

SPENDING money on the make-up of his newspaper ads is the exhibitor's best investment, according to Harrold B. Dygert, director of publicity for Stanley-Davis-Clark's theatres at Pittsburgh, Pa., whose job it has been to develop five different styles of advertising for his organization's five first-run houses in Pittsburgh.

"Watch the style of the other fellow's advertising—and don't copy it," says Dygert. "Go as far and as fast as you can in the opposite direction. Make your ads distinctive, develop a style of your own, and don't be afraid to pay an artist and an engraver to make your ad a seller.

"Art work is about seventy per cent of exhibitor newspaper advertising. Copy is always secondary to display. It's the first wallop that counts—and if your ad lacks that, the chances are you're wasting space."

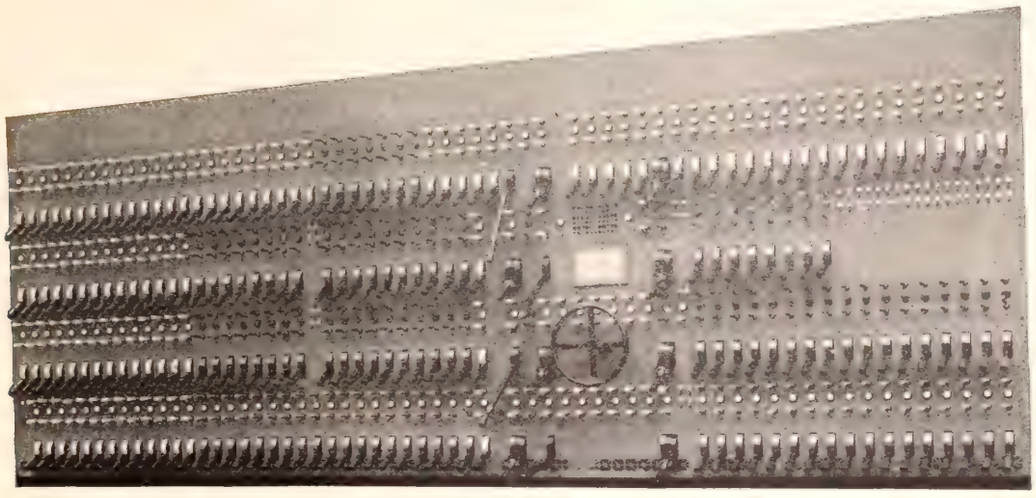
Dygert points out that in planning his own advertising, he keept in mind the fact that all of his displays appear on the same page of the newspaper—and therefore to avoid a monotony that would spoil the effect of the whole, it is necessary to handle each display in a distinctively individual manner.

For the Grand, Dygert uses a startling bill-board effect, made-up in billboard shape, four columns across and seven inches deep. Box-lettering is used throughout, with a few lines of italic here and there to lighten the effect. His illustrative matter is usually set in a solid black background across the center of his display.

While the Liberty, running the same attraction simultaneously with the Grand, uses the same general dope for its newspaper display, it is made up in entirely different style, even as to shape. This display is set two-columns across and eight inches deep—with the lettering in attractive open poster style—and no illustrative matter except a head-cut of the star. The entire display is laid on a line Ben-Day background. The two ads, appearing side by side, Dygert points out, are as different as day and night—which is necessary to preserve the individuality of the two theatres.

In like manner, Dygert handles the displays of the REGENT and OLYMPIC theatres, which usually play the same attraction simultaneously. The Olympic ad is set four columns across and three inches deep—and is made up in reverse plate entirely—that is to say, white lettering on a solid black background. The effect is startling, and while the space is smaller than that used for other of the houses, it dominates its section of the page completely.

The Regent display is set in the same shape as that of the Liberty, but an individual effect is gained by splitting the ad diagonally, and using the upper half white background and the lower half black. The lettering, of course, is reversed on the two backgrounds. A distinct lower case style of lettering likewise helps to preserve the individuality of the display.



For his State theatre, downtown, Dygert gets his individuality across with an ultra-neat make-up—using an overabundance of white space, with only a minimum of copy—and the illustrative matter grouped in the center of the display, and reproduced in half-tone. In this display alone, Dygert resorts to the use of screen-cuts, and it separates this ad immediately from the rest, even though in shape it is similar to two of the others.

The Electrical Folks for Theatre Folks

The Hogakuza under the direction and operation of Famous-Lasky Paramount has become a de luxe picture house of the presentation type. Above are two views of this modern playhouse, formerly the leading theatre in Tokio devoted to Japanese drama.

Japan Hails the De Luxe Cinema

Paramount Organization Introduces Modern Presentation Policy in Tokio Theatre

THE de luxe presentation theatre has made in its appearance in Tokio, Japan, and from an auspicious start with a premier of gala proportions similar in ceremonial importance to those which attach to the opening of new cinema palaces in America, has continued to extend its popularity as an entertainment resort in this metropolic of the Flowery Kingdom. The theatre is the Hogakuza, operated by Famous-Lasky Paramount Films, Ltd.

The Hogakuza was formerly the leading legitimate theatre in Tokio. It is located in a central section of the city, adjoining a newly completed business building and within a few minutes' walk of the Imperial Hotel. The structure is of modern reinforced concrete. The seating capacity is seventeen hundred. The equipment, since its conversion to a de luxe picture policy, includes a modern heating and ventilation system, an air cooling system being available for conditioning the inside atmosphere during the summer weather.

The policy of operation and entertainment features follows the up-to-date lines of the leading presentation houses in America. Feature pictures are supplemented with stage numbers and musical presentations.

The Hogakuza orchestra is featured as one of the leading attractions. The overtures at the de luxe performances are presented with the orchestra appearing on the stage, spotlighted and given the prominence accorded this unit of the entertainment at large American theatres.

Mr. Koschak Yamada, considered one of the foremost composers and conductors in Japan, is director of the orchestra at the Hogakuza. He was the organizer of the Japan Symphony Orchestra, which occupied a leading position as one of the important musical organizations for some time. He conducted the Symphony until there arose financial difficulties which ultimately brought to a close the career of the Japan Symphony, and its reorganization as the present New Symphony Orchestra.

An orchestra comprising 37 musicians under the direction of Koschak Yamada, one of the most prominent composers and conductors in Japan, is one of the features offered patrons of the Hogakuza.

The stage portion of the programs even more than the music feature gives the Hogakuza the Western flavor. Stage presentations are a regular attraction of the de luxe performances. These numbers bring to the stage a wide variety of entertainers and specialists. Vocal and instrumental music, dancing and other specialties are presented.

One of the recent programs at the Hogakuza gives an indication of the quality of the shows offered to Tokyo theatregoers at this modern picture palace. The bill contained a stage revue featuring Marsao Takata and Sieiko Hara, well known dancers. The ballet program was in two parts, opening with a presentation called "A Struggle of Love," a dramatic pantomime by Kanzi Kunieda. This was followed by a specialty introducing Mr. P. A. Malahov-Nevsky, accordionist. The latter portion of the ballet offered "The Nautch Dance" and "A Looking Glass."

The Hogakuza orchestra opened the program with a rendition of Bizet's "L'Arlesienne."

The film portion of the bill contained two features, "Silence" and Harold Lloyd's "The Kid Brother."

The Tsu-ben, or title reader, was the one purely Japanese feature included in the presentation. In Japan the title reader is a star and commands a popular following corresponding to that of favorite screen personalities. Most of and how no one can actually predict what the audience reaction will be to any given film.

Why most premieres, or first showings, take place in New York is txplained under the heading of "In the Beginning." This section also declares that "for the past three years the trend has been towards enlargement of the smaller exhibitor chains. Now they comprise circuits of 100 to 300 or 400 theatres operating from one pivotal point. The advantages of such consolidations are naturally pointed out here.

"Musical Moods" tells how experts are employed at the studios to work out scores. "A million dollar motion picture mood cannot be expressed with a hurdy-gurdy," it very aptly remarks, and goes on to tell how the expensive organs and orchestras are maintained to give the theatre-goers the best in music."

The last section is headed "Onions or Artichokes?" It is dedicated to the proposition that "there is no set rule for gauging the public's tastes." It tells how the public's likes and desires in film fare shift from day to day, from week to week, and from year to year, and how earnestly and conscientiously the theatre exhibitor must strive to anticipate these changing tastes and to cater as nearly as possible to the whims of the patron.

Mr. Ferriss was formerly a Minneapolis newspaperman, and he has done an excellent piece of work in the writing of this book. Anyone who reads it must be convinced that here is a way to make new friends and to hold old friends. It can scarcely help to create a closer bond between Finkelstein & Ruben and its vast public. The mysteries of the movie business are made suddenly plain to the theatre-goer who reads it; and he is very apt to wonder, considering the difficult nature of tht theatre business, how it is conducted as efficiently and capably as it is.

dow cards, insert cards, photographs, mats, cuts, slides, trailers, music cues and novelties? Has it an understandable and easily used order blank? Has it a really practicable set of synopses, and cast, newspaper feature stories, during run stories, advance notices, "shorts," biographies, anecdotes, feature art; in short, press material that seems to both the exhibitor and his newspaper contacts a readable, bunkless and interesting selection of motion picture copy?

IF THE PRESSBOOK ANSWERS "YES" TO ALL OF THESE QUESTIONS, THEN IT FULFILLS ITS MISSION AND EVERY SHOWMAN HAS SOMETHING TO BE THANKFUL FOR.

How can a showman get the most out of the pressbook? The specific answer is found in the following recommendations:

Read it and re-read it. Every film has at least one distinctive idea which makes it attractive to an audience. Around this idea the creator of a pressbook usually centers his ticket-selling ideas. Live showmen pick out those ideas that fit the individual and particular conditions of his theatre and public. They adapt, adjust these ideas to the mood and mind and imagination of their patrons. They take the pressbook, inspect it and then project it with the light of their own experience, their own problems and their own ideas.

Hand in hand with the showmen who can prepare a good pressbook is the showman who knows how to use it.

Franklin Stressing Goodwill Policy

Under the plan of realignment of the West Coast Circuit, under the direction of Harold B. Franklin, new president of the corporation, and announced at the convention of managers of the Los Angeles Division of West Coast, held June 1st, in Los Angeles, four distinct divisions have been created for the operation of the circuit

It is the purpose of Mr. Franklin to stress particularly to the managers the West Coast policy of service and good will, to bring to them a full realization of their obligation to the public.

Popularity that only performance can explain

NO higher endorsement than its almost unanimous selection by this industry's leading builders can be given a product.

To Peter Clark equipment is this endorsement given, for no other equipment enjoys greater popularity.

Peter Clark stage rigging, counter-weight system, organ console and orchestra lifts and special equipment are installed in the finest theatres throughout the country. For a quarter of a century Peter Clark equipment has maintained this popularity---a popularity that can be explained only by unmatched excellence of performance.

To have equipment that fulfills the exacting requirements of such super-theatres as the Paramount, the Roxy, Balaban & Katz theatres and the like, installed in your theatre is to be guaranteed the most advanced ideas in design and efficiency of operation.

Stanley-Fabian Theatres In Newark Issue House Organ

Dignity in the treatment of its news will be found in the Stanley-Fabian Review. the house organ of three Stanley Fabian Theatres, Direction Stanley Company of America, in Newark, N. J. The tabloid magazine is made up of eight pages, is profusely illustrated and is devoted to the news features of the Branford, Mosque and Rialto Theatres for the week it is published.

The Stanley-Fabian Revue receives lengthy consideration every week. It is a professionally-made publication every week. Instead of just clipping stories and features from press sheets, and throwing them into the Review, the focusing points are first analyzed and treated in accordance with that analysis. The local considerations form the chief basis of the matter incorporated in the Review.

Four men have a hand in the making of the publication. The Stanley-Fabian Review is under the supervision of J. E. Firnkoess, director of publicity and advertising for the Stanley-Fabian Corporation. The text is written in his office, while the cartoons and layouts are handled by special assistants.

The Stanley-Fabian Review is published on Tuesday and mailed the same day. It reaches readers on Wednesday and Thursday and its material treats of the programs which open on the current Saturday, which is the publication date of the house organ. The Review, which reaches 30,000 persons in the Newark area, is thus found in the home picturegoers two days before the opening showings of new programs.

An intelligent check-up is kept of the mailing list, sometimes requiring the service of half-a-dozen girls to keep it always up to date, addition of new names, and eliminating of "dead" names. These girls work under the supervision of a mail-expert who, in turn, reports to Mr. Firnkoess.

A popular feature of the publication is a question and answer column. Queries sometimes are so numerous as requiring no little time to satisfactorily complete. One of the check-ups shows that the Review remains in the home of readers for a week at least. The two telephone swtichboard girls are the thermometers in this respect. The hundreds of phone calls daily requesting the program offerings at the Branford, Mosque and Rialto are now cut down to a minimum; the information now being gleaned from the house organ.

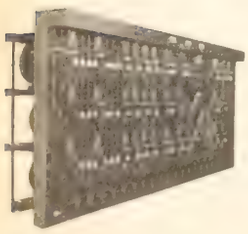
the readers are actors of long training and accomplishment in the Japanese drama, and they draw salaries of a star.

At the Hogakuza the chief title readers are Mr. Raiyu Ikoma and Mrs. Shiro Atsuzi, both of whom are ranked among the most accomplished and popular artists specializing in this semi-dramatic profession. The reader's running account of the action portrayed on the screen makes the pictures more understandable and enjoyable to the Japanese picturegoer. The reader's diction and dramatic eloquence in describing the characters and details of the story are as essential to the success of the screen play as are the acting, story construction, direction and plot, so far as Japanese picture patrons are concerned.

The theatre is operated on a continuous policy, shows running daily from noon till late in the evening. It is the "key house" of Paramount in Japan and its direction is under the supervision of the Paramount organization, headed by Thomas Cochrane, in that country.

The exploitation and advertising conducted for the Hogakuza are as Western as the policy of operation. Lobby displays and outside posters are used to attract the attention of the public and arouse interest in the presentations at the house.



The house is of efficient design. The exterior is elliptical in shape, carrying out the lines of the auditorium. There are two balconies, both rather shallow.

MAJOR FA SYSTEM

Controls Your Theatre Lighting ---and how!

It is the "how" of theatre lighting control that puts the FA Major System in unquestioned leadership. With hundreds of installations —many of them in the most successful of larger theatres—many of them in the successful small theatres—there must be something to this "how!" Imitators copy the appearance without duplicating the performance.

Learn for yourself the difference that marks the distinction—the more you investigate the more certain you are to have an FA Major System for your theatre.

lighting. Ornamental vases, urns and decorative features of this character can be made very effective by the application of suspension type spot lamps. It is often desirable to bring out an individual performer with a spot from overhead, instead of by one in the balcony or "front of the house." Shadows are more natural and the harsh, defined spot does not show up on the drop.

Other useful devices are the so-called "baby spots" which can be plugged in at the footlights or suspended from the borders. These employ 250 or 400 watt concentrated filament MAZDA C lamps. Spherical mirrors should be used to redirect as much of the light as possible in the beam.

There are times when a very sharply defined spot or picture effect is desired and an apparatus known as a sciopticon, similar to a regular stereopticon, is used to produce this. This has objective lenses in addition to double condensers. By using an opaque slide with an opening of the shape desired, a spot of some particular contour can be obtained.

Effect apparatus can be fitted with a special head containing a revolving disk which is painted in a certain manner and driven by an adjustable speed motor or clock-work mechanism. This is used to produce the effect of running water, falling rain or snow, moving clouds, flames, fireworks, sand storms and innumerable special illusions.

A section of a motion picture film showing breaking waves has been used in a powerful motion picture projector for simulating the dashing surf in spectacles.

The uses of electricity for stage effects are varied indeed and space is not available for discussing all of these. In the early days lightning was produced by blowing a stream of powdered magnesium through a flame. Now, flashing electric arcs give an infinitely more realistic effect. By the aid of electricity, the glowing coal in the fire place is imitated. Until comparatively recently, red light thrown on rising steam was used to produce a conflagration. Now, a number of ingenious substitutes are used for flame effects. A patented device utilizes strips of thin silk put in motion by an air current from a blower or fan. With projecting apparatus and properly colored slides the low portion appears yellow, the central red, and top smoke color, thus simulating actual flame much more effectively. This principle has been utilized in connection with urns and torches, a miniature motor fed from a dry cell being employed in the portable torch to produce an air stream or rotary motion.

Some very interesting effects can be tained by the use of phosphorescent paint on scenery, properties and gowns. Objects painted with Balmain's paint (calcium sulphide) glow for a while with a bluish light after being exposed to the bare carbon arc or quartz mercury arc. Paints with certain salts of zinc, strontium, cadmium and barium as part of their composition, give other phosphorescent tints, such as yellow, red and green. Combinations of these colors can be used to good effect when the stage is darkened.

Training Schools for the Theatre Manager

address the students, as will also Will Hays and others of like calibre.

There will be a convention of Schine managers in Syracuse, probably late in June, and at that time the entire plan will be outlined, although it is expected that between now and the latter part of the month there will be an enrollment sufficient for the school to start on or about the date of the convention.

The Schine organization now numbers 106 theatres, all but two of which are in New York state. These two are located in Ohio. The Schine circuit has been expanding with great rapidity of late, particularly in northern and western New York. In Syracuse, plans are now under way for the erection of four residential houses, the company operating one of the large downtown theatres which was acquired from Nate Robbins at the time the company secured control of the theatres in Watertown.

It was only a few years ago that the Schine brothers, Louis and Myer, acquired their first theatre on a mere shoestring of what is said to have been about $500.

SILVERSHEET
"It Just CAN'T Be Torn"

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made which offers these four recognized points of superiority all combined in one screen, and selling at a price no higher than that of ordinary screens:

1. CANVAS BASE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is built on a non-tearable, abuse-resisting, puncture-proof canvas base. This fabric is so tough it resists the damage that would ruin a screen built on a lighter base.

2. SPECIFICATION SURFACE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made with a specification-built surface on a canvas base. This is the same Knobel-built pebble surface that has brought Silversheet world-wide fame for its projection qualities.

3. GENUINE REDWOOD FRAME

The genuine Redwood Silversheet tension frame is fitted with our well known steel jacket tension device, which always keeps the screen taut and gives the frame unlimited life.

4. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

We back each Tear-Proof Silversheet with a money-back, absolute guarantee of satisfaction in every respect. Why experiment when you KNOW you can't go wrong on a positively guaranteed Silversheet?

M-G-M Trackless Train Touring South America

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S Trackless Train, under the direction of Eddie Carrier, left the European shore last April. It was shipped to South America aboard the Lloyd Sabaudo Steamship the Princippa Ciovanna. The journey from the European port to the South American port lasted twenty-five days. On May 8th the steamship docked in the port of Buenos Aires, Argentine. The train was immediately unloaded and parked in a garage, where painters started to re-letter the advertising copy in Spanish. The mechanics also attended to the necessary repairs.

On Thursday, May 12, the train left the garage and officially started its South American tour. On driving to the city hall in Buenos Aires a number of officials and a battery of newspaper men received the train. The crowds were tremendous and, as the train passed through the city, the cheers and the curiosity on the part of the public to get a glimpse at the train were as great as in the other countries it has toured. There were representatives from the cable company, the United States Tire Company and the Remington company to greet the Trackless. They voiced great enthusiasm at the wonderful reception accorded it. With the Pullman loaded to capacity the train made a three-hour tour of the city. Thousands of people crowded the narrow business streets to view the train. A great quantity of folders were distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United States Tire Company, Remington and All America Cables. The reception on this day was one of the greatest ever accorded the Trackless on its entire tour. The Trackless was an immediate sensation.

The second day of the tour was a riot. The route over which the Trackless traveled was packed with people. Traffic was jammed a number of times, but even the police officials received a big kick from seeing it. To conclude the morning's tour the train stopped in front of the San Martin theatre, where "The Merry Widow" was playing. In the afternoon the officials of the train were received by the President of the Argentine. The President was delighted with the "big toy" as he called it, and lauded the officials who conceived this great stunt. After the reception another tour of the city was started, where fully one hundred thousand people viewed the spectacle. Thousands of heralds were distributed.

The third and fourth day was devoted to various stops at the theatres. Newspaper representatives accompanied the members of the train, writing several articles of the trip.

The South American tour of the Trackless Train is doing wonders in the line of exploration, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is practically a newcomer in this section of the world. The train is convincing the exhibitor that M-G-M means business, and is back of its product to the nth degree. Confidence to the exhibitor and proof of the company's large scale plans are what this trip through South America is sure to give.

One of the managers, concentrating on this phase of the coupon books, launched his drive by organizing a bridge party, under the auspices of a local women's club, which was held in the theatre—a sort of special morning matinee. The prizes were Publix Chex, purchased by the organization conducting the party. With this as a starter, he has succeeded in giving the coupon books a place of first rank as the correct and desirable thing for private bridges in the homes.

At the Rialto theatre in New York, there is a special booth, set up well forward in the lobby, with a cashier on duty to sell only these coupon books.

The plan fits in with the "merchandising idea" which the picture theatres are developing and adapting to their particular purposes. In its national application the plan has some of the features of a "stunt," but while the advantages from a general advertising and exploitation angle are being capitalized, the coupon books are now a definite showmanship feature of the Publix theatres. It is expected that every theatre in the circuit will increase its business to an appreciable degree by means of this added appeal, and thus establish and maintain the system as good "box office" and profitable showmanship.

This Summer's heat will lead thousands to Comfortable YORK cooled theatres

The unit illustrated above is the York vertical single acting carbon dioxide compressor. This equipment has been developed particularly for air conditioning requirements. It is compact, all parts readily accessible, quiet and odorless in operation.

Add the "CAMEO"

The best known antidote for that dread poison "summer slump" is a York theatre cooling system. Not only does it eliminate the hot weather handicap, but supplies an endowment policy in which your box office is chief beneficiary.

The popular "Cameo", 42nd near Broadway, will be York equipt before this coming summer is well under way.

This theatre is one of the latest additions to the fast growing list of York cooled motion picture houses, where entertainment plus comfort is assured during the most torrid weather.

Snookums Says Farewell to New York

SNOOKUMS, the Stern Brothers starlet, who has been enjoying a triumphant personal appearance tour of the East, has left New York on his return trip to Los Angeles, where he is due to start work on the new series of "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, for next year's Universal Junior Jewel release.

"Wings" to Be Syndicated

"WINGS," a novel telling the story of the Paramount road-show attraction, which will have its Broadway premiere at the Criterion Theatre August 1, is to be syndicated in the newspapers by the Chicago Tribune Syndicate. The novel was written by John Monk Saunders, who wrote the original story for the picture.

Grossett and Dunlop will publish "Wings" in book form in the fall.

Dewey Bloom Leaving

AFTER a brief visit to his home in Hamilton, Canada, Dewey D. Bloom sails from New York June 25 on the S.S. Carmania, to make his future residence in London, where he will be identified with the British film industry. His publicity agency at 1658 Broadway is being taken over by Lavner & Benedict, who have been his associates.

For the past eight years Mr. Bloom has specialized in motion picture publicity and exploitation. He left the newspaper field to do theatrical publicity for the Selwyns, handling campaigns on their Charlot Revues, "Spring Cleaning," travagances of production. But there is no thought to stop production, nor to let it deteriorate into a feeble and meaningless gesture.

Advertising, on the other hand, has never been extravagant. It has simply never been understood and therefore never organized. It has never really started. Either it will start—eventually; or else this much vaunted industry will go into the discard.

If it is a fact that the treasuries of the trade have so been drained that no funds are available for advertising, then let there be a definite and outspoken policy.

Better a flat policy of no advertising whatever than the present one of feeble attempts based on utter apathy.

and Jane Cowl's series of classic productions. His varied picture experience includes the management of a Broadway theatre for Fox, publicizing the Barbara La Marr series produced for First National by Sawyer-Lubin, handling studio publicity for Pathe, publicity and exploitation for Associated Exhibitors, New York exploitation representative for Fox, and publicity and exploitation representative in Canada for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He organized his own publicity agency a year ago.

The best wishes of his many friends in picture and newspaper circles will follow "Dewey" across the Atlantic, where the splendid reputation he has gained through his work here presages considerable success for him in the rapidly-developing picture industry of Great Britain.

Dolores Costello Leaves

DOLORES COSTELLO, Warner Bros. star, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Maurice Costello, and her sister Helen, who is also a Warner Bros. player, left New York on Thursday, June 23, after a two-weeks' visit in the East, the main purpose of which was to attend the world premiere of Miss Costello's new starring picture "Old San Francisco."

The Costello party left on the S.S. President Adams bound for Havana. After a few days in the Cuban port they will proceed by boat through the Panama Canal to California. Their present plans provide for their return to Hollywood on July 11, immediately following which Dolores will begin work on her next Warner picture, "The College Widow," by George Ade.

While the star was here H. M. Warner introduced her to members of the press at a luncheon given in her honor at the Park Lane Hotel on June 15.

Fox Joy Carnival

THE members of the Fox Athletic Club will hold their annual Joy Carnival at the Claridge Hotel on July 1st. At that time medals will be presented to the Fox bowlers and basketball players, various trophies won by the Club awarded, and the official Fox A. C. flag adopted. Music will be furnished by Luke F. Stager and the original Bluebird Serenaders. At midnight a special buffet supper will be served, and prominent entertainers—the kind who add sparkle to any affair—will be on hand.

Fox Athletic Club directors and officers for 1927 are: William Fox, honorary president; Jack G. Leo, honorary vice-pres.; Douglas N. Tauszig, executive advisor and chairman of Council; Fred Bullock, Jr., president; George Blake, attorney

Norman Springer, author of "The Blood Ship," and George B. Seitz, who recently finished directing it for Columbia Pictures, examine their tickets before leaving for New York with the first print. Standing are Jack Cohn, Harry Cohn, and Hobart Bosworth, who is featured of club; Harry Reinhart, vice-pres.; Deon De Titta, treasurer; Ida Myckon, recording secretary; and Doris Berman, financial secretary.

Child Actor Here for "Crowd"

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Freddie Frederick, who is playing an important juvenile rôle in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Crowd," has arrived in New York to join King Vidor's unit, now making sequences here for this story of big city life, written by the director of "The Big Parade."

In traveling all the way from Los Angeles to appear here in "The Crowd," this remarkable child actor, who is said to have played more parts in his short career than any other film youngster, sets still another movie record, since he is the youngest individual ever to journey across the continent to work in a motion picture.

George K. Arthur in New York

GEORGE K. ARTHUR, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player, arrived in New York last week, coming on from the Shriners convention in Atlantic City. This is Arthur's first visit to Manhattan since his brief stop-off en route from London to Hollywood three years ago. Before accepting a film contract with M-G-M, he was a favorite of the London music halls.

Ethlyne Clair Visiting New York

ETHLYNE CLAIR, who went to Los Angeles a year ago to play Mrs. Newlywed in "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies for the Stern Brothers, and whose progress has been so rapid that she recently played the leading feminine role in two Universal Jewels opposite Hoot Gibson, has just arrived back in New York on vacation.

An F B O Wedding

Cheery Maxims

WARREN NOLAN, a good newspaperman gone publicity with United Artists, sends us a few jolly lines culled from the writing of Leo Tolstoy, author of "Resurrection," which that company is distributing. Here are a few of them—paste them in your hat, and the next time you feel blue and depressed, try them as a tonic for your wavering spirits:

"For 70 years I have been lowering and lowering my opinion of women and still it is to be lowered more and more."

"In general music is a dreadful thing. They say music

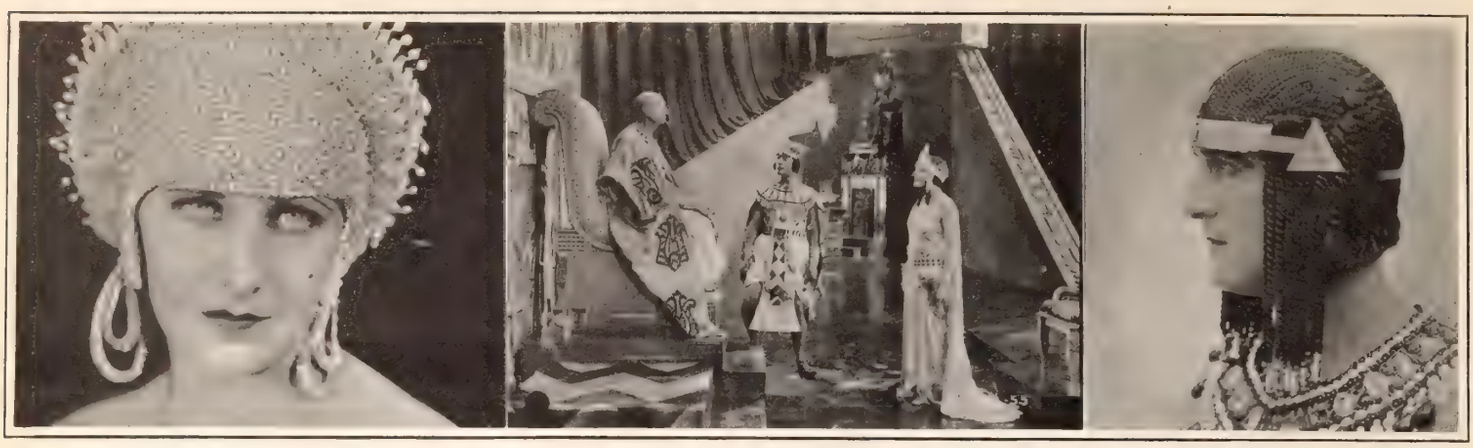
Carewe Seeking Actors

EDWIN CAREWE, who is to begin production on Dolores del Rio's first starring vehicle, "Ramona," in August, is seeking two suitable male actors for the roles of Allesandro and Felipe, characters in the Helen Hunt Jackson novel.

Eat More Snails!

DAVID BUTLER, working in the cast of "The Rush Hour," learned to like snails in France, and during the filming of a French restaurant scene for the picture persuaded Director Mason Hopper to include them in the action. Other members of the cast declined to follow suit, however, and took his word for the daintiness of the French delicacy without sampling it.

Marie Prevost Injured



MARIE PREVOST was slightly injured recently when thrown from an aquaplane board during the filming of scenes for "The Rush Hour" at Catalina Island, necessitating a few days' lay-off by the unit.

Title Team Here

KATHERINE HILLIKER and H. H. Caldwell, the well known team of title writers, have arrived from Fox Films West Coast Studios to work for about two months at the company's New York plant.

Gordon S. White, the gentleman at the right wearing what appears to be a medal but is really one of the identification tags pinned on all delegates to the Educational convention so they wouldn't get lost in Los Angeles, is the director of advertising and publicity of Educational, and the convention gave him the opportunity to become better acquainted with Lupino Lane and Dorothy Devore, two of that company's comedy stars

Many unusual character types appear in "Moon of Israel," the picturization of H. Rider Haggard's famous novel, which has its American premiere at the Roxy theatre in New York on June 25. Left, Maria Corda who plays the title role, and is now in this country under a First National contract; centre, A. Theatres' Value $1,349,208,400

Total Sum Invested in Film Houses in United States According to Figures Compiled by Motion Picture News

ACCORDING to figures compiled by Motion Picture News the total valuation of the motion picture theatres of the United States is $1,349,208,400.

This stupendous sum does not include legitimate houses nor does it figure in office buildings where only a small portion of the total investment is in the theatre proper.

These figures have been checked so far as practicable and in the compilation many regional authorities have been consulted.

The general method of appraisal was to select at random in every state a sufficient number of theatres, by classification of A, B, C, D, and E, to permit the law of averages to become effective and then to appraise by inquiry, research and consultation with persons in a position to know the actual valuation of each of these individual theatres.

With an average valuation in each classification, plus more checking in the case of large theatres in the larger cities, the total number of theatres in each classification was multiplied by the average valuation figure and the totals for each state made into a grand total.

The next step in checking was to compare dollars to percentage of population, also divide into groups of city, urban, village and strictly rural sections. Eliminating strictly rural population from all states and allowing for the percentage of colored population in the South, it was possible to prove to a reasonable degree that the law of averages held good when the five groups were taken separately.

In the larger cities the number of seats was also used in comparison to the dollar totals. This check proved of assistance except in New York City, where land valuations ran too high to make comparisons with other cities, even Chicago, average up in the grand total.

It will be noted that the valuations of Class A and B theatres vary greatly in individual states. This is brought about in obtaining a common figure for multiplication purposes, through the fact that individual theatres in the two classifications vary to the extent of from one hundred thousand to several million dollars and that a class A or B theatre in a city of fifty thousand population and one in a large city are two entirely different propositions, each being comparative to the other houses of the same city and not with each other.

It will be noted also that District of Columbia leads the list in the highest valuation of Class A theatres. Washington was found an exception in compiling an average, for obvious reasons, and the figures given are actual valuations as given by acknowledged authorities.

Motion Picture News presents the following table of theatre valuations as a definite attempt at appraisal and with the belief that in its total by states and in its grand total it represents the approximate worth of the theatre property of the country.

Projected theatres or houses under construction and not yet in operation are not included in these figures. Table follows:

Colleen Moore Exploitation Prize

Awards of $100 and $50 to Exhibitors Sending in Best Suggestions on "Naughty But Nice" Before August 1, 1927

TWO prizes of $100 and $50, respectively, have been offered by Colleen Moore, star of First National's "Naughty But Nice," for the best exploitation suggestions for publicizing this picture sent in by any exhibitor. The judges in the contest will be J. S. Dickerson, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Al Rockett, of the First National studio forces, and C. F. Chandler, director of publicity and advertising. The closing date is August 1, 1927, and entries should be mailed to "Colleen Moore Contest," in care of First National Pictures, Inc., 383 Madison Ave., New York City, or care of Motion Picture News, Inc., 729 Seventh Ave., New York.

No elaborate rules govern the contest. Submit your suggestions for exploiting "Naughty But Nice" in whatever form is most convenient. It is not necessary to see the picture. Every "fan" is familiar with the type of photoplay in which Miss Moore appears, and a short synopsis of "Naughty But Nice" follows for further guidance:

Bernice Summers, plain, long-haired, spectacled, freckled and dumb, gains freedom from her uncle's Texas ranch when oil found on his property makes him disgustingly rich.

In mail-order house wardrobe, she invades an Eastern finishing school. There she blossoms from an unnoticed wall-flower into the school's most stunning girl. Paul Carroll, the town's handsomest and most eligible young bachelor, who ignored her on her arrival, becomes deeply smitten.

Colleen Moore, First National star

The school principal surprises Bernice and her chum in the lobby of a downtown hotel, where they are to meet Paul Carroll for a theatre date. They explain they are there to see the chum's parents upstairs. She follows them and in desperation they are forced to make their bluff good and enter a room.

Ralph Ames, of the secret service, is in his bath when they enter and they try to escape without being seen; but just as they are about to leave, the chum's parents, Judge and Mrs. Atwold, enter. Berenice introduces the stranger as her husband. The girls leave with the judge and his wife and the flabbergasted Ames is left without an explanation.

Through a series of coincidences, Berenice and Ames are brought together that night at the judge's house. Paul Carroll is there, too, and is stunned when Berenice's "husband" is introduced. Every effort is made to induce the "bride" and "groom" to enter the bridal suite, before they are finally herded in. Berenice sleeps on the roof, rolls off, is chased by a policeman, finds Carroll, marries him and they return to the bridal suite.

Sponsors Name N. Y. Film Club

Organization Selects "Motion Picture Club of New York"; Activities Under Way Seeks Location

AT an organization meeting, held Wednesday noon at the Hotel Astor, a name and officers for the first moving picture industry club were chosen.

The name is to be The Motion Picture Club of New York, and the temporary officers elected were: Al Lichtman, president; Arthur Loew, first vice-president; William A. Johnston, second vice-president; Bruce Gallup, secretary, and Arthur Stebbins, treasurer. Mr. Stebbins offered his offices as temporary headquarters for the organization, and reported a total of $5,100 collected from prospective members.

It was voted to ask Nathan Burkan to draw up a charter and to make an application therefor to the State of New York.

A By-Laws Committee was elected, consisting of M. H. Hoffman, chairman, Lou Metzger and Joe Brandt. A scouting committee consisting of David Chatkin, Lee Ochs and Paul Berger was appointed to seek temporary quarters.

The report of the Ways and Means Committee and the Name of the Organization Committee were read, discussed and accepted.

A committee was appointed to bring in suggestions for an appropriate location for an elaborate permanent club house and every one of the eighty individuals present was constituted a committee of one to bring in four prospective members to the next meeting of the organization, next Wednesday at the Hotel Astor.

Widespread interest is being shown in the new club throughout the entire industry, and it is expected that next Wednesday's meeting will be attended by every important executive now in the east.

Ala. to Tax Carnivals If Bill Becomes Law

TRAVELING shows, whether vaudeville, carnival or motion picture, will be forced to pay a tax for the privilege of operating in Alabama if the general revenue bill which passed th eHouse of Representatives last Friday, Jun 17, becomes a law.

The measure provides that "Vaudeville or motion picture shows operating as transients shall pay $100.00 per week where the seating capacity is less than 300; $150.00 a week when the seating capacity reaches, but does not exceed 500; and $200.00 per week when the capacity is 500 seats, or more."

The bill is so worded as to spare the established vaudeville and picture shows any additional tax burden, and obviously is intended to exact a tax from the traveling shows that heretofore, without paying any such taxes as are imposed upon the regularly operated legitimate amusement enterprises, have constituted an unfair competition for those established enterprises.

Sister of Stern Bros. Dies in Germany

AS the result of the news of the death of his sister, Mrs. Sigmund Alexander, in Fulda, Germany, Abe Stern, vice-president of the Stern Film Corporation, sailed for Europe early this week, aboard the S. S. Aquitania. Julius Stern, who sailed for Europe several weeks ago, was at the bed-side of the deceased. Her son, Max Alexander, technical director at the Stern studio, was called to Fulda two months ago, when it was first learned that his mother had no chance for life. Mrs. Alexander was one of three sisters, the other two being Mrs. Carl Laemmle, who died about eight years ago, and Mrs. Maurice Fleckles, of Chicago.

Abe Stern was accompanied to Europe by Herman Stern, sales manager for Stern Brothers Comedies. Both men expect to be in Europe about six weeks. Julius Stern will not return until September.

Lasky Announces Paramount Will Cut Salaries Ten Percent

ANNOUNCEMENT of drastic economy measures throughout the producing end of the industry as outlined in last week's issue of Motion Picture News was amplified this week by a Los Angeles statement by Jesse L. Lasky that gives details of what Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation proposed to do to effect this economy.

According to Mr. Lasky a reduction of 10 per cent in salary of all employees of the company of over $50.00 will be effective immediately although observers are unable to accept this statement literally when it is a known fact that a considerable number of people have contracts obligating the company to definite salary payments of specified amounts.

His own and that of other officials of the company were the first to be cut, Mr. Lasky said, and added that the reduction had been accepted by the entire New York end of the organization.

The first indication that a drastic retrenchment move was intended by the Paramount organization was made known last week, when Mr. Lasky returned to Hollywood.

Steffes Warns of Merger

Independents Must Be Kept Alive, Says No'west Leader, Pointing Out Danger in Trade Marked Product

W. A. STEFFES, who as president of the M.P.T.O.A. of the Northwest, represents and takes care of the booking problems of over nine hundred exhibitors believes that the independent theatre owner has reached a crucial time in his affairs.

In an official bulletin of the organization which was sent to every exhibitor in the Northwest, Mr. Steffes reviews briefly the situation of the man who is not connected with a powerful chain organization in the following language:

"With the amalgamation of larger film companies now taking place, it certainly behooves the independent theatre owners to do everything they possibly can to keep the independent producer and distributor in business. This business is narrowing down to a few. One or two more announcements of amalgamations, and if the independent theatre owner is not careful, he is going to be without any product for his theatre.

"There is an amalgamation movement on foot now involving some of the larger producing companies, and when this takes place, which eventually will, you are going to be at the mercy of one or two large companies. Take your records for the past few years and check back and find out for yourself if your money-making pictures were not those released by the so-called independent companies.

"The officers of your organization found it necessary to secure all of the worth while or A-1 independent companies' product and distribute it throughout the territory. Never in the history of the film business in this territory has one company had the wonderful line-up or product that your organization has to sell this year.

"We bought Columbia's Perfect Thirty. You all know what Columbia has done in the past in the way of making pictures. Columbia this year are starting out with a picture that if it was handled by some of the other companies would be road show. You wouldn't get it for two years, viz., 'The Blood Ship.'

"If it is trade marks we haven't got them. Those of you who think you need a trade mark to operate your theatre should see what is happening in the larger cities in the East at the present time. Theatre owners who have built up these trade marks find that the trade mark companies are now their direct competitors and are using their trade mark pictures themselves. Why not take independent pictures and advertise independent productions on their merits, satisfy your clientele, and build up a steady patronage for your theatre that cannot be taken away when the trade mark is removed."

Arthur Friend Resuming Theatre Control

ARTHUR FRIEND will resume control of the theatres in New England which he leased to Loew's, Inc., some time ago, it became known this week. This includes houses in New London and Derby Conn., Springfield and Worcester, Mass., Providence, R. I., and Portland, Me.

Atlantic City Movie Fete $167,000 Loss

"The Million Dollar Movie Pagaent," promoted and directed by Harry Brown, Los Angeles contractor in studio equipment, and which was to have been the most brilliant ever held in Atlantic City, was a total failure, a deficit of $167,000 being chalked up against the affair. Brown contracted heavy expenses in transporting over a score of motion picture folk across the continent, setting up elaborate electrical equipment, and building 26 costly floats. But it is understood that Brown has arranged to pay or has paid all remaining debts and is a heavy loser.

Brown and a staff of workmen worked in Atlantic City for several weeks preparing for the enterprise. Brown was to have given three pageants. The first was held on Thursday night and Brown is said to have given all the money from the sale of seats to the Shriners. All of Friday night's proceeds above the expenses were to have gone to Atlantic City charities, but the motion picture ball which he staged on the Steel Pier Thursday night netted only $700. The parade on the following night was a failure, the public showing very little interest and the receipts proving negligible. Following a protest from a former mayor of the summer resort that the pagaent was commercializing the boardwalk, Brown held a conference with Mayor Anthony Ruffu and several hotel men, agreeing to call off the Saturday parade.

Franklin Outlines New Combine Policies

Bearing with him the announcement that a new corporation is being formed to take over the management of the Publix and Loew Theatres recently merged into West Coast Theatres, Inc., Harold F. Franklin, arrived from Los Angeles and outlined the new policies of the gigantic theatre combine. He talked at a luncheon conference of more than 50 executives of the Northern California division of the West Coast Theatres held in the Palace Hotel. Altogether the corporation controls more than 300 theatres in the West, representing a $250,000,000 merger. The new corporation, he explained, will in effect be a subsidiary of the West Coast Theatres. Publix and Loew interests will have equal shares with West Coast in the corporation, though the latter will have supreme control, President Franklin asserted.

Outlining the policies of the new combine, he told the executives that all these will be founded on the main principle of "the best possible service to the public." One point on which President Franklin laid emphasis was that of "truthful advertising."

Wembley to Become Studio

Ralph Pugh Announces Purchase by British Incorporated Pictures for More Than $700,000

RALPH J. PUGH, managing director of British Incorporated Pictures. Ltd., of England, has announced that 35 acres of property in the late British Empire Exhibition at Wembley have been purchased for approximately $716,000 for the establishment of the world's largest film studio, according to Kine Weekly. This deal has been rumored for some time.

This property includes the Palace of Engineering, the largest covered concrete building in the world, with half a million feet of floor space, making possible the production of 150 features a year within the four walls of the single plant. It is 110 feet above sea level, an important atmospheric factor.

Five railway lines already run through the building, below the floor level, for the transportation of heavy articles; a restaurant for serving 300 persons at one time is fully equipped; electric, gas and water mains, fire hydrants and a drainage system are fully installed.

The company's own producing unit, British Authors' Production, will begin work here next January, and it was primarily for this that the property was acquired, but the space and facilities available are so enormous that a separate rental company has been formed to attract other producers as well.

Ohio Film Business Poor

Falling Off in Theatre Grosses Reported For Cleveland and Northern Part of State; Houses Closing

A SURVEY of the motion picture theatres of Cleveland and northern Ohio has brought to light the information that the picture business in this section is poor for this time of the year. Coupled with the fact that the weather conditions have been ideal for sustained seasonal business, the report clearly indicates that business is way off. In Cleveland it is understood that there is a great deal of unemployment.

In other sections a spirit of business unrest exists. Perhaps this condition accounts for the unusually large number of theatres which are closed. The latest list totals 70 houses in northern Ohio which have ceased operations either temporarily or permanently. Cleveland has fifteen dark houses. In other key points the following list was obtained: three in Toledo; one in Youngstown; one in Lima and two in Steubenville. Everything is open in Akron, Canton and Sandusky.

Counterbalancing this pessimistic outlook there is, on the other hand, the largest theatre building program in the territory than ever before in its history. Variety Amusements, Inc., has a $3,500,000 program. Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., is building a new 2,000-seat West Side house. Keith is reported to have plans for a West Side house. M. B. Horwitz of the Washington Circuit is taking bids on a 2,000-seat East side house. Henry Lustig and associates are building a large house on Lake Shore Blvd. All of which indicates that local exhibitors feel that the depression is temporary, and that relief will soon be in sight.

Jersey M.P.T.O. Meets At Asbury Park

NEW JERSEY'S M. P. T. O. is holding its annual convention this week at Asbury Park.

The sessions began Tuesday at the Berkeley-Cartaret hotel but up until the time of going to press no official business other than that transacted in executive session had been accomplished.

Both Tuesday and Wednesday were devoted almost entirely to pleasure. A ball and carnival was the feature attraction for Wednesday evening with the banquet held on Thursday night.

Among the prominent national figures in M. P. T. O. A. circles who were in attendance were President R. F. Woodhull, Business Manager M. J. O'Toole and A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the Board of Directors of the national organization.

The result of executive meetings open only to exhibitors was not disclosed but it is understood that New Jersey will follow the lead of the parent organization in inviting producer owned theatres to affiliate with the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey.

An informal subject of debate was the protection of clauses that the Stanley-Fabian circuit is requiring from distributors which has handicapped independent theatres in the matter of bookings. Just what action will be taken if any and what such action would mean in this connection, was not disclosed at this writing.

A number of accessory dealers and manufacturers had displays in the hotel adjoining the meeting room where the convention was held.

Robert Lieber's Indiana Opened With Rork Picture

Robert Leiber, chairman of the board of directors of First National Pictures, opened his new Indiana theatre in Indianapolis last Saturday, June 18. The film attraction was Sam E. Rork's latest production, "The Prince of Headwaiters," in which Lewis Stone is featured.

Among New York picture personages who attended the opening of the Indiana were Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager of First National; Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer; Ned E. Dipinet, general sales manager; Sam Katz of Balaban & Katz; Sidney R. Kent of Paramount; and Robert Kane, First National producer.

Brenon Uses Two Studios to Film "Sorrell and Son"

Compelled to use two studios because of the unusually large number of sets in "Sorrell and Son," the United Artists picturization of the English novel, Herbert Brenon recently transferred the entire company from the United Artists lot to the Buster Keaton studio, which has been turned over to the dramatic company while Keaton is preparing for his next comedy.

First National Has 8 Pictures in Production

WITH seven productions in the cutting room, in various stages of editing and titling, First National Pictures, Inc., has eight in production, with preparatory work in progress on a dozen more. Just emerging from the cutting room are "Lonesome Ladies," featuring Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson; and Johnny Hines' "White Pants Willie." "The Stolen Bride," starring Billie Dove, "Smile, Brother, Smile," with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, will require two weeks or so longer in the editing and cutting process. Richard Barthelmess' "The Patent Leather Kid," went into the cutting room at a later date and will not emerge for some weeks yet. "For the Love of Mike," formerly called "Hell's Kitchen, went into the cutting room last week.

Now in various stages of production are:

The new Harry Langdon picture tentatively called "Gratitude," with Gladys McConnell; "Breakfast at Sunrise," the Constance Talmadge picture; "Red Raiders," starring Ken Maynard, with Ann Drew as the leading woman; "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," starring Milton Sills, with Molly O'Day opposite the star; "The Rose of Monterey" (working title), Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland; 'American Beauty," starring Billie Dove; "The Drop Kick," starring Richard Barthelmess, and "The Life of Riley" (working title), starring Charlie Murray and George Sidney.

Warner Bros. Working on Seven New Productions

Activity at the Warner Studio continues at a fast pace with five Warner features and two extended run productions now in production.

Four new players have been added to the cast of George Jessel's starring picture temporarily titled, "The Broadway Kid." They are Lincoln Stedman, William Demarest, Douglas Gerrard and Walter Rodgers. Rin-Tin-Tin's new picture, "Jaws of Steel," is now in the second week of production. Jason Robards and Helen Ferguson have the leading human roles. Director Howard Bretherton utilized the Los Angeles baseball park this week for exteriors on Monte Blue's starring vehicle, "The Bush Leaguer."

Another company from the Warner Studio is busy on exteriors taking location scenes in the desert for Irene Rich's forthcoming picture now being made under the temporary title of "The Outpost." Archie Mayo is busy with the first scenes of "Slightly Used" starring May McAvoy with Conrad Nagel. He has added Eugenie Besserer to the cast. Director Alan Crosland making "The Jazz Singer," has temporarily suspended work in the West and is now in New York for special scenes. Work is progressing on "Ham and Eggs at the Front" with Roy Del Ruth wielding the megaphone. Louise Fazenda, Myrna Loy, Heinie Conklin and Tom Wilson are in this story.

Morris Safier Back From West Coast

Morris Safier, head of Warner Bros. extended run department, is back at his desk in the home office after a two weeks' visit to the company's studio in Hollywood where he conferred with Jack L. Warner on plans for extended run productions on the new season's line-up.

Fox Gives Chamberlin's Town "De Luxe" Service

The little Iowa town of Denison, boasting a population of 3,473, produced "a hero of the hour" in Clarence Chamberlin, who with Levine spanned the Atlantic in the airplane Columbia. Pictures of Chamberlin's arrival in Kottbus, Germany, were exhibited in Denison a little more than a week after the successful termination of the aerial feat. It was decided by Truman H. Talley, director-in-chief of Fox News, that it was altogether proper to give Denison the best "Broadway service" possible. A telegram received by Mr. Talley from the town says that a holiday prevailed in Denison upon the arrival of the news reel shots, the entire populace trooping to the Opera House where they viewed the pictures over and over again, standing in a drenching rain to do so.

The pictures, following their showing, were presented to E. C. Chamberlin, father of the flyer. All records for the delivery of the film between Germany and the United States were lowered in the Fox service to the Iowa town. Delivery records between New York and Omaha were also shattered.

Upon the arrival of the pictures on the S. S. Olympic they were rushed to Hadley Field, N. J., where they were placed aboard a special air mail plane and carried to Omaha. A Fox agent in Omaha sped them by fast motor to Denison, a distance of 80 miles. They were showing in town within 24 hours after their arrival in New York. Fox is also giving the same "de luxe" service to other pictures of Chamberlin.

Halt Corinne Griffith Film to Enlarge Theme

Work on "The Garden of Eden," Corinne Griffith's first United Artists picture, has been temporarily halted so the theme can be enlarged and elaborated. Production will be resumed within a week or ten days.

It has been decided to increase the scope of the story and enlarge the budget for the picture.

Gomersall Starts Sales Trip for Fox Shorts

E. T. "PECK" GOMERSALL, newly appointed sales manager of the short subject department of Fox Films, departed Monday on a six weeks' sales trip through the various Fox branches throughout the country.

Gomersall made Boston his first stop, conferring with Harry Campbell, the popular Fox district manager for New England. He remained there two days. Albany was the next town on the list. Gomersall will be in the New York capital Wednesday and Thursday. Friday and Saturday he will look over the situation in Buffalo and the itinerary of the rest of the trip is as follows:

Pittsburgh, June 26-27; Cleveland, 28-29; Detroit, June 30-July 1; Cincinnati, July 2-3-4; Indianapolis, 5; St. Louis, 6-7; Chicago, 8-9; Milwaukee, 10; Minneapolis, 11-12; Des Moines, 13; Omaha, 14; Kansas City, 15; Dallas, 16-17; Oklahoma City, 18; New Orleans, 19-20; Memphis, 21; Atlanta, 22-23; Charlotte, 24; Washington, 25-26; Philadelphia, 27; returning to New York July 28.

Herman Starr Returns From European Trip

Herman Starr, chief office executive of Warner Bros., returned this week on the S. S. Olympic from eight weeks in Europe where he accomplished extensive business relating to the foreign distribution of Warner Bros. pictures.

Mr. Starr's first task was the complete reorganization of Warner's Paris branch, the Cie. Vitagraph de France. Proceeding then to Berlin Mr. Starr began negotiations for the sale of various territories throughout Central Europe.

Before sailing for home he spent some time in Great Britain, British Isles, traveling through England, Scotland and Wales and personally meeting the prominent British exhibitors. He then presided over a specially called convention in London attended by all Warner salesmen for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Starr reports that not only Warner's business but conditions in general throughout England are infinitely better than they were on his last trip abroad. The same is true, he adds, of the industry in Germany and France.

Labor Difficulties Again Beset Atlanta Metropolitan

Following the giving of notice two weeks ago that, unless there was an adjustment of differences between the striking musicians and the theatre management, the four operators and the electrician at the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, did not report for work Friday morning of this week. Manager John Crovo, of the Metropolitan, stated that the vacancies had been filled and that there was no delay in manning the booth.

The differences between the musicians and the theatre arose several weeks ago over the interpretation of the clause in contract relative to change in policy. The Metropolitan had sought to reduce the number of musicians in the orchestra and this precipitated the controversy.

When the musicians left the house, after conferences failed to reach an adjustment of the matter, the operators and electrician served formal notice that, unless a settlement was effected, they would go out when their day's work was ended Thursday night.

Pathe Schedules Eight Releases for July 3

A feature and seven short subjects will be issued by Pathe on July 4. The feature is a five-reeler, "The Little Firebrand," story by Frederick Chapin, and directed by Charles Hutchinson. Edith Thornton and Lou Tellegan are the featured players. George Fawcett, Eddie Phillips, Lincoln Stedman and Joan Standing are also in the cast.

Max Davidson is the star of "Don't Tell Everything," a Hal Roach two-reel comedy, which was directed by Leo McCarey; "The Big Reward," the current release of the Æsop Film Fables series; "When Thieves Fall Out," the third chapter of "The Crimson Flash," and Pathe Review, Number 27, showing "Dry Land Skippers," "Fix Bayonets," "Fashioning Faces" and "Trapping Wild Game in Africa." Topics of the Day, Number 27, and the two issues of the Pathe News, Numbers 56 and 57, complete the Pathe releases for July 3.

Educat'l Busily Producing

Every Unit Except "Big Boy's" Hard at Work; Lane, Arthur and Hamilton Making New Comedies

WITH the approach of the first day of July every unit at the Educational studio with the exception of the "Big Boy"-Juvenile company is busily engaged in the making of new comedies for the 1927 season. After a short rest, Lupino Lane is again ready to start working on a new two-reel comedy; Johnny Arthur is in the midst of his first Tuxedo comedy; Lloyd Hamilton has finished his training camp comedy; Dorothy Devore has begun work on her initial star production; George Davis is starring in a Mermaid comedy and the first Cameo one-reelers are now in the course of production. As soon as "Big Boy" has recovered from the illness that has indisposed him, he will start the "Big Boy"-Juvenile series probably under the direction of Charles Lamont.

Lane, who has just finished the role of a fire fighting recruit, portrays a frontiersman in his new picture, the background of which is supposed to represent Kentucky. Estelle Bradley is his leading lady. The company, under the direction of Mark Sandrich, is now at Newhall, Cal., working on the mountain scenery.

Johnny Arthur is being directed by Charles Lamont in his initial Tuxedo comedy. Anita Garvin is the principal feminine player in his support. Lloyd Hamilton's first comedy is practically finished after four weeks of work. The comedian appears as a raw rookie in a training camp.

George Davis, the featured player in several Mermaids with Clem Beauchamp and Phil Dunham, is the sole starring player in a comedy which Stephen Roberts is directing. Davis has just returned to the Educational studio after two months spent in feature length productions. During his absence he appeared in "The Small Bachelor" for Universal and two Goldwyn pictures.

Pathe News Seeks Flyers

Cameraman, Sent With Airplane Expedition, Brings Encouraging Hopes for Nungesser and Coli

TOM HOGAN, Pathe News cameraman sent out by Pathe News with the airplane searching expedition for Nungesser and Coli, lost French flyers, has brought back to New York encouraging hopes for the welfare of the ill-fated French aces, who are believed to have been lost on their Trans-Atlantic flight starting May eighth. Editor Ray Hall of Pathe News has received reports from correspondents in Canada that mysterious flares have been seen nightly in the 600 mile square forest area of the Price Brothers property, located at the Saguenay River in Quebec.

If the flares continue, there is every likelihood that if either Nungesser or Coli are still alive, that a rescue may be effected.

Cameraman Hogan left New York June 21st to continue flying over the territory and hopefully watch for the signals which it is hoped will lead to the rescue of the trans-Atlantic heroes.

Hogan believes that the Nungesser-Coli plane, which was flying in a snowstorm, had been forced to a low altitude and in the gale they crashed against a mountain, resulting, perhaps, in the slight injury of at least one of the aviators. The cameraman believes that perhaps the gasoline tank was not punctured and that Nungesser and Coli have made flares with this fuel with the help of pieces of the fuselage and other light material.

The films taken by Cameraman Hogan were shown throughout the country during the past week, and they present views of the great Canadian area of vast forests and lakes.

M-G Buys 'Student Prince'

Acquisition of Operetta Founded on "Old Heidelberg" Will Enable Exhibitors to Use Romberg Score

THE screening rights to "The Student Prince," the internationally successful operetta founded on the play "Old Heidelberg," have been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Ernst Lubitsch has been making the play into a motion picture for many months now with Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer co-starred. Immediately following the conclusion of the long negotiations for the screen rights, the title of the Lubitsch production was changed from "Old Heidelberg" to "The Student Prince," with a subtitle, "In Old Heidelberg." The beautiful effects achieved in the operetta will be transferred to the cinema version, it is said, and Sigmund Romberg's musical score is made available for theatres showing the film. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials feel that exhibitors should be allowed to accompany the "Student Prince" with the operetta music without extra expense to themselves.

One factor that influenced the negotiations was the compelling qualities which the music is certain, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer believes, to add to the possibilities of the picture. The company points to the favor with which the musical score of "The Merry Widow" was received by exhibitors and public alike.

Changes in Ownership of Northwest Houses

Changes in ownership and management of several motion picture houses in the Pacific Northwest were announced in Seattle, Washington, recently. Included are the following:

The Strand Theatre at Miles City, Montana, held on lease by H. W. Knutson, has been released to Charles Hanson; Rose Theatre at Cheney, Washington, formerly operated by Miss Lulu Neilson, purchased recently by H. H. Hanson, formerly an exhibitor at Harrington, Washington; Blue Mouse Theatre at Davenport, Washington, taken over recently by A. B. Fowler; Beaver Theatre at Beaverton, Oregon, turned back to N. G. Freeman last week by J. H. Stiles, who has been operating it for the last ten months; Woodlawn Theatre, suburban house in Portland, taken over by C. E. Yeager, owner of the Sunnyside, and renamed the Sunset. Mr. Yeager also took over Warnock's Ideal Theatre in Portland, which he has renamed the Senate.

$3 Top for Society Preview of Jannings Film

The world premiere of "The Way of All Flesh," Emil Jannings' first American-made picture, opening this week at the Rialto Theatre in New York, will have a price of $3 top. The showing will be in the nature of a society previews, sponsored by the Union Settlement vacation camp committee, composed of a number of socially registered New Yorkers. The preview will be held at the Rialto at 9:30 o'clock this Friday night. The picture will open for a run on the day following the preview.

Arrangements for the special showing were made by Miss Jessie Bancroft Payne, representing the Settlement Committee, which is receiving cooperation from the New York Evening Telegram and the Paramount staff. The proceeds from the showing will go to the vacation camp fund to defray the expenses of vacation camps for poor children.

New Ingram Film to Have Premiere at Embassy

While the exact date has not been set, it was learned last week that Rex Ingram's picturization of Robert Hichens' novel, "The Garden of Allah," soon will have its premiere at the Embassy Theatre, New York City, where "Annie Laurie" is now running. Announcement of the closing date for "Annie Laurie" and the opening of "The Garden of Allah" will be made later. The print of Ingram's latest film for Metro-Goldwyn arrived in New York the other day from Ingram's studio headquarters in Nice, France.

Charles R. Condon Gets Long Warner Contract

Charles R. Condon, scenarist, this week signed his name to a long term contract with Warner Bros. Mr. Condon wrote the scripts for "What Happened to Father" featuring Warner Oland, and "Jaws of Steel" which he has just completed as Rin-Tin-Tin's next starring story.

Lee Laslo, Hungarian Film Actor, Signed by Piermont Pictures

Piermont Signs Hungarian Film Star

Piermont Pictures Corporation, independent producers of features and comedies for state right release, has just signed Lee Laslo, Hungarian screen star, for the leading role in "Wings of Fate," which will go into work shortly with an all-star cast under the direction of Joseph Ornato, who recently directed "A Broadway Adventure," starring Maurice Costello. Laslo appeared in Hungary with Vilma Banky and made several pictures for the Hungarian First National Pictures Company. He also made several pictures for Ufa in Germany.

Le Baron Signs Directors for F B O Studio

William Le Baron, who recently took the position of vice-president in charge of production at the F B O studios in Hollywood, believes in young blood. Just this week he has signed three new directors—Phil Carle, Louis King, and Wally Fox.

For eight years Carle has been assisting Robert Vignola. Louis King, is the brother of Henry King. Fox has been Edwin Carew's assistant for eight years. Since coming to the F B O studios he has assisted Ralph Ince.

It was Le Baron who first gave Frank Tuttle, Gregory LaCava, Paul Sloane, Luther Reed and Richard Rosson, their start in the directing game.

"The ranks of motion picture directors are sadly in need of new timber," explained Mr. Le Baron in discussing the new policy of F B O in giving young men their chance at directing pictures.

"The Thirteenth Juror" New Title for "U" Film

"The Thirteenth Juror" has been chosen as the title of a Universal crook drama, which Edward Laemmle is now producing at Universal City from Henry Irving Dodge's story "The Counsel for the Defense." This picture has had the working title of "Honor and the Woman."

Francis X. Bushman, Ana Q. Nilsson, George Siegmann and Walter Pidgeon have the leading roles.

Two Films in Work at First National Studio

Two new pictures were recently launched at the First National studio at Burbank and are now well in production. They are "The Drop Kick" and "The Life of Riley." Following the completion of "The Patent Leather Kid," Richard Barthelmess began work on "The Drop Kick," under the production management of Ray Rockett on June 13th at the company's Burbank studios. Millard Webb is directing.

Virginia Lee Corbin has been assigned to a leading role, and Alberta Vaughn has been especially signed for an important part.

The leading players have been engaged for the next Charlie Murray-George Sidney production which went into work on June 10th under the tentative title of "The Life of Riley." Supporting players include Myrtle Stedman, Sam Hardy, June Marlowe and Stephen Carr with others are still to be selected. E. M. Asher is the producer while William Beaudine has been signed to direct the picture.

Mary Pickford Sued for $100,000 Damages

In a $100,000 damage suit filed in the Federal Court in Los Angeles last Saturday, June 18, Mary Pickford is named defendant in the accounting of all profits derived from "Sparrows" asked by the plaintiffs, Phillip Edgerton Hubbard, scenarist, and James M. Sheridan, lawyer. The plaintiffs assert that an infringement exists on a story by Hubbard entitled "The Cry of the Children." Hubbard claims that he wrote the scenario in 1919 in collaboration with the late Harry Hyde Flanagan, whose estate is represented by the plaintiff attorney. According to Hubbard the work, upon being submitted to Miss Pickford, was rejected, but the suit charges that "Sparrows" is really the Hubbard story.

The suit also mentions the Mary Pickford Company, Winifred Dunn, seven persons named as "Does" and five more named as "Roes."

Filming on New Wren Story to Start July 27

Filming of "Beau Sabreur," the P. C. Wren sequel to "Beau Geste," will get under way June 27 at the Paramount studio. The company will leave for location on July 4, and will remain at Guadeloupe, California, for several weeks until the desert scenes are completed. An advance organization of mechanics and builders leave Hollywood next week for location to construct a camp for several hundred players, technical men and assistants. An artificial lake will be formed for the creation of an oasis for which water will be piped several thousand feet.

Phil Carle Assigned Direction F B O Film

Phil Carle, assistant director for eight years to Robert Vignola, has just been signed to direct "In a Moment of Temptation," from a story by Laura Jean Libbey adapted for the screen by Doris Anderson, at F B O, according to an announcement by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production.

Rothacker-F. N. Deal Concluded

Well-Known Film Man Becomes Vice-President of Company and Managing Director of West Coast Studio Activities

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, General and Production Manager of First National Pictures, Inc., today announced the election of Watterson R. Rothacker as Vice-President of First National Productions Corporation and Managing Director in complete charge of all activities at the West Coast studios.

Mr. Rothacker will leave for California shortly and will assume his duties on the West Coast early in July. He is one of the pioneers in the film industry and long associated with the production of pictures, one of his projects being the First National success, "The Lost World."

Mr. Rowland and the other First National officials express high gratification at obtaining the services of Mr. Rothacker, whose ability and experience is firmly established throughout the industry both in this country and in Europe.

Al Rockett, who succeeded John McCormick, continues as West Coast production manager.

Born in Chicago, May 6th, 1885, Mr. Rothacker came from a long line of ancestors noted for their accomplishments. His father was O. H. Rothacker, editor of various western newspapers; his grandfather, Honorable Sterling Parker Rounds, owner of a string of newspapers and prominent in the councils of Presidents Garfield and Arthur. His godfather was Col. Henry Watterson.

True to the adventurous spirit of the Watterson R. Rothacker, West Coast studio managing director for First National

Rothacker family, young Watterson abandoned the courses at the Lewis Institute of Technology, where he was preparing for West Point, to take part in the Thunder Mountain gold rush. After this experience, he engaged in newspaper work in various parts of the country.

Realizing the future possibilities of motion pictures, he founded the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company in 1910 in association with Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane, and became the pioneer specialist in the production of industrial pictures. He was also founder and president of the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories, Hollywood, both of which concerns were recently sold to Consolidated Film Industries.

Throughout his association with the motion picture business, Mr. Rothacker has been noted for his readiness to accept and promoted new ideas. It was through his initiative that "The Lost World," one of the most unusual and successful pictures ever made, was produced for First National. It was Mr. Rothacker who had the happy idea of sending "Miles of Smiles," a record of mothers, sisters and sweethearts back home, to the doughboys in Europe. He also conceived and carried through the plan of projecting motion pictures for an audience in an airplane. For more than fifteen years his record has been one of consistent achievement.

Mr. Rothacker was at one time member of the board of directors at the United Studios in Hollywood and was vice-president of the first Motion Picture Board of Trade. He is a member of the Lambs Club of New York; American Club of London, Eng.; Chicago Athletic Association; Chicago Riding Club; Sons of American Revolution and The Forty Club.

New Eng. May Stop Double Bills

Large Circuit Will Cease Practice, is Report; Smaller Chains Expected to Follow Same Policy

ELIMINATION of double feature bills in one of the largest circuits operating in New England is being planned, it became known this week, when representatives of this circuit conferred with representatives of some of the larger distributors with a view to forming plans whereby this phase of motion picture exhibiting might be carried beyond the confines of the circuit.

Until such time as the announcement is forthcoming from the circuit, representatives of that company have asked that the name of the company be withhheld. To most of the exhibitors in the larger New England cities, however, the move is already known and a number of them have been approached, it is said, with a view to cooperating in the move.

Already in some of its theatres, this circuit has eliminated double features but in a few it has recently eliminated vaudeville and has added the double features. Officials say that this was done because of difficulty in securing a sufficient variety of short subjects or enough news reels to fill in the gap caused by the elimination of vaudeville.

Developments in the exchanges during recent days, however, have changed this complexion. There is now available an abundance of short subjects and an abundance of news reels including those of the exchanges which have recently added newsreel departments. It is believed probable that within a very few months showing of newsreels will be greatly augmented in all of the larger theatres in New England.

In no other section of the country has the double feature plan gained such headway as in New England. Gradually, however, the first run houses have been dropping the two features for a single feature. Other theatres than first run houses, however, and in many first run theatres too, double features are still shown. For years the distributors have sought to have the exhibitors discontinue the double feature practice for the general good of the industry.

The difficulty has been in securing cooperation among the exhibitors of the various communities to discontinue double features. Managers have been willing to run only a single feature provided all of the other theatres would agree to do likewise but there has never been anyone willing to carry out the proposition to the extent of bringing it about. Circuits which have found the double feature practice profitable have been unwilling to discontinue it.

It is believed by many distributors and exhibitors who are aware of what is taking place in the circuit referred to, that as soon as this circuit discontinues the double feature programs many smaller circuits and independent exhibitors will readily follow their example.

Sales policies adopted by some of the exchanges recently are expected to assist in cutting out two feature films and in providing greater variety in program in theatres which do not present stage attractions. Increase in the number of theatres presenting stage attractions has already eliminated the double features from their programs.

The Capitol Theatre at Worcester, Mass., has added presentations and has cut out the double features.

In the reopening of the Opera House at Barre, Vt., the single feature will be used.

The double bill plan has been abandoned at the Empire Theatre, New Bedford, Mass.

Circuits Back of Equipment Move

Leading Chains Financing E. E. Fulton Expansion, is Report

A NUMBER of leading theatre chains are declared to be back of a move on the part of E. E. Fulton Co., well-known accessory dealers of Chicago, to open branches throughout the country immediately. Circuits named in this connection are Publix, Loew's, Stanley, Skouras, Universal, West Coast, and perhaps Kunsky, with others expected to come in.

The present Fulton branches in Chicago, Indianapolis and St. Louis will be augmented by branches in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Omaha, San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas and Jacksonville.

A little later branches will be opened in Washington, Denver, Los Angeles, Seattle, New Orleans and Minneapolis. Permanent sales representatives will be located also in Albany, Banff, Baltimore, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Memphis, Des Moines, Oklahoma City, Salt Lake City, Portland and Tampa.

Although nothing has been announced, it is understood that the capitalization will be $500,000, with 10 circuits putting up $25,000 each to cover half of this, with Fulton retaining the other 50 per cent.

The move is intended to keep competition alive in the equipment field, and the circuits do not bind themselves to purchase everything from Fulton, depending solely on prices quoted.

Twelve Year Limit Set on British Quota

MODIFICATIONS in the original British film quota bill have been proposed which would limit the application of the quota to a period of 12 years from April 1, 1928, according to Kine Weekly. Other amendments proposed would make the maximum quota of British films required 20 per cent during the last four or five years of operation, instead of the 25 per cent originally proposed, with the fate of this in doubt.

Combine to Aid Flood Exhibitors

Hays Office and M.P.T.O.A. Work Out Relief Method in Matter of Theatre Programs and Payment of Bills

THROUGH the joint efforts of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Will H. Hays office the exhibitors in the flooded areas of the Mississippi Valley are being cared for as much as circumstances will permit in the matter of picture programs and along other lines.

A conference was held at the Hays office yesterday on that situation in which National President R. F. Woodhull and Business Manager M. J. O'Toole of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and C. C. Pettijohn and Gabriel Hess of Mr. Hays' organization participated. This meeting was arranged in conformity with the resolution passed at the recent convention in Columbus.

The work already handled in this relation was reviewed. A form of moratorium now prevails in the affected districts where Theatre Owners are not pressed for the payment of bills by the exchanges and reasonable credit allowed on new picture programs. Where extreme conditions exist these are handled with additional consideration and in a general way the theatre proposition is being cared for in a satisfactory manner.

The motion picture industry in Hollywood raised $54,273.84 for the Misissippi Valley flood sufferers.

In addition to this, 3,780 cans of foodstuffs were contributed to the Red Cross Relief Unit in Memphis, Tennessee.

In a preliminary report, the Indianapolis Film Board of Trade states that 57 theatres in the Indianapolis territory raised $7,715.12 for the Mississippi Valley flood sufferers.

In a preliminary report, the New Haven Film Board of Trade says that three New Haven theatres have raised $2,477.85 for the benefit of the Mississippi flood sufferers.

With 10 theatres still to be heard from, the Kansas City Film Board of Trade reports that 33 theatres in the Kansas City Territory in benefit performances raised $5,079.16 for the Mississippi flood sufferers.

A preliminary report from the Dallas Film Board of Trade says that 141 theatres raised $15,294.22. 59 theatres are still to be heard from.

The Film Board reports that a number of theatres gave benefit performances and forwarded money to the Red Cross without reporting to the Motion Picture Flood Relief Committee. It is estimated that the motion picture industry in Texas has contributed more than $50,000 to the fund.

In the Atlanta Territory, 22 theatres have contributed $2,507.05. More contributions are expected in this territory.

The Buffalo Film Board of Trade reports that theatres in the Buffalo Territory collected $11,686.37 for the Mississippi flood sufferers. Gratis film service valued at $2,025.50 was contributed by the distributing companies for these benefit performances.

16 theatres in the Buffalo Territory are still to be heard from.

Details of F. N. German Unit Announced

ADVICES from our Berlin Correspondent state that the new National distributing organization in Germany will be known as "Defina," while the producing firm will be "Defu." Half of the 30 pictures to be handled will be made by Defu. The concern, half of which is owned by German capital, will be managed by Phil Kaufman and Hermann Rosenfeld. The business end of production will be looked after by J. Haiman with production in the hands of Friedrich Zelnik, leading German producer. A. C. Bermann and K. J. Fritzsche will also occupy important positions.

Lya Mara will be featured in three productions. The Danish producer, W. A. Sandberg, has been engaged, as well as R. Land, one of the youngest German film directors. Prominent First National stars will appear in some of the films, it is reported.

A late cablegram from Berlin states that Zelnik has acquired the world screen rights to "Theresa Raquin," by Zola, to have worldwide First National release. Whether American distribution is contemplated is not announced.

Pacific Northwest Buys Bellingham Theatres

Announcement was made in Seattle, Washington, last week to the effect that Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., affiliated in the new West Coast combine, has just purchased the entire holdings of the Bellingham Theatres Company, Inc., in Bellingham. This included the American, Grand, Egyptian and Dream Theatres, which are said to have brought a price close to $750,000. Fred B. Walton, managing director of the houses under the old regime, is understood to be remaining in charge of the theatres for West Coast, but it is expected that two of the houses will be closed and the other two extensively remodeled.

The only opposition house remaining in Bellingham is the new Avalon Theatre, owned by Albert Finkelstein and E. P. Mathis.

Hal Hodes Leaves New York for Extended Tour

Hal Hodes, sales manager for short product for Universal, left New York this week for an extended tour of the middle-western exchanges. He will be away from New York from five to six weeks and will visit Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and several other exchange centers. The trip is being taken in the interests of Universal's line-up of short product for next year, including the new Collegians, the new Newlyweds comedies, the new Oswald, the Rabbit comedies and other one and two-reelers.

Universal Will Build in Phoenix, Arizona

A $500,000 theatre in Phoenix, Arizona, is planned by the Ricards and Nace Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., a subsidiary of the Universal Chain. Ground was broken last week by Mayor Frank A. Jefferson, who was the central figure of the elaborate ceremony in which practically all of the city's notables were present. The structure will occupy the southwest corner of Second Avenue and Adams Street and it is anticipated that the building will be finished for opening before December or, at the very latest, January 1.

The theatre will be a class A house. It will be strictly fireproof and built of reinforced concrete and brick. The plans call for a three-story building which will house the new theatre and offices in addition to modern storerooms and business establishments on the ground floor.

Jo E. Rickards made a special trip from Los Angeles to attend the ground breaking ceremonies. Others present were A. T. Pickett, local manager for Rickards and Nace, Harry L. Nace, H. B. Watkins, general manager of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce; City Manager Harry Riger and City Comissioners A. L. Boehmer, C. E. Morten, Ben Carter and Cliff Maddox, together with other city officials.

Rogers Well on Road to Recovery After Operation

Will Rogers will be back at his home within a short period in better condition than ever to begin working on "The Texas Steer," latest reports from Los Angeles indicate. Sam E. Rork, producer of the Hoyt farce, is preparing to have everything in readiness for the beginning of the shooting of scenes early in August. While convalescing from his recent operation, Rogers will have an opportunity to go over the script of the picture and to assist in planning production details.

North Carolina T. O. to Convene on June 27

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, North Carolina, will be the scene on June 27 of the opening day of the convention of the Theatre Owners Association of North Carolina. Urgent business will occupy the convention the first day while the following day will be given over to unfinished business. On the night of June 27 a banquet will be held at the Oceanic Hotel at which all members of the association are privileged to attend. President Charles W. Picquet of the North Carolina Association has departed for the national convention in Columbus. L. Royster is secretary and treasurer of the T. O. A. of N. C. The subject of Arbitration and rules governing arbitration will be discussed by the meeting.

From June of last year the Association has grown from a paid membership of eight persons to its present count of 150 paid members. This total is said to be the greatest number of paid members ever in the history of the North Carolina Association in its 15 years' standing.

Hatrick, for Hearst, Arranges With Mussolini for Exchange of Films

EDGAR B. HATRICK, vice-president and general manager for all motion pictures companies of William Randolph Hearst, returned this week from a six weeks' trip through Europe, where he journyed for the purpose of adding to the Hearst film activities.

One of the most important alliances made by Mr. Hatrick was that between Premier Mussolini, of Italy, and the Hearst organization whereby the Hearst interests will have practically exclusive use of the Italian motion picture output, while the Hearst news reels and similar subjects will be turned over for distribution throughout Italy through the National Institute Luce, a government organization in Italy controlling all motion pictures in that country; the Premier heads the Institute.

Speaking of the distribution of the Hearst news reels in Italy, Mr. Hatrick said: "So intent is Mussolini on educating his people that, because of the limited number of motion picture theatres in Italy, he is now having built 500 camions which will penetrate the entire country where they have no cinema houses and show instructive and educational pictures to the rural folk."

What Temperature Heat?

St. Louis Judge Asked to Decide Proper Degree for Theatre in Winter in Damage Suit

CIRCUIT JUDGE ROBERT W. HALL of St. Louis has undertaken the difficult task of deciding at what temperature patrons of motion picture theatres can comfortably view their favorite screen stars in the winter time. On his decision will depend whether Samuel G. Hoffman's lease on the Delmonte Theatre, Delmar boulevard near Clara avenue, St. Louis, shall be cancelled and how much damage up to $10,000 Hoffman should be awarded. The defendant in the suit is the Delmonte Investment Company, owner of the theatre building.

The suit is an echo of Hoffman's effort to make a winner of the Delmonte Theatre. He had been a successful exhibitor in smaller communities and believed he could make good with the Delmonte.

He told Judge Hall that he didn't have a chance of putting the house over last January because the owners of the building did not operate the heating plant properly. Under his lease Hoffman was to pay a minimum rental of $140 a week but he operated but two and a half weeks and the Delmonte Investment Company in a counter claim is demanding payment of rent for the balance of the year.

Hoffman produced several witnesses who testified they had patronized the theatre but were obliged to keep on their wraps throughout the performance. Two witnesses for the Delmonte Investment Company were former mayors of St. Louis, Frederick H. Kreismann and Henry W. Kiel.

Kreismann, who is also secretary of the defendant company, stated that steamfitters had gone over the heating apparatus and made all necessary repairs before Hoffman opened the theatre. William J. O'Mara, steamfitter, who did the work, also testified the plant was in first class shape.

F. N. Embryo Actors Start

Ten Winners in College Screen Tests Cast For Barthelmess Picture; Local Screenings of Men

THE ten winners in the First National-College Humor screen tests conducted at thirty-three of the country's foremost colleges and universities, will make their first screen appearances in the coming Richard Barthlemess production "The Drop Kick," which went into production last week under direction of Millard Webb. The story has a college football theme and was adapted from Katherine Brush's novel "Glitter." The screen aspirants will appear in small roles in various sequences.

According to word from the First National home offices exhibitors in the 34 college towns in which the screen tests were conducted, are having considerable success with the screenings of the tests which were made, as they arouse popular interest. At several theatres the ten men given tests at each college were guests of honor at the first showing of the test "takes."

The ten winners of the college screen tests are John Westwood of Princeton; Richard Miles Clendenin of the University of California; Leland S. Wilcox of the University of Michigan; John Vancleave Morris of Purdue; Stuart Clayton Knox of Yale; Walter Graham Smoot of Northwestern; Thomas Kelsey Denton of Michigan; Edward E. Karges of Northwestern; John Howard Stambaugh of Chicago University; and Daniel C. Cassidy of Georgia Tech.

F B O's "Moon of Israel" in Roxy Theatre, New York, Week of June 25

STARTING the week of June twenty-fifth the Roxy theatre, New York City, will show "Moon of Israel," an F B O release with Maria Corda in the stellar role; Michael Curtix directed. H. Rider Haggard wrote the story and the adaption was made by Ladislaus Vadja with production titles by the author. It is the intention of Roxy to surround the production with a presentation program of unusual beauty and brilliance.

The story has for its theme the enslavement of the children of Israel and their miraculous deliverance by way of the Red Sea; the love story of Merapi, an Israelite maid, played by Miss Corda, and an Egyptian prince. Arlette Marchal, now a Paramount player, appears in the role of Princess Userti. In addition to the principals the cast is enlarged by 30,000 extras.

Commission Completes Quebec Theatre Probe

Pettijohn, of Hays Office, Among Witnesses Heard at Inquiry; Report in Preparation

THE Royal Commission which was appointed to investigate theatre conditions in the Province of Quebec concluded its hearings at Montreal on June 18, according to formal announcement by Ernest Bertrand, K. C., who has represented the Crown during the inquiry of the past month. Mr. Justice Boyer, who conducted the investigation, is now engaged in preparing his report which will be presented Hon. L. A. Taschereau, premier of the Province of Quebec, and his recommendations will come before the next Quebec Legislature.

An important witness during the concluding days of the inquiry was Charles C. Pettijohn of New York, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association of America. Mr. Pettijohn gave the Commission a comprehensive review of the steps taken by his association to raise the standards of motion pictures. In this, the association, which was made up of 98 per cent of the United States film industry, required that good should always triumph over evil and, for this reason, the screen was fundamentally clean and wholesome.

Mr. Pettijohn's evidence was valuable in view of the fact that the scope of the investigation had been widened to consider "The Morals of Moving Pictures."

Martin Singher, censor of theatre posters for the City of Montreal, described the methods which he pursued. Posters depicting nudity or violence were banned as well as those of a suggestive nature. He declared that during 1926 he had condemned 3,914 posters, window cards and still photographs in Montreal.

Alexander Marier, representing the St. Francois D'Assisi Society, Montreal, presented a resolution advocating the prohibition of all children from moving picture theatres at all times.

Dr. Dufrense, also representing this society, made the drastic recommendation that all moving pictures be suppressed. He thought that adults had everything to lose and nothing to gain by attending moving picture theatres. He admitted that he had attended the theatre a few times.

Many local exhibitors had previously given evidence as to the importance of Sunday patronage to their business in answer to recommendations that theatres in the Province of Quebec be closed on Sundays.

Several important witnesses appeared before the Royal Commission at Montreal, Quebec, which has been investigating the moving picture theatre situation in the Province of Quebec, on June 14, to give their views on the subject of film presentation.

Count Roussey de Sales, chairman of the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors, described the method of censoring moving pictures, outlining what scenes or subjects were invariably banned. Special attention was given to portrayals pertinent to religion, he said. It was impossible, he thought, to censor pictures so that they would be entirely suitable for children. If this were done, there would be so many eliminations that little would be left and the theatres would have to close. An attempt had been made to co-operate with the other Provinces of Canada on film censorship but this had proved to be impossible because of differences in standards.

S. Morgan Powell, dramatic critic of the Montreal Star, declared that film censorship in Quebec was the most severe in the Dominion. He believed that pictures could not be censored for children only. If this were done, there would be little left of the pictures. For adults, the film with a moral lesson was a moral film.

J. Edward Lowery, formerly of the Varsity Theatre, Palo Alto, has been appointed manager of the New Stanford Theatre, Palo Alto, California. He succeeds Harry C. Seipel who has purchased several theatres in Oroville. George F. Teckemeyer, for the past two years assistant manager of the New Stanford Theatre has been appointed manager of the Varsity Theatre.

Harry Scott Returns From Pathe Convention

Harry Scott, general sales manager who has been presiding at three Pathe conventions in the East, Mid-West and West, has returned to the Pathe home office from California. Accompanying Mr. Scott were his aides: W. A. V. Mack, director of exploitation and publicity; E. A. Eschmann, feature sales manager; P. A. Parsons, advertising manager; Pat Campbell, Southern division sales manager; Charles Henschel, Eastern division sales manager and W. C. Smith, comptroller.

General Tripp, Chairman of Westinghouse, Dies

Brigadier General Guy E. Tripp, chairman of the board of directors of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, died Tuesday evening at 6:55 in the New York Hospital, New York. His wife, son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hemphill, were present when the end came. Guy Eastman Tripp was born in Wells, Maine, April 22, 1865, a son of Alonzo K. and Abbie F. Yeaton Tripp.

Stahl Temporary Manager Educational Exchange

Max Stahl, special home office representative of Educational, has just arrived in Minneapolis to assume charge of the Minneapolis exchange in place of G. Ralph Branton, who has resigned to take an active part in the activities of Finkelstein and Ruben. Mr. Stahl, as special representative, will remain in charge of the Minneapolis exchange until a permanent successor to Mr. Branton has been selected.

Owen Davis Back Again in New York

Owen Davis, President of Paramount's Authors' Council, has returned to New York following several weeks spent in Hollywood where he wrote for Esther Ralston. While at the West Coast studio Davis also devoted much time to the organization of the newly formed group of authors and playwrights which he heads.

Douglas Kimberly Head Tacoma T. O. Assoc.

DOUGLAS KIMBERLY, manager of the Colonial Theatre for Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., last week was selected president of the Tacoma (Washington) Theatre Managers' and Owners' Association for the current year. He succeeds H.M.S. Kendrick, retiring president, whose departure for the East necessitated his resignation last month. Mr. Kimberly a few weeks ago was the guiding light for the monster midnight show staged at the Broadway Theatre for the Mississippi Relief Fund, and achieved a reputation throughout the entire Pacific Northwest for the success of this venture.

Accident Brings Carnivals Into Ill Favor

Minneapolis may absolutely prohibit travelling carnival companies from operating within the city limits as a result of an accident which occurred last week. A ferris wheel which was operated by a carnival company in Northwest Minneapolis figured in the accident, in which three persons were dumped from the top car, and fell 30 feet. One of the occupants of the car was seriously injured, and the two others suffered minor injuries. A little girl standing nearby had her skull fractured by a falling piece of iron. The injured persons have filed damage suits against the carnival operators, David J. Lachman and Andrew Carson, for $56,000.

The city council at once revoked the carnival's license and the police closed it immediately. John Ryan, one of the aldermen, took immediate steps to frame an ordinance absolutely prohibiting carnivals from making their stands in the city, and there seemed little doubt that the ordinance would have the approval of the other council members. All three of the Minneapolis dailies came out urging the council to take this step against the carnivals.

Prominent Detroit Theatre Man Dies Suddenly

Word reached New York this week that Eugene Sloman, long identified with theatrical activities in Detroit, Mich., recently passed away at his home in that city. Mr. Sloman owned the Bonistell Theatre in Detroit and was also actively engaged in the real estate business under the firm name of the St. Clair Realty Company. He was also prominent for his many charitable enterprises. Milton Kronacher, of the New York Pathe branch exchange, is a relative of the deceased.

Hartford Petitions for Sunday Opening

FAVORABLE action on the petition of theatre owners and managers of Hartford, Conn., will be recommended by the ordinance committee of the Hartford, Conn., Board of Aldermen to the next meeting of the full board. The theatres have asked that they be permitted to open Sunday afternoons. Heretofore local ordinance has limited Sunday opening to seven o'clock in the evening and thereafter.

Although objection to the afternoon openings was voiced by some of the clergy and representatives of some of the women's organizations, the committee recognized the arguments of the theatre managers and of a large number who desired the earlier openings to keep young people off the streets on Sundays.

Among the theatre officials who spoke in favor of the afternoon openings before the committee were Col. Clarence W. Seymour, president of the Allyn Theatre Corp.; Managers James F. Clancy, of Poli's Palace Theatre; David Weinstock, of the Grand Theatre; and Henry Needles, of the Strand Theatre.

Jacqueline Logan Signs De Mille Contract

JACQUELINE LOGAN has signed a long-term contract with the De Mille Studio. No decision has been made as to what her first picture will be under this new arrangement.

Jacqueline Logan has been in screen work for a comparatively short time. She has been under contract to Paramount, Fox, and Ince during her career, climaxing this series of performances with her role of Mary Magdalene in "The Kings of Kings."

Southeast Film Men to Honor Dan Michalove

What promises to be the most pretentious affair of the kind ever held in Atlanta, Ga., will be the informal dinner to be given in honor of Dan Michalove, general manager of Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 11 o'clock on the evening of Monday, June 27.

The dinner will be given by the motion picture and theatrical industry of the Southeast and, from acceptances already received, indications are that it will be attended by fully 150 persons. In addition to the dinner itself and program of short addresses, arrangements have been made for the appearance of acts from various theatres.

Exhibitors from the Southeast, executives from Universal's New York office, state and city officials, theatre executives around Atlanta, exchange managers and prominent citizens, will be present and pay tribute to Mr. Michalove.

Los Angeles Holds First Place in F. N. Drive

At the conclusion of the second week of First National's summer billing drive, instituted by Ned E. Dipinet, general sales manager, the Los Angeles branch, which held sixth place at the end of the first week, had forged up to first place. Its standing was 120.81 per cent of its quota.

Omaha, which stood in first place last week, dropped back to second place. Oklahoma City went from second to third place, while St. Louis forged up into fourth position. These four exchanges exceeded their quota.

The standings by districts at the end of the second week were: 1st, Eastern; 2nd, Canadian; 3rd, Western; 4th, Southern.

$100,000 Theatre Planned for Brantford, Ontario

T. H. Moorehead and G. J. Filman, owners of a chain of theatres in Brampton, London and Welland, Ontario, have announced that they will build a theatre at Brantford, Ontario, to cost $100,000. The construction of the new house has already started, the site being the former Imperial Hotel at Dalhousie and King Streets. The theatre will have one floor, seating 1,800. The building, which is of brick and concrete, has a frontage of 92 feet.

New Distribution Firm Formed in England

A new move in the campaign for the wider distribution of British films is indicated by the formation of a private company in England under the title of British Controlled Films, Ltd. It has hitherto been difficult, it is said, to obtain outlets for English films owing to the system of block booking and the fact that distributive agencies were not under British control. An Australian company, the British Dominion Films (Australia), Ltd., has been formed with capital of $500,000, and will be affiliated with British Controlled Films. Another affiliated company controls 146 theatres in New Zealand. Negotiations are now in progress for linking up the enterprise with distributive companies in Canada, South Africa, and India. Arrangements are also being made for the production of films in the colonies, these pictures to be handled for Empire distribution by this company.

Firms Granted Charters of Incorporation in Pa.

Pennsylvania charters have been granted at the Capitol in Harrisburg to the J. S. Davis Amusement Company, of New Castle, Pa., and to the Stanley-Effinger Company, of Philadelphia.

The J. S. Davis Amusement Company is capitalized at $15,000, of which $1,500 is paid in and the par value of shares is $100. The treasurer is Gillis F. Falls, New Castle, who is also one of the incorporators. Other incorporators are: J. S. Davis, New Castle, and Ray Stroebel, New Castle.

The Stanley-Effinger Company is capitalized at $5,000, of which $500 is paid in on the basis of $100 par value of shares. The treasurer is Irving D. Rossheim. Incorporators are: Joseph Sloane, Herbert Effinger and Jennie Effinger, all of Philadelphia.

No'west T. O. to Present Requests to Labor

AT a meeting held last week by the entire personnel of the Minneapolis Theatre Owners of the Northwest, Inc., it was unanimously decided after lengthy discussion to ask the musicians, stage hands, and operators of the various Twin-City theatres for a reduction in the wage scales. The wage scale committee was asked to meet with the unions and present the request with an explanation that the prevailing poor business conditions made the move necessary to the welfare of the theatre owners.

A meeting has already been held by the committee with the musicians' union and it is thought that the musicians will agree to revert as requested to their 1925 scale, which is approximately 5 per cent less than that in effect at present. The stage hands will be asked for a similar reduction and the operations for a 10 per cent reduction. The committee will also request the crafts to substitute a nine months' contract for the present one- and two-years' agreements and also to agree to a two weeks' notice from either side before men shall be discharged or pulled off a job in case of dispute.

Alabama Fears State Tax

Strong Likelihood of Levy on Film Reels; Exhibitors Asked to Unite to Prevent Contemplated Legislation

THERE is a chance, and a very strong chance too, that a state tax will be placed upon motion pictures in Alabama, unless exhibitors and others in the industry bestir themselves in a concerted effort to prevent this contemplated legislation.

The Assembly of the State of Alabama is now in session at Montgomery and, notwithstanding the efforts made by exhibitors of the state, ably led by H. C. Farley, in opposing a film tax, leaders of the Legislature, according to news from the State capital, are now considering ways and means of placing a tax upon motion pictures.

According to report, the Tunstall measure, House Bill No. 360, gives the tax commission or its agents the right to enter the offices of the businesses affected by the bill for the purpose of examining their private books, records, equipment and the like.

This appears almost confiscatory in character. There can be no doubt but that if such a bill, as outlined in the foregoing, is enacted into law, more than one hundred theatres, in towns of less than 20,000 population, will be forced to close their doors. Thus, such a measure would defeat its own purpose by putting out of business completely those from whom it endeavors to collect revenue, to say nothing of the fact that those hundred theatres would not pay taxes or licenses that they are now paying, to their cities, county and the state.

Conditions in Alabama are, on account of a slacking in industry and the past low cotton market, sub-normal and many theatres in both large and small towns are barely able to keep their doors open.

F. N.-McGuirk Sales Drive

Salesmen Out for Month Sales Record in Honor of Company President; Plaque Offered as Prize

THE First National sales force has inaugurated a sales drive in honor of the company's new president which will be known as John McGuirk Month. Ned. E. Depinet, general sales manager for First National, has officially approved the idea and has appointed a committee comprising the four district managers, L. O. Lukan, R. S. Bell, Tom Spry and Roy C. Seery and W. J. Heenan, manager of the Philadelphia, and Floyd Brown, manager of the Indianapolis exchange, to arrange the details of the contest.

The committee decided that the John McGuirk Month sales drive should cover a period of nine weeks, as did the 1926 contest, starting on August 28th and extending through to the last week in October. The prize to be competed for will be a very beautiful plaque, offered by the sales managers, as was done last fall for the Lieber Month drive which was won by the Buffalo Exchange. The plaque will be presented to the winning branch at next year's annual sales convention.

Pictures released just prior to and during the contest, which will furnish the chief ammunition for the salesmen, are Jess Smith's production of "The Poor Nut," featuring Jack Mulhall and Charlie Murray; Milton Sills in "Hard-Boiled Haggerty"; Norma Talmadge's special, "Camille"; Ken Maynard in "The Red Raiders"; Richard Barthelmess in "The Drop Kick"; "The Crystal Cup" with Dorothy Mackail and Jack Mulhall; the first of the George Fitzmaurice specials, the picture now in work under the tentative title of "The Rose of Monterey," with Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland; Billie Dove in "The Stolen Bride;" and one or two others.

Damon Runyon to Do Story of Denny

UNIVERSAL has just closed with Damon Runyon, newspaperman and sports writer, to turn out an original story for Reginald Denny, the farce-comedy ace of the Carl Laemmle organization.

Denny has never done a newspaper story. It is understood that Runyon will make a news cameraman of his hero. Runyon will turn the manuscript over to Universal within a few weeks.

Titles of Two First National Pictures Changed

"For the Love of Mike" is the title decided upon by Robert Kane and his production associates for his new picture for First National, recently completed, except for some shots of the Harvard-Yale boat race, under the title of "Hell's Kitchen."

Another title change is that of the new Ken Maynard film now in work under the production management of Charles R. Rogers with Albert Rogell directing. The new title is "Red Raiders." It was formerly known as "The White Horse Troop" and "Captain of the Strong."

Billy Engle Signs Long-Term Christie Contract

Billy Engle, who apeared in several of the Christie comedies during the last season, has signed a long-term contract as a regular featured player in the Christie comedies which will be released by Paramount. He will fill the place vacated by Jack Duffy in the Christie releases, Duffy having been promoted to a starring position in the series of twelve Christie comedies in which he will alternate with Anne Cornwall and Neal Burns.

Vocafilm Corp. Finishing Opening Program

THE technical staff of the Vocafilm Corporation of America, is putting the finishing touches on the numbers to be used in the opening program at the Longacre Theatre, New York, early in July.

Among the artists already under contract for Vocafilm recording are Ciccolini, Chicago Opera tenor; Yasha Bunchuk, cellist; Lewis, Smith and Dilworth, Drug Store Cowboys' vaudeville entertainers; Wilson Sisters and Washburn, girl entertainers with songs and dances; the original Radio Franks, Moss and Frye, whose query is "How high is up?"; and the Vocafilm Greater Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Abe Essig. Leedom and Stamper are also under contract.

David R. Hochreich, president of Vocafilm, has secured the Babe Ruth picture "Babe Comes Home," to be shown during the premiere. The Ruth picture will be scored with special Vocafilm synchronized orchestration. This will be a demonstration of the possibilities which lie in such synchronization for the releases of all feature producers, says Vocafilm.

The Longacre showings will be on the basis of two shows a day, with a two-dollar price prevailing.

"The Masked Menace," Patheserial in Work

"The Masked Menace" will be the release title of the new Patheserial now in production and adapted from the Clarence Buddington Kelland story which was printed in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Still Face." The chapterplay is now in its sixth week of production at the Cosmopolitan studio in New York under the direction of Arch Heath. The featured roles are in the hands of Larry Kent, Jean Arthur and Thomas Holding and the support includes John F. Hamilton, Laura Alberta, Gus de Weil, Tom MacLarnie, Ed Roseman, Agnes de Dome, William Norton Bailey, William Cavanaugh, Sydney Paxton, Neill Bridges and Tully Nash.

Patsy Ruth Miller in "South Sea Love"

Soon after the completion of her sea picture, "Shanghaied," announcement comes that Patsy Ruth Miller has been signed for the feminine lead in "South Sea Love," soon to enter production under the direction of Ralph Ince at F B O. Alan Brooke, also of the "Shanghaied" company, has been chosen to play an important role in "South Sea Love." This picture is to be made from a story "Game in the Bush" by Georges Surdez.

"Camille" Goes to Rivoli for Extended Run

"Camille," the First National special starring Norma Talmadge, has been booked into the New York Rivoli for an extended run at popular prices beginning Saturday, July 2. The picture closed its run at the $2 admission scale at the Globe Theatre last Saturday evening. It opened there on April 21.

First Print of "Blood Ship" in New York

George B. Seitz and Norman Springer, director and author, respectively, of "The Blood Ship," the first special Columbia production for the new season, arrived at the Columbia home office in New York this week with the first print of the picture after attending several previews of the feature in Los Angeles. They will sit in at the previews in the East and will make whatever changes necessary.

Collings to Direct His First Film for F B O

Pierre Collings, former scenarist for Paramount, has signed a contract with F B O to direct a picture based on the H. C. Witwer novel, "Alex, the Great." Collings is now engaged on the adaptation and, although no starting date has been set, the production will probably get under way early in July. Collings has been in motion pictures for ten years.

Pathe Releasing Its Fifth Rogers Travelesque

"Through Switzerland and Bavaria With Will Rogers," a one-reel release from Pathe, continues the inimitable tours of "Will Rogers, Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad" and is the fifth issue of the series, the first four having been screen rambles through Dublin, Holland, Paris and Berlin. There are twelve in all of the Will Rogers Abroad series.

Paramount Lists Short Subject Releases

THE Paramount release schedule of short feature production for the first three months of the new season beginning August 1 is now complete. In addition to two weekly issues of the new Paramount News, there will be 13 two-reel comedies and 13 animated cartoons, or 52 releases in all.

The complete release schedule follows:

Gotham 1927-28 Pictures

Stories Set, Turned Over to Scenarists; Released One a Month; Two Mrs. Wallace Reid Specials Independent

SAM SAX announced this week that the entire line-up of Gotham pictures is set for the 1927-28 season, and that stories have been turned over to scenarists for preparation of continuity and adaptation. One production has been completed; the pictures will released one a month as follows: August release: "The Rose of Kildare;" Sept. 1st, "The Girl from Rio;" Oct. 1st, "Blondes by Choice;" Nov. 1st, "The Cheer Leader," this being a college story and especially desirable for the football season; Dec. 1st, "Through the Breakers;" Jan. 1st, "United States Smith;" Feb. 1st, "The Head of the Family;" Mar. 1st, "The Fruit of Divorce;" Apr. 1st, "Turn Back the Hours;" May 1st, "The Chorus Kid;" June 1st, "Bare Knees," and Percy Marmont in "The Man Higher Up," as the last release for July, 1928.

The two Mrs. Wallace Reid Gotham Specials will be released independently of the Gotham program. Mrs. Reid in "The Satin Woman," to be ready for August 1st, and her second production, "Hell Ship Bronson," to be held for later in the season, the exact date not yet being set.

Paramount Signs Hersholt for Negri Picture

Jean Hersholt, character actor, has been signed by Paramount for a featured role in Pola Negri's forthcoming vehicle, which Rowland V. Lee will direct.

M-G-M Definitely Plans "The Enemy" for Gish

THE Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer corporation has now definitely decided to star Lillian Gish in "The Enemy," the stage play by Channing Pollock. The star is now finishing her work in "The Wind," a screen adaptation of the Dorothy Scarborough novel which Victor Seastrom is directing. The Pollock play has been scenarized by Willis Goldbeck and is to be directed by Fred Niblo.

Samuel Zierler Sailing for Europe, June 25

Samuel Zierler, president of Excellent Pictures Corporation, sails Saturday, June 25, on the S. S. Majestic to transact important business in England and on the Continent. Until a week ago he had intended to go to the Pacific Coast on about that date to give his personal supervision to the production program on which Excellent Pictures Corporation is engaged. Certain events made it advisable for him to go personally to Europe and he rearranged his plans to travel Eastward in stead of Westward.

The Excellent production program calls for eighteen pictures, with the distributing program arranged well into the next year. Pauline Frederick in "The Nest" will probably be picked for initial release in September. "Your Wife and Mine" will probably follow.

Lois Wilson Signed for "Alias the Lone Wolf"

The feminine lead opposite Bert Lytell in Columbia's "Alias the Lone Wolf" will be portrayed by Lois Wilson, whose signing for the role was announced this week by Harry Cohn, vice-president of production for Columbia Pictures. This production will be the third of the series by Louis Joseph Vance to be brought to the screen with Bert Lytell as the central figure.

Warner Brothers Plan Premieres for Charity

H. M. WARNER has announced that the proceeds of the opening performances of Warner Bros., extended run productions, "Old San Francisco" and "The First Auto," will be turned over to the Hebrew Orphan Asylum as the company's contribution to their Gymnasium Fund to provide recreation facilities for 800 Jewish children cared for by that organization.

The premiere of "Old San Francisco" took place at the Warner Theatre on June 21. Dolores Costello, its star, attended in person along with Director Alan Crosland, Warner Oland, and Anna May Wong.

The first showing of "The First Auto" is scheduled at the Colony Theatre on June 27th. This also will be attended by its principal player, Barney Oldfield, now on his way from the coast by motor car.

Advance ticket sales indicate that both these benefit performances will be successful.

Sloman Back at "U" City After Location Trip

Edward Sloman, veteran Universal director, returned to Universal City this week after a successful location trip to New York in the interests of "We Americans," the Universal production now being adapted from the Broadway stage hit of last season, by Milt Gropper and Max Siegel.

While in New York Sloman had a luncheon conference with a large group of prominent New Yorkers interested in immigration and social service affairs. A co-operative plan was worked out by which Universal will get the advice and aid of all such organizations in the making and exploiting of this film, which deals with the struggles of middle-aged immigrants to keep pace with their American off-spring.

Sloman also took many pictures while in the East. He went down the bay and boarded the incoming S. S. George Washington at Quarantine, getting "shots" of the routine which immigrants go through to the time they arrive at the portals of the New World. He also took many scenes at Ellis Island and in New York's East Side section.

Sloman was accompanied by his wife and young daughter and by his assistant, Louis Friedlander.

"The Patent Leather Kid" Finished at Burbank

After being in production since Jan. 17, final scenes for "The Patent Leather Kid," starring Richard Barthelmess, were made at the Burbank Studios this week. The picture now goes into the cutting room, where it will be edited under the supervision of Al Rockett, production chief of First National, Alfred Santell, the director, and Ray Rockett. "The Patent Leather Kid" is to be released as a road show in the fall, opening in New York, at the Globe Theatre, August 15.

"Alias the Deacon" Shown at Roxy

"Alias the Deacon," the Universal Jewel production of the successful stage play by John B. Hymer and Leroy Clements, had its premiere this week in the Roxy Theatre. Edward Sloman directed the Universal adaptation. Jean Hersholt, now a Universal star, plays the role of the deacon, assisted by June Marlowe and Ralph Graves as the juveniles. The cast also includes Myrtle Stedman, Lincoln Plummer, Ned Sparkes, Tom Kennedy, Maurice Murphy and George West.

Ralph Ince to Direct "Coney Island" for F B O

Ralph Ince has been selected to direct "Coney Island," Joseph J. O'Neill's original story, which will be produced by F B O, according to announcement by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production at the F B O studios in Hollywood. Mr. Ince comes to New York to film the exterior scenes for the picture at Coney Island. He will start to work on the O'Neil story immediately following completion of "South Sea Love," which will be put in production within ten days.

Lois Weber to Direct L. Joy for De Mille

Lois Weber

LOIS WEBER, the first successful women director of motion pictures, has signed a contract with the De Mille studio to direct Leatrice Joy's next starring vehicle, "The Angel of Broadway."

This screen play, which was written for Miss Joy by Lenore J. Coffee, is scheduled to go into production within two weeks.

Miss Weber retired from motion picture direction several months ago, but yielded to an offer from De Mille Studio officials to direct "The Angel of Broadway," which she is well qualified to handle. Miss Weber's last picture was "The Marriage Clause."

No supporting cast has as yet been named for Miss Joy.

First National Has Five Releases for July

Five of First National's most important releases for the summer are on the company's release chart for July.

They are scheduled in the following order: July 3, "Lonesome Ladies," co-starring Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone; "July 10: "For the Love of Mike," formerly called "Hell's Kitchen," with Ben Lyon and Claudette Colbert; July 17: "The Devil's Saddle," starring Ken Maynard; July 24: "White Pants Willie," a Johnny Hines comedy; and July 31: "The Prince of Head Waiters," featuring Lewis Stone.

"The Clown"' Columbia's Second June Release

Columbia's second release for the month of June will be "The Clown," a production of circus life which William Craft directed. William Y. Mong has the role of the jester, Dorothy Revier plays his daughter, Johnnie Walker is her lover and John Miljan the heavy.

Coghlan in P. D. C.'s "Harp in Hock"

Junior Coghlan has a featured role with Rudolph Schildkraut in "Harp in Hock," now in production for DeMille Pictures with Renaud Hoffman directing.

Will Rogers Preparing for "A Texas Steer"

HIS globe-trotting temporarily halted, at least until about August 1, Will Rogers is back again in Hollywood and Beverly Hills where he has begun work on the script, continuity and the numerous production details connected with the filming of "A Texas Steer" the Charles H. Hoyt stage success in which he will be starred.

Speeding Production of First Division Films

Jesse J. Goldberg, president of First Division Distributors, Inc., distributors of Chadwick and Ormont pictures, this week completed arrangements with I. E. Chadwick and James Ormont for the completion by January 1 of his company's 18 releases for 1927-28. Chadwick is making 12 of the releases and Ormont 6. Six of the Ormont films have been finished.

Two new Chadwick pictures go into production this week. Betty Blythe and Gardner James will begin one, as yet untitled, and Pauline Garon will start "Eager Lips." Two Ormont features, "Comrades" and "The Belle of Avenue A," will also be produced soon.

President Sees Lindbergh Shots Aboard Train

Pathe's filming of the tremendous ovation accorded Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh by the populace of New York City provided entertainment for President and Mrs. Coolidge aboard the Presidential Special en route to the Summer White House in the Black Hills, South Dakota. It was arranged to send the film record of the reception from New York to Chicago by airplane, where it was delivered to the Presidential train during its brief stop in the yards. The pictures were projected in the rear car of the train by H. D. Johnson, chief electrician of the presidential yacht, Mayflower. The President and Mrs. Coolidge expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the pictures.

President Views Films During Train Trip

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S trip to his summer home in the Black Hills of South Dakota was enlivened by motion pictures shown nightly on the train through arrangements made by Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays organization, who traveled with the party.

Upon arrival at the Black Hills, Mr. Connolly will arrange for the establishment of a small theatre and will make arrangements with distributors to furnish films three nights a week for the President and Mrs. Coolidge during their absence from Washington.

Sigmund Spaeth Writes "Magic Flame" Waltz

A new waltz song bearing the same title as the picture and which will be published simultaneously with the release of "The Magic Flame," has been composed by Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, author and composer, who has just returned from Culver City where he witnessed the completion of Samuel Goldwyn's new picture with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, who worked under the direction of Henry King. Dr. Spaeth is the author of "Read 'Em and Weep," "The Songs You Forgot to Remember" and "The Common Sense of Music;" his waltz song will be used as the theme for the picture's musical score.

Camera Work Starts on "For Ladies Only"

With the addition to the supporting cast of William Strauss and Templar Saxe, "For Ladies Only," the Columbia production featuring Jacqueline Logan and John Bowers, is now in work at the Columbia studio under the direction of Scott Pembroke. In the supporting cast are Edna Marion, Ben Hall, Roy Laidlaw, Kathleen Chambers, Amer Norman and Henry Rocquemore.

"Captain Salvation" at Capitol in New York

The New York premiere of "Captain Salvation," a Cosmopolitan production directed by John Robertson, will take place this Saturday, June 25, at the Capitol Theatre.

It is an adaptation of Frederick William Wallace's novel of the same name and has in its cast Lars Hanson in the title role, Pauline Starke, Marceline Day, Ernest Torrence, George Fawcett and Sam De Grasse.

Emil Jannings Starts His Second Paramount Vehicle

Emil Jannings has started on his second production at the Paramount studio, under the direction of Mauritz Stiller. The picture is tentatively titled "Hitting for Heaven" and is from an original story by Josef von Sternberg. Fay Wray plays opposite Jannings in his forthcoming picture. Olga Baklanova is prominently cast.

Estelle Taylor in D. W. Griffith's U. A. Picture

A leading role in D. W. Griffith's initial production for United Artists—the first he has made in Hollywood for five years—will be played by Estelle Taylor. The story is temporarily titled "La Paiva" and is said to center around the court life of Napoleon Third. Fred De Gresac is adapting the original tale, of which Karl Vollmeeller, who wrote "The Miracle," is the author.

Sid Katz Eastern Manager Tiffany Productions

The appointment of Sid Katz as Eastern Division manager for Tiffany Productions, is announced by Ed. J. Smith, general sales manager. Up to the time of his affiliation with Tiffany, Mr. Katz was connected for five years with F B O, where he was assistant sales manager. While in his Tiffany post, Mr. Katz will have charge of New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Albany, Buffalo and Canada and other territories.

Paramount Will Produce Another Story of Air

"The Legion of the Condemned," another story of the air, will be made by Paramount following "Wings," soon to be released. The story for "The Legion of the Condemned" was written by John Monk Saunders, who wrote the script for "Wings." No director has been assigned as yet but Lucien Hubbard will supervise the production.

New Vitaphone Number Made at Coast Studio

Following "Pullman Porters" and "A Night at Coffee Dan's," the two first entertainments recorded at the West Coast Vitaphone studio, a third number, featuring Eddie Peabody, is now being made. Peabody is called the West Coast banjo wizard and has been tied up with California theatres for some time, appearing as a special attraction. He and his accompanist, Jimmy Maisel, render a collection of songs.

Willy Pogany to Design Settings for Goldwyn

Carl Oscar Borg, another well-known painter, is also on the Goldwyn lot in Culver City, only recently having completed scenic designs for "The Magic Flame," a new Ronald Colman-Vilma Banky vehicle.

Key City Reports

New York City

THE Broadway houses "got the breaks" last week and the early part of this, with the result that business at the weekly change and many of the long-run houses was up materially. The Lindbergh parade on Monday of last week brought thousands of visitors, and several millions of New Yorkers also lined Fifth Avenue.

During the parade Broadway was deserted, but immediately it was over the crowds could be seen thronging across to the theatres. As most business houses made it a half-holiday, at least, business was remarkable both afternoon and evening, continuing satisfactory throughout the week.

The Capitol with "The Unknown" had its best week in quite some time, and held the picture over, with better business this Saturday, Sunday and Monday by several thousand than on the opening week. The Roxy was back above the $100,000 mark again with "The Secret Studio," panned generally by the critics. Much of the business of the Capitol and Roxy must be credited to the De Forest Phonofilm at the former and the Movietone at the latter, showing Lindbergh and Coolidge in talking picture. Both houses held this feature over, and it continued to draw this week, apparently. The Strand was up some last week. "Chang" at the Rivoli did $5,100 on Sunday, its second largest day.

Los Angeles

THE picture that attracted the most attention last week was the premiere showing of "Topsy and Eva" at Grauman's Egyptian. As the Duncan Sisters are held in favor by a large number of people here in Los Angeles and Hollywood, their appearance in the elaborate prologue helped in putting the picture over.

The combination of Grauman's new Chinese Theatre, the excellent prologue, and the picture, "The King of Kings," has resulted in full houses at every performance.

"Rolled Stockings," with the addition of a snappy stage diversion at the Metropolitan, is doing exceptionally well, especially with the collegiate crowd.

Syd Chaplin, in "The Missing Link" at the Forum, is drawing average business. Big Boy, in the amusing comedy "Atta Baby," supplies additional entertainment.

Again this week, Loew's State is scoring with an all-'round good show. "The Callahans and the Murphys," with a very entertaining prologue starring Jane Green, is affecting the box office receipts favorably.

The return Los Angeles run of "Flesh and the Devil" at the Criterion is almost filling the theatre to capacity at each evening performance. "Seventh Heaven," at Carthay Circle, is still a great drawing card. "The Rough Riders," at the Million Dollar, is holding up satisfactorily.

Milwaukee

A SLIGHT increase in activity was reported this week at the down-town theatres of Milwaukee. This is no doubt due to the weather, which for this one week has been cold and clear. "Rough House Rosie," playing at the Wisconsin, brought in good business at every performance. The Strand was a popular place for all baseball fans who flocked in gratifying numbers to see "Babe Comes Home." "The Winning of Barbara Worth," held over for its second week, continued to attract crowds to the Alhambra. "Cradle Snatchers," at the Merrill drew very well, partly due to the fact that a local stock company had given the play the previous week.

Strong attractions marked the programs of the neighborhood theatres during the week, and the resulting good business was to be expected. "Three Hours," at both the Tower and Modjeska brought crowds to the theatres. "Flaming Forest," at the Milwaukee, was an attraction that brought in good business. "The Yankee Clipper" kept the Colonial well filled during its showing there.

Chicago

COMPLAINTS of poor business continue to be heard from exhibitors throughout the Chicago district, some of the large de luxe houses being among the theatres which are feeling the depression.

In the loop "Chang" proved a strong box office attraction, backed up by unusual commendatory press criticisms. The Oriental offered "Special Delivery" as its feature, and Paul Ash and Hig Gang in "Foolin' Around," and succeeded in playing to average business. A fair week was enjoyed by McVickers, which had as its strong attraction, "Resurrection." The Chicago offered a strong bill including "Naughty, But Nice" on the screen, Herbert Rawlinson in person, a Spitalny production and a Publix presentation, "Vienna Life," and succeeded in bringing out the public despite the slump, average business being registered.

The Uptown had "The Tender Hour" as its feature with the usual stage and musical attractions, attendance being slightly below par. "The Yankee Clipper," Vitaphone and stage show accounted for good business at the Granada, and the Sheridan, with "Cabaret" and Verne Buck and his orchestra, accounted for another week of average box office receipts. "The Beloved Rogue," plus popular Benny Meroff and his orchestra, did fair business at the Marbro.

The Capitol on the southside also had "The Beloved Rogue" as its feature, with Vitaphone and stage band as other attractions, playing to good business. "Slide, Kelly, Slide," and a good Kreuger show did fairly average business at the Tivoli.

St. Louis

BUSINESS of the St. Louis motion picture theatres was spotty for this week, neither being consistently good nor consistently bad. The weather was also somewhat mixed, rain and sunshine.

In the neighborhood houses even the best of picture programs failed to net the box office returns exhibitors should expect. Universally the theatre owners of the smaller and outlying houses are singing the Box Office Blues.

Regarding the first run situation for weeks it has been apparent the patrons are today picking their shows with care, and the fear often expressed by some film men that the pictures were being played down too much at the expense of the musical ends of the program now seem to have been well founded. The result is today the picture is no longer the big event on the bill of fare, and the receipts of most of the bigger houses are not long a true index of the drawing power of any particular picture.

At the Missouri Theatre Milton Sills in "Framed" was the principal screen attraction, while Brooke Johns had another big musical show in the boards to draw 'em to the box office.

Across the street at the Grand Central Monte Blue and Myrna Loy were offered in "Bitter Applies." Business was up to average.

Just up a bit on Grand boulevard at Morgan street the St. Louis Theatre had "The Heart Thief" on the screen, and Gus Edwards and his company as the headline vaudeville number. Business was good.

The biggest picture of the week was at Loew's State. It was "Resurrection" in 12 reels. An atmospheric presentation was also on the program.

The Ambassador's screen attraction was Colleen Moore in "Naughty, But Nice." The stage offering was "Way Down South," a Publix unit. It was an average week.

San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCANS, generally speaking, enjoyed themselves this week at the several motion picture houses, at both first-run and residential theatres. Two did exceptionally well, the Granada and St. Francis Theatres. As the weather was not too warm, generally cool, this also greatly helped fill the houses for the people did not go to the beaches or the parks.

"Fast and Furious," shown at the Granada Theatre, attracted a great number of people, and all liked the comedy as well as the stage act, "Recreation Revue." "Slide, Kelly, Slide," was very popular at the St. Francis Theatre, especially with baseball fans and boys.

"The Tender Hour," was shown at Loew's Warfield Theatre, and did a fair business; the Fanchon & Marco act, called "Book Idea," attracted many. "A Million Bid," at the California Theatre, did not do so well, although the cast and acting was up to the average. "The Notorious Lady," at the Golden Gate, did well, and attracted many, but it was thought the majority came to see Vera Gordon, who was featured in a comedy act called, "Her Triumph."

"Cradle Snatchers," at the Pantages, did well with its all-star screen cast, and the vaudeville cast also was considered good. At the Union Square Theatre, "Salvation Jane" and "The Black Bottom," both attracted many to it, and all liked both pictures as well as the acts. At the Cameo Theatre, "The Naked Truth" continued to attract at its fourth week of showing. Some days for men and some for women.

Detroit

ENTRIES on the credit and debit lists in a number of the downtown motion picture houses showed a greater reaction among fans than that which took place during the previous week. Nice weather helped business in most cases.

Walter Immerman, manager of the Michigan, has reason to be pleased with the drawing power of Florence Vidor's "The World at Her Feet," and an excellent stage presentation called "Patches."

"Chang," on the Adams screen, drew fair attendance, but fell away below the mark set for it.

At the Capitol," Running Wild" pulled in enormous crowds, being presented in connection with Irene Franklin in an elaborate stage attraction. Many patrons proclaimed this week's offering one of the best seen here in several months.

The Madison continued to do more sensational moneymaking with Marion Davies in "Tillie, the Toiler." This feature is expected to do well for another week.

Lon Chaney's "Phantom of the Opera" was revived at the Broadway-Strand, and fair business resulted at the box office.

"High Hat," featuring Ben Lyon and Mary Brian, started rather poorly in the State, and business did not increase noticeably until the last few days of its showing.

Baltimore

"ROOKIES" broke all house records at Loew's Century Theatre, during the week beginning Monday, June 13, and the play was the talk of the town for six days. Charles Winston, publicity man for the house, put over a unique stunt in connection with it.

"Senorita" did pretty good business at the Rivoli and "Is Zat So?" with O'Brien and Lowe, did very good at the New Theatre. "Children of Divorce," co-starring Clara Bow and Esther Ralston, claimed good attendance at Loew's Valencia for its second week, but this picture did not go over as well as expected, it is thought, due to Miss Bow having been seen the week previous to her engagement at the Century in "Rough House Rosie," at the Rivoli.

The two family vaudeville houses, the Garden and Keith's Hippodrome, did better-than-fair business, both matching about even, the former with "Silver Comes Through," the latter with "Husband Hunters."

"Irish Hearts" went over fairly well at Warner's Metropolitan, and "The Fourth Commandment," at the Embassy, did a so-so business.

Philadelphia

A BREAK in the short hot spell brought business in the downtown houses above the previous two weeks' level.

"The Tender Hour," starring Billie Dove, had a very good week at the Stanley. The surrounding show featured Waring's Pennsylvanians, which proved an important drawing card. A phonofilm representation of Lindbergh's reception in New York and Washington rounded out the bill.

The Fox had an exceptionally heavy week with "Frisco Sally Levy." Natacha Nattova, assisted by G. Rodion, headed the surrounding bill, which was further augmented by Jack Osterman, in a snappy monologue, S. L. Rothafel's "Silhouettes," and Lillian Bernard and Flo Henri, feminine harmonizers.

The Fox Locust continued into its last week of "What Price Glory" with satisfactory business.

The Stanton had a fair week with John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue."

The Arcadia repeated "Rookies," which had previously played at the Stanley, and reported satisfactory business.

The Karlton offered Florence Vidor in "The World at Her Feet," and did mediocre business.

The Palace, offering "Three Hours," with Corinne Griffith, had about an average week, while the Victoria, with Harry Langdon in "Long Pants" and, as an added attraction, "Through Darkest Africa," had a fair week.

"The Fire Brigade," at the Globe, did just a fair business. The Capitol, with "Slide, Kelly, Slide," continued the good business that this picture has done in every down-town house where it has played.

Minneapolis

MOTION picture business hit an even summer pace last week, and although no theatres reported anything spectacular, some of the theatres reported business as very satisfactory.

The State had a good week with Belle Bennett in "The Fourth Commandment," and "Lovers?" with Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro proved a popular attraction at the Strand. Sally O'Neill in "Frisco Sally Levy" was responsible for about an average week at the Lyric. Pantages exploited John Gilbert in "The Count of Monte Cristo" heavily, and this reissued film turned out to be an excellent drawing card. Joseph Schildkraut, in "The Heart Thief," was the attraction at the Hennepin-Orpheum. At the Loring, Lagoon, and Lyndale, Minneapolis' most important neighborhood houses, a variety of pictures were reported as drawing from fair to good. The Loring showed "Evening Clothes," "The Scarlet Letter" and "Blind Alleys." The Lagoon showed "Love's Greatest Mistake," "Slide, Kelly, Slide," and "Kiss in a Taxi," and pictures at the Lyndale included "Blonde or Brunette," "Blind Alleys," and "The Yankee Clipper."

Most of the down-town picture houses were showing news reels of Colonel Lindbergh's arrival. They were undoubtedly responsible for many persons passing through the gates. The weather was generally fair, and there was no serious competition outside of Martha Hedman, in "Bride of the Lamb," at the Shubert.

Albany

THE weather in Albany last week was more responsible for the good business done by the majority of the motion picture theatres than the pictures themselves. Exhibitors admitted that such was the case. The Lindbergh pictures were heavily exploited by all of the first run houses and they, no doubt, helped out to a large extent.

The Mark Strand ran "Is Zat So?" last week to most satisfactory attendance. In addition to the picture, the usual Vitaphone presentations were given. "Moulders of Men," running at the Mark Ritz for the week, played to excellent business, characterized by the manager as being surprisingly good. At the Leland theatre, "Winners of the Wilderness" did only a fair business for the first three days, but "Love Makes 'Em Wild" showed some improvement for the last three days.

At the Clinton Square, "The Truthful Sex" and "Play Safe" failed to pan out other than ordinary. The fact that the street on which this theatre is located is torn up for repaving, no doubt affects.

In Troy, business is not up to snuff, owing to the let down in the collar factories. "The Sunset Derby" ran the last three days of the week at the Troy Theatre to good business, as Troy is a race town owing to its proximity to Saratoga. Eddie Cantor ran well in "Special Delivery" for four days at Proctor's, while "Tillie, the Toiler," at the Lincoln for the week, failed to excite any great amount of enthusiasm.

Ottawa

THEATRES of Ottawa, Ontario, enjoyed only fair business during the week of June 13. There was unusual local competition because of the spring meet of the Connaught Park Jockey Club but, in addition, some pictures that looked good as box office attractions proved to be disappointments.

B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, did not do very well with "Rubber Tires," as compared with other recent features at this house. The same thing applies to "Resurrection" at the Regent Theatre. This was considered a high-class feature by those who saw it, but it did not draw the expected crowd.

The Centre Theatre enjoyed fairly steady patronage with "The Tender Hour," but the best showing of the week, comparatively speaking, was at the Imperial Theatre with "Rookies." This picture built up excellent business as the week progressed.

Two of the Ottawa neighborhood houses did well on a couple of features, even though they were second run. Bebe Daniels in "The Campus Flirt" brought the crowds to the Columbia Theatre, while "The Temptress," starring Greta Garbo, at the Fern Theatre, also proved to be a big magnet. "Sir Lumberjack" at the Rex Theatre was "O. K." for the kids, but the adults stayed away.

Oklahoma City

THEATRE business, which has been at low-ebb for some time in Oklahoma Sity, took a turn for the better, at some of the theatres at least, this week. Perhaps part of this was due to the two or three exceptionally cool days that visited us.

The Empress came clear back to normal and, perhaps, quivered a bit above, with Colleen Moore playing seven days in "Naughty, But Nice." The audiences liked it immensely. This theatre also had a "scoop" on the Lindbergh Washington reception pictures Sunday afternoon.

The Criterion also did a nice business with "Resurrection."

"Vanity" didn't take at the Liberty Theatre, and was changed a day earlier than was intended. "Love Makes 'Em Wild," however, held its own for four days, and helped bring the week's average at the box office to par.

"A Million Bid" seemed to be an average picture playing to an average audience at the Capital Theatre the first of the week. The last part of the week "The World at Her Feet" gave Florence Vidor a chance to wear good-looking clothes. The story was a French farce. Business so-so.

Seattle

SPRING weather appeared in earnest last week, and show business showed a slight decline as a result. Al G. Barnes' Circus played for three days toward the end of the week and attracted good attendance, but apparently did not interfere much with the picture house business.

"Captain Salvation" and "Knockout Reilly" just about shared honors for the week. The former picture played at the Coliseum Theatre and did a very good business for the entire engagement, much better than the previous week's gross. "Knockout Reilly" was the first real box office picture that has played at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in a month, and the receipts for the week showed it. A very pleasing Fanchon & Marco Revue, called the "Fan Idea," put the show over 100 per cent as far as entertainment goes.

"Convoy" at the United Artists Theatre played to good business for a week and was held over for two extra days. It was not the best attraction that the house has had in recent weeks, however. Business about even.

At the Blue Mouse Theatre, "The Brute" and Vitaphone subjects ended a two-week run with very satisfactory box office reports. The house very wisely sold Vitaphone above the feature pictures, and is cashing in on the advertising as a result. "The Brute" was just a fair picture.

"Fast and Furious" at the Columbia Theatre failed to arouse any undue enthusiasm. It was an average program picture, and did an average business. This house has its regular weekly patrons who will always assure at least an average showing.

"Burnt Fingers" and "Spuds" were used as a double feature bill at the Embassy Theatre. Business at this house maintains a steady good average, and this program seemed to please the patrons.

"Cradle Snatchers" at the Pantages Theatre did a very nice business. It was heavily advertised and was better than an average attraction.

Central Pennsylvania

GOOD weather most of the week stimulated business of the Harrisburg picture theatres, and the presence of about 3,000 women from all parts of Pennsylvania, attending the annual four-day convention of the Order of the Eastern Star, was another contributing factor to satisfactory box office receipts in the leading picture houses. Tuesday was the one rainy day of the week, but this benefited rather than hurt the theatres, for it drove the women conventionists from out-door sightseeing to the enjoyment of the picture shows.

Joan Crawford, starring in "The Taxi Dancer," at Loew's Regent, proved a fine attraction, the size of the crowds increasing as the week progressed. No less satisfactory results were obtained at the Victoria, where the film play was "The Whirlwind of Youth," featuring Lois Moran, who always delights Harrisburg patrons. The eighth episode of "The Collegians," which is taking well in Harrisburg, helped to swell the crowds.

The Colonial put on a "Joy Week," with a program devoted to comedy exclusively. It was partially successful, financially speaking,, although the character of the program, including Johnny Hines in "All Aboard," and Charley Chase, in "Crazy Like a Fox," deserved better patronage than was received, for both comedies produced a whole lot of genuine fun.

The Grand featured Corinne Griffith and Tom Moore in "Syncopating Sue," while the New Rialto went in for comedy with Larry Semon in "Spuds."

Warmer weather is attracting bigger crowds to the dance pavilions in the outdoor parks, a fact which is being reflected somewhat adversely in the business of the picture houses.

Cleveland

ALL of the local first-run houses reported a decided improvement in business last week. The veil of depression that has been hanging over them for four weeks was lifted at last, and all along the line the reports were favorable and the outlook optimistic. Some of this change from bad to better was due, undoubtedly, to the universal interest in the Lindbergh news pictures. And then again, there was a good repertoire to choose from.

"Resurrection" did splendidly during its second week at the Stillman, where it shared honors with Vitaphone specialty numbers. "Cradle Snatchers" and an average good vaudeville bill kept Keith's Palace well filled all week. Colleen Moore drew big crowds to the Allen to see her in "Naughty, But Nice," a sure-fire box office attraction without creating undue mental exhibaration. "The World at Her Feet" did exceptionally well at Loew's State, where it received the favorable criticisms of being "unusually good entertainment." The Cameo duplicated its previous week's success with "Lost at the Front." "Moulders of Men" got away to a good start at the Park and Mall, but finished with a fair average. "Taxi-Taxi" was a good number for Keith's East 105th St. and Reade's Hippodrome. It filled Keith's East 105th St. consistently all week, and the Hippodrome the first half of the week.

Fred Thomson, in "Silver Comes Through," finished the week at the Hippodrome with satisfactory results. The matiees were particularly well attended. The Circle continued with "The Night of Love" a second week. Business was fair. Two local theatres, the Hanna and the Ohio, are playing dramatic stock with visiting stars. Neighborhood houses also reported that business was better last week than it had been for six or seven weeks previous.

Salt Lake City

A VARIATION of sunshine and showers has been experienced here last week, with the downtown theatres reporting fairly good business. The Paramount Empress Theatre had a "Split Week," showing "Too Many Crooks" for the first portion of the week and finishing up with "Special Delivery," and business is reported to have been good. A special stage attraction was also presented. An average amount of business was enjoyed at the Victory during the showing of "Captain Salvation."

The double feature bill at the American consisted of Dolores Costello in "A Million Bid," and Larry Semon in "Spuds" and, according to reports, the week was a very good one. A picture of especial interest was presented at the Gem last week, having been sponsored by the Elks, and dedicated to American Elkdom; the picture being "Moulders of Men," and starring Conway Tearle. The house is said to have been crowded during this showing. "College Days" went over good at the Pantages, in connection with their regular vaudeville performance, and "The Ice Flood," also pulled well at the Orpheum. However, no exceptional nor extremely big business was reported. Business is a little off at the neighborhood houses with the second run houses fairly moderately well. Many changes in theatre ownership have taken place here recently.

Tampa

"THE BETTER 'OLE" opened up the week for the Tampa to extra good business, and proved a good draw for the four days' run. "The Tender Hour," and some more Lindbergh pictures kept the crowds coming very good for the last three days. John Ingram and his New Idea Orchestra, now in their third week, were also featured in the billing.

"The Fourth Commandment" proved an excellent draw at the Strand. The three days of its run there showed receipts that ran pretty close to the same days of '26, and exceeded those of '25. The fact that this picture was given some extra fine exploitation by Manager Peck should not be overlooked. "Drums of the Desert" and "Husband Hunters" each gave the Strand two days of very good business.

"The Devil Horse" was the best draw of the three features used by the Franklin this week, drawing a little better than average business, while "Lost at Sea" and "Senora Kid" did just about average.

Tampa

(Previous week)

MANAGER CARROLL put over a triple feature bill for the first half at the Tampa this week and it drew excellent business. "Resurrection," "John Ingram's New Idea Orchestra" and a reel showing Lindbergh's triumphant entry into the French Capital were all featured equally in the billing. This made an exceptional offering and it "clicked" heavily at the box office. "The Cradle Snatchers" and "The New Idea Orchestra" were featured for the last half and they kept the business up fine.

"Captain Salvation" opened the week for the Strand, pulling two days of very good business. "College Days" kept the business up to good for the next three days and "One Hour To Love" did WELL for the last two.

The Franklin tried out a new stunt this week. Westerns are always a big draw at this house, and Tom Mix one of the favorites, so they tried out a "Tom Mix Week" of all Mix pictures, a different one each day. The stunt found favor with the Mix fans and the business ran a little better than average.

Salt Lake City

(Previous week)

SATISFACTORY business has been reported at the downtown theatres during the past week in spite of the fact that the real summer weather seems to have set in suddenly here. "The Love of Sunya," with Gloria Swanson, went over very good, having played to capacity houses all week at the Paramount Empress. A big exploitation campaign was put on and a special stage offering was also presented. The Victory has enjoyed a fair amount of business with "Drums of the Desert." Lon Chaney in "Flesh and Blood" was a big drawing card at the Pantages.

"Baby Brother"

(Our Gang-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

POOR Fatty, rich, but lonesome and an only child, wished for a baby brother but there were no prospects of the stork visiting his home; however, his nurse brought him to a neighborhood in which abounded very many dirty and lovable baby brothers of boys Fatty's age. This gang conceived the idea of Fatty buying a brother and Farina won the purchase money by whiting a colored baby; a unique method of cleansing the youngsters and an equally unusual drying process uncovered the deception practiced by Farina but Fatty would have kept the child if he had been allowed to. However, Fatty and his family compromise on a Shetland pony.

Quite up to the standard of previous "Our Gang" offerings with the usual quota of gags and ingenious mechanical devices in evidence. They won't find it hard to laugh at this number. Anthony Mack and Charles Oelze directed under supervision of Robert McGowan.

"Jane's Relations"

(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

MARJORIE MARCEL and Earl McCarthy are featured in this Stern Bros. comedy which has to do with both their families of in-laws paying a visit at the same time. Such a happy home!—no place for Majorie and Earl to sleep—and both clans making plans to outstay the other. In addition, a remarkable youngster—member of one family—displays real genius towards making more trouble. This is pretty good—that's all.

"Careless Hubby"

(Cameo-Educational—One Reel)

HOKUM, but it will entertain the vast majority. Hubby is forced to take out an insurance policy by his mother-in-law, who insists on protection for her daughter in the event of his death; immediately after signing up hubby reads of a mother-in-law who poisoned her son-in-law after he had become insured. Hubby is scared, goes home and plays dead but when an autopsy is ordered be becomes very much alive and a wild melee ensues at the home.

Phil Dunham, Estelle Bradley, Marcelle Corday, James Hertz and Robert Burns are in the cast.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Pathe Review

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE current issue of the Pathe Review has for its highlight the wind-up of the Smithsonian-Chrysler Expedition to Tanganyika, in which the hunter-explorers break up camp to return to the United States with their capture consisting of newly discovered and little known animals. Pathecolor scenes show the making of fans by the Japanese; the work is done by hand, the artisans showing considerable speed and skill in their tasks.

Fairly interesting.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Roaring Gulch"

(Universal Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

TAKE everything that has been put into a two reel western since they started making them, including the start of the picture with the famous buckboard rescue of the heroine, and you have this one down pat. The only difference is in the cast; this time Edmund Cobb is featured, and considering the time worn stuff he has to work with, he does pretty well. As the hero he appears at a ranch as the rightful heir just about the time the girl, who is the present owner due to the crooked work of the executor, is being intimidated by the latter. The villain and his pals attempt to do away with him but fail. Does the girl leave when the fraud is exposed? She does not.

"Don't Tell Everything"

(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS comedy is of the type that makes reviewers and critics laugh aloud so it would be hard to understand an audience, viewing the film simply for entertainment, not laughing at the facial expressions of Max Davidson nor the grins of Spec O'Donnell; not to mention the bright gags worked up, some old and some new, but all funny because of the manner in which they are executed. Davidson has established quite a reputation for his delineation of Hebrew characters.

Max, a widower with an incorrigible son, attends a party at which is a rich widow; love at first sight between Max and the lady, but, fearing his chances of marriage lessened, Max denies relationship to the boy whom the lady dislikes. It is around this theme that the gags are built—and they come fast and funny.

In addition to Davidson and O'Donnell the cast comprises Jess Devorska, Lillian Elliott and James Finlayson. Leo McCarey directed and made a good job of it.

"Wild Wallops"

(Dooley-Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

PLENTY of slapstick, lots of old gags but amusing performances by the main characters in performing the business outlined make this an acceptable addition to the program. Billy Dooley and Kalla Pasha provide most of the merriment in their boxing bout put on before an audience, one member of which is Billy's girl who promises to marry him if he distinguished himself. The bout occupies most of the footage and the actions of the fighters will probably gross a number of laughs.

Dooley is supported by Bill Irving, Cliff Lancaster, Olive Hasbrouck, Bill Blaisdell and Kalla Pasha. William Watson directed.

"The Big Reward"

(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

SCHEMING, connivering cats and dogs make life miserable for Al Falfa in this current chapter detailing the manner in which Paul Terry's creations spend their time. With the aid of the quadrupeds Al washes his dishes and goes to bed; discovering his sleeping-mate is a mule Al chases him out to the barn.

The schemers then send a dog to burglarize Al's home; Al captures him and the dog gives him a money-bag but it contains many mice, much to Al's discomfiture and the animals' glee. —HAROLD FLAVIN.

"A One Man Dog"

Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

QUITE amusing and the creator gives us story and continuity for a change instead of a disconnected series of gags. Al Falfa's son (yes, he has one) has a pet dog whom Al dislikes until the son, kidnapped, is recovered by the canine; Al welcomes him with open arms.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Goose Flesh"

(Hamilton-Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

MORE story material was provided for Lloyd Hamilton's latest comedy effort that is usually accorded these two reelers and for that reason it shapes up better, in our estimation, as a constant diet of a collection of gags thrown together with a meaningless title holding them together begins to pall, especially when most of the business is far from original. The theme for this production is not new but it provides a reason for the gags built around it.

Hamilton becomes a sleuth and his first assignment is to guard a necklace, the property of a recluse who has been informed that the bauble will be purloined "at midnight." Hamilton and his co-worker try to forestall the effort but fail, only succeeding when the home of the recluse is blown up and they capture the thieves. Fred Spencer, Al Thompson, Estelle Bradley and Richard Carter comprise the supporting cast. Norman Taurog wrote and directed the story.

The fans should enjoy "Goose Flesh."

"The Tale of a Shirt"

(Universal Bluebird—One Reel)

THIS Jimmy Aubrey single reel comedy starts off with all the ear marks of a "meller," but before very long it slips into its Bluebird brand notch and the net result is fair. Jimmy walks into a Chinky laundry to get his one shirt that he is to be married in and finds its tail missing. He and the Chink argue and finally come to blows, with the latter taking the count, while a bottle of red ink adds to the battle scene. Jimmy runs out of the shop. The Chinaman comes to, and the fun revolves around his efforts to find Jimmy and replace the garment.

"Through Switzerland and Bavaria With Will Rogers"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS reel is one of the "Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad" series with Will Rogers pointing out the interesting places on the Continent and for which he also provided the sub-titles. Some of the scenes are rather pretty and the explanatory titles contain some mildly humorous wise-cracks a la Rogers.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Roach Studio Completing New Pathe Comedies

All of the units at the Hal Roach studio are busy these days striving to complete the Pathe comedies now in the making before the annual month of vacations arrives. "Our Gang" is working hard under Robert McGowan's direction; they have completed one comedy and will make another before the vacation schedule starts July 1. After an illness of one month Jean Darling, diminutive blonde leading lady, has returned to the Roach lot.

Charley Chase is in the midst of another comedy in which Edna Marion is his leading lady. Bull Montana and many "tough" urchins have supporting roles. Dot Farley is playing with Max Davidson in another Hal Roach comedy directed by Leo McCarey.

The Heart Thief

Stars' Names Bolster Up the Story

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

UNFOLDING a love tangle in an Hungarian setting, this screen version of Lajos Biro's play, "The Highwayman," shapes up as moderately entertaining. It has to do with two young lovers who break off their engagement because the man thinks he is unworthy of the lady. Later this same young man, hired to lure a woman to her downfall with his blandishments, discovers that his intended victim is none other than his former love; so he turns his talents to wrecking the plans of the scheming group who employed him. Brisk swordplay and ardent love scenes occasionally enliven the movement and, on the whole, the production is a sumptuous one, the settings and backgrounds being of a costly quality.

An ideal selection for the title role was Joseph Schildkraut. He has all the grace, looks and romantic fire necessary for the proper portrayal of his role. He is always an interesting figure to watch. On the other hand, Lya de Putti, as the girl in the case, is too wan and listless to act as a proper foil to Schildkraut's romantic onslaughts. She does not seem to fit into her characterization and give it the proper balance; rather, her personality is always somewhere in the background, rarely felt. Robert Edeson contributes another of his fine characterizations, while young William Bakewell looks like a promising juvenile. Eulalie Jensen and Charles Gerrard have minor roles, but they are well played.

The Cast: Joseph Schildkraut, Lya de Putti, Robert Edeson, Charles Gerrard, Eulalie Jensen, George Reehm, William Bakewell. Directed by Nils Olaf Chrisander from Gladys Unger's adaptation and script by Sonya Levien.

THEME: Love drama. Young man is commissioned to injure woman he loves. When he discovers what he is about he turns on those who hired him and saves the girl from their treachery.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Romantic scenes. The duels and personality of Schildkraut.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the names of the stars and give them an inkling of the structure of the plot.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

What Happened to Father

Farce-Comedy Contains Mirthful Situations

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

WARNER OLAND, veteran "heavy" of serial and feature production renown, deserts the ranks of villains and becomes a farceur in this current Warner Bros.' picture; his performance as a comedian reminds one of Jean Hersholt in many respects for his facial expressions and mannerisms are quite similar to those projected by that artist. But, though he fully realizes the possibilities of his role, we prefer his highly polished, suave villains. The production, as a whole, is a decided improvement over the general run of product emanating from the Warner studios; Oland's artistry is the bright, particular highlight of the story, which details the metamorphosis of its main character from a timid, absent-minded bookworm to a forceful, dominant male before whom even a shrewish wife quails. And all because of complications arising through his secret work as a playwright of musical comedy librettos.

The picture presents good action and some excellent backstage atmosphere and chorus girl types, particularly Cathleen Calhoun and Jean Lefferty, who are credited in the cast listing. William Demarest's work didn't appeal particularly, and Flobelle Fairbanks hadn't much to do but look pretty—and she does.

It's a fine picture for showing during the warm spell.

The Cast: Warner Oland, Flobelle Fairbanks, William Demarest, Vera Lewis, John Miljan, Hugh Allan, Cathleen Calhoun, Jean Lefferty. Story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, directed by John G. Adolfi.

THEME: Farce-comedy of timid husband of shrewish wife. He is musical comedy writer in secret, and it is through complications that arise in this work that he finally asserts himself at home.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Oland's performance. The backstage atmosphere and the midnight supper scenes. The automobile-buggy ride.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Oland in a different type of role. Story is by well-known author.

DRAWING POWER: Good in any house or locality.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros. Length, 5,567 feet. Released, June 25, 1927.

The Trunk Mystery

Good Qualities in Nick Carter Type of Story

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

FOLLOWING the line of reasoning that detective and mystery stories are always popular whether they are bound with a cloth or paper cover and that the names of Charles Hutchinson, Alice Calhoun and Ford Sterling are something to conjure with, "The Trunk Mystery" shapes up as a fairly entertaining mystery melodrama a trifle better than the average. Crafty villains, a lone girl and a secret service man all trying to get at the bottom of a mystery make for suspense and that has been injected with the cleverness and finesse that characterizes the Van Rensellaer de Day type of author. As a matter of fact the story by Forrest Sheldon is of a familiar vintage but whether old or new carries that sometimes lukewarm fascination that can be gotten from the secret and the unexplainable.

The starting point in the story is a scene in an auction room where the police get rid of stolen or unclaimed goods and here three different parties are interested in a trunk that is put up for sale. Hutchinson buys the thing and as a consequence is involved in a series of complications that give the story its fireworks.

The Cast: Charles Hutchinson, Alice Calhoun, Richard Neil, Ben Walker, Ford Sterling, Otto Lederer, Charles Mack, Lila Leslie. Director, Frank H. Crane.

THEME: Girl's father had been sent to prison because of disappearance of pearls which villain had hidden in trunk. When trunk was put up at auction villain tries to get it and so does daughter of framed man. Receiving aid from secret service man she finally gets enough evidence to free her father and implicate the villains.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Various attempts to steal contents of trunk. Hero's escape from captives and explanation of the mystery.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tell them it is a detective story with a plentiful supply of mystery.

DRAWING POWER: Good for the smaller houses which cater to average clientele.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Length, 4,338 feet. Released, June 12, 1927.

Warner Oland turns from heavy to comedian in Warner Bros. "What Happened to Father"

When Seconds Count

Society Man Makes Good and Pleases His Dad

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A FORMULA which takes into consideration all the plot elements and accepted standards of what a thrill picture should contain is employed in this Billy Sullivan vehicle. After a break with his wealthy male parent, who does not like his son cutting capers on the Great White Way, Sullivan decides to make good unaided. Palling with Jimmy Aubrey, known in the story as Dizzy, the two go to a town called Salino where Sullivan's father is building a dam; rather the crooked foreman is doing the construction because the latter blasts not according to survey but to suit his own plans by means of which he will reap a harvest of gold from the villagers. Into this scene of intrigue steps Sullivan; he immediately spots the villain and his dastardly designs and loses his heart over the dark haired daughter of one of Salino's leading residents. The girl's father shows him the door when he learns that Sullivan is the son of the man who is unwittingly causing hard feelings, but in spite of all the hindrances that come before him in his attempts to win the girl and defeat the crooked foreman, Sullivan hurdles them all in the accepted he-man fashion with the assistance of Dizzy, Rose Kimman, a vivacious and tough brunette, and Mildred June, the heroine. Aubrey and Miss Kimman contribute the comedy interludes, the feminine player being the better of the two.

The Cast: Billy Sullivan, Mildred June, Rose Kimman, Jerome LaGrasse, Marie Messember, James Aubrey, E. W. Bowman, Joseph Girard. Director, Oscar Apfel.

THEME: Young Society loafer makes good his promises to his father that he will succeed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fights, the comedy supplied by Aubrey and Kimman, the near success of the foreman's plans.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as outdoor story.

DRAWING POWER: For middle class audiences.

Produced by Duke Worne Productions. Distributed by Rayart Released, April, 1927. Length, 4,803 feet.

Ritzy

A Frail Tidbit of Romance

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a provocative title to this trivial slice of romance, should stimulate interest, but otherwise it hasn't much to recommend it. It unwinds its slight thread of romance which threatens to snap long before the halfway mark is reached. That it keeps going is due to the subtitles and the personality of Betty Compson who, as an American girl, suffers from a title complex.

The heroine is not satisfied with the American men, but prefers an English duke. So it is all fixed to cater to her whims by passing her off in a fake marriage ceremony to a bogus duke. When she is bitterly disillusioned she finds refuge in the arms of none other than the genuine article. The moral of this is obvious. The girl's father must simply prove that it is the man and not the coronet that counts.

There is a fair amount of humor expressed during the voyage across and the plot, slight as it is, affords Miss Bronson with opportunities to display a wealth of girlish fancies. She provokes the interest with her mannerisms, but her talent should be displayed in more substantial stuff.

The Cast: Betty Bronson, James Hall, William Austin, Joan Standing, George Nichols, Roscoe Karns. Director, Richard Rosson.

THEME: Romance of American girl with a complex for marrying a title. She is saved from herself by realizing eventually that it's the man and not the coronet that counts.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The frame-up of heroine. The masquerade of the duke. The fake marriage. The incident aboard ship. The captions. The appeal and acting of star.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title. Make capital of the craze of American girls to marry titles, etc. Play up Miss Bronson.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for neighborhood houses and for first runs, if supported by strong program.

Produced and Distributed by Famous Players. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Another "he-man" character role for Milton Sills in First National's "Framed"

Leatrice Joy shows how a pampered pet of luxury is brought up in P. D. C.'s "Vanity"

Painting the Town

One of the Best Comedies of the Year

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THERE'S no reason in the world why everybody in the world shouldn't derive considerable entertainment from this production; it's as light and airy as a summer breeze and as equally refreshing. Glenn Tryon shows evidence of more histrionic ability than we had credited him with, basing our opinion on short subject comedies in which he was the stellar light; he has a very deep bag of clever tricks and he spills them about with prodigal generosity. And the sub-titles! Each and every one contains a laugh.

The finished picture shows evidence of harmonious work between director and cast. The business of the piece is started in the first hundred feet, and there's never a let-up right up to "Finis"; the story is just an ethereal thread tying together the various gags with which the action is studded. Honorable mention is due the remainder of the cast in particular, Patsy Ruth Miller and George Fawcett, for their work is especially good.

Don't miss this one.

The Cast: Glenn Tryon, Patsy Ruth Miller, Charles Gerard, George Fawcett, Sidney Bracey, Max Asher. Story and scenario by Harry Hoyt, photographed by Allen G. Jones and directed by William Craft.

THEME: Young "watch-me" go-getter in small town becomes enamoured of Follies girl and follows to New York. His mechanical genius furnishes new type of automobile, which he trys to sell to Fire Commissioner; the "villain" forestalls his first atempt, but, with the help of Follies girl, he succeeds in his mission.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Work of Glenn Tryon; the many ingenious mechanical comedy contrivances; direction and acting of other members of the cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie-ups easily arranged with automobile and peanut manufacturers.

Produced and Distributed by Universal Pictures. Length, 5,909 feet. Released, August 7, 1927.

Vanity

Pride Takes a Severe Fall

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

AN intelligent type of audience will mark this picture down as an exceedingly clever piece of work on the part of Director Donald Crisp and the cast, and it may be that other qualities such as the De Mille touch, luxurious surroundings, exquisite mountings and an exciting fight will prove entertaining enough to thoroughly satisfy others. For those who, at the start of the picture, find out what its all about, its sublety will undoubtedly leave the impression that an interesting theme has been extremely well worked out.

Leatrice Joy is in the role of a pampered pet of luxury, with practically every move of an aristocratic existence regulated with mechanical precision. True, as one remark points out, it was quite possible that her ancestors at one time wore red undershirts, but a few generations has removed that memory and developed a cruel disdain for any other class than her own circle.

All this pompousness and false ceremony is completely shattered for her by a few hours' association with a former war acquaintance, Sailor Dan; in a small part of an evening all this is reduced to the level of a water-front brawl during which she shoots the ship's cook after he has knifed Dan in a fight over the possession of her. A much frightened woman then slinks back to her home to proceed with her wedding ceremony to a carefully, hand-picked mate the following morning.

THEME: Vain girl gets back to solid earth again after harrowing experience.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good direction, photography and work of cast. The fight sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Names of Joy, Ray, Hale and others. Title, and "Vanity" tie-ups.

DRAWING POWER: Intelligent audiences will get the most out of this. Others will undoubtedly be entertained.

Produced and Distributed by P. D. C.
Length, 5,923 feet. Released, May 9, 1927.

You've Seen It Before But It's Interesting

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S just one strong silent he-man after another for Milton Sills. The character has become very familiar as portrayed by the star, but the familiarity doesn't grate on one's nerves in this instance. "Framed" emerges as acceptable film fare because of its wealth of action, its sympathetic interest and the heroics which are manifested by the luckless hero.

The plot travels a melodramatic path, starting in France, jumping to Brazil and ending against a background of the Amazon Penal Colony of the latter country. The hero is a self-sacrificing chap who is dishonorably discharged from the French army. Hence his migration to Brazil to start all over again. Ill luck must pursue this type of man until the climax, when the gods condescend to smile kindly upon him. And then he wins his reward with romance. He becomes the overseer of a diamond mine and the daughter of the big boss finds him an object of interest. The plot thickens with more villainy expressed in the rival for the girl's heart. The hero suffers and suffers, but effects the heroine's rescue. The climax places him in the prison swamps accused of stealing diamonds, but he wins final retribution.

All of this is quite taxing on Milton Sills' pantomime. But he assumes the strong, silent expression and fights his way through.

The Cast: Milton Sills, Natalie Kingston, E. J. Radcliffe, Charles Gerrard, Edward Piel, John Miljan. Director, Charles J. Brabin.

THEME: Melodrama of self-sacrificing hero, who finds retribution after overcoming seemingly insurmountable obstacles.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The court-martial. The scenes in Brazil. The development of the romance. The action and suspense. The rescue with the girl. The foiling of the villain.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as typical Sills picture. Emphasize its sympathetic appeal, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average audiences everywhere.

Produced and Distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Studio Briefs

Robert Kane's "Dance Magic" is complete. Roy Briant wrote in his last title this week, and the film has been turned over to the releasing company, where it was pre-viewed by First National executives. Ben Lyon, Pauline Starke, Louis John Bartels and Mabel Swor are featured. "Hell's Kitchen" went to the cutting tables left bare by "Dance Magic." Joseph Boyle and Frank Capra, who co-directed, will work with Paul Maschke, Kane's film editor, for the next two weeks.

Jack Luden, a young player who has made much progress in film circles since his graduation from the Paramount Pictures School, is to be featured in a Western series which will be inaugurated with "Shootin' Irons," to be directed by Richard Rosson. Luden is at present playing in "Tell It to Sweeney," the Chester Conklin-George Bancroft comedy.

As one of the sequences in the scheduled Pola Negri picture will consist of a bounteous harvest festival, the film which was to have gone into work the other day at the Paramount plant is postponed. Another production, yet to be selected, will precede Sydney Howard's drama of the California vineyards. One of the big vineyard companies in Northern California will supply its premises as the story's locale in late September or early October.

Milton Sills has started work on "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," his latest First National starring production. Natalie Kingston, Virginia Lee Corbin and Yola d'Avril are playing prominent supporting rôles with Sills. The picture, directed by Charles Brabin and produced for First National by Wid Gunning, went into production last week.

Production started on "Sally in Our Alley," Columbia's second special for the new season, last week when Harry Cohn, vice president in charge of production for Columbia Pictures, signed Richard Arlen, (courtesy of Paramount) and Walter Lang for the respective roles of leading man and director of the new production, which stars Shirley Mason.

The second subject of the series of Mickey McGuire comedies, based on the Fontaine Fox newspaper cartoons of the same title, has been started at the F B O studios by Larry Daramour, producer. The title for this picture is "Mickey's Pals" and Stinky Davis, Tom Boy Taylor, Spunky Edwards, and Little Stanley all appear with Mickey in this one.

The Eastern Pathe serial unit which has been filming "The Masked Menace," a ten-chapter picturization of Clarence Buddington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post story, "Still Face," left on May 9th for Berlin, N. H., where scenes of the logging and mill country will be filmed. With two weeks of good weather on this location the camera work should be completed and the film in the hands of the cutter. Arch Heath is directing and Jean Arthur, Larry Kent and Tihomas Holding have featured roles.

Gustav von Seyffertitz, film character artist, has been signed for a prominent rôle in the new George Fitzmaurice production, tentatively known as "The Rose of Monterey." With Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland selected for the two featured rôles, Fitzmaurice is busy choosing the supporting cast. The company has gone on location to Monterey, Calif., when the exteriors will be shot.

Loretta Young, youthful First National "discovery," recently placed under long-term contract, has also been chosen for an important rôle in George Fitzmaurice's next production, tentatively titled "The Rose of Monterey."

Production of "Smile, Brother, Smile," formerly known as "The Road to Romance," featuring Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill, is now in final stages, according to Charles R. Rogers, who is producing the picture for First National. Final scenes in the production will be made within the next two weeks. The cast includes T. Roy Barnes, Philo McCollough, E. J. Ratcliffe, Brooks Benedict, Yola d'Avril, Ernest Hilliard, Harry Dunkinson and several others.

Ken Maynard and his company, starting the first of a new series of six pictures for First National Pictures, are now at Lodge Grass, near the Crow Indian government reservation in Montana. Charles R. Rogers is the producer of the Maynard films. In two special cars, escorted by Chief Yowlachie of the Crow tribe, Maynard and his troupe of Western players left Los Angeles for Montana and will be gone about a month. "The White Horse Troop" is the title for the first of the new series, formerly titled "Captain of the Strong."

Principals of the cast, besides Maynard and Hurst, are Ann Drew, J. P. McGowan, Harry Shutan, Tom Bay and Hal Salter.

Rollie Asher, who has been with Corinne Griffith during the making of many of her previous successes, has been signed again by the company to assist in injecting comedy into "The Garden of Eden." The picture has just gone into production.

In the action of the serial, "Still Face," now in production in New York, it is necessary to have a most lifelike bust of Larry Kent, who plays the juvenile lead, so Pathe secured the services of Joseph Nicolosi, a member of the National Sculpture Society and of The Architectural League of New York. Larry Kent was presented by Pathe with the bust after the picture was completed.

Gardner James has been engaged by I. B. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, for the leading role in an untitled production. Betty Blythe, recently returned from a protracted motion picture engagement abroad, is also in the cast. Mr. Chadwick will personally supervise the production, which will be released by First Division Distributors, Inc.

The cast for Thomas Meighan's next starring vehicle for Paramount, as yet untitled, was announced this week. Marietta Milner plays opposite Meighan and Wyndham Standing, Fred Kohler, Charles Mill Mailes, Gunboat Smith, Duke Martin, and Nancy Phillips are in the cast. There are several roles still to be filled.

"White Pebbles" is the name of Wally Wales' next Western feature to be released by Pathe. It is a picturization of the story "Bess of the Bar None" by Reginald C. Baker and was prepared for the screen by Betty Burbridge and Frank L. Ingram.

Al Martin, title writer and former newspaperman, is doing double duty this week inasmuch as he is titling two pictures simultaneously. His mornings are spent at the Christie studios, where he is titling "French Fried," a Neal Burns comedy, and his afternoons are consumed in titling Helen of Troy, New York," one of the featurettes of the Beauty Parlor series at the F. B. O. studios.

Pauline Garon left New York last week for Los Angeles, where she will start work shortly on a production for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. I. E. Chadwick, president of the company, will personally supervise four comedy dramas with this star. "Eager Lips," the first of the series, will be started this week. "Bad Little Good Girl," "Merry Wives of New York" and "Ladies of Ease" will complete the series.

Buddy Roosevelt has secured "Phantom Buster" a story by Walter Coburn which will serve as a Western vehicle for the star.

Buddy impersonates both the hero and the villain. The girl is portrayed by Alma Rayford.

Lieutenant Louis Van Den Ecker, veteran of the Foreign Legion, who served as technical director of "Beau Geste," has been engaged in a similar capacity by Paramount for "Beau Sabreur," the companion story, which shortly will go into production under direction of John Waters. Milton E. Hoffman will supervise. Thomas J. Geraghty has made the adaptation of P. C. Wren's novel.

The cast for the seventeenth Sterling production on the 1926-27 list has been selected by Joe Rock, head of production for that company. The picture, originally designated as "The Poor Fish," the title of which will probably be changed in course of production, will see Fritzie Ridgeway and Gene Gowing in the leading roles. The supporting cast includes Edwards Davis, Jack Mower, Betty Baker, Paddy O'Flynn, and Joe Bonner.

Ewart Adamson, author and writer, now doing the adaptation of "Deadman's Curve," an automobile racing story which is to be filmed by F. B. O. shortly, has had a colorful life. He has been a sailor, soldier, Canadian trapper and a South Sea refugee. He has traveled around the world four times.

Seattle

RECENTLY chosen executives of the new West Coast Theatres Chain on the Pacific Coast arrived in Seattle, Washington, last week and spent several days in the Pacific Northwest metropolis meeting with theatre managers of the Northwest division and outlining plans for the conduct of the organization's many houses in Washington and Montana.

The meetings were presided over by Harold B. Franklin, newly elected president and general manager. Under the new plan of operation of the West Coast houses, Mr. Franklin explained, each manager will be held individually responsible for his own house and will guide its destinies as though he personally owned it. At the opening meeting, Seattle managers were introduced to Hershel Stuart, new general manager of the Seattle division, who succeeds Harry C. Arthur, Jr., hereafter supervisor of theatres in the Southern California district.

Included in Mr. Franklin's party in Seattle were Mike Gore, chairman of the board of directors; John R. Dillen, New York financier of Hayden-Stone Co.; Jack Mansfield, assistant to Mr. Franklin in the physical operation of West Coast; H. G. Delabar, West Coast accounting representative; Frank R. Wilson, former president of North American Theatres; L. O. Lukan, Western division manager for First National; Herman Wobber, Western division manager for Paramount; Harry C. Arthur, Jr.; Hershel Stuart, and Grover C. Kirley, treasurer of the Seattle division.

Hershel Stuart, recently appointed general manager of the Washington and Montana divisions of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., arrived in this city last week and has established his offices in the United Artists Theatre Building.

F. F. Vincent, exploitation specialist for the Universal branch offices in Seattle and Portland, stopped off here a few days last week en route to Vancouver, where he is scheduled to stage a special trade showing as the personal representative of Carl Laemmle.

Wally Rucker, debonair young manager of the local Educational branch office, announced last week that he is making plans for the opening of a branch office in Portland just as soon as a suitable location can be found. Billy Green, Oregon salesman for Educational, will be in charge of the Portland branch.

C. A. Swanson, general manager of the Everett motion picture houses operated by Pilz and Swanson Amusement Company, last week reported that there is no truth to the recent announcement relative to the purchase of the Everett Theatres by Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc. (West Coast).

Exhibitors of the state of Washington were expressing their pride this week over the appointment of Ray Grombacher, popular Spokane showman, as one of the vice presidents of the M. P. T. O. A.

D. C. Millward, head of the Western Film Corporation of Seattle, last week took his place at the wheel of a new Chandler 8, thus quieting all reports to the effect that the film business is decidedly off. Mr. Millward's purchase, by the way, was made from C. M. Dunn, exhibitor of Cle Elum and Roslyn, Washington.

Two changes in the publicity personnel of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., in this city were made last week. Eddie "The Great" Hitchcock, former director of publicity for the United Artists Theatre, assumes the same position at Manager James Q. Clemmer's Fifth Avenue Theatre under the new arrangement. Mr. Hitchcock's work at the United Artists will be taken over by Knowles Blair, former assistant at that house.

E. C. Shaffer, manager of the Greater Features—Columbia Exchange in Butte, spent several days here last week conferring with Jack Lannon of the home office.

W. A. Cochran, well-known Northwest exhibitor, pulled into this city last week with a check for $170 which he turned over to the Red Cross for the Mississippi Flood Relief Fund.

Tommy Gibbons, sales representative in the Eastern Washington territory for Manager Jack Bower's local First National exchange, last week was receiving the congratulations of film row on his feat of finishing second in the recent National Sales Drive. In token of his achievement, he was presented with the Constance Talmadge watch at the recent Hollywood convention. Harold Boehme, another of Mr. Bower's "best sellers" was runner-up to Mr. Gibbons.

The office, incidentally, finished first in the West and second in the national standing, according to Mr. Bower, who is rapidly achieving the title of "First Place Jack."

James Merion, auditor of the home office of Producers' Distributing Corporation, spent a few days here last week with Manager Dave Frazer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simons of Missoula, Montana, well known throughout the territory as veteran exhibitors of that state, left last week for California. Mr. Simons has been in ill health for some time, and the trip will be a method of recuperation for him.

Two changes in the location of salesmen for Manager Carl W. Stern's local Warner Brothers Exchange were announced last week. Morris Saffle will be transferred back to his former Eastern Washington territory, and Ray Ackles will return to Western Washington under the new allocation.

Another new exchange for Portland—this was the announcement made last week by Charles W. Harden, manager for the United Artists exchange in this city. In fact, prints and paper for the Portland branch are already stored in this city, awaiting the selection by Mr. Harden of a suitable location in the Oregon city. It is reported that the Portland branch will be managed by Harold Harden, now assistant manager and booker for his Dad in this city.

Philadelphia

THE Grand Opera House, operated jointly by the Stanley Company, the Keith-Albee interests and the Nixon-Nirdlinger heirs, will close on June 25th. The last two weeks will be devoted to a tab policy in conjunction with a program picture. Joseph C. Dougherty, manager of the house, will devote the remainder of the summer to supervising the improvements that will be made at Keith's Chestnut Street Theatre.

Frank N. Seltzer, who has been in charge of publicity for the Fox Theatre and the Fox-Locust Theatre practically since the former house was opened, has resigned. Mr. Seltzer has not yet announced any new affiliation.

The Fox-Locust Theatre closed on Saturday night, June 18th, and will remain dark until September, when it will reopen with another Fox feature.

Harry D. Westcott, who is in charge of the educational and social service department of the Stanley Company of America, is receiving the sympathetic expressions of his friends in the industry because of the recent death in Camden of his father, John N. Westcott, a prominent figure in New Jersey politics. Judge Westcott twice nominated Woodrow Wilson for President at Democratic conventions.

Noble Milligan, at one time connected with the Masterpiece Exchange and later with the Monarch and other exchanges on Vine Street, has been appointed editor of the Willow Grove Illustrated News.

Executives of the Stanley Company are making preparations to spend the summer after July 4th at Atlantic City. John J. McGuirk, Al Boyd, Abe and Lew Sablosky will go to the shore after that time.

Not so long ago in the Philadelphia regional notes an announcement was published of the purchase of Fay's Theatre, 4032-40 Market Street, Philadelphia, by Morris Wax, of the Keystone Amusement Company from the Knickerbocker Playhouse, Inc., for the sum of $450,000. Mr. Wax, who purchased the theatre, has drawn our attention to the fact that this figure is inaccurate and without any basis. The true consideration for this sale, says Mr. Wax, was $500,000 even. The Keystone Amusement Company takes over the management and operation of the house this July and will operate it under the same policy as has hitherto prevailed.

P. A. Jones, manager of the Kansas City Educational branch, and Toy Gallagher, the latter a well-known comedienne in two reelers

Denver

A NEW Kimball pipe organ of the latest design will be installed at the Ogden theatre during the coming two weeks. After the installation will follow a week of half-hour organ recitals preceding each regular performance. The installation of the new organ is in keeping with the Ogden's plan of improvement which have taken place since early spring.

K. M. Murray, manager of the theatres in Hurley and Santa Rita, New Mexico, was a visitor along film row last week. Mr. Murray's visit to Denver is the first for several years.

Negotiations are pending whereby United Artists will occupy the present P. D. C. quarters when Producers moves to Pathe about July 1st.

Sam Cain, Universal manager, is still down in New Mexico selling pictures in his new territory recently taken over when the El Paso, Texas, branch office of Universal was discontinued. When last heard from he was headed for Jaurez.

The members of the Denver Film Board of Trade will have the honor of furnishing motion pictures for the entertainment of President and Mrs. Coolidge and party during their stay in the Black Hills this summer.

A. H. Burrett, proprietor of the Lakeside Theatre, Mimico, Ont., was fined $20 and costs in the County Police Court for permitting the admission of unaccompanied children to the theatre at evening performances.

Cleveland

THERE have been very few post-mortems anent the recent Columbus convention from returning Cleveland exhibitors. The banquet and ball seemed to have made the biggest hit, as that was the one event that all commented upon.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., held its second golf tournament of the season last Tuesday at the Ridgewood Country Club. Members of the organization meet once a month to exhibit their prowess. However, figures talk, and at the end of the season the score book will tell who is the best golfer of the crowd.

Harry Charnes, president of the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland, was in New York over the week-end, completing his season's purchases for Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania distribution.

W. E. Callaway, First National sales manager, was one of the celebrities who journey out from New York to attend the National exhibitor convention in Columbus. He stopped off in Cleveland to pay a visit to local branch manager Gradwell Sears.

Homer R. Heisey, connected with the Memphis First National exchange, wandered far from home last week to spend his vacation in Cleveland with his brother, Gradwell Sears, First National exchange manager.

Carl Sonin, manager of the M. G. M. exchange in Cincinnati, who was badly hurt last week in an automobile smash-up, is on the slow road to recovery. It will be weeks before he gets his discharge from the hospital, but he sent word that he's resting comfortably, and will be glad to see his film friends when they come to Cincy.

Bill Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, was in New York last week. Raynor likes to go to New York. But not during golf season. He works as hard at the game as he does at his regular job, and it's a toss-up at which he is more proficient.

New York and New Jersey

WEDNESDAY morning of this week there was a marked absence of New Jersey exchange men and exhibitors from their accustomed haunts. The three-day convention at the Berkeley-Carteret, Asbury Park, was, of course, the reason.

William Raynor, manager of the New York Pathe branch exchange, accompanied by Eddie Carroll, Floyd Vogt and F. H. Lovejoy, all three of the latter named Pathe New Jersey salesmen, left Wednesday for the Berkeley-Carteret, where Pathe has engaged a suit of rooms for the M. P. T. O. of N. J. convention.

Joseph M. Seider also left early this week for Asbury.

Peter M. Woodhull was reported still in his offices Tuesday—but that doesn't mean anything. He will probably do a Lindbergh.

Messrs. Hoffman and Mumford, of the Roth Brothers' New Jersey circuit; Peter Adams and Sam Perry, the latter the well-known Englewood exhibitor, were among this week's visitors seen along the Film Curb.

There is a rumor out to the effect that Jack Fugazy's theatre on W. Houston Street may have to be torn down to make way for the subway in that section.

The Houston Street Theatre has closed for the summer months.

What can be called a real promotion is Bert Mendelson's recent appointment as buyer and manager for the Milton Hirschfield theatres at Trenton, N. J. Another bit of news passed out concerning Mr. Mendelson is that he soon expects to become a father.

Kutinsky's new theatre, under construction in the downtown section of New York City, is fast taking form, and the house is scheduled for completion in the early fall. A day and night shift is being employed at present.

Jerry Adler, of Seymour Schussel's Commonwealth exchange, has recently had his car all dolled up, and he and his dog Rex are reported as having quite a time while another member of the family is away.

Milton Kempner, formerly manager of the Eagle Theare, is now in charge of Small & Strausberg's Normandy.

Ben Idson, one of the best known exhibitors in Brooklyn, and for several years owner and operator of the Montauk Theatre in the East New York section, will have some more competition in his neighbohhood in addition to the Hendryx and Kinema Theatres. The Hendrx has recently opened up a roof garden.

Irving Cohen, at one time manager of Sydney Cohen's Fifth Avenue Theatre, is now manager of Julius Joelson's Belmont Theatre, Tremont Avenue, Bronx, New York City.

There's no apparent reason why Milton Kronacher, one of Pathe's star New York salesmen, should not become a millionaire some day if activity in the business world gets the desired results. Milt is now an interested party in a Reo branch in Washington Heights, and if any of you want a good speed truck or a "Flying Cloud," give him a ring.

William Appel is the new manager of the Culver Theatre, Brooklyn.

The American Theatre, Fort Hamilton Avenue and 39th Street, Brooklyn, will go on a "three-a-week" policy, starting this week.

Lou Simon has resigned his position as manager of the recently-opened new Embassy Theatre, owned and perated by the F. G. Wilson circuit. Chris Cully succeeds him.

Keith's Alhambra, one of the oldest theatres in Harlem, on 125th Street, is playing pictures for the Summer.

Recently there have been strong indications that Al Moley, booker at Prudential Film Delivery, coperpetrator of bathing-beauty contests with his pal, Ed Seider, and baseball fan de luxe, is about to transfer his affections to the Boston Braves, since his one-time friend McGraw let Hughie McQuillan depart from the Giants.

Larry H. Thomas, president of First Division Pictures, Inc., New York and Northern New Jersey territorial distributors, played host on Friday, June 17th, to the exhibitors of the territory. The occasion of the festivities was the formal opening of the new First Division Exchange, a reorganization of Merit Film Corporation, at the company's offices on the twelfth floor, 729 Seventh Avenue. A buffet luncheon was served from 12 until 3 o'clock.

In addition to Mr. Thomas, Al Friedlander, Otto Lederer, Morris Epstein, Ben Schwartz, Sol Solomon, Jack Denton and others of the organization, several screen notables were on hand to greet the exhibitors. Among these were Roscoe Arbuckle, George Walsh, Marguerite Clayton and H. H. Van Loan.

It is reported through the office of Edgar B. Haines theatre specialists of Newark and New York that the new theatre building being erected at the corner of Irving Place and Central Avenue in Rahway New Jersey has been acquired by Messrs Bratter & Pollack of Newark on a long term lease.

The building is being erected by the Oltarsh Building Company of New York and will contain an auditorium of 1,000 seating capacity and seven stories.

This makes the eighth new house that Bratter & Pollack have under lease or in the course of construction.

Salt Lake City

THE Orpheum Theatre, Second South Street, between Main and West Temple, of this city, was purchased by the Louis Marcus Enterprises a few days ago, according to announcements made public here June 11th. It was indicated that $300,000 was the price paid for the property.

The sale came after a long period of negotiations, due to the desire of the new owners to take over the lease held by Ackerman & Harris, of San Francisco, before acquiring title to the theatre. This lease runs until 1934. Ackerman & Harris signed an agreement to turn over the theatre to the new owners on July 1st. After that date it will be closed for a while.

Stockholders of the Salt Lake Orpheum Realty Company will meet this week to approve the sale of the property, which will be the last step in completion of the transaction.

Marcus reports that immediately after the theatre is turned over to him he will increase seating capacity, install new seats, provide a lounge and retiring rooms on the mezzanine, redecorate the auditorium and lobby, install an organ, lay new carpets, and add to the theatre's general equipment.

Purchase of the Orpheum Theatre gives the Louis Marcus Enterprises control of three Salt Lake theatres. Starting with the Paramount-Empress Theatre, Marcus took over the Victory Theatre after a few years, and also branched out into other cities. His organization operates the Paramount Theatre in Ogden, the Paramount Theatre in Provo, and the Idaho Theatre in Twin Falls.

The former Kinema Theatre here will reopen July 18th, under the new name "Rialto." The lease of the Kinema Theatre at 372 South Main street here has been transferred by Universal to two prominent Salt Lake business men, who will completely redecorate and make a number of improvements. The Metropolitan Motion Picture Company was represented in the Board of Commerce annual cruise by Sam Caplan.

St. Louis

ON Monday, June 13, St. Louis filmdom celebrated the grand opening of the new home of Columbia Pictures in St. Louis at 3306 Olive street.

The building is in the general film center and is of striking architectural design. In the front of the office is the booker's desk and behind him are the desks of the stenographers and clerical forces. This space opens to the ceiling, giving plenty of air and light. Along the western wall are the private offices of the executives, cashier, etc. The exchange is also equipped with three fireproof film vaults.

Three years and five months is not a long period as man counts time, but it does look like a far cry from the little dingy third story office in the Empress Theatre building on Olive street, west of Grand boulevard, where the Columbia exchange started on January 14, 1924. In a space big enough for an ordinary private office was crowded an entire exchange, including eight rows of poster racks, a number of vault cans, etc., etc. The only spare space was on the ceiling, and that couldn't be used conveniently.

It was not long before the Columbia organization began to progress, though. In July, 1924, it moved to real exchange quarters at 3317 Olive street and was there until the move to its new home.

Many exhibitors from St. Louis and elsewhere in the territory attended the grand opening of Columbia's new home. Many large and beautiful floral pieces were sent with congratulatory messages, while a number of telegrams and congratulations were also received. Many practical exhibitors paid their compliments with play dates, the best congratulatory note an exchange owner or manager can receive.

Educational manager of the Detroit branch, M. H. Starr, C. A. Goodman, of the Philadelphia branch and W. P. Eberley, of New Orleans, with "Big Boy"

Lee Marcus, general sales manager for F. B. O., was in St. Louis on Wednesday, June 15.

Chester Gruber of Collinsville, Ill., was seen along the row on June 13.

The St. Louis Movie Poster Company has located on the second floor of the building at 3306 Olive street.

Safe crackers opened the door of the safe in the Ritz Theatre, 3147 South Grand boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., on the night of June 12, but the inner door jammed and the robbers were forced to leave without loot.

R. G. Raoul, Missouri Pacific station agent at Monticello, Ark., proved a hero when fire broke out in a local motion picture theatre when the house was crowded to capacity on June 14. The spectators became panicky, some began to scream and others started a rush for the exits. Raoul demanded order and persuaded the spectators to file from the house slowly. Within an hour the building had been destroyed by the flames.

War veterans, patients at the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Jefferson Barracks, south of St. Louis, on June 14 were entertained by Brooke Johns and his musical company from the Missouri Theatre. The show lasted for an hour and a half and was sponsored by Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion.

St. Louis film stocks closed June 18 as follows: Skouras A, $43 bid and $40 asked, a decline of $1 for the week. St. Louis Amusement A, $43 bid and $44 asked. No change for the week.

During the week ten shares of Skouras stock changed hands and five shares of St. Louis Amusement.

Harry D. Buckley, vice-president of United Artists, was a brief visitor to the St. Louis exchange recently. He has returned to New York.

In a recent issue of the NEWS, in the Milwaukee regional notes, credit was wrongly given Jack Yoe, of Beaver Dam, as being owner of the Opera House and Rex Theatres in Berlin, Wisconsin. This is doing an injustice to Ed. Starkey, of Berlin, as he has been operating the Opera House and Rex for the last three years. Mr. Yoe owns two theatres in Beaver Dam but has never had control of the two Starkey houses in Berlin.

Central Penn

AS the guests of Manager Charley Jones, at the Colonial theatre, Harrisburg, on the evening of June 17, 861 of the 2,200 marble shooters who contested for the city championship in a tournament staged by the Harrisburg Telegraph, gave a great send-off to Charles Reidell, the city champion, who was selected to go on June 26 to Atlantic City to represent Harrisburg in the national tournament. Prizes were presented to Reidell and a dozen others who made the best records in the city tourney, and the boys and girls enjoyed a comedy bill featured by Johnny Hines in "All Aboard."

Robert Wallner has been assigned by the F. B. O. exchange in Philadelphia to cover the territory of Harrisburg and vicinity.

Earnest Hickey, manager of the Capitol theatre, York, has purchased a new automobile in which he will shortly leave on a vacation tour through New England. He spent several weeks running up 1,000 miles in the vicinity of York to break in the machine preparatory to "hopping off."

Five theatres in York,—the Strand, Capitol, Hippodrome, Scenic and Wizard,—raised $218.85 for the Mississippi Valley flood sufferers at matinees on a recent Saturday afternoon in which each theatre devoted two hours to collecting the money. All are houses controlled by the Nathan Appell Amusement Enterprises.

"Duke" Snyder, manager of the Scenic theatre, York, has returned from a vacation trip by motor which took him to several of the large Eastern cities.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Callahans and the Murphys" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, State Theatre, Los Angeles

Record: "Audience at State yelling their heads off. Film talk of town. If you miss 'The Callahans and the Murphys' you miss comedy wow destined to be one of best box office bets of year. Laughs follow each other so closely there is scarcely time to breathe between each one."

Examiner: "I want no better afternoon's entertainment than to see Marie Dressler and Polly Moran do sister act. Singly they are amusing but as comedy team they are riot. They aroused whole audience to state of maudlin hysteria."

Times: "Really riot of laughter."

Evening Herald: "Customers at opening show howled with glee."

News: "Audience at State screamed and howled with glee yesterday, when Callahans and Murphys fought back and forth across fire escape."

"The Unknown" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York City

Times: "Chaney really gives marvelous idea of Armless Wonder. Narrative a sort of mixture of Balzac and Guy de Maupassant, plus Mr. Browning's colorful side show background. . . . Miss Crawford not only beautiful but gives most competent performance. Norman Kerry splendid as strong man."

News: "Tod Browning, who writes them and directs them as no other man can, has turned out another weird, thrilling, remarkable piece of filmery in 'The Unknown.' Wholly gripping production, so beautifully done that its most revolting episodes make you sit up and want for more."

Telegraph: "Absolutely gripping, desperately enthralling, beautifully acted and excellently produced. Chaney offers one of his most impressive performances. Keeps his difficult character perfectly. As fascinating and thrilling as any tale of Poe's."

Mirror: "Lon Chaney flashes pair of educated feet in nerve-searing melodrama yclept 'The Unknown.' Nothing short of astounding to see Mr. Chaney pick up articles with his feet and flip cigarette ashes. Joan Crawford beautiful as girl."

Graphic: "Shivers and thrills offered in 'The Unknown.' With Joan Crawford doing excellent work in feminine lead and supported by good cast, Chaney makes of this gruesome, morbid tale as exciting film as star has ever shown."

Evening World: "When Lon Chaney is in picture one can rest assured that that picture is worth seeing. When Joan Crawford and Norman Kerry are also present to help Mr. Chaney put it over, its value is that much enhanced. Not only is Mr. Chaney remarkable actor but he invariably chooses good story with which to display his talents."

Evening Sun: "Suspicion that the picture might have been written by Nero, directed by Lucretia Borgia, constructed by the shade of Edgar Allen Poe and lighted by well-known vivisectionist proved absolutely groundless, as glance at program showed. . . Mr. Browning's pictures are usually skillful, and 'The Unknown' is no exception."

"Slide, Kelly, Slide" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago

Chicago Herald and Examiner: "Taking it play by play 'Slide, Kelly, Slide' just about best picture I've seen. I'd be afraid to get that enthusiastic if I didn't have backing of grandstand . . . . I loved every minute of picture, and I don't know difference between baseball and highball. . . . Joy of this movie for those who know their national sport must be well nigh unbearable. . . .William Haines is same swaggering, swell-headed, fresh but lovable kid. . . . This boy started his baseball picture as a featured player but I'll bet he finished it a star. . . . As much work of art as means of entertainment. . . . The cast is answer to director's dream."

Chicago American: "Has everything to make it popular. . . . Once in great while as movies roll round there comes one that has just about everything. 'Slide, Kelly, Slide' is such a picture. . . . Should explode like a bomb in box offices of country and with bang that will make deep impression on credit side of the ledger of M-G-M company. . . . A medal with palm should go to M-G-M for producing it. . . . Wholesome entertainment raised to nth power."

Chicago Tribune: "Kind: Baseball drama. Quality: Excellent. Direction: Could hardly be better. Photography: Scrumptious. Acting: See remark on "direction." Story: Interesting one, full of pep, inspires much hearty laughter, encourages occasional tear."

"The Race to Paris" — Educational, Madison Theatres, Detroit, Michigan

News: "It remains for Educational to outstep field with hurried assembly and distribution of one-reel subject entitled, 'The Race to Paris!' It is really 1,000-foot history of principal efforts of past year on part of aviators to fly to Paris, telling in graphic way of their flight preparations. In many instances catastrophes that upset their planes are vividly shown.

"Lindbergh, of course, is feature of reel. He is shown with his plane after his hop across continent, early morning astir in getting plane ready for big trip, and finally heavily laden craft as it bumped its way down soggy field, many times facing disaster before it took to air. 'The Race To Paris' is nicely subtitled and is just about as fine a short subject as has ever been released on a big news event."

"Rookies" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Arthur and Dane score notable triumph. . . . Riotous hit. . . . Unless you have taken sacred oath never to laugh 'Rookies' will put all your laugh muscles in action. . . . Dane priceless. Arthur has demonstrated again that he is one of best all-around actors. . . . A comedy to be remembered. I honestly feel we need more pictures on the order of 'Rookies.'"

Record: "Of pictures that have come out ot Hollywood, none is more deserving of praise than 'Rookies'. . . . 'Rookies' beyond all doubt does what motion pictures are supposed to do, entertains. . . . One continuous laugh. . . . brought forth by acting that is sheerest kind of comedy. . . . Situations really funny and titles snap and crackle . . . . It is picture that is 100 per cent laughs and good fun."

Herald: "A mirthquake. 'Rookies' one of the funniest comedies produced to date. . . . If there is law against causing laugh hysterics then Dane and Arthur could be arrested on an easy hundred counts, so funny and laugh-provoking are their antics . . . . Here is one comedy with plot. Thrilling stuff is injected into story."

News: "Gay first-night audience almost had spasms of mirth over comical antics in 'Rookies'. . . . If M-G-M doesn't figure out companion film it will miss a good bet. Thrills galore furnished. . . . Some knockout titles."

Times: "Score hit for new comedy team. Results hilarious. . . . Laughs genuine. . . . Popular appeal. . . . Good thrilling effects."

"Alias the Deacon"—Universal, Roxy Theatre, New York City

World: "Jean Hersholt heads remarkably well cast company. Experienced direction shows hand throughout, with shuffling together of box-car hobo scenes, restrained love episodes, card games, prize fight, race between train and automobile and capture of murderer, swift-moving and dramatic sequences that should delight young and old of both sexes. Should have good box-office value. With original melodramatic plot of play Sloman has done very well; characterization good, pace does not lag. Photography good."

Herald Tribune: "As soon as we learned that Jean Hersholt was going to play title role we felt perfectly sure that it would be good picture. It is. . . . In presenting Deacon on screen he has given public another amazing characterization! Isn't he, perhaps, as fine an actor as Emil Jannings? Most of titles amusing."

Sunday News: "Many amusing incidents and exciting prizefight episode. . . . June Marlowe pretty, with real ability."

Evening World: "Good entertainment with Jean Hersholt, June Marlowe and Ralph Graves. Mr. Hersholt very good. . . . Amusing production. . . . Well worth spending evening to see."

Morning Telegraph: "Well spiced with humor. . . . Cast quite remarkable. . . . Will deal Roxy full house."

Times: "Entertaining subject. . . . Several chapters in which Mr. Hersholt does exceedingly well. . . . Some of sequences mindful of O. Henry's stories."

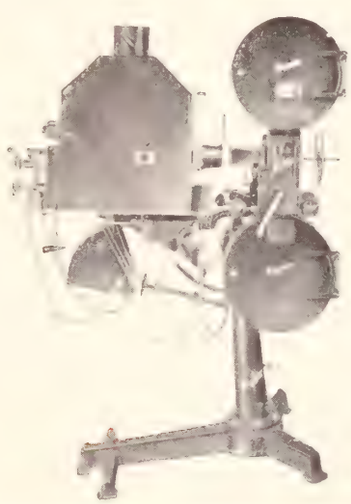
American: "Comprised of sure-fire cinema ingredients. . . . Proved pleasing picture entertainment. . . . Hersholt's characterization both amusing and convincing and he is especially to be commended for amount of restraint with which he invests playing. . . . Picture has real plot."

"Lost at the Front"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Times: "War extravaganza. . . . Bundle of hilarity. Natalie Kingston lends feminine charm to fractious affair."

World: "Newspaper critics awed and impressed by hilarity which it arouses. Slapstick comedy one vehicle in which movie is honestly and unequivocally sincere. Has but one object—laughter. Has every kind of exaggerated situation. Sidney and Murray . . . causes enough for any reviewer to set picture down as filled with plenty of gaiety."

Morning Telegraph: "Personally, I don't care for sort of humor termed 'robust,' but there are some millions who do, and they will fill theatres when this farce plays. There are hundred incidents that will create veritable whirlwinds of laughter. Will find customers packed in rear."



Telegram: "Its risible rations welcome dish. . . . Creditable number of hilarious happenings, with here and there pearls of great price."

Daily News: "If you're keen on funny stuff concerning war, march to Mark Strand where 'Lost at the Front' is showing. So uproariously funny that you won't fail to get kick out of picture. The captions as ludicrous as situations they describe."

After all is said---and done

When you have listened to many arguments and perhaps examined a few features of the different makes of projectors, you will probably find that you have made very little progress toward reaching a definite decision as to which particular one you should buy. So when you find yourself confused by many conflicting opinions just settle the question by writing down the names of ten, twenty or more of the best theatres in the country and buy the projector that is used in the majority of them. You can be sure that the projector selected by the most experienced and successful exhibitors is the best for your theatre. Incidentally, if we did not know it would be Simplex we would not have suggested this method of choosing.

Robert Morton Super-Unit Organ

in the New SAENGER New Orleans

Conceded by architectural critics to be one of the world's most palatial theatres, the New SAENGER theatre at New Orleans is an artistic triumph.

The progress of the great SAENGER organization has been nothing less than marvelous. Building constructively and permanently, they have shared in the general prosperity of the industry, without departing from the highest possible standard of buisness ethics.

The same resourceful showmanship and discerning judgment that created this wonderful organization, is responsible for the choice of the Robert Morton Super-Unit now installed in the world's most beautiful theatre, the— GREATER SAENGER New Orleans.

It takes super-pictures - like

Far off the beaten path, daring, talk-provoking

9 weeks at Rivoli, N. Y.
4th week at Roosevelt, Chicago
3rd week at Adams, Detroit
2nd week at Fenway, Boston

That's just the start!

Tremendous word of mouth advertising, reviews like these:

"With the formal opening of 'Chang' at the Rivoli the public is now given the opportunity of seeing one of the finest pictures ever made. I call it the most thrilling because it is real, natural, honest drama. To say that this is the screen classic of the melodrama of nature is to lay one's self open to proof. And this I am prepared to do."

—New York Evening World

"This is a movie which will delight children and adults alike. It is entertaining, instructive amusing and a true story, which certainly increases its human interest value. Its theme is gripping. Of pictorial beauty, there is plenty. 'Chang's' a marvel movie, nothing else describes it. Everybody should see it!"

—New York Daily News

"'Chang' undoubtedly belongs in the category of great pictures. Nothing in the cinema line to date can beat this film for novelty, sustained interest and exciting incident. Nothing can approach it for suprise. If you are an old picture fan and think you know what the movies can do, go see 'Chang.' Go anyway."

—Judge

"Instead of presenting this picture as a super special at fictitious prices the Paramount Famous Lasky Corp. has put it in at the Rivoli. And for less than a dollar it is on view to all comers. So in addition to being the most remarkable film on Broadway, it is the biggest bargain. Don't miss 'Chang' when it comes to your neighborhood theatre."

3 SHEARERS next season

Some Excerpts from one issue of "Variety"

Buffalo—Lon Chaney in "The Unknown"—Lafayette Theatre.
Business held up here, with Sunday and Monday top notch days. Almost half week's gross garnered first two days. Claims over $15,000.

New Orleans—Dane and Arthur in "Rookies"—Saenger Theatre.
Acclaimed comedy riot. Brought best business in months, $13,300.

Chicago—John Gilbert in "The Show"—Chicago Theatre.
Picture good enough for $45,000, considerable for time of season and surrounding conditions. The street's top notcher. About $5,000 better than usual for house.

Baltimore—Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu"—Valencia Theatre.
The picture continued to build at the Valencia. Best second week this upstairs house has had since "Flesh and the Devil." About $10,500.

Portland, Oregon—Ramon Novarro in "Lovers"—Broadway Theatre.
Business solid all week $12,000. Played to SRO in spite of hot weather with the picture "Lovers," a natural. Lines for blocks long with packed matinee mobs.

Seattle—Dane and Arthur in "Rookies"—Coliseum Theatre.
Crowds give vent to most continuous, sustained laughter due to natural situations. Raleigh says picture record laugh producer in his twelve years' show experience. Held over $10,200. Coliseum was a bright spot with the second week of "Rookies" has been doing consistently good business.

Los Angeles—Marion Davies in "Tillie The Toiler"—Loew's State.
That the heat meant nothing was easily demonstrated at Loew's State where "Tillie the Toiler," a Marion Davies product, backed with a ton of liberally dispensed space in the Hearst papers, ran over $7,000 ahead of the Metropolitan, even though the former house had no cooling system which the other house has. The Davies picture broke the house records for the first three days of its run and hit over $30,000 on the week.

JOHN GILBERT
TWELVE MILES OUT

IT'S positively the greatest . . . .
OH shucks, what's the use,
THIS could go on 'till dizzy.

Kansas City—"The Taxi-Dancer" —Main Street Theatre.
Cash customers like action and plenty in this flicker comedy. House is in summer stride. $12,500.

Portland, Ore.—"Frisco Sally Levy"—Broadway Theatre.
Fighting for seats from noon to night, standing in line and being turned away at the Broadway last week. The house came near breaking its record, doing more on the first three days of the picture "Frisco Sally Levy" than on the week of the theatre's opening which is going some. The Broadway stepped on it for this program, getting near all the 24-sheet stands in town, making numerous tie-ups, grabbing all the free space and doing other stunts. House was forced to run five complete performances Sunday instead of the regular four, for the first time. Over $400 was given back to patrons as refund. About $16,000.

25 MILLION SALESMEN NOW WITH M-G-M

The largest organization in the world

EVERYBODY who goes to movies
SELLS M-G-M Pictures.
THEY tell what they've seen and
THEY sell seats for you . . . .

Providence—Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter"—Victory Theatre. A decisive hit. Good at $8500.

San Francisco—Dane and Arthur in "Rookies"—Granada Theatre. Sure picked a good one. Ran over 23 grand.

"Rookies" in Philadelphia—Stanley Theatre.
The Stanley had "Rookies." This made three war pictures in the larger houses running simultaneously and "Rookies" looked the best. "Rookies" well liked. $28,000.

"Rookies" in Kansas City—Little Royal Theatre.
"Rookies" at the Royal got the newspaper breaks and just about all-the-word-of mouth advertising. Business gained during the week and looks good for a second week. Set for two weeks, with eight shows daily. Steady play means big business for the little show shop. When they stand in line and wait for seats in this town there is some attraction, and they sure stood for this one; $9,100.—VARIETY

"THE FORBIDDEN WOMAN"
By Elmer Harris
is an absorbing drama of tremendous power and passion—typical of the four super-dramas in which Jetta Goudal will star on the
DEMILLE PROGRAM, 1927-1928

WITH her black unfathomable eyes and her dangerously soft bewitchments, she came from her hot desert country to the luxurious heart of France to ensnare a man. Deliberately she threw the spell of her enchantment over her victim that she might bend him to her own cruel purpose.

Then suddenly Fate outwitted her. She who meant to be ruler was made victim. She was caught in the fire of her own flaming passion—with desperate consequences.

Because of the secret promise in those black eyes, brother was set against brother, diplomats trembled and one brave man came face to face with Death.

DANCE MAGIC

By Clarence Budington Kelland

Jahala the beautiful, Jahala the dancer without rival, Jahala who had driven her way relentlessly to the very summit of success.

Coldly self-contained, wrapped in her beauty and her genius as in an immaculate garment, she moved aloof through the mad, pleasure-seeking, excitement-craving life that surrounded her. Once or twice she fancied that she caught an echo of distant thunder—the almost-forgotten voice of the stern God of her puritanical fathers.

Then one night, the strident voice which made her dart blindly from the stage—and the unimaginable tragedy that drove her forth from a horrifying world of unrealities.

Fleeing from what? And fleeing to what? A beautiful story, this; a thrilling and a thought-provoking one, Dance Magic, by Clarence Budington Kelland, beginning in the November Journal, now on sale, ten cents.

Are Foreign Missionaries Saints Or Busy-Bodies?

By Charles A. Selden

Just what sort of people are these foreign missionaries—saints or busybodies; self-seeking intriguers or pioneers of a new era for down-trodden millions? To get the answer to this question—the real answer, not the mawer of the globe-trotting, fox-trotting tourists, or the commercial foreign resident intent on exploitation—Mr. Selden travelled thirty thousand miles and interviewed three hundred experts of almost every race and creed.

His illuminating findings are set forth in a series of articles, the first of which appears in the November issue of The Journal, now on sale, ten cents.

Sex And Nicotine

By S. Josephine Baker, M.D.

Tobacco—does it exact a heavier toll in health and happiness from women than it does from men? May the women of America acquire the centuries-old male habit without inflicting harm on future generations?

Is its cost in physical and mental development greater for youths than for adults—for girls than for boys? How much of a handicap is it for anyone of any age?

Everybody—mothers and daughters, fathers and sons—should read this authoritative, impartial article in the November issue of The Journal, now on sale, ten cents.

254 Pages Of Splendid Stories And Special Features In This Great Issue—Now On Sale

Eight Splendid Short Stories and Two Important Serials—all works of unusual power and interest. Special Articles—such as The Life Story of the Queen of England, told from a Palace fascinating revelations of Fashionable Parisian Life—all of them, all beautifully illustrated.

And what finer Christmas present for $1 can you imagine than a year's subscription to The Journal? Later on you will get two outstanding novels—"King John of the Mines," a fast-moving western story by McEvoy Bowers, himself a former cowboy ranger; and "The Luck of the Laird," an adventure story built around one of Albert Payson Terhune's collies. Booth Tarkington, Elsie Singmaster, and Frederic F. Van de Water bring you of their best. Harry Emerson Fosdick will have a series of articles on the Holy Land, illustrated most beautifully by Scenes. Wonderfully interesting special articles and biographies by such writers as Charles A. Motion Picture News

Motion Picture Follies

By William A. Johnston

A SWEEPING cut in salaries is on. The treasuries of the business are practically unanimous that the need for this action is immediate and unquestionable. The cut is in effect. New York overhead gets it first. Hollywood follows. And consistency demands that the pruning knife go then into the unnecessary overhead of distribution and producer owned theatres.

It isn't going to be popular with anyone. This is a business of jobs, of individual opportunism. The job thus far has been bigger than the welfare of the industry; all thought has been placed upon the salary instead of upon the permanency of the business that must continue to pay the salary. The slogan has been: "Are you getting yours?" And the scramble to this end has been a mighty, and a mighty blind one. Salaries have reached such heights that they are away beyond any pale of merit; they are not rewards for ability; they are business manoeuvres in themselves.

BANKERS look upon these matters with a banker's eye. Do these persons represent an investment in the business? What do they put into it? Or are they largely taking away from its income and resources?

And bankers ask these questions not because they are running the business. They are not running it and they don't want to. They are forced to ask these questions when they are asked to loan money.

There is the point of the whole matter. This industry has ceased to expand out of its own profits. We have to go to Wall Street to get the expansion money. And Wall Street, finding that the business pays an alarmingly small per cent on its capitalization, says: Cut your salaries and make it pay more; otherwise no more money for production and theatres.

That's simple enough.

Need we point out to anyone that there won't be any jobs at any figure if capital shuts its doors in the industry's face?

* * * * *

THE cut begins with production because production since the earlier days of the industry has been thickly blanketed with bunk—just plain bunk.

Because it is a creative activity it is supposed to be mysterious; and where mystery is said to exist you have fakirs, have had them since the world's earliest days.

There is no mystery about picture production. No man has the recipe of box-office success hidden away in his pocket. There is no such thing.

We have no geniuses. We have, and have had, a few—a mighty few—men who, by long training and especial adaptability, have been able to produce a good average of commercially successful pictures. Moreover, each of these men is the kind of man who would probably tell you that his success was quite largely due to lucky breaks.

Ideas are of the most importance in picture making. After that the making of a picture is a matter of applied technique. Nowhere at least is there any mystery—nor any place for wise smirking, bluffing, puttees, bowties—or outlandish salaries.

If, at least, and if ever, we debunk production then we will have taken the longest possible step forward toward better pictures and a secured and solidified picture business.

* * * * *

I AM not optimistic over the salary reduction plan. There's going to be warfare, for one thing.

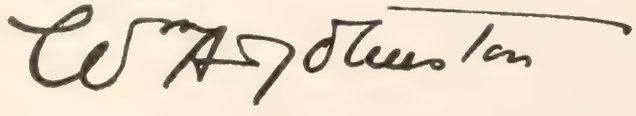
And another thing; names that draw at the box-office will continue to get all the money they deserve—just as I believe they deserve all they get.

These are not non-productive salaries; they cannot be classified as overhead. They are commodities which this business has to sell to the public. And their price is and will be a matter of stringent competition.

* * * * *

IN the meantime, however urgent this era of economy and however sternly we go about it, let us not go at it blindly.

Better pictures have got to be made and continue to be made; and they must be and can be better advertised.



The big issue at stake is the hold of motion pictures upon the public.

A billion and a half dollars worth of theatres are dependent upon product—upon pictures.

No matter how successfully we achieve economy, if pictures don't meet the public approval there will be a howl from these theatres and their tremendous investment that will make the present protest from Hollywood sound like a whisper.

* * * * *

AND there's the foreign market. If we lose our hold there the actual loss in income won't compensate for the direct cut in overhead. And in this connection it is only a blind man who will not believe that Europe is determined to give the The American producer the stiffest kind of competition.

The Week in Review

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER leaves this week for Hollywood to take up the important task of directing First National Studios and it is safe to say that the confidence and good will of the entire trade go with him. He is well and widely known for his sagacity, energy and enterprise; a striking example of the calibre of men this business must rely upon for its future and true progress.

It is gratifying—it must be to everyone—because it is a further striking indication of the fact that production is still a pretty wide open affair with no particular honors to any one studio. It was my distinct impression, while in Hollywood this spring, that most any studio might exceed any other studio in the quality of its program offering—this year, and next and next year. And, while a broad one, that is a most important observation.

TWO other Hollywood impressions also seem to have become facts. I saw while there, but a scene each in two pictures while they were being made. The pictures were "Seventh Heaven" and "The Way of All Flesh." But in the one picture I saw Janet Gaynor act, and in the other Emil Jannings, and then and there stated that exceptional pictures would result.

Jannings also told me that he was delighted with his surroundings and that with such studio resources he felt he could exceed his former efforts. This he has done. "The Way of All Flesh" is a splendid picture, a most remarkable piece of work throughout, a great credit to the American studio. It will delight all kinds of people, but especially and all of those who are pleased to look askance at the dramatic possibilities of motion pictures.

* * * *

THE newspapers of the country, particularly the cartoonists and columnists, seem to take the film salary cut not overseriously, not as they might, for instance, regard a wage reduction in the steel business.

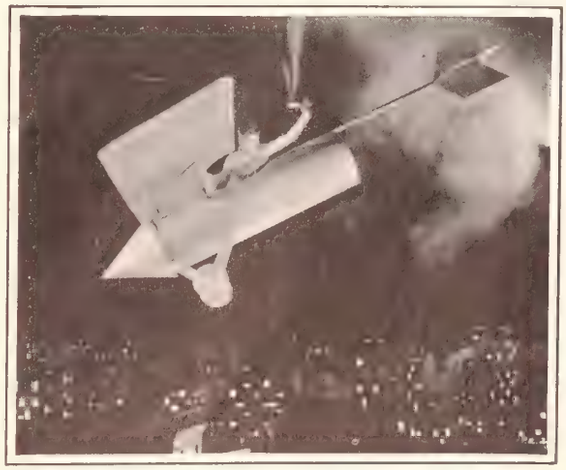
PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Dolores Costello and Director Alan Crosland come to work early to personally attend to the Fourth of July flag raising over the Warner Bros.' studio.



Frankie Darro, F B O's newly signed child star, is all set for a mild and quiet Fourth of July celebration. If we are to believe this.

Joan Crawford, playing in M-G-M's "12 Miles Out," looks more like Fourth of July photographic catastrophe.

A Week Passes

ONE feature and two short subjects received the approval of the National Board of Review this week—"The Way of All Flesh" and Pathe Review No. 28 and No. 29. . . . Big Boy, our prime favorite among screen actors, is seriously ill with double pneumonia, according to reports as we go to press. Best wishes for a speedy recovery, old timer! . . . Ed Klein, prominent in the export field, has been having a tough break. Just after recovering from influenza he had an attack of toxic poisoning, but is now on the mend. . . . Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque proved that their engagement was no publicity stunt by marching to the altar the other day. They are leaving Hollywood behind for six weeks, to honeymoon at Banff and Lake Louise. . . . Ralph Ince, F B O director, suffered a severe ankle sprain and torn ligaments in his leg, playing tennis at his home the other day. This means he can only direct "South Sea Love," and will have to abandon the role he planned to play. Meanwhile Bob Steele is in the hospital with two cracked ribs and a pair of cracked vertebrae, received in a fight in his last picture. . . . Nellie Parker Spaulding, character actress, who has been in Los Angeles for the past few years, dropped into the office the other day, on her way to Machias, Maine, to spend the summer with her mother, who will return to the Coast with her. . . . Marion Davies has left New York to return West to start work on "The Fair Co-Ed." . . . The arrival in New York of Jack Ford, Fox Film director, brings together again the famous triumvirate of Ford, George O'Brien and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Aviation is certainly all the rage these days. Here is Barbara Kent, featured in Universal's "War Eagles," photographed in her skyrocket plane of brand new type, as a Fourth of July attraction.

Big Boy, star of the Big Boy Educational Juvenile comedies, believes in Bigger and Better Firecrackers for the Fourth of July.

Members of Staff in "Spring Fever"

WILLIAM HAINES has a supporting cast that won't appear in the list of screen credits in his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Spring Fever." It includes director, assistant director, script clerk—in fact, everybody on the staff except Ira Morgan, the camera man.

In the new picture, a comedy of the golf links which Edward Sedgwick is directing, practically everybody turned actor in the exterior scenes played at the Flintridge Country Club. Vic Orsati, script clerk, and Eddie Brophy, assistant director, played on the field in the background in several of the scenes, and Hugh Cummings, comedy constructor, donned a tuxedo to play a comedy character in the scenes inside the clubhouse.

Sedgwick himself played a role, doing a comedy bit as one of the frolicking country club members, while assistant cameramen, "grips" and even the "Still camera" man enacted persons in the "Gallery" that followed Haines about the golf links.

Surgeon Coaches Schildkraut

RUPERT JULIAN has been supplanted as director of "The Country Doctor" at the De Mille studio.

But only for a few hours, and upon his own suggestion.

One of the scenes called for a major operation to be performed with Rudolph Schildkraut as the surgeon and Frank Marion as the patient. Julian, like Cecil B. De Mille, is insistent upon realism and so a real surgeon, Dr. Cecil Rhodes, of Culver City, was called in to show Schildkraut the proper technique employed by doctors in a spinal operation.

Alan Crosland Here

ALAN CROSLAND, Warner Bros. director, has arrived in New York for location work on "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson. Two members of the cast who have important roles—Warner Oland and Otto Lederer—are also in the east for the filming of these special sequences.

Most of Mr. Crosland's work will be done in the Ghetto, which will furnish the exact locale described in Samson Raphaelson's play dealing with the story of a Jewish boy, son of a Cantor, who deserts the traditions of his family to become a singer of jazz songs.

Another group of scenes will be shot at Shubert's Winter Garden at Broadway and Forty-ninth Street. Director Crosland will consume ten days to utilize these two New York locations and then will return to Hollywood to make interiors and other special Vitaphone sequences.

In Memento

BETH O'SHEA, who handles studio publicity at the Fox offices, received a gift last week which she treasures highly.

Felix Reisenberg, the author of "East Side, West Side," which Allan Dwan is now making at the Fox New York studios, has presented her with an autographed copy of his book.

Zukor Portrait Shown

A PORTRAIT painting of Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, recently finished by Guissepe Trotta at the Victore Salvatore studio in MacDougall Alley, was placed on exhibition at the Howard Young Galleries on Fifth Avenue, for eight days, starting last Monday. Later, it will be presented to Mr. Zukor by the Paramount Pep Club, composed of employes of Paramount, who commissioned the artist to paint the portrait.

The portrait was exhibited in an unfinished state at the Paramount international convention last month. It shows the film executive in one of his characteristic poses, and is almost life-size. Special ceremonies are being planned for the presentation.

Texas Visitors

DAVID R. HOCHREICH, President of Vocafilm Corporation of America, had the pleasure of entertaining two distinguished visitors from Texas early this week.

Sully. B. Roberdeau, of the Austin National Bank, and Bolden Rector, city attorney, of Austin, Texas, called at the Vocafilm offices. These gentlemen are both prominent in the Lone Star city and had expected to have with them Governor Dan Moody. The Governor was delayed because the legislature had not as yet adjourned, but will be in New York next week, and will also be a guest at the Vocafilm offices.

Father & Daughter in F B O Film

FATHER and daughter will appear together for the first time before the camera when filming is begun on "The Bandit's Son," the second of a series of westerns starring Bob Steele at the F B O studios. Lillian Gilmore has been cast to play the leading feminine role in "The Bandit's Son." For the first time, her father, Barney Gilmore, will appear in the same picture with her. He will play the part of a small town banker.

Oldfield Driving to Premiere

BARNEY OLDFIELD, veteran auto racer who has a leading role in Warmen Bros.', "The First Auto," arrived in New York from the coast this week, after driving across continent with his wife and daughter in the Hudson car with which he recently broke the speed record on the Culver City track. He is coming to New York to be present at the world premiere of "The First Auto," scheduled to take place on June 27 at the Colony Theatre.

Moths and Movies

PROPAGATION of giant moths by artificial means was accomplished for the first time by Mrs. Stella Edwards Kummings, of Marion, Ind., a collector and grower for the past 9 years, and reputed to possess the largest assortment of rare specimens in the middle west.

The remarkable feat was accomplished at the instance of the Leo Meehan company, now at work at the Gene Stratton-Porter estate in Rome City, Ind., exterior scenes for the screen version of the Porter novel, "The Harvester," for F B O.

Ann Rork, daughter of the famous producer, Sam E. Rork, who releases through First National, drops in to see Ben Lyon at work while visiting New York in company with her noted father. Miss Rork is a screen star in her own right

Tom Mix, Star Maker

TOM MIX can truthfully be called a connoisseur on the talents of leading women. Tom always chooses some young woman for his pictures who is striving for fame, and he seldom goes wrong on their histrionic ability.

Just a few of his leading women who have reached the heights are: Laura La Plante, Gertrude Olmstead, Colleen Moore, Pauline Starke, Patsy Ruth Miller, Lillian Rich, Esther Ralston, Marion Nixon, Billie Dove, Clara Bow, Olive Borden, Dorothy Sebastian, Helen Costello and others. Dorothy Dwan plays opposite Mix in "The Scourge of the Little 'C'."

On Sales Tour

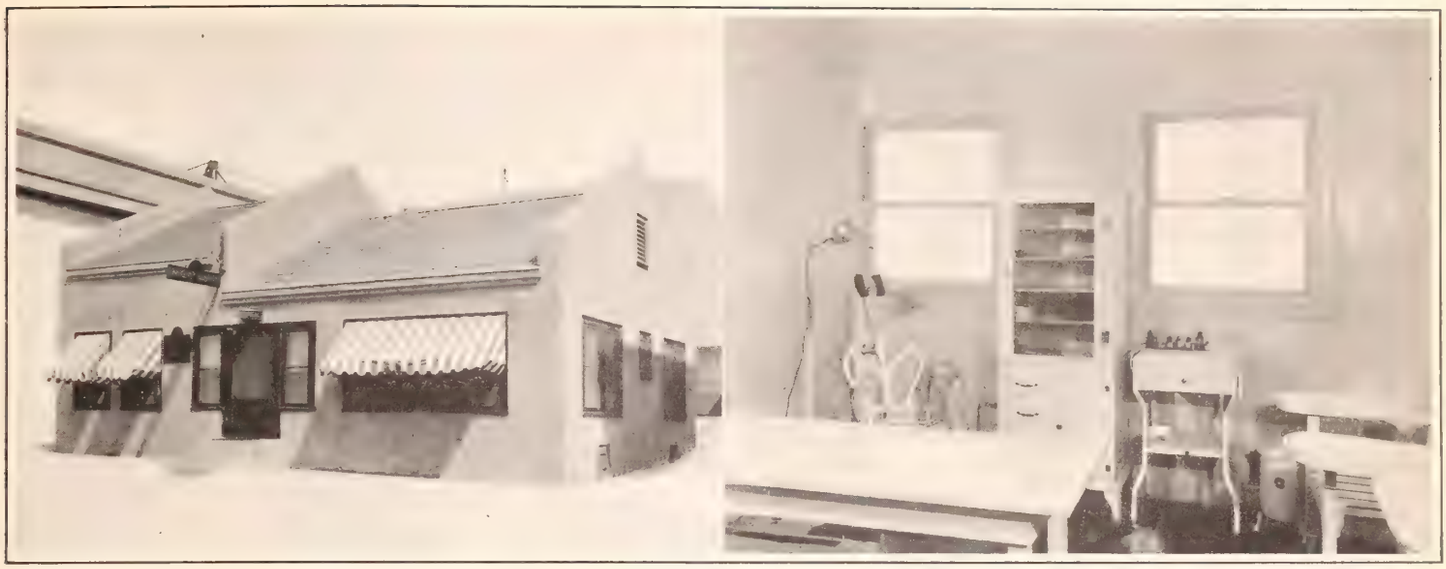
Manfred Lee Well Again

MANFRED LEE, publicity and advertising representative of Henry Ginsberg at Sterling Pictures, is back at his desk again after an intensive two-weeks' bout with "the mumps." There seems to be plenty of microbes these days!



No Gag Man Need Apply

NO gag man was needed on the set during the making of Mack Sennett's forthcoming Pathe comedy "For Sale, a Bungalow." The story was so familiar to everyone in the entire studio that the air was thick with gags and suggestions offered gratis.

Real estate salesmanship as it is practiced in California is the theme of "For Sale, a Bungalow." Since every living human in the city of Los Angeles has at one time or another been a victim of this, the whole studio force contributed bits of personal experience that helped to make the comedy real and amusing.

Atlantic Flyers in Berlin

CHAMBERLIN and Levine, according to Kine Weekly, recently paid a visit to the Ufa studios near Berlin and watched three productions being filmed. They also saw the news pictures taken of their arrival and that evening were guests at the Ufa Palast, where the pictures were shown.

Safety Always

ONE of the important factors today in the production of motion pictures, and one about which little is written, is the protection of the lives and health of those making the pictures.

Paramount has develped this humanitarian phase of the business until today it has reached perfection. At its mammoth West Coast studio is one of the most modern hospitals extant.

Dr. Emanuel Stern, New York surgeon and medical authority, who is medical director of Paramount, is in charge of the hospitals, medical and surgical staffs and corps of nurses and sanitation experts maintained by the company. As head of the medical department, he oversees the activities of his aides throughout the world.

In telling of the Hollywood branch of his department, Dr. Stern said:

"In the spacious studios and on location miles from the nearest settlement, the humanitarian policy is exercised in the protection of our employes.

"The same attention given the star is afforded the day laborer. No expense is spared in carrying out the company's humanitarian policy.

"At the West Coast studio, Dr. H. J. Strathearn is in charge of our work. During working hours he is on duty at the studio hospital to treat emergency cases, give medical attention to those who are ill and advise employes as to steps to be taken should there be illness in their homes.

"The medical department cooperates with family doctors of employes, and endeavors to reduce costs entailed in illness in the homes. When recommendations are made the concern aids employes in financial straits through deferred payments.

"The hospital is situated at the center of the studio grounds. It contains operating, treatment, rest and waiting rooms for men and women, an office and doctor's room. The equipment of the operating room is unexcelled. In the treatment room two ultra-modern therapeutic lamps are installed. A nurse is always on duty. Ambulance service is provided at all times.

"In the event a major operation should be imperative, or for other cause a patient should require treatment followed by a long stay in a hospital, the Hollywood Hospital, one of the most modern institutions of its kind in the United States, is utilized by Paramount. All first aid cases are taken to the studio hospital.

"The medical department exerts every effort in protecting employes from accident and disease. Daily inspections are made of the studio grounds by attaches of the medical department.

"During a recent epidemic in Los Angeles 1600 persons were vaccinated by Dr. Strathearn and his aides in cooperating with the Los Angeles Health department.

"A safety first committee comprising the heads of several departments of the studio meets frequently and makes recommendations for safety appliances. An inspector examines the studio grounds and structures daily checking over fire prevention measures and various safety appliances.

"First aid outfits are kept on the stages by all property men, and when a company leaves for location a fully-supplied kit is carried by the property custodian, augmenting the regular hospital equipment in the event a picture is made on a large scale, requiring hundreds or several thousand players."

Well Qualified Director

BORN on an Oklahoma Indian reservation, raised on a Texas ranch, and for eight years assistant to Edwin Carewe, Wallace Fox claims environment and training which should particularly fit him to fulfil the role for which he has just been signed by F B O, that of directing Bob Steele in the second picture of his new western series, to be titled "The Bandit's Son."

It was on the Chickesaw Indian reservation, Oklahoma, that Fox first saw the light of day, and he proudly points to the fact that he has real American blood in his veins, being one-eighth Chickesaw Indian. His early years were spent on a ranch near Corpus Christi, Texas, where, if anywhere, he was in a position to pick up the real spirit of the West.

Borzage Vacationing

FRANK BORZAGE, who recently purchased the yacht "Apache" as a birthday gift for his wife, plans to spend his vacation cruising along the coast of Southern California.

The "Apache," a fifty-foot power yacht, will be renamed the "Rena B," in honor of its new owner. The Borzages will be accompanied by Lew Borzages, who assisted his brother in the direction of "Seventh Heaven."

When Is a King Not a King?

THERE'S to story about the Kings. Edwin King, vice-president of F B O studios in Hollywood, has signed Lewis King, brother of Henry King, well known motion picture director, to direct Buzz Barton, F B O's new juvenile western star, in the first of a series of westerns titled "Saddles and Spurs."

Edwin King, however, is no relation to the King Brothers.

If stills are any criterion, Fox Films will have something interesting in its version of "Carmen," the 'perfect opera.' Victor McLaglen and Dolores del Rio are prominent in the cast, as Escamillo and Carmen, and they are seen above in some of the high spots of the story

Ingram's Tower of Babel

EIGHTEEN nationalities, which is believed to be a world's record, are represented in Rex Ingram's production of "The Garden of Allah," now being filmed in Africa for Metro-Goldwyn.

With the exception of Alice Terry, none are Americans, and even Miss Terry isn't an American citizen in the legal sense now, as her husband comes from the Irish Free State. She was born, however, in the Middle West "on the banks of the Wabash far away" as the old song had it, and that makes her American.

Miss Terry's birth place was Vincennes, Indiana, a small town south of Terre Haute. She is, therefore, a Hoosier like George Ade, Booth Tarkington, Whitcomb Riley, Charles Austin Beard, and Thomas Marshall.

If she were eliminated as an American and bracketed with her Irish husband, the place would be filled by Harry Lachman, general production manager, who though a resident of France for twelve years, still claims La Salle, Illinois, as his old home town. He acted in several scenes of the piece.

Rex Ingram for all his years in America is an Irishman still. He was born in Dublin. He went to America at seventeen, later entering Yale. Except for two years in the Flying Corps, he stayed in America until 1925. Since then he has lived in Southern France for his health.

Ivan Petrovich is a native of Novi Sad, Serbia, though he has lived in Prague, Bucharest and Paris for several years.

Mme. Paquerette, who plays the role of Suzanne, was born in Paris. So was Marcel Vibert, who is Count Anteoni.

Cin Leon, the sand-diviner, was born on the German frontier near the small principality of Luxembourg.

Gerald Fielding, playing Batouch, his first role, was born in Darjeeling, India.

Fred Bacas, treasurer of the company, who also acts and helps direct the Arabs in the sandstorm scenes, is a native of Syria.

Rabah, the stomach dancer, is a Bedouin Arab from Algeria.

Armand Dutertre, playing Father Roubier, was born in Lublin, Poland, 73 years ago.

Ben (Shorty) Macrech is a native of Tunisia.

Humberstone Wright, who plays the part of Lord Rens, is a Scotchman.

Maria Olendo, playing the Algerian washing girl in the monastery scenes, is Portuguese.

Choualek, the bottle dancer, was born in Egypt.

Fred Mariotti, the Arab chief in the picture, comes from Naples, Italy.

John George, the dwarf, was born in Assyria.

Pierre Linevitch, a Petrovich double, is Russian.

Lina Sagrario, an Alice Terry double, is Swedish.

Michael Powell, the funny tourist, is a native of England.

This list does not take into consideration the mechanical and office staffs which contain Dutch, Austrians, Spanish, Finnish, Lithuanian, and almost every nation, in fact—including the Scandinavian.

A Jovial Scotchman

SOME interviews are an unalloyed pleasure; others are but why speak of them at all? A chat the other afternoon with George K. Arthur unqualifiedly came under the "unalloyed pleasure" heading. He was back in New York for the first time in four years, and left here at that time with only a few dollars in his pocket and a world of ability. Happily, after a few lean years, that ability found recognition, so that now, teamed up with Karl Dane, he is "sitting pretty." His training in musical comedy was sound, and success has left him unspoiled and refreshing. More power to him!

Stan's Haircut

WHEN Stan Laurel, Hal Roach featured comedian in Pathe comedies, sails for London the latter part of this month, to visit his father for the first time in eighteen years, he will be forced, by the cruel vagaries of fate, to appear in the parental home with his head shaved. Such is the life of a screen player.

Laurel and Oliver Hardy, well known for their comedy team work, are to appear as convicts in their next production at the Hal Roach Studios, starting immediately. Their locks will be shorn within a day or two. Then, immediately after the completion of this comedy, Laurel will sail, hair or no hair.

Leaving for Europe

MISS ELIZABETH LONERGAN, who represents Kine Weekly and Picturegoer, British trade and fan publications, in New York, sails on July 2 for an extended tour through Europe observing conditions at first hand. She is sailing on the Homeric, and plans to remain for ten weeks.

Lubitsch Reception

OUR BERLIN correspondent, H. Fraenkel, reports an enthusiastic reception tendered to Ernst Lubitsch on his return home after five years' absence.

Many folks went to Hamburg to meet the famous director on board ship, and Berlin has been "talking Lubitsch" all the week. "Dubarry" and "Lady Windermere" have been reissued in their director's honor, and the audience gave him a tremendous ovation. Lubitsch stated that he has given up his plan to go to Marienbad and that he is going to spend most of his six weeks' German stay in Berlin in order to see all his numerous friends and acquaintances.

Colleen Moore, First National star, carries out the Spirit of Independence on her skyrocket steed, which she appears to have well trained.

Naturally, you couldn't keep the irrepressible members of the Pathe "Our Gang" comedy from celebrating the Fourth in noisy and appropriate fashion.

Week in Review

It would be pretty difficult, in fact, for anyone who had been to Hollywood and observed this phenomenon of the world to take seriously such a matter.

One cartoonist has a sketch of a picture star leaving a palatial home in a Rolls-Royce, accompanied by four footmen and directing the liveried chauffeur to drive away to another palace labelled "The Hollywood Alms." Another frantic person follows the car, yelling: "don't forget the Marquis."

Karl Kitchen, who keeps himself picture wise, has this to say in the New York Evening World:

"Speaking of Hollywood and the reported cut in salaries: What if some of the stars refuse to accept the 10 and even 25 per cent. slash? Contracts cannot be scrapped except by mutual consent. And while it may be a hardship for some of the screen screams to worry along on $7,500 instead of $10,000 a week, the players the public really wants to see will still receive salaries as large as the most inflated stipends on the books to-day. The salaries that will be cut will be those of the "also rans" and relatives, who clutter up the payrolls of the big companies and are responsible for the fictitious costs of picture making."

* * * * *

ANOTHER significant current event is the booking of F B O's "Moon of Israel" into the Roxy theatre. It will be recalled that Roxy promised before opening that he would "give a break" to foreign pictures and to those not made by the old line companies. He is making that promise good, which augurs well. The showing which Roxy can give a picture at this house can well go far toward putting it over.

Publix Neighborhood Program in New York Dropped, is Understanding

ACCORDING to reports current this week, and apparently well authenticated, the building program by Publix in neighborhood districts in New York City is being dropped as the result of an agreement with Loew's, Inc. It is understood that the deal involves the booking of Paramount pictures and Publix acts in certain of the Loew houses, many of which practically dominate important districts.

Salary Cut in Doubt as Opposition Grows

Consideration of Individual Cases Instead of Sweeping Reduction is Proposed at Academy Mass Meeting

THE recently announced salary cut throughout the entire production personnel of the industry of from 10 to 25 per cent has resulted in a complicated situation. Some stars and directors have agreed to accept the reduction, a number have flatly refused, and still others are "on the fence," awaiting the verdict of the majority.

At a mass meeting before the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences on Wednesday night in Hollywood, the favored proposal was that the action be deferred until August 1, to permit of consideration of individual cases, rather than a sweeping reduction taking in all persons, regardless of their value in relation to their salary.

The reduction is generally construed as a move to make possible needed production financing by impressing the banks with the industry's intentions to place pictures on a sounder economic basis. A leading financial ticker service this week said:

"Cut of 10 per cent in salaries by Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation, followed by other companies, has called the attention of Wall Street to a problem that the film industry has been contending with for some time—the unduly high cost of film production and overhead. The present action can be compared with the action taken three years ago in 1924 in shutting down the Hollywood studios for a short time in order to bring home to stars and directors the need for economy. . . . After having carefully built up its cash and working capital to a strong position, Paramount during its period of expansion has again allowed indebtedness to the banks to accumulate. With its summer production season, which requires the heaviest drain on funds at its height, this position is not a favorable one. Considerable money will also be required to meet demands of various construction enterprises under way."

Kingorams Obtains Byrd Flight Film Rights

IMMEDIATELY after Commander Richard E. Byrd and his three companions hopped off for Europe in the America, Kingorams, Educational's newsreel, announced that it has an exclusive contract for pictures of the flight to Paris and return. These will be the first pictures actually taken during an Atlantic flight.

If Byrd carries out his intention to fly back to this country in the America within a short time, he will bring with him the films made and also the camera record of his landing in Paris by the six Kingorams cameramen stationed there, which will be the first motion pictures ever to be carried across the Atlantic by airplane. Noville is experienced in this work, having made the pictures of the earlier stages of Commander Byrd's polar flight.

The take-off was covered for Kingorams by six men on the ground and one in the air, in addition to Noville.

Special pictures of Maitland and Hegenberger in a take-off were held in readiness in the New York office of Kinograms, and these were released simultaneously with the start of the Pacific hop, so that both trans-oceanic hops were represented in Kinograms on the same day.

$3,000,000 Site Bought for Studio City

What is announced as a $20,000,000 films production colony is to be located in the San Fernando Valley, the first move being the recent purchase of a 503 acre tract at Ventura boulevard and Laurel Canyon, at a price said to be around $3,000,000, by the Central Motion Picture District, Inc.

The first studios to definitely locate on this site are the Mack Sennett studios, which will start construction immediately. Other companies will be announced shortly, it is said.

Blackstone Decision is Affirmed in Indiana

After five years of litigation, the appeal of the Blackstone Theatre Corporation, South Bend, Ind., the verdict awarding $5,000 to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been affirmed by the Supreme Court, which has denied the defendant's application to transfer the case to that court.

Suit was started in 1922 when the exhibitor, after playing one picture under a Goldwyn fifth year franchise contract, disposed of the theatre without making, it was claimed, any provision for taking care of the remaining pictures. The case was tried by jury October 30, 1923, and a verdict for Goldwyn of $5,000 rendered. The defendant appealed and the judgment was affirmed. Appeal to the Supreme Court followed.

Burt New is Appointed Connolly Successor

Burt New, for the past year a member of the legal staff of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has been appointed Washington representative of that organization, succeeding Jack Connolly, who has resigned to join Fox Movietone. Mr. Connelly has represented the motion picture industry in Washington for twelve years.

Mr. New was born in North Vernon, Indiana, the son of Judge Jeptha E. New, an eminent lawyer.

Lichtman Off for Coast to Confer on Program

Al Lichtman, United Artists' vice-president and general manager of distribution for United States and Canada, left New York Wednesday, June 29th, for Los Angeles, there to join Joseph M. Schenck, president and chairman of the board of directors of United Artists Corporation.

D. Rossheim Managing Head British 1st Nat'l

DAVID ROSSHEIM has been appointed by E. Bruce Johnson, manager of the First National foreign department, to succeed J. Frank Brockliss as managing director of the British First National organization. Mr. Brockliss recently resigned in order to center his activities upon other interests which were gradually commanding more and more of his attention.

Mr. Rossheim has been identified with First National for the past four years. During the twenty years he has spent in the United Kingdom, Mr. Rossheim has been engaged in the import and export business and is well qualified for his new post.

Vitaphone Activity in Hollywood

Two Stages Operating; Elaborate Plans for "Jazz Singer"; Filming and Recording Method Detailed

By Edwin Schallert

THE first Vitaphone films have been made in Hollywood. They are short subjects—a preliminary to the first big test of this sound-recording innovation with the production of "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson.

One can survey the results of the experiments and the benefits accruing from the establishing of a Vitaphone studio in the picture-producing center—benefits that will undoubtedly prove very important for this innovation combining sound with motion pictures.

Warner Brothers already have two stages in operation, and two more under way on their property on Sunset Boulevard. The stages are sound-proof construction. They are of moderate size. They possess many advantages over the equipment of the Manhattan Opera House in New York, where all Vitaphonized pictures have been made heretofore.

Warner Brothers are to try a new line of experiments, particularly for "The Jazz Singer." They are planning to use dialogue in certain scenes of this production—dialogue with musical accompaniment. Al Jolson will sing jazz songs, and in the culminating episode the famous "Kol Nidrei."

The effectiveness of this culminating episode hinges, of course, upon the celebrated Jewish chant. Jolson as a stage star in the plot, renews the call of blood, and takes the place of his dying father, a cantor, in the synagogue. There was a deep appeal to this denouement on the stage. It is hoped to preserve this on the screen through the Vitaphone.

I watched two of the Vitaphone prologues in the making. One was called "A Night at Coffee Dan's," an impression of an evening of entertainment in a famous San Francisco resort. The other was a Spanish-California atmospheric act, designed to be used with the picture "Old San Francisco."

There are very definite purposes behind the production of these Vitaphone acts. First of all they are to serve as a new form of embellishment on picture programs, wherever it is possible to use them, and this means wherever Vitaphone is installed in a theatre. Second, they are planned to develop the Vitaphone technique, especially along photographic lines, which so far have been somewhat deficient—to make Vitaphone productions truly productions in a pictorial sense. Thirdly, it is felt that they may lead to the discovery of much new talent, particularly among those who have had camera experience. All this is preparatory to the production of Vitaphone features like "The Jazz Singer."

Warner Brothers now have a projection room that is equipped with Vitaphone. Records are played here frequently even during the running of the daily rushes. It serves to relieve the monotony, and gives to a degree, at least, the feeling of a theatre presentation.

In this projection room I saw one day a test Vitaphone film that had been made with Buster Collier. He did a song number, and evidenced a surprisingly good voice. What interested me more, however, was his demeanor before the camera. He had an ease of manner that was missing in the case of the majority of Vitaphone performers that I had seen previously. He was camera wise. The result was salutary. It took away the stiffness that is characteristic of many Vitaphone performances, and if anything the voice as it came through the loudspeaker possessed a new reality. I think this was because the action coordinated more satisfactorily.

For the novelty of it, I took part in a Vitaphone scene as atmosphere one day, and can look back on this as a very unique experience. Relating it may be of interest to the readers of Motion Picture News, because so little has been told as yet of Vitaphone film-making.

The stage on which the company worked was, as I have indicated, somewhat smaller than those to which one usually is accustomed nowadays in Hollywood. The walls were covered with sound-proof felt-like paper. Otherwise the general construction was not unusual.

Various other differences were, however, to be noted in the equipment. One of these differences was a glass-enclosed compartment, with a sort of bay-window effect, projecting from one of the sidewalls at some height from the floor. Still another was a moveable sound proof booth enclosing the camera.

The compartment projecting from the wall, I learned upon inquiry contained the recording apparatus, and was called the "mixer." The name originates from the fact that oftentimes the waves of sound are received from two different sources, namely two different microphones, and that the volume from each of these has to be separately regulated—thus "mixed" or blended. It could, of course, be received from even more than two microphones, but that is the number now ordinarily used.

In the scene in which I took part the orchestra was not photographed but played behind a curtain, and the music which they rendered was recorded in a different microphone from that which caught the voices of the singers in a cabaret scene on which the camera was focused. The orchestra had to be toned down perhaps a trifle to combine correctly with the singing. It would have crowded the picture to have photographed them in the scene, and it is doubtful if they would have added anything to its pictorial interest. Hence the reason for having them play off scene.

Lighting arrangements differ materially on the Vitaphone set from those on the ordinary set. At times, incandescents are used exclusively—very bright ones—this being an innovation. In some experiments these incandescents have been supplemented by mercury bank lights, but lamps that have to be trimmed noisily cannot be used. Even the bank lights that are adjacent to the microphone have to be shut off occasionally because of their humming, so sensitive is the recording apparatus to every slight noise.

Vitaphone recording has to be done continuously. A performance has to last at least six minutes. It is preferable perhaps for it to run six minutes or multiples of six, like twelve or eighteen, but it can run somewhat less or more than these multiples.

The act must be routined thoroughly so that there are no halts in its progress. The film is made in special lengths even up to 1000 feet, and consequently the camera magazines are about twice the normal size.

A scene that runs as much as 150 feet in the ordinary process of film-making is, of course, a rarity. This means a little over two minutes. The Vitaphone scene in which I worked lasted nine.

Everything has to be silent on the set as the recording starts. The effect is uncannily like that at a prayer-meeting or spiritualistic seance. There are no directions issued except possibly by hand motion once a scene is started. There is a moment of silence after it is finished. This is so no noise extraneous to the performance will intrude. Even a whisper is recorded.

Vitaphone is a very sensitive contrivance but not so difficult to regulate as it might seem. The recording and photographing moved smoothly while I was on the set, and I spent nearly a day there on one occasion. There was only one halt in the action when the film broke, and the act then had to be carried through from the beginning.

There is one decided advantage over the motion picture in sound recording. The record can be played back immediately. Two impressions are made for this purpose in wax. One of these is preserved for the matrix from which the final hard record is moulded. The other record is played, and, of course, is destroyed in the process. This enables some estimate to be made of the performance without delay, whereas the film requires a day at least for developing and printing.

The Vitaphone prologue for "Old San Francisco" showed the possibilities pictorially that may be arrived at with a stage properly equipped as regards photography. Even though short, I imagine it will prove quite effective. The setting was a plaza in front of an old Mission, the company being garbed in romantic and picturesque costumes suggesting early Spanish California.

There was chorus singing off stage by a choir. This was followed by a vocal solo by Sam Ash, formerly with "Rose-Marie" company, and a dance by Lina Basquette, former child star at Universal, and now the wife of S. L. Warner, who is in charge of the Vitaphone productions. The act closed with excerpts from "Carmen" and a march of the soldiers in brilliant Spanish uniforms, and playing trumpets and other brass instruments, while those taking part in the fiesta joined the procession.

Eddie Peabody, who has been a favorite at the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles, famous for his banjo-playing, has also made a record, and there is another called the Pullman Porter act. These were all turned out in the course of a few weeks, directed by Bryan Foy the son of Eddie Foy, and it is apparent that there will be no handicaps interfering with ample production.

The future of Vitaphone, with the new scope of activities, offers much food for interesting speculation. I noted among film salesmen who visited recent conventions on the Coast that there was much interest in and conversation about the experiments in the brief reproduction of sound with pictures. This took in Movietone as well as Vitaphone, and the belief was expressed by many visiting delegates that all the larger companies would eventually become interested in one or the other of these devices.

During conversation with Sam Warner, he mentioned that the number of installations totaled 135—this being several weeks ago—and that Vitaphone was being installed in theatres at a very rapid rate now.

For the most part this equipment will be used in the smaller theatres later, which are regarded as a most promising field for Vitaphone and other sound-producing inventions. It seems pretty well conceded that these devices eventually will become a necessary adjunct of every theatre's equipment—not for continuous use, but as the occasion and opportunity arise.

It goes without saying that Jolson's association with Vitaphone will greatly stimulate its future. "The Jazz Singer" will also test, if only perhaps in a rudimentary way the idea of talking pictures. There will be no attempt as yet to treat a motion picture as a spoken drama; what dialogue there is in "The Jazz Singer" will probably be purely incidental, and as previously stated will be accompanied by music. This is a deft innovation. The scenes in which it will be used will probably be those between Jolson and his father. It will indeed be an accomplishment to have a permanent record of the voice and personality of one of the stage's great comedians. For this reason, it may be taken for granted that "The Jazz Singer" will be a very elaborate production.

There would seem to be a great chance with Vitaphone to bring to the screen grand opera, comic opera and musical shows. This is the eventual goal sought in the enterprise. Probably this sort of entertainment will be produced at first in tabloid form. Later on full-length productions will be made. However, this is well in the future.

Like the films the Vitaphone has an advantages over the stage. It can present a singer when he is in the best of voice, and can retake any other type of performance until the necessary perfection has been attained. It is not subject to casual influences, and changing conditions as is the performance in the flesh, any more than the motion picture itself is. This means much for its future.

Warner Brothers are staking much on the present Vitaphone experiments. They are investing $300,000 to $400,000 in equipment at their Coast studio, stages, laboratories, etc. They are into the game with a vengeance, and have already made very striking headway in a field in which they primarily are pioneering.

Pearson, Storey Back From Pacific Coast

ELMER PEARSON, vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and J. E. Storey, assistant general manager in charge of short subject production, arrived in New York aboard the Twentieth Century on Wednesday, June 22nd, where Messrs. Pearson and Storey have been attending the various conventions of the Pathe and DeMille interests and remained on the Coast after the convention for a week or more surveying Coast studio activities and arranging details of the forthcoming season's program.

Report Shows Industry's Income

Amusement Corporations File With Bureau of Internal Revenue Capital Stock Returns for 1925

CAPITAL stock returns for the year 1925 were filed with the Government by 314 motion picture producers and 5,376 amusement corporations, statistics of income just made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue show.

The returns of the producers showed assets of $7,303,966 in cash, $19,648,462 in accounts receivable, $3,022,026 in notes receivable and $42,945,210 in inventory; fixed property, investments, etc., totaled $25,860,055. The reports of the amusement companies showed surpluses of $403,037 and deficits of $866,558, the aggregate value of the capital stock being put at $3,167,242 and the fair taxable value at $1,879,350.

"U's" Serial Production Schedule Well Advance

THREE of Universal's five chapter-pictures for next season have already been completed and the two others are now entering production. It is expected that the entire line-up of serials will have been completed by fall.

The two serials just completed are "The Trail of the Tigers" starring Jack Daugherty in a story by Courtney Ryley Cooper, and "The Scarlet Arrow," starring Francis X. Bushman, Jr., in a northwest mounted police story by Howard Clark. "Blake of Scotland Yard," the first Universal serial on the current production schedule, was completed more than a month ago.

The two serials now going into production are "Haunted Island" another chapter starring Jack Daugherty and "The Vanishing Rider," in which William Desmond will be starred.

South African Company Plans New Theatres

The Cinemas South Africa Film Corp., Ltd., recently established in opposition to the African Theatre, Ltd., and its affiliated company, African Films, Ltd., which are reported in South Africa to virtually control film business, is reported to be planning new theatres.

In Johannesburg the company has been showing films in the Town Hall, and will continue to do so for the present, although a first-rate motion picture theatre is to be erected when a suitable site has been purchased.

Halls have been secured in several towns on long leases, the most notable being King's Hall, Durban, seating 1,100, which is being entirely altered and rechristened as "King's Kinema." The Trades Hall, Benoni, seating 1,000, has been secured on six years' lease. The Town Halls of Boksburg, Brakpan and Springs, each of about 1,000 capacity, have also been secured on leases of five years. Negotiations are also under way for suitable buildings in other centers, principally Cape Town and East London.

Newport Casino Will Have Choice Musicians

Twenty-four musicians, picked from the New York Philharmonic and Philadelphia Symphony orchestras, comprise the orchestra for the Casino Theatre, which is now undergoing remodeling at Newport, R. I., under the direction of William Vanderbilt and other New York millionaire summer colonists who are backing the new theatre enterprise. There are to be afternoon concerts as well as the Sunday evening concerts. Macklin Marrow, of New York City, will be the leader of the orchestra. The concerts started Tuesday, and will continue daily for ten weeks. In former years Henri Cinrad and an orchestra from New York have given the concerts.

Shubert Theatre, Boston, Granted More Damages

The Street Commission of Boston, on recommendation of Corporation Counsel Frank S. Deland, has granted additional damages to the Shubert Theatre on Tremont Street, opposite the Metropolitan Theatre, as the result of land damages from a street widening project. On March 27, 1925, the city awarded the theatre $48,000 damages. This has been increased by an additional $57,000, making a total of $105,000, one of the largest awards made by the city for street widening in years. It was necessary for the lobby to be practically rebuilt.

Columbia "U" Student Sells Story to F B O

Several weeks ago, Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O Pictures Corporation, announced that the company was in the market for original stories from college students. As a result, the F B O scenario department has been flooded with manuscripts.

From the many stories received from the colleges throughout the country, one has been selected as worthy of production. The winning story is called "Operator X C P A," and was written by George S. Lybecker, a student in the School of Photoplay Composition at Columbia University, New York. The story will be used as a vehicle for one of the company's Western stars—Tom Tyler or Bob Steele.

Auto Kills Arline Connors, Five-Year Old Actress

Arline Connors, aged five years, child actress, playing with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Connors, and their two older sons in an acrobatic act, was killed beneath an auto near the stage entrance of the Capitol Theatre at Hartford, Conn., where they were appearing. Their home is in Danville, Ill. The little girl had completed her act and went to the street to watch a group of children at play. She joined in with them and ran into the street of the auto, operated by Edward Burns, of Hartford. He took her to the Hartford Hospital, where she died a few minutes after arrival.

New Theatres Scheduled For Canada

New Era in Building Started After Five Year Lull; Construction on in Many Localities

CANADA is apparently entering upon a theatre building era once more. In many of the larger centres of the Dominion new moving picture palaces have been announced and construction is well under way in many instances.

Some 10 years ago a theatre boom was in evidence largely because of a race between Famous Players Canadian Corp. and the Allen Theatre Enterprises, the latter eventually going into bankruptcy. One result of this situation was that quite a few cities and towns became over-seated and, accordingly, theatre construction was at a standstill for five years or more.

Building operations are again in evidence. One of the largest houses under way is the Orpheum at Vancouver, B. C. Famous Players is building cinemas at New Westminster, Trail and Kimberley, B. C. T. H. Moorehead of Brampton, Ontario, is building a $100,000 theatre at Brantford, Ontario. Detroit interests are said to be undertaking a hotel and theatre project at London, Ontario.

The Bloom and Fine Circuit of Toronto has two suburban houses under way there. Famous Players has just opened the handsome Runnymede Theatre in Toronto and there is intimation that Famous Players will complete its large theatre in Ottawa, which has stood "as is" for four or five years, to replace the Russell Theatre which will probably be torn down pretty soon.

Ald. W. A. Summerville of Toronto has opened the attractive new Eastwood Theatre as a companion house for his Prince of Wales Theatre, Toronto. A site has been procured at Hamilton, Ontario, for a new moving picture theatre. The owners of the Capitol Theatre, Trenton, Ontario, are considering the erection of a house in Kingston, Ontario.

The Major Theatre Company, Toronto, has undertaken the erection of a $75,000 theatre in Silverthorne, a suburb of Toronto. With the completion of the new bridge from Buffalo, N. Y., to Bridgeburg, Ontario, a theatre is being built at Bridgeburg to be known as the Regent. The Ukrainian Society, 473 Queen Street West, Toronto, is building a theatre there to cost $59,000.

These and other projects indicate considerable theatre activity in Canada.

Not long ago Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, acquired nine additional theatres in Vancouver, B. C. Announcement is made that the managers of the nine houses are as follows:

Victoria, J. W. Ackery; Windsor, G. Corrievau; Broadway, J. Copley; Regent, R. Lackey; Kerrisdale, E. C. Lackey; Alma, J. Moore; Dominion, Charles Stevenson; Grandview, J. V. Winning, and Fraser Theatre, A. Young.

Woodhull at N. Carolina

Addresses M.P.T.O.A. Convention Meeting, Wrightsville Beach; Talks on Unification of Exhibitors

TAKING the position that present readjustment within the motion picture business makes exhibitor organization most essential in effecting a stabilizing influence with the public, National President R. F. Woodhull, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America delivered a very interesting address at the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina at Wrightsville Beach today.

State President Charles Picquet introduced Mr. Woodhull as a missionary from the North who came to the Southland to preach the doctrine of peace when practicable and militant aggression when necessary.

The convention was well attended and much enthusiasm manifested during the proceedings. After Mr. Woodhull and Chairman A. Julian Brylawski of the National Board of Directors explained all of the elements of National organization, its advanced moves in unifying the whole industry and determination to advance and develop the interests of independent Theatre Owners and all within the business.

A resolution was unanimously passed approving of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, directing that an application be made for the admission of the State of North Carolina and pledging the fullest measure of support to the National body. The resolution follows:

"Whereas the National Convention at Columbus was productive of aims and plans that we believe will make for constructive progress in National organization.

"Therefore be it resolved that the Theatre Owners Association of North Carolina in convention assembled at Wrightsville Beach, June 27th, go on record as being in entire sympathy with the aims and aspirations of the National Association and pledge their loyal allegiance, moral and financial support upon their reinstatement as a member state unit of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

Binghamton Houses Gave $2,370 to Flood Relief

The Buffalo Film Board of Trade reports that the Binghamton, N. Y., theatres collected $2,370.90 for the Mississippi Valley flood sufferers.

This raises the total of the Buffalo Territory to $14,057.27.

Equipment Meeting July 18

Hotel Pennsylvania in New York Will Hold Assembled Delegates of Theatre Equipment Association

THEATRE Equipment Association is rapidly preparing its plans for the coming convention to be held at Hotel Pennsylvania, July 18 and 19.

This promises to be a very worthwhile meeting. Program details are being arranged by the special committee composed of Messrs. Walter Green of the National Theatre Supply Company New York City; J. C. Kroesen of the Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J., and Irving Samuels of the Automatic Devices Company of Allentown, Pa.

Details of the program will be announced in the very near future.

The principles of this Association have just recently been endorsed by Mr. Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. Mr. Hays in endorsing this movement says as follows:

"Any Movement to encourage exhibitors to give their patrons the best service possible is of course, one to be encouraged. The most representative motion picture theatres to-day are those which give their patrons every comfort and convenience. Their projection is perfect, their music inspiring, and to the entire family their favorite theatre becomes a community center rather than just a place for finding amusement."

The officers and directors of the Theatre Equipment Association include some of the best known men in the industry. They are as follows: John H. Hertner, of The Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio, president; S. A. Louis, of the Rialto Theatre Supply Company, Minneapolis, Minn., vice-president; S. S. Behrends of the Movie Supply Company, Chicago, Ill., treasurer; I. L. Nixon of the Bausch & Lomb Opt. Company of Rochester, N. Y.; J. E. McAuley of the J. E. McAuley Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.; Walter Green of the International Projection Company, New York City, N. Y.; Irving Samuels, of the Automatic Devices Company, Allentown, Pa.; J. C. Brown, Amusement Supply Company, Tampa, Fla.; C. D. Struble of the National Theatre Supply Company, Chicago, Ill.

Five New Theatres Scheduled for Denver Territory

DENVER will soon have five new motion picture theatres. The largest, the New Metropolitan, a Publix theatre, is well on the way to completion and should be ready for opening early in the fall. This theatre will of course be the very latest in construction and up to the Publix standard in every respect. Over in north Denver at West 44th Ave. and Tennyson the new "Berkley" will be erected by Frank Culp, a well known theatre owner and manager of Denver. The Berkley will cost $125,000.00 and will have a seating capacity of 1,000 seats. The design will be along the plan of the construction of the new Aladdin, which is at present Denver's newest and finest. An organ will be installed in the Berkley at a cost of $25,000. Construction was started last Tuesday morning. September 1st is the date set for completion. Mr. Culp is interested in fourteen other theatres throughout the Denver territory.

W. J. Carter is the builder of another theatre now under construction at West 10th Ave. and Santa Fe Drive. It is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 and will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Last Tuesday the city zoning commission approved the application of Michael McEahern for the erection of a theatre at West 44th Ave. and Yates Street.

The suburban theatre which is attracting the most interest is the "Hiawatha," a 900 seat house being erected by Gordon B. Ashworth, former owner of the Federal theatre. The Hiawatha is located at 6th and Downing Streets. Mr. Ashworth's idea for design came from Longfellow's famous poem, Hiawatha. The theatre will be an architectural materialization of the story of this stalwart Indian, the idea being also followed in the decorative system with rich Indian coloring throughout. Construction of the theatre is well under way. Mr. Ashworth hopes to have it completed about the middle of next August.

Says Banned Scenes Shown in Canadian Houses

Count Roussy de Sales, chairman of the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors, Montreal, has declared that he would have to employ an army of inspectors to watch the screens in Quebec to prevent the showing of scenes which had been deleted by the Quebec censors. He declared that he had found scenes reinserted in pictures after they had been censored and that prosecutions had taken place.

In answer to requests for information as to a censorship guide for the Province of Quebec, the chairman declared that he eliminated scenes depicting infidelity, free love, double life, seduction of girls, auction of girls, adultery, white slavery, nude women or women in suggestive poses, close-up of girls in one-piece bathing costume, prolonged kissing and passionate love.

Further, he declared that the Quebec censors were more severe on religious matters than on sex scenes. Count Roussy referred in this connection to mock marriages, religious burlesques, ridicule of creed or clergy, and the placing of a priest in a compromising position.

Report of Robert Kane Leaving F. N. Denied

Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager of First National Pictures, emphatically denies the report that Robert Kane is to cease producing for First National.

Mr. Rowland states that Mr. Kane's product will be an important part of the Showman Group of 1927-28. There will be five pictures from the Kane Studios, including "The Golden Calf," an Aaron Davis Liberty Magazine story; "Harold Teen," based on Carl Ed's famous cartoon strip; "French Dressing," a glamerous tale of an American youth enjoying life in Paris and two other pictures, the titles of which will be announced soon. "Broadway Nights," the curent Kane production, is starting off big in the first run theatres throughout the country and "For the Love of Mike," a story of New York life, is scheduled for release July 31.

Mr. Rowland states that the Kane productions have been highly satisfactory in every respect and that there has been no thought of a break in the cordial relations. Mr. Kane dismissed the report of his leaving First National as being ridiculous. He said that plans for his biggest production season are firmly established.

"Blues" Licked in First Sunday Closing Skirmish

Blue Law advocates of Grinnell, Iowa, who did their best last week to close theatres in the town on Sunday met defeat in the first round of the Sunday closing battle when the city council removed the last impediment to a renewal of the theatres' licenses on July 1.

Mayor W. G. Ray, editor of the Grinnell Herald, cast the deciding vote when the council deadlocked on the proposition, 3 to 3. Behind the blue movement in Grinnell are the W. C. T. U. and various church people. The city council meeting last Monday night received a resolution which would have restrained the city clerk from renewing the licenses of the theatres. A special meeting was called at the request of theatre managers to allow them to present their side of the case.

Gotham Closes for Buffalo and Pittsburgh Localities

Contracts covering the distribution of the 1927-28 series of Gotham releases for the two territories surrounding the key cities of Buffalo and Pittsburgh were closed this week. A new distributor is added to the Gotham line-up in R. C. Fox, president of the R. C. Fox Exchanges of Buffalo with branches in Albany, Rochester and Syracuse. The Gotham representative in the Pittsburgh territory, comprised of West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania, is J. C. Alexander of The Columbia Film Eervice.

Alabama Council Goes on Record for Clean Pictures

The forty-third convention of the Alabama Council of Christian Education was held in Montgomery, Ala., the past week, with 25 counties represented, and has gone on record for clean motion pictures in the State.

Council's Revocation of Building Permit Upheld

The city council's revocation of a building permit for a motion picture theatre in Minneapolis after the permit had once been approved, was upheld, Saturday, by Judge E. A. Montgomery, who refused David Onan a writ of mandamus against the city and the city building inspector. Onan's application for a permit was granted by the council last January, and on the strength of the council's action he leased a Washington avenue site for 50 years, and began tearing down the building then occupying the site. Later on he heard that the council had rescinded its action. Judge Montgomery held that the council, in dismissing Onan's petition, "acted in the exercise of its best judgment and discretion for the best interest of the city." He allowed a 30-day stay for an appeal.

United Artists May Fight Cancellation of Booking

United Artists seems determined not to allow the cancellation of the booking for "The Night of Love" for the Metropolitan Theatre, Owatonna, Minn., at least not without a fight. Miss Maude Riggs, operator of the theatre, was requested by the mayor of Owatonna not to show the picture after he had received protests from various organizations. Miss Riggs agreed, and notified the Minneapolis United Artists office of the situation, and asked them to cancel the booking. The manager of the branch office consulted the home office, and acting on their instructions he refused to cancel the booking and shipped the film according to schedule. Miss Riggs refused the shipment, but United Artists seems unready to give up the fight, and it is thought that the matter will be taken to the arbitration board.

Cast Being Chosen for "A Man's Past"

A cast is being chosen at Universal City for "A Man's Past," the first Universal picture starring Conrad Veidt. Arthur Edmund Carewe has been engaged to play a rôle, as has been Ian Keith and George Siegmann.

George Melford is to direct the picture, which is an adaptation of Emil Forst of the Russian play "Diploma."

"U" Wins Loving Cup in La Prensa" Contest

UNIVERSAL PICTURES CORPORATION was the winner of the silver cup offered in the "La Prensa" competition staged recently in Cuba in connection with the twentieth anniversary celebration of the Republic of Cuba. "La Prensa" is the leading daily newspaper in Havana and the contest was to indicate the motion picture company whose pictures and stars are most popular in the island republic. The winning of the cup also included a Diploma of Honor.

Universal won a similar popularity contest in Cuba in 1923, run by another newspaper, "El Mundo."

College Screen Aspirants Start Work in First National's "Drop Kick"

THE ten college boys who were selected as the most promising screen material out of the 376 tests given at thirty-three colloges and universities by First National Pictures and College Humor, arrived in Los Angeles Tuesday morning, June 21st, ready to try their luck before the motion picture camera. Their first assignment will be to appear in the college sequences of Richard Barthelmess' new picture, "The Drop Kick."

On their arrival, the college boys were met by a welcoming delegation from First National's Burbank Studios, headed by production officials. The studio reception committee was accompanied by representatives of the Hays organization and an official committee from the newly organized Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Seider Jersey M.P.T.O.A. President; Reports In

R. F. (Pete) Woodhull Addresses Convention Delegates on Organization and Unity

THE convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Jersey, held last week had for its highlights the reports of the various committees and addresses by R. F. (Pete) Woodhull, national president of the M. P. T. O., and Joseph Seider, the latter elected president of the Jersey unit. The convention was well attended for, in addition to the business sessions, considerable time was devoted to amusement.

Mr. Woodhull spoke on organization and unity, stressing the hope that exhibitors throughout the country would appreciate the meaning of unity and give to the organization the support it deserves, enabling the association to hold together. He also touched on the prospect of the national body securing a business manager and voiced the hope that each state unit would soon be in a position to have its own legal business manager.

Mr. Seider addressed the convention on the service which the motion picture theatre should give the public, stating that cooperation between exhibitor and the community is necessary for the good and welfare of both, especially in the small town. At the conclusion of his address Mr. Seider was dissuaded by Mr. Woodhull from carrying out his resignation as member of the board of directors of the national organization. The newly elected president of the Jersey unit stated that he would be in his office for rendering service to members of the M. P. T. O., each Tuesday and Thursday.

Reports from committees included that on arbitration which found that the question of arbitration for and by New Jersey, contract in equalities and the 60 day protection reported to be demanded by The Stanley Fabian Corp. are interwoven with the question of the admission of producers Theatre Chains into our organization. The committee reported that the suggestion of Messrs. Woodhull, O'Toole and Brylawski to attempt a solution through negotiation be adopted. It also recommended the appointment of a committee to meet with the Stanley Fabian Corp. to take up with them the question of protection, and that this committee report back to the New Board of Directors.

It was also suggested that the question of approving or disapproving the actions of the National Convention, the payment of national dues by the organization, and admission of Producer theatres, be referred to the New Board of Directors.

It was resolved that all members of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey include, in all newspaper, program and slide advertisements, announcement of the fact that the exhibitor is a member of the M. P. T. O. N. J.; also that the organization obtain immediate release of the L. Jacobson reels and that the board of directors of the association be raised from nine to twelve members; also that Leon Rosenblatt be elected honorary president of the M. P. T. O. N. J.

Officers and directors were elected as follows:

Joseph M. Seider, Hightstown, N. J., President; Vice-Presidents—Henry P. Nelson, Elizabeth; E. Thornton Kelly, Fort Lee; Joseph Bernstein, Jersey City; Charles Hildinger, Trenton. Treasurer, Louis Rosenthal, Orange. Secretary, Leon Rosenblatt, Bayonne.

Directors—Chairman, Sidney Samuelson, Newton; Peter Adams, Paterson; George Brenner, Jersey City; Louis Gold, Newark; Ben Harris, Newark; I. M. Hirschblond, Toms River; W. C. Hunt, Wildwood; Leo Juskowitz, New Brunswick; I. A. Roth, Morristown; Benj. Schindler, Camden; Samuel Stiefel, Bridgeton; Frank L. Warren, Princeton.

"Ham and Eggs" New Name for Warner Comedy

"Ham and Eggs" will be the title given on release to Warner Bros.' extended-run production, which heretofore has been called "Ham and Eggs at the Front."

This comedy special of the negro troops in France is now under way on the Coast, with Roy Del Ruth directing.

Governor Fisher Reappoints Censor Board of Pennsylvania

THE reappointment of all three members of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors was announced by Governor John S. Fisher, at the Capitol in Harrisburg, on June 24th. The personnel of the board is: Harry L. Knapp, Philadelphia, chairman; Mrs. Katherine A. Niver, Charleroi; Henry Starr Richardson, Philadelphia.

The Governor's announcement set to rest reports that Mrs. Niver might not be retained—based solely on considerations of political expediency. It is known from accurate but unofficial sources, that the Governor several months ago was considering appointing another woman to her place, but he finally determined to retain her. There was at no time any thought that Mr. Knapp and Mr. Richardson would not be kept on the board.

The term for which the censors were reappointed is four years. The board now constitutes a bureau in the Department of Public Instruction, where it was placed by a Legislative enactment during the administration of Governor Pinchot, who was Governor Fisher's immediate predecessor. Prior to that the board was independent of any department.

Universal's Capitol, Atlanta, Opens

Premiere of $1,500,000 House Is Brilliant Event; Film and Civic Notables Present

THE Capitol theatre, Atlanta, newest and biggest link in Universal's chain of theatres was opened to the public on June 27 with a premiere performance attended by many persons prominent in film and civic circles. Many novel and special features were on the program for the opening night and the audience was addressed by Governor Walker of Georgia and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale of Atlanta. The theatre has a seating capacity of 2,500 and the cost is said to be $1,500,000.

Featured on the opening program were the latest Reginald Denny production, "Fast and Furious," the International Newsreel and "Snookums Cleans Up," the latest "Newlyweds and Their Baby" Comedy. Pantages vaudeville comprised five acts headed by Cissie Loftus and Adolph Verdi's Capitol orchestra, led by Dave Love as guest conductor, as well as selections by James Alderson, the Capitol's concert organist, made up the rest of the regular program.

The special premiere festivities included the presentation of a group of screen favorites, among them being two of Atlanta's own, Walter Hiers, comedian, recently seen in Universal pictures, and Ethlyne Clair, the Mrs. Newlywed of the Newlyweds comedies and now a Universal Jewel principal. Among the film officials taking part in the ceremonies were Paul Gulick, director of publicity for the Universal Pictures Corporation and personal representative for Carl Laemmle; Dan Michalove, general manager of the "U" theatre chain, whose far-sightedness and energy was principally responsible for the new theatre's construction; Willard Patterson, supervisor of Universal theatres in the South-east, and Martin L. Semon, manager of the new house.

Governor Walker of Georgia and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale of Atlanta were guests of honor and welcomed the new amusement palace for the people of the state and the city. Only one performance was given on the opening night. Thousands of Atlantans were turned away, unable to be accommodated for the first show.

The new theatre occupies a site on Peachtree street, Atlanta's Broadway. It is incorporated in the Candler project, sponsored by Asa G. Candler, Jr., the Coca-cola millionaire, which also includes the big Davison-Paxon department store.

The theatre proper stands on a plot 100 by 160 feet, with a large parking space adjoining. The interior decoration is according to the Adams design, with old ivory, apple-green and coral as the color scheme. The highly glazed and polished ornamentation is especially effective. Starrett and Van Vleck were the architects.

Sterling Deal Closes Two Key Centers

Arrangements have been finally completed by Sterling for the closing of territories for the distribution of the Sterling program of eight pictures for the new season. Two important key cities have been closed in Philadelphia, where the De Luxe Film Company, under the leadership of Oscar Neufeld, will handle the Sterling program; and in St. Louis, where Jack Weil, of the Gotham Pictures Exchanges, has arranged to distribute the Sterling pictures.

David R. Hochreich, president of the Vocafilm Corporation of America has appointed Robert ("Bob") Woodhull, son of R. F. ("Pete") Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, as assistant to Julian M. Solomon, director of advertising and publicity.

Young Woodhull, as house manager of the Baker Theatre, Dover, N. J., handled all of the local publicity and exploitation. His work with Vocafilm will be on trade paper and New York newspapers.

Taxes Cause Polish Exhibitors to Close Down

The exhibitors of Bromberg, Poland, are reported to have closed their houses as protest against exorbitant taxes by the Municipality. According to the French trade press, these taxes in that locality reach 60 per cent of the gross receipts.

Elise Bartlett, Wife of J. Schildkraut, in Films

Elise Bartlett, in private life Mrs. Joseph Schildkraut and well known for her work in the spoken drama, has finally succumbed to the lure of the camera and will appear with Rudolph Schildkraut in "Harp in Hock," a story of the Ghetto which Renaud Hoffman is directing. Bessie Love, Joseph Striker and May Robson are also in the cast.

Miss Bartlett is prominent in the New York Theatre Guild and was more recently a member of "The Firebrand" company which played at the El Capitan Theatre.

New "Blue" Ruling in Pa. Bans Sunday Baseball

A decision that was eagerly awaited by the motion picture theatre owners throughout Pennsylvania, in view of its probable bearing on the holding of Sunday motion picture shows in that state, which are now banned under the blue laws of 1794, was rendered by Justice Schaffer, of the State Supreme court, on June 25, when he ruled against Sunday baseball games, basing his decision on the same ancient statute that relates to theatrical amusements on Sundays.

Pa. Issues Regulations Governing Theatre Exits

The Bureau of Industrial Standards of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, of which J. M. Sandel is director, has just made public new regulations, which have been mailed to architects, governing the number of exits required in motion picture theatres and other theatres of the state, based on the various seating capacities. The minimum number and location of exits for main floors and balconies are prescribed as follows:

For fire-resistive and non fire-resistive buildings with seating capacity up to 250, there shall be four exits, two at the front and two at the rear near screen or stage; from 251 to 500 seats, five exits, two at front and three at rear.

In fire-resistive buildings one additional exit must be provided for each 250 seats or fraction thereof, in excess of 500 seats, and in non fire-resistive buildings there shall be one additional exit for each 200 persons or fraction thereof, in excess of 500 seats.

The location of additional exits for theatres with over 500 seats must be approved by the Secretary of Labor and Industry. For balcony capacities between 100 and 250 persons at least one exit shall lead directly to the street and for capacities of 250 persons or more at least two exits shall lead directly to the street. All exits shall be not less than five feet in width in the clear, leading full width to unobstructed outlets to the street.

Lynn Farnol has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn as Eastern Press Representative, with headquarters in the Samuel Goldwyn offices, New York City.

Farnol has been press representative for the Actors' Theatre and George Tyler. He accompanied the "Trelawney of the Wells" company on its recent transcontinental tour, and while in Los Angeles Farnol was engaged by Mr. Goldwyn. He has already assumed his duties.

Walter P. Lindlar, newly appointed exploitation manager for First National

Walter Lindlar New F. N. Exploitation Manager

An announcement comes from C. F. Chandler, director of advertising and publicity for First National of the appointment of Walter Lindlar as exploitation manager of the organization to succeed Allan S. Glenn, who recently resigned to assume the post of managing director of the Circle theatre in Indianapolis.

Mr. Lindlar has a background of experience which embraces a long schooling in journalism, a close association with the legitimate stage in the capacities of press agent and company manager. For several years he was with Paramount, which company he left three years ago to join First National, serving first as field man. Later, as the activities of the exploitation division increased, Mr. Lindlar was brought into the home office as assistant to Mr. Glenn; he was employed in that capacity up to the time of Mr. Glenn's resignation.

More Selections for Emil Jannings' Support

Johnson was for four years property boy at the Paramount Hollywood studio, but because of his low comedy face will forsake the property room and face the Kleig lights for a rôle in the Jannings picture.

Ufa Presenting Eight Films in France

The Alliance Cinematographique, S. A., UFA's French company, has presented eight films for 1927-28 programs, say advices from Vice Consul Harold L. Smith, Paris, France, made public by the Department of Commerce.

Pathe Ball Club Licks First National 19-12

The rooster can crow triumphantly now, for the boys of the Pathe Movie Club turned in a victory last Saturday over the First National outfit running up the decisive score of 19-12. For the first time in years Ed Eschman donned his baseball uniform and pitched a game that brought home the bacon.

In the first inning, he walked three men and then got out of a bad hole without being scored on, staging a barehanded catch. Errors and walks allowed First National to pile up a lead in the second, but then Pathe started hitting. The final tabulation was 19-12. Second hero honors went to George Snyder, who twice doubled up men at first base after difficult catches in left field and who came into the melee in the eighth when Eschman's arm started in to creak.

The standing of the teams of the Movie League follows:

Pathe won 3, lost 1; Fox won 3, lost 1; Warner Bros. won 3, lost 1; First National won 3, lost 1; United Artists won 1, lost 3; Consolidated won 0, lost 4.

Salisbury, Md., to Have New 1,000-Seat House

A new theatre to cost about $120,000 is to be built at Salisbury, Md., after the plans by Edward Canby May, architect, Wilmington, Del. The seating capacity will be 1,000 persons.

An ordinance was passed recently by the Mayor and City Council of Salisbury, Md., which prohibits motion picture and other theatres to open on Sundays. The punishment provided in the ordinance includes fines of from $50 to $500 and, at the discretion of the court, thirty days imprisonment, in the county jail.

Maryland already has a "blue" law which forbids the opening of moving picture and other theatres on Sundays. And when special permission is granted no admission charges can be made on the days performances are given.

"Blue" Laws Will Be Made Political Issue Next Year

Sunday closing and other "blue" laws will be made a political issue next year, it has been announced by the Association Opposed to Blue Laws which is to form an anti-blue law party to participate in the next campaign, the News correspondent from Washington, D. C., reports.

It is planned to hold a national convention of the proposed party, at which a platform will be outlined. No candidates will be offered, but the blue law opponents will classify the candidates of the major parties and will oppose those favoring blue law legislation.

Columbia Signs Leads for "The Swell Head"

Casting started this week on Columbia's last production of the present season, when Johnnie Walker and Eugenia Gilbert were signed for leading rôles in "The Swell Head," which was scheduled under the working title of "Sidewalks of New York."

Special Presentation for "Moon of Israel"

Roxy Devotes More Than Usual Time to Staging Program Around New F B O Special Picture

F B O'S "Moon of Israel" was afforded more than the usual time spent by S. L. Rothafel in planning surrounding programs for the productions exhibited at the Roxy Theatre; the master showman started work on the presentation for this feature two days ahead of his regular schedule, devoting ten days to the preparation of the musical program and various presentation units so that when the run opened on June 25 the feature exhibition was preceded by one of the most beautiful stage spectacles ever on view in the "cathedral of the motion picture."

In addition to the atmospheric prologue Roxy presented "Watchman, What of the Night?" an exotic divertissement, and "The Moth and the Flame," a dance number by Maria Gambarelli, the "Gamby" of Roxy's radio broadcasting.

"Moon of Israel" depicts the story of the deliverance of the Jews from Egyptian bondage by way of the Red Sea, with the Book of Exodus as its background; it is a spectacle finishing with a big climax, showing the crossing of the Red Sea and the drowning of Pharaoh's army.

An entire Egyptian city was built, at an approximate cost of over half a million dollars. Over 30,000 extras were used throughout the film. Maria Corda, who is now playing the lead role in "Helen of Troy" at the First National Studios, portrays Merapi, Moon of Israel, while Arlette Marchal, now with Paramount, plays the Princess Userti. Michael Curtiz directed from the novel by Sir H. Rider Haggard.

The Maccabee Soccer Football Team, who arrived in New York recently from Palestine, and have been playing against leading soccer teams in this country and Canada, were invited by Roxy to be his guests at the Monday night screening of "Moon of Israel" F B O's gigantic spectacle of the enslavement of the Jews, which opens at the world's largest playhouse on June 25th.

Paramount Films in Work

Production Plant in Hollywood Actively Engaged at Present Time With Eight New Pictures

EIGHT pictures are under way at the Paramount studio on the West Coast and four more will be started with the next ten days and four others within a month. Jesse L. Lasky is back again at his supervisory post and a current of activity is felt on all of the different lots.

In production for some time have been "Swim, Girl, Swim," starring Bebe Daniels; "Shanghai Bound," a Richard Dix vehicle; Clara Bow's "Hula," "Nevada," a Western starring Gary Cooper, and "Tell It to Sweeney," co-starring Chester Conklin and George Bancroft. Emil Jannings' second starring film for Paramount, tentatively titled "Hitting for Heaven," was started last Monday under the direction of Mauritz Stiller. Thomas Meighan renewed his association with James Cruze this week when he began taking direction for his featured role in "First Degree Murder," a temporary title. In Meighan's supporting cast are: Marietta Milner, Wyndham Standing, Fred Kohler, Charles Hill Mailes, Gunboat Smith, Duke Martin and Nancy Phillips.

Foremost among the picture about to be placed into work is "Beau Sabreu," companion story to "Beau Geste," in which John Waters will direct among others Gary Cooper, Evelyn Brent, Noah Beery, Roscoe Karns, Frank Reicher, Joan Standing and Arnold Kent. Adolphe Menjou's forthcoming production following "Service For Ladies" and entitled "A Gentleman of Paris," will be launched within a few days. About the same time Esther Ralston will begin working on an Owen Davis story under the direction of Joseph von Sternberg and Florence Vidor will start "A Celebrated Woman," with Frank Tuttle at the megaphone.

Work also was begun this week on Pola Negri's newest starring vehicle, tentatively titled "Sun Kissed." The story will be directed by Rowland V. Lee, who wrote it. Jean Hersholt is the only featured member of the cast thus far announced.

Recomputation of Sydco's Tax for 1921 Ordered

Recomputation of the 1921 tax of the Sydco Photoplay Corporation has been ordered by the United States Board of Tax Appeals, Washington, D. C. The company is lessee of a theatre property at Westchester avenue and 161st street, New York.

The company sought a redetermination of the income and profits-tax liability for 1921 for which the Commissioner of Internal Revenue had determined a deficiency of $3,718.14. It was alleged the commissioner had failed to include in the computation of invested capital the value of a leasehold acquired with capital stock; in failing to allow as a deduction from income an aliquot part of such leasehold value due to the exhaustion of the lease; in failing to include in invested capital the value of the furniture, equipment and fixtures acquired with capital stock; and in failing to allow proper depreciation on furniture, equipment and fixtures thus acquired.

The board upheld the contentions of the taxpayer and ordered a recomputation of the tax.

Janet Gaynor Starred in "Two Girls Wanted"

JANET GAYNOR, who eceived recognition in "Seventh Heaven," and who is said to have a wonderful role in "Sunrise," has been raised to stardom by Fox Films and will play the foremost role in "Two Girls Wanted," the Broadway stage success by Gladys Unger. The film is now in work at Fox Films West Coast studio under the direction of Alfred E. Green. With Miss Gaynor in the picture are Glenn Tryon, Ben Bard, Marie Mosquini, Joseph Cawthorne, Doris Lloyd, Alyce Mills and William Tooker.

Duncans Will Make Nine Months' Tour With Film

The Duncan Sisters will make a nine months' tour of key cities in the United States, singing and dancing in motion picture theatres where their film "Topsy and Eva" is being played, following their screen debut at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, Hollywood, Thursday evening, June 16th, and subsequent daily appearances on the stage with their film during the Egyptian run.

Already the Duncan Sisters have been booked for personal appearances with "Topsy and Eva" in Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Chicago. In all of these cities they have played for extended runs in "Topsy and Eva" on the stage.

The Duncans and the film "Topsy and Eva" are scheduled for the Metropolitan, Boston; the Buffalo, Buffalo; the Michigan, Detroit; the Indiana, Indianapolis; the Ambassador, St. Louis; and a week each at the Chicago, Tivoli and Uptown Theatres in Chicago. All these film bookings announced are in Publix Theatres, and extend in playing time from August 6th to October 9th, 1927.

Louis R. Sarecky F B O Supervising Editor

Louis R. Sarecky, formerly assistant manager of Paramount's Astoria studio, has joined the production forces at the F B O studios in Hollywood as supervising editor. Mr. Sarecky will become familiar with the studio production staff and the new season's product before actually assuming charge of units.

Mr. Sarecky brings to his new position seven years of experience in the production of motion pictures. While he was with Paramount in the East he held the positions of location manager, production manager, and assistant studio manager.

Support Chosen for Negri in "Sun Kissed"

This week the supporting cast for Pola Negri's "Sun Kissed," her latest starring vehicle for Paramount, was chosen by Paramount officials. The players are Kenneth Thompson, Jean Hersholt, Christian J. French, Sammy Blum, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Hope Harriman, Sally Blane and Adre Tourneur.

Changes in Theatre Circles of Steubenville, Ohio

Transfer of property at 5th and Market streets, Steubenville, Ohio, announcement that a new Strand Theatre will be built by the Tri-State Amusement Company there, and that the three local theatres of the company have been merged with a four-state co-operative organization were new developments in mid-west theatre circles recently.

A. G. Constant has announced that two sites in the city are under consideration for the location of the Strand and that the house would be provided with stage facilities.

Mr. Constant is now vice president in the Affiliated Theatre Utilities Corp., a co-operative group of 104 theatres in 50 cities and towns of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. The Tri-State Amusement Co. joined the group on June 14, their three theatres in Steubenville and two in East Liverpool becoming members.

Six theatres in Wheeling, the Strand in Follansbee, theatres in Toronto and Yorkville, are among those in that district which have merged. The company headquarters are in Buffalo, N. Y., where six theatres are controlled by the group, and they will also establish offices later in Pittsburgh and Cleveland. N. D. Dipson, Batavia, is president; A. G. Constant, Steubenville and George Panakotoukis, Jamestown, N. Y. are vice presidents; Mike Manos, Greensburgh, Pa., is treasurer.

Mr. Dipson and Fred Zimmerman, recently in Steubenville closing the transaction, predicted that their string of theatres will grow easily to 500 and lauded the idea of group purchasing as a step forward in showmanship.

New Producing Firm Incorporates in California

Incorporating for $100,000 a new motion picture corporation has been formed in California for the production and financing of motion pictures. The officers are: Al Nathan, president and general manager; E. K. Conrad, vice-president; C. H. Voss, secretary, and O. C. Staby, treasurer. The officers also constitute the board of directors. Mr. Nathan has been producing the Sunkist Comedies for Bray Productions. The new concern will start a new series of two-reel comedies and also feature length productions and will be interested in financing bonafide contracts. The offices are in the California Studios, 1420 Beachwood Drive, and Mr. Al Nathan will be in full charge of productions.

Ohio Showmen to Build Eight New Theatres

B. C. Steele, E. C. Flanigan and Sam Rosenthal, Ohio theatre owners, are in the midst of an extensive theatre building program. They are building a 2,000-seat house in Alliance, to be called the Morrison, which will be completed in August; the Kent theatre in Kent, another 2,000-seat house, which will open in August, and they are now about to close for two more theatres, locations to be announced as soon as details are settled. Steele stated that they plan to have no less than eight new houses in northern Ohio by the end of next year.

Herbert Crooker, who has been advanced to the post of Eastern representative of B. & H. Enterprises, making Johnny Hines comedy features for First National

Herb Crooker Made B and H Eastern Representative

Herbert Crooker, who joined B and H Enterprises a year ago as director of advertising and publicity for the Johnny Hines pictures for First National, has been appointed Eastern representative of that organization by C. C. Burr. In his new capacity, Mr. Crooker will look after the interests of Johnny Hines in New York as well as supervise all advertising and publicity matters.

Mr. Crooker's connection with pictures goes back to the old Triangle Company, where he was in the publicity department. He publicized Jess Willard, Charles Dillingham's stage productions, and then went to Pathe, where he remained for five years, specializing on the Harold Lloyd pictures, writing syndicate stories and fictionizing serials for newspaper circulation. A post in the motion picture department of The Morning Telegraph followed, after which he became managing editor of Theatre and Drama Magazine. Before coming with Burr and Hines he was stage and screen editor of the New York Times Mid-Week Pictorial.

"Sorrell and Son" Unit at Work at Keaton Studio

Monday, June 13, Herbert Brenon transferred his entire "Sorrell and Son" company from the United Artists studio to the Buster Keaton studio, Hollywood, where additional sets had been constructed for the picturization of Warwick Deeping's best selling novel. Mr. Brenon is filming interiors in both studios before departing with his entire company on July 16th for England, there to photograph exteriors on the original sites depicted in the novel.

Brenon has signed Lionel Belmore, character actor, to play an important part. H. B. Warner, Nils Aster, Alice Joyce, Mickey McBann, Norman Trevor, Anna Q. Nilsson, Louis Wolheim, Mary Nolan and Paul McAllister are also in the cast.

Sills Offers Prize for Story Idea

Milton Sills, First National star, believes that the sales force knows better than anyone else what exhibitors and the public want in the line of stories. They sell the pictures, are in daily contact with exhibitors and have first-hand knowledge of the type of story that attracts people into the picture theatres.

He has therefore offered a prize to the member of First National's sales organization—branch manager, salesman, booker, bookkeeper, clerk or stenographer—who, before December 31, 1927, suggests the best idea for a story for him. Sills will pay $500 for an idea that is accepted by the judges. If the idea is susceptible of being developed into a special production he will pay $1,000 for it.

The judges are Florence Strauss, scenario editor; Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager; Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager; A. W. Smith, Jr., Eastern sales manager; Mr. Sills himself, and Lynde Denig, publicity editor.

The suggestion does not have to be an original idea, though original ideas will be considered on a par with a suggested book or play that may be suitable as a Sills vehicle. All communications should be addressed to Florence Strauss, of the First National home office.

"7th Heaven" to Remain at Harris Until Sept. 4

The Fox Film Corporation and the Messrs. Shuberts have completed arrangements whereby "7th Heaven," the screen version of John Golden's successful stage production, will remain at the Sam H. Harris Theatre in New York until the evening of Sunday, September 4, 1927.

On Labor Day the picture will be transferred to another Broadway house which Fox has leased for the season of 1927-28. This theatre, the name of which will be announced later, will house two Fox features, "Sunrise" and Carmen."

Gilda Gray Leaves for Coast to Start Picture

Gilda Gray left New York City last Monday evening, June 27, for the Pacific Coast with the expectation of not returning East until next summer. Upon her arrival at Hollywood, the Samuel Goldwyn star will begin work on "The Devil Dancer," the first feature that she will make under Mr. Goldwyn's auspices. As in "Cabaret" and "Aloma of the South Seas," dancing will form a major part in Miss Gray's vehicle.

G. P. Morgan Goldwyn's Eastern Business Mgr.

Samuel Goldwyn this week announces his appointment of Guy P. Morgan as Eastern business manager of the affiliated Goldwyn interests. Among his first duties will be the handling of the sales contracts on "The Magic Flame" and "The Devil Dancer." He will make his headquarters at the Samuel Goldwyn New York offices at 729 Seventh avenue.

Nine New M-G-M's Coming

Within Few Weeks Several Major Productions Will Be Launched at the Culver City Plant

NINE film productions which will be among the major offerings to come from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plant in Culver City during the coming season, are soon to be placed into actual work.

The first of these will be "In Old Kentucky," a story of the blue-grass region which John M. Stahl is to direct. Dorothy Farnum did the adaptation and scenario. Within two weeks Fred Niblo will begin the direction of "The Enemy," the Channing Pollack play that will serve as Lillian Gish's next starring vehicle. The scenario has reached its final stages in the hands of Willis Goldbeck.

"Rose Marie" and "The Fair Co-ed" will be the next two films to get under way. The first, adapted from the musical comedy of the same name, will be directed by William Nigh with Renee Adoree in the leading feminine role. When it is presented in the theatres it will have the complete musical score of Rudolph Friml and Herbert Stothart. The use of the lyrics by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein 2nd was also secured by M-G-M. Sam Wood will direct Marion Davies in "The Fair Co-ed," a screen version of the ten-year old musical comedy by George Ade.

A story about the Panama Canal to which was formerly applied the title of "The Glory Diggers," has been finished by Laurence Stallings. "The Big Ditch" is the new name of the production, which goes into production this summer, according to tentative plans.

Tod Browning will again direct Lon Chaney following the completion of "Mockery" in a story of a haunted house which has been scenarized by Waldemar Young. The story is an original by the director. "Lovelorn," a Cosmopolitan production will also go into work soon under the direction of John P. McCarthy. "Be Your Age," scenarized by Florence Ryerson and Colin, from a farce by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, "Single Beds." George K. Arthur and Karl Dane will be co-starred in a farce comedy, as yet untitled, as soon as they complete their roles in "The Trail of '98." Production on "Love" will be resumed shortly with Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in the leads. The picture was halted because of Miss Garbo's illness.

Theatre Progress in S. A.

Latin-American Countries Making Rapid Strides Says Carlos Jiminez, Pathe Foreign Department Agent

TREMENDOUS strides in theatre construction is claimed for the South American countries by Carlos Jaminez, Pathe representative of the foreign department, who has just returned from a sales trip through the Southern continent.

According to Mr. Carlos the movie fans of these countries are demanding the highest type of entertainment. As many as six of his company's two-reel comedies are shown on one program.

"The South American market now using practically ninety per cent of American pictures, is opening up possibilities for every type of American picture. The American salesman is welcomed with opened arms, wined and dined, provided he is not over aggressive on his first visit. The South American exhibitor considers the visit of a salesman of a social nature. He never snaps out "no" for an answer. If unwilling to buy, he at least prolongs the visit and diplomatically dismisses the film representative."

In Colombia Mr. Carlos found the picture fans to be rabid, indeed. One Colombia cowboy, seated in the gallery, began firing at a villain who was fast overcoming a heroine. The fans of the Latin-American countries are particularly fond of Westerns with their fast action.

"Camille" Nationally Released on Sept. 4

SEPTEMBER 4 has been selected by Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager of First National as the general release date of the Joseph M. Schenck production starring Norma Talmadge and entitled "Camille." The production moves this weeks to the Rivoli in New York after its run of eight and one-half weeks at the Globe Theatre at a $2.00 admission scale of prices.

Seven bookings were received in a bunch last week from the Pittsburgh exchange for the Talmadge film. They are for the following theatres: Grand, Pittsburgh; Liberty, East Liberty; Liberty, Wheeling; Columbia, Johnstown, Pa.; Strand, Altoona, Pa.; Strand, Erie; and Victory, McKeesport, Pa. The Libson Circuit has booked it for release week for showing at the Capitol, Cincinnati and in Columbus and Dayton. "Camille" will open for an extended run at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, and the Garrick in Minneapolis.

Daphne Pollard Signed for Mack Sennett Comedies

Daphne Pollard, a personality on the vaudeville stage, has been persuaded by Mack Sennett to enter the comedy producer's offerings which Pathe releases. "Why Is A Bathing Girl?" is to be the title of the first one scheduled for production.

According to Sennett's present plans, the series is to be a study in evolution—the evolution of bathing girl comedies. The pictures are to burlesque the picture comedy idea, with Miss Pollard doing a travesty on bathing beauties.

F B O Making "In a Moment of Temptation"

The cast of "In a Moment of Temptation" has been announced as complete and preparations are being made at the F B O studio to begin actual filming on the Laura Jean Libbey story under Phil Carle's direction. The leading roles are played by Charlotte Stevens and Cornelius Keefe. Also included in the cast are Kit Guard, Tom Ricketts, Grant Withers, Marie Walkamp, John McKinnon and others. Miss Stevens is now engaged at the F B O studio in "The Coward" which will be finished within a few days and Keefe recently completed the lead in "Hook and Ladder No. 9" at F B O.

Hines Preparing "A Pair of Sixes" for Screening

With "White Pants Willie," his latest First National picture in the cutting room, Johnny Hines and his producer, C. C. Burr, are now busily engaged with their staff of scenarists and comedy constructors whipping "A Pair of Sixes," Edward Peple's stage play, into shape for the screen. Charles Hines will direct the comedy at the Tec Art studio in Hollywood, marking his fourteenth picture for his comedian brother. No selections as to Hines' supporting cast have been made.

Milestone to Direct "The Garden of Eden"

Louis Milestone has been borrowed from Caddo Productions Company and will be assigned to direct Corinne Griffith in her first picture for United Artists, "The Garden of Eden." The picture will be produced under the supervision of John W. Considine.

Casting is progressing rapidly at the lot, and it is anticipated that the production will get under way in about four weeks. Hans Kraly is adapting the story. Mr. Milestone has just completed the cutting of "Two Arabian Knights."

"Buzz" Barton at Work on "Saddles and Spurs"

A capable cast has just been assembled to support Buzz Barton, new 13 year old Western star in his first picture, "Saddles and Spurs," work on which will commence shortly under the direction of Louis King.

Lorraine Eason, who has just completed the "Beauty Parlor" series of comedies with Al Cooke and Kit Guard at F B O, will play the feminine lead, opposite Sam Nelson. David Dunbar will play the heavy. Frank Rice will appear as the old timer who pals around with Buzz, and William Ryno will play the girl's father.

Hoffman to Produce "Harp in Hock" for De Mille

Renaud Hoffman has been signed by De-Mille to produce "Harp in Hock" for De-Mille Pictures. Hoffman produced 14 pictures last year.

Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coghlan will be featured in "Harp in Hock." The story is an original by Sonya Levien.

Suspect Plot in Transportation of Fight Films

Considerable excitement prevails in Cleveland over proposed charges of conspiracy by federal authorities against those who brought into Ohio motion pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney championship prize fight which were scheduled to go on exhibition June 26 at the Bandbox, Empire and East 9th Street theatres.

It is stated that the man who brought them into Ohio paid a $500 fine and spent two days in jail. Now the department of justice agents are investigating whether a conspiracy charge is justified. If they find evidences of conspiracy, United States marshals will probably stop exhibition of the fight pictures here.

S. W. Manheim of the Manheim Amusement Company, which operates the Bandbox and Empire theatres, said that officials have no power to confiscate the fight films.

H. L. Sellers, Pioneer Pa. Exhibitor, Dead at Home

Harry L. Sellers, pioneer motion picture theatre owner in Steelton, Pa., died on June 19, at his home in that borough, at the age of 55. Mr. Sellers started in the picture business more than twenty years ago when he opened the Standard theatre, and several years later he opened the Strand, which is Steelton's largest theatre. A few years ago he retired from the theatre business, selling both the Strand and Standard to Charles Newbaker, who is understood to have been acting in the purchases for "Tom" Nelley, Republican political leader of Steelton, who owns the houses today.

Mr. Sellers was survived by eight brothers and sisters. He was buried on June 23 in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, New Cumberland, Pa., one of the pallbearers being Charles Newbaker, his successor in the operation of the Strand and the Standard.

"A Fighting Eagle" Rod La Rocque's Next

Rod LaRocque's newest starring picture for DeMille, originally titled "Brigadier Gerard," will be released under the title "A Fighting Eagle." The screen story is an adaptation of Conan Doyle's "The Adventures of Gerrad." Douglas E. Doty wrote the film version of the story.

Phyllis Haver heads the supporting cast, which also embraces in conspicuous roles Sam De Grasse, Sally Rand, Max Barwyn and Clarence Burton. Donald Crisp is handling the megaphone.

Archie Mayo Gets Warner Contract

Warner Bros. have added Archie Mayo to the list of directors who are working exclusively for their organization. Mayo signed this week a contract with the company extending over a long period of time. His addition to the Warner roster resulted from his fine work with Irene Rich's latest vehicle, "Dearie." His next assignment will be May McAvoy's new starring picture, "Slightly Used," on which the cameras are now ready to grind.

Syd Chaplin Vehicle Added to M-G-M List

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER will add to its new season's product one production starring Sydney Chaplin. It is expected that the production will be one of the most important releases on the M-G-M schedule for 1927-28, which embraces 243 long and short features.

In the past two years Sydney Chaplin hasturned out "Charley's Aunt," "The Man on the Box," "Oh, What a Nurse" and "The Better 'Ole."

April Record Month for Film Exports to Australia

A new record in motion picture exports was made in April when shipments to Australia totaled 3,275,511 feet valued at $86,288, this being the first time exports to any one country during a month touched the 3,000,000-feet figure.

The month's exports, as reported by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, totaled 27,240,114 feet, with a value of $804,778, against 23,190,397 feet, with a value of $753,990, in March, and 25,932,445 feet, with a value of $989,161, in April, 1926.

Shipments during the month included 20,599,245 feet of positive film, valued at $559,429, against 18,363,509 feet, valued at $483,726, in March; 663,844 feet of negatives, valued at $122,606, against 757,158 feet, valued at $156,615, and 3,847,147 feet of raw stock, valued at $93,235, against 2,765,657 feet, valued at $88,145. Shipments to non-contiguous territories for the month totaled 2,129,878 feet, valued at $29,508, against 1,304,073 feet, valued at $25,404.

H. L. Robinson General Auditor "U" Theatres

Dan Michalove, on the eve of his departure for Atlanta to attend the new Capitol Theatre opening, announced the addition to the staff of the Universal Chain Theatres of Herbert L. Robinson, long associated with Paramount and Publix. Robinson started this week as the general auditor for the Universal theatre organization.

Robinson formerly was associated with Michalove, now general manager of Universal theatres, when Michalove was Director of Theatres for S. A. Lynch and later with the Southern Enterprises. The new Universal auditor has been in the motion picture industry since 1917 when he started in as auditor in the Paramount exchange in Dallas.

Ruling Restricts Employment of Minors on Pa. Sta

According to a recent ruling issuing from the Department of Justice of Pennsylvania it has been held that no minor actor under 14 years of age can be employed on the stage, either in photoplay or other theatres in Pennsylvania under any circumstances, and that no minor between 14 and 16 years of age may be employed in a theatre without a certificate of employment from the Department of Labor.

Beth O'Shea Off on European Trip

Miss Beth O'Shea, of the Fox Films staff, has resigned to go to Europe, where she will handle assignments in the foreign motion picture field for several magazines. Miss O'Shea has been covering the New York studios and writing magazine and newspaper publicity for Fox for the past three years. She goes abroad on the Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm, sailing out of Montreal on July 1. Miss O'Shea plans to return about October 1.

On the day her resignation became effective the entire publicity staff assembled in the office of Vivian M. Moses, director of the department, to present Miss O'Shea with a handsome bag as a token of the esteem in which she is held by her colleagues.

Bring Out Movie Edition of Rupert Hughes Story

Arrangements have been completed between First National, Grosset & Dunlap, reprint publishers, and the original publishers of Major Rupert Hughes writings, for Grossett & Dunlap to bring out a photoplay edition of "The Patent Leather Kid," the big special which First National has made from the Hughes short story, starring Richard Barthelmess. It will be illustrated with stills from the picture, and the book will include several other short stories by Major Hughes, together with a foreword on the screen version of "The Patent Leather Kid."

Alfred Santell directed this new Barthelmess picture.

Trial of $1,000,000 Damage Suits Begun in Boston

Trial of suits involving a total of more than $1,000,000 damages started this week in Boston where 87 actions have been filed against the Boston Elevated, the Paramount-Famous Lasky Corporation and John F. Bowditch growing out of an explosion of films which were being carried in a bag on an elevated surface car in the Park street subway in Boston Jan. 3, 1925. When the explosion occurred many people were injured in the fire and panic that followed.

Of the 87 cases, only three will be tried at this time in an effort to establish liability. Judge Williams is presiding over the hearings, which will probably extend over a fortnight or more.

Flagpole Publicity Stunt Stopped by Boston Police

After spending two days and two nights at the top of the flagpole of the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, Frank ("Sparrow") Holl, who started out to break the record of Shipwreck Kelly by attempting to remain at the top of the pole for fourteen days, was obliged to come down to earth by order of the Boston police department. The publicity stunt proved more successful than anticipated. It resulted in traffic blocks in Tremont Street and on Stuart Street and several minor accidents resulted when motorists tried to lean from their cars to see what it was all about.

U. A. Release Program Set

Five Pictures Have Already Been Shot, Four in Process of Filming and Six More About to be Placed Into Work

ON Tuesday, June 21, United Artists began the selling of its new season's line-up of 17 pictures, two pictures per month to be the general run of the releases from August, 1927 to March, 1928. Word to launch the campaign was sent out by Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution for United States and Canada. In Mr. Lichtman's opinion the array of releases "is the most formidable in quantity and quality ever released by United Artists." During the summer, Joseph M. Schenck, United Artists president, will remain in Hollywood supervising production and studio activities. Mr. Schenck's listing of the new United Artists product and the various release dates follow:

"My Best Girl," a Mary Pickford vehicle adapted from a Collier's magazine story and soon to be published in novel form. Charles "Buddy" Rogers is leading man, and Isabelle Sheridan is in the cast; Charles Rosher is the photographer. The film is now shooting and will be released October 8, 1927. Norma Talmadge's "The Dove," already finished, has in its cast Noah Beery, Gilbert Roland, Fritz Feld, Olga Baklonova, Eddie Borden, Michael Vivitch and Harry Myers. Oliver Marsh was the photographer. Release January 21, 1928. Gloria Swanson's "Sadie Thompson," which Raoul Walsh is about to place into production, will be issued November 12, 1927. "The Garden of Eden," starring Corinne Griffith, will be filmed shortly by Director Lewis Milestone. October 22, 1927, in its release date.

"The Circus," Charlie Chaplin's new comedy, is two-thirds finished and is tentatively scheduled for February 4, 1928. "The Gaucho," a new Douglas Fairbanks' vehicle, is now in its fifth week of work under F. Richard Jones' direction. It will be released on February 18, 1928. Supporting Fairbanks are Eve Southern, Lupez Valez, Gustav Von Seyfertitz, Charles Stevens, Nigel de Brulier, Fred de Silva and Charlotta Monti. 200 riders will be a feature of this film. Antonio Gaudio is in charge of the cameras. November 26, 1927 is the release date for John Barrymore's "Tempest," based on an original story by Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko. It will be directed by Frank Lloyd with Joseph August presiding over the cameras. Greta Nissen is leading lady and Louis Wolheim a supporting player. Production on the story which Fred de Gresac is adapting will start in July.

"College," starring Buster Keaton with Anne Cornwall the feminine lead, has been finished and is set for September 10, 1927. Dev Jennings and Bert Haines were cameramen for Keaton. Another finished film is "The Magic Flame," co-starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, and scheduled for September 24, 1927. George Barnes photographed the film. "Sorrell and Son," now being filmed by Herbert Brenon, is to be released on December 3, 1927. James Wong Howe is Brenon's photographer. The company sails for England on July 16 to film exteriors. "La Piava," the tentative title of D. W. Griffith's new production which features Estelle Taylor and based on a story by Karl Vollmoeller, is to be started on July 1. Release January 7, 1928. Fred de Gresac is doing the adaptation. A completed picture is "Topsy and Eva," featuring the Duncan Sisters. It is an August 6, 1927 release. In the cast are Gibson Gowland, Nils Asther, Marjorie Daw, Henry Victor, Murtle Ferguson. John Boyle was cameraman. "Two Arabian Knights," is finished and will come to the public on August 20, 1927. Cast includes Mary Astor, William Boyd, Louis Wolheim, Ian Keith, Michael Vavitch, De Witt Jennings. Barney McGill did the photography. "The Darling of the Gods," Morris Gest's first screen production, will be released on March 24, 1928. Gest is now in Europe selecting an international cast, after which the picture will be placed in work. "The Devil's Island," Gilda Gray's first picture for Samuel Goldwyn, will be filmed shortly and is programmed on the releasing schedule for December 17. "Ramona," an Inspiration Edwin Carewe production to star Dolores Del Rio, is listed as a January 14, 1928 release. "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," a Fred Niblo production, will be released on March 10, 1928.

"The Blood Ship" at Roxy

Rothafel Contracts With Columbia Pictures for World Premiere of Sea Epic; Well-Known Cast

S. L. (ROXY) ROTHAFEL this week concluded negotiations with Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures and Jack Bellman, Columbia franchise holder in New York and Northern New Jersey, for the showing at his "cathedray of the motion picture" of "The Blood Ship," one of Columbia's "Perfect Thirty" which will be released during the coming season. In commenting on the deal Mr. Rothafel said "I'm shelving a picture I have already bought to play 'The Blood Ship.'" The arrangement is seen as a forerunner of the attitude toward the newer national distributors by the foremost exhibitors of the country.

Reports emanating from the Columbia studios on the Coast during production of the picture convinced Columbia executives that it had something out of the ordinary in the picturization of Norman Springer's tale of the sea which bears the same title as the film. When the first print was received in the home office in New York Messrs. Brandt and Bellman arranged to screen it for "Roxy"; following the projection Mr. Rothafel stated "It is one of the finest sea pictures I ever had the pleasure of viewing. It ranks with the best product of any of the leading companies."

George B. Seitz directed the production in which Hobart Bosworth plays the lead, Jacqueline Logan and Richard Arlen (loaned to Columbia by Paramount) are co-featured and the supporting cast includes Walter James, Fred Kohler, Arthur Rankin, James Bradbury, Sr., Syd Crossley, Chappell Dossett and Blue Washington.

"Life of Riley" Title of New Murray-Sidney Film

"The Life of Riley" is the title of the Charlie Murray-George Sidney production now in work at First National's Burbank studios. The original title announced for this production was "East Side, West Side."

Photography was started on "The Life of Riley" three weeks ago, and it is well along. E. M. Asher is production manager, while William Beaudine is holding the directorial reins. Besides the stellar team, the cast to date includes Myrtle Stedman, Sam Hardy, June Marlowe and Stephen Carr.

Monte Blue to Star in "Across the Atlantic"

Warner Bros. will star Monte Blue in a production to be called "Across the Atlantic." The picture will be number three of the series of four Blue vehicles for release during 1927-28. The star is now at work on the first, "The Bush Leaguer," which will be finished shortly. Within a short time he will begin work on "One Round Hogan," and upon the completion of that prize-fighting story will start making "Across the Atlantic."

Warners Cast Bobby Agnew in "Slightly Used"

Bobby Agnew has been chosen by Warner Bros. for the juvenile lead in "Slightly User," in which May McAvoy is starred, with Conrad Nagel playing principal support. The picture is now about to be put into production on the coast, with Archie Mayo directing. Melville Grosman is responsible for the story and adaptation.

"Mockery" New Title of Lon Chaney Film

"Mockery" has been selected by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as the title of Lon Chaney's current starring vehicle, now in production at the studio under the direction of Benjamin Christensen, Scandinavian director, who made "The Devil's Circus" and other pictures. The new film deals with the recent Russian Revolution.

Pauline Garon Starts "Eager Lips"

Pauline Garon, First Division player, started working this week on "Eager Lips," the first of three Garon productions that will be released by First Division Distributors, Inc. I. E. Chadwick, president of the Company, is personally supervising the production. Betty Blythe and Gardner James head the supporting cast.

Filming La Rocque Vehicle With Panchromatic Stock

Panchromatic film stock once more is being utilized exclusively in the photography of "A Fighting Eagle," Rod LaRocque's newest starring picture for Cecil B. DeMille.

Arthur Miller, chief cameraman on this production, is using "panchromatic" for both exteriors and interiors. Previously in most cases this film stock has been used only for exterior "shots," with ordinary film used for the photography of interior scenes. It has been found that the qualities which make panchromatic ideal for the filming of sunsets or unusual cloud effects, where vivid colorings are encountered, make this stock also ideal for the photographing of softly blended and harmonized interior color schemes. Unusual care must be exercised, however, with the lighting of interiors when panchromatic is used, according to Miller.

Decrease in 1926 Export of Films Into Ireland

According to available statistics, motion picture film imports into the Irish Free State during 1926 totaled 6,357,312 linear feet, which were valued at £37,230, as compared with 6,450,209 feet, valued at £45,796 during the previous year, or a loss last year of nearly 93,000 linear feet and over £8,500. Great Britain is the source of almost all of the film imports into the Irish Free State, though most of the film sent from there is of American origin.

Additions to Cast of New Meighan Vehicle

Several additions have been made to the cast of "First Degree Murder," Thomas Meighan's next starring vehicle, which James Cruze is directing for Paramount. They include Montague Shaw, Luke Cosgrave, Shirley Dorman, George Harvey, Charles Hagen, Richard Bartlett, Frederick Lee and Frank Whitson.

Carl Laemmle Sails for Europe

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, sailed early Wednesday aboard the S.S. Berengaria for three months' stay in Europe. He will inspect the newly acquired Universal exchange systems on the Continent and probably will visit Italy and Rome. He will also spend some time at his boyhood home, Laupheim, Germany, and in the various capitals of Europe. His itinerary will be similar to that of previous years.

The Universal chief was accompanied by his children, Miss Rosabelle Laemmle and Carl Jr.; by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fleckles of Chicago; by J. J. Geller, his personal representative; J. H. Rose, his private secretary, and by servants.

The Laemmle party will return to the United States early in October. A large group of Universal officials and co-workers of the popular film head were at the pier to give him a rousing send-off.

In and Out of Town

CARROLL S. TROWBRIDGE, general representative for Al and Charles Christie, has returned to his New York office after spending a month with his associates at the Christie studio in Hollywood.

PAUL GULICK, head of Universal's publicity department, officially represented his organization at the opening of the Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., last Monday evening. The occasion marked Mr. Gulick's first visit to Atlanta.

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, sailed June 28th on the S.S. Berengaria for Europe, where he will look over foreign plays and stories with a view to production in this country. He will visit the Fox studios in Berlin during his trip.

KENNETH HAWKS, supervisor of Fox production, and J. G. Blystone, have left New York for Banff, Canada, to start work on "Pajamas," which will feature Olive Borden.

AFTER many conferences with the officials of Fox Films, John Ford, the director and Philip Klein, scenarist, have returned to Hollywood.

CLAYTON P. SHEEHAN has just sailed for Europe aboard the Paris, and will supervise the sales work of foreign offices during his trip.

VIVIAN M. MOSES is making a trip to Richmond, Virginia, where she will remain over the 4th.

Morality Campaign in K. C. Has No Goal

The Society for the Supression of Commercialized Vice in Kansas City has started a campaign which has no goal. The society has asked the co-operation of women's clubs for the purpose of stamping out immoral shows, but thus for no theatre or class of theatres has been designated as the objective for the onslaught. All of the legitimate houses in Kansas City, with the exception of those theatres which use vaudeville and stage presentations in conjunction with first-run pictures, are closed, which leads theatre owners wondering what the society can have in mind, as no hint ever has been made that immorality existed in the stage presentations at motion picture houses. That it is "just another publicity gag" seems to be the unanimous opinion of most showmen.

New Universal House Will Be Built in Milwaukee

Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., is to add another theatre to its big chain in Milwaukee, according to announcement just made by Dan Michalove, general manager of the corporation.

Ground has been bought and construction will start immediately on an 1,900-seat house at Third and Centre Streets. The theatre will cost $370,000. Financial arrangements on the deal were made by Arthur J. Straus, local capitalist.

Cosmopolitan Will Screen Two More Comic Strips

"Bringing Up Father," the McManus strip, will form the basis of a screen story to be produced by Cosmopolitan. "Dumb Dora," a strip created by Chick Young, is to inspire a second vehicle for release by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The first Cosmopolitan production to be put under way in the immediate future will be "Lovelorn," which Hunt Stromberg will produce with John P. McCarthy at the megaphone. This vehicle, written for the screen by Bradley King, is based on a story by Beatrice Fairfax.

Another Cosmopolitan picture to get into early production will be a screen version of Frederick O'Brien's "White Shadows of the South Seas." It will be known on the screen as "White Shadows." Robert Flaherty has been selected as director.

Minneapolis Council Bars All Carnivals from City

The Minneapolis city council unanimously passed a resolution this week barring all carnivals from the city. The action was a temporary one, taken until a permanent ordinance could be prepared. This permanent ordinance will be ready in about two weeks, and its passage, which is regarded as a certainty, will mean that the traveling carnival companies can no longer count on the hospitality of the city.

Last week's resolution followed on the heels of a Ferris wheel accident in which four persons were injured, two of them critically.

More Players Signed for Columbia Film

The latest additions to "Sally In Our Alley," a forthcoming Columbia film, are Alec Francis, Kathlyn Williams and William H. Strauss. Alec Francis will play the part of an East Side merchant. "Sally In Our Alley" is being directed by Walter Lang.

Talley Heads Fox News and Varieties

ACCORDING to an announcement by Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president of Fox Films, on the eve of his sailing for Europe, Fox News and Fox Varieties are consolidated into one department under the direct supervision of Truman H. Talley, who has been director-in-chief of Fox News for the past three years.

In addition to Mr. Talley's promotion, Mr. Sheehan announced that James E. Darst, for many years news editor of Fox News under Mr. Talley, will become associate director of Fox News and Fox Varieties, his particular work being the editing of the Varieties. Edmund Reek, who was Mr. Darst's assistant, becomes news editor of Fox News, in charge of the camera activities of the New York and American staff. John T. Spurgeon will continue as foreign editor in charge of the foreign camera staff. Edwin Harvey has been appointed to the post of make-up editor.

House Staff Ad Contest

Novel Idea Proves Value to Box Office and Organization Spirit at Rex Theatre

ORGANIZATION contests, open to members of the theatre staffs and regarded by organization executives as one of the most productive means of promoting greater harmony and efficiency of the working force, have been turned to a highly utilitarian purpose by James M. McKoy, manager of the Rex Theatre, Spartanburg, S. C.

McKoy recently conducted one of his advertising contests, with a cash prize as the award for the successful usher or doorman in a competition based on individual advertising stunts executed by them in behalf of a picture attraction.

In working out the idea, McKoy zoned off the city and allotted one section to each member of his staff. Each competitor was expected to accomplish in his particular section some exploitation for the picture.

The conditions rested on new locations and the worth of the location as a seat-selling medium rather than just circus display methods. The prize was a $5 gold piece.

The results obtained were highly gratifying—the idea proving one of definite selling value for the theatre, as well as advancing the organization spirit among the employees, all of whom, being interested in their jobs were as a consequence glad to try their hands, and ideas, at practical showmanship along advertising lines.

As a matter of fact, the efforts put forth by the entire organization of the Rex were so spirited that McKoy decided to give a prize of $2.50 to each one of the competitors.

The value of the work done had more then passing value, for upon the completion of the novel contest the manager of the Rex found that he had broken into locations previously closed to his advertising and had added to the active list of positions for displays many sections which had been more or less dormant. Moreover, the box office figures showed the effect of the exploitation.

The picture which benefited by this exploitation was "The Night of Love." McKoy gave the attraction another excellent boost through a tie-up in which he interested the young people's societies of a local church.

Members of the church societies staged a prologue for the picture. The cast of the production numbered 30 people, among whom were two who are considered to have the best voices in town. The young people not only furnished the costumes for the prologue but in addition did some special newspaper advertising as well.

Novel Window Display Made for "Demi-Bride"

Where others had failed, Manager James H. McKoy was able to get a window display with a department store on account of its timeliness when "The Demi-Bride" showed at the Rex Theatre, Spartanburg, S. C.

McKoy made up the bride's window with all regalia and had church windows for a backing. On one side of the improvised altar, a pipe organ was built out of cardboard rolls and beaverboard. The organ was gilded as well as the windows that formed the background.

The entire bride's party was in the window and, at one end of the long window, bride's accessories were featured.

Throughout the whole display, stills placed in frames furnished by the store were very prominent.

Broadway Witnesses Parade of "First Autos"

A parade of sixty-three antiquated motor vehicles made the various grades from Dyckman Street to City Hall as best they could in a demonstration which attracted wide notice to the opening of the engagement of "The First Auto" at the Colony Theatre, New York. Barney Oldfield, famous race driver, and one of the featured players in the picture, led the parade, which culminated in a contest in which prizes were awarded the best specimens of "first autos."

First prize went to the owner of a 1900 model Knox car, while a Cadillac of the same year carried off second honors. The judges were Mayor James Walker, Barney Oldfield, H. K. Maples, president of the New York Auto Club, and the Automobile Editor of the Daily Mirror.

Prominent in the pageant was the original "999," now an exhibit in Henry Ford's museum, which was mounted on a truck. This is the car which Oldfield drove at the then record-breaking speed of a mile a minute in 1902. It is being exhibited by Warner Brothers in connection with the picture in New York.

Novelty Cards for Autos Sell "4th Commandment"

A clever means of ballyhooing "The Fourth Commandment" was originated by James P. Ryan, manager of the Palace Theatre, Muscatine, Ia. Ryan cut fifty hearts, 12 x 12 inches in size, and sixty, 22 x 24 inches in size, from red cardboard. On these he stenciled borders of roses and the title of the picture with the playdate.

Through personal friends he planted all of these hearts on the spare tires of pleasure cars and delivery trucks, and for a week previous to the showing he had a constant ballyhoo for his show in every part of the city.

Local Choir Featured on Bill at Scranton Capitol

A LOCAL singing organization, prize-winner in a contest for choral singing, takes rank among the recent outstanding attractions, which have appeared at the Capitol Theatre, Scranton, Pa., under the direction of Thomas D. Soriero, in charge of the Comerford houses in that city. The Hyde Park Choir, made up of Scranton people, and under the direction of Luther Bassett, well known as a director of vocal organizations, appeared as a guest attraction for the first three days of the week of June 19 at the Capitol and, due to local interest in the choir, there was a great response on the part of Scrantonians.

The Hyde Park Choir was featured in a vigorous newspaper publicity and advertising campaign, and became the focal point of interest created for the program of the theatre the first part of the week.

As the choir is a non-professional organization, no salary cost was saddled on the theatre for this attraction. The event was of marked local significance, and the management gave such wide publicity to the appearance of the Choir at the Capitol that the organization was rewarded and the people of the town were given opportunity to hear the choristers under the most favorable circumstances in conjunction with the Capitol program at the usual charge of admission.

The leading numbers performed by the choir were "The Storm" and "Orpeum and His Lute," the compositions which the Hyde Park organization was returned the winner. Naturally there was keen interest on the part of Scranton people to hear the organization perform the numbers in which this musical organization, representing the city, made its successful bit for the first prize in the inter-city competition held at Utica.

The Choir was presented on the stage in a special setting stuggesting the interior of a church. The singers took their places in the choir loft, in graduated tiers and elevated slightly above the stage level.

School Graduates Invited Guests at Theatre

Manager Charlie Morrison got in solid with the Senior High School graduating class when he invited the 165 members to see "Lovers?" at the Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

Mechanical Lobby Display Exploits "Resurrection"

A mechanical display, erected in the lobby of a closed theatre, was used with good effect as exploitation for the showing of "Resurrection" at the Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla., recently by Manager Charles N. Amos.

The display consisted of a rectangular piece of beaverboard with numerous stills pasted all over it. The name of theatre and play dates appeared at the top and at the bottom, extending from one end to the other, with the title of the picture, "Resurrection."

A rectangular opening a little above the center of the beaverboard display was used for the mechanical operation. The figures in the display, resembling Russian peasants, were mounted on a belt that kept continually moving, while an electric blower, two fans and a large vacuum cleaner were used to make it snow. A pipe running from the blower (which was located at the bottom of the display), to the top, caused the snow to fall. The fans kept the snow whirling and the vacuum cleaner picked it up and shot it into the blower.

The display was lighted at night by concealed lights; the lights playing on the falling snow gave it a wonderful effect.

Merchant Tie-up Features Stage Act at Tivoli

Manager E. R. Rogers featured his stage hit in conjunction with the showing of Florence Vidor in "The World at Her Feet," when that film showed at the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Alexander Keese and his Troubadours furnished the stage show in a Spanish setting entitled "Bits of Spain."

One of the local coal companies carried banners on all their trucks reading, "Buy Your Coal from Penn Coal and Coke Co., and Get a Ticket to The Tivoli, presenting Alexander Keese and his Troubadours with Feature Stage Acts and Pictures."

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Studio Briefs

Gregory La Cava, now directing Chester Conklin and George Bancroft in "Tell It to Sweeney," has signed a new contract with Paramount.

Neill Neilly has replaced Budd Fine as the villain in "Gentlemen Prefer Scotch," a Fox two-reel comedy based on a story by Arthur Greenlaw and Sam White. Jules White is directing. Nick Stuart and Sally Phipps portray the boy and girl leads. The picture is being supervised by George E. Marshall.

Oliver Eckhardt will play in the Fox two-reel comedy based on O. Henry's story, "Suite Homes," which is now in production in Hollywood. Ernie Shields, Anita Garvin, Marjorie Beebe and Harry Cornella had been announced previously. Zion Myers is directing from a scenario by Max Gold.

Fatty Alexander, Kewpie Ross, and Fat Karr are back from a vacation with additional poundage on their frames and have started work in "Wanderers of the Waistline," the first of their third series of Standard Fat Men comedies which will be released again this season by F B O. This will be the twenty-sixth picture for the three.

Richard Arlen has been selected to play the leading role opposite Esther Ralston in her forthcoming Paramount production, "The Glory Girl."

King Vidor's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer unit, which has spent the past several weeks in New York obtaining scenes for "The Crowd," left for Buffalo last week, to take shots in Niagara Falls. Although the Vidor party stopped at the Falls on its way East from the coast, the time schedules and bad weather combined to prevent satisfactory conclusions. It is possible that Vidor and his party may return to Manhattan before leaving for Los Angeles. Special lenses and various innovations were used in procuring the mass and scenic effects Vidor desired.

With the completion this week of "Splashing Through," the 19th of "The Collegians" series, Carl Laemmle, Jr., who wrote and supervised the entire production, announced that the 20th and final episode would be filmed immediately. The second ten form the New Collegian Series and are to be released during 1927-28. Nat Ross is directing.

Marjorie Beebe, petite red head comedienne, has started work in a Fox two-reel comedy, "Why Blondes Leave Home." The leading male role opposite her is taken by Richard Walling; Dorothea Walbert and Harry Dunkinson are cast in supporting roles. Gus Meins is directing from the story and scenario by Henry Dunn.

Frank Urson has started direction on "Beautiful But Dumb," Vera Reynolds' latest starring vehicle under the personal supervision of William C. de Mille studios.

Roy D'Arcy has just been assigned a role in "Romance," the Conrad novel which is to be directed by John S. Robertson as a starring vehicle for Ramon Novarro. Marceline Day is the featured feminine lead. Adaptation and continuity of the story has just been completed by Josephine Lovett.

Having completed the "East Side" scenes from "East Side, West Side," now being produced at the Fox New York Studio, Allan Dwan is turning his attention to the "West Side" portions of the Felix Riesenberg story. The large Ghetto set is now giving way to elaborate Park Avenue interiors on the same stage. Dore Davidson and Sonia Nodalsky are "Pa" and "Ma" Lipvitch; George O'Brien and Virginia Valli, Holmes Herbert, June Collyer and Frank Dodge are the others.

Genara Spagnoli, Russian actor, has been added to the cast of "Terror," Lon Chaney's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, on which Benjamin Christensen, Danish director, is now engaged. Spagnoli, as his name indicates, is Italian by birth, having been born in Russia.

Production was started this week on "Shanghai Bound," Richard Dix's latest picture for Paramount, which Luther Reed is directing.

Dale Hanshaw has purchased for Sierra Pictures, an original story, "The Wild Ace" by L. V. Jefferson. A cast will be assembled under the direction of Horace B. Carpenter.

Oliver Eckhardt will play the part of Uncle in the Fox two reel comedy based on O. Henry's story, "Suite Homes," which is now in production in Hollywood. Ernie Shields, Anita Garvin, Marjorie Beebe and Harry Cornella had been announced previously. Zion Myers is directing from a scenario by Max Gold, with George E. Marshall supervising.

For her new United Artists Picture, "My Best Girl," Mary Pickford has as cameraman Charles Rosher, who photographed virtually all of the recent Mary Pickford films.

Shooting on "My Best Girl" will be completed in August, Miss Pickford said this week. The picture is now in its fourth week of production at the United Artists Studio, Hollywood. Sam Taylor is Miss Pickford's director. The story of "My Best Girl," written by Kathleen Norris, will appear serially in Collier's Magazine.

Warner Bros. have borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn the services of Conrad Nagel for the lead opposite May McAvoy in her next starring vehicle, "Slightly Used" on which work will start as soon as Miss McAvoy completes her current role as feminine lead with Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." Archie May has been designated to direct "Slightly Used." Story and the adaptation are both by Melville Grosman.

Roy Burns, one of Cecil B. DeMille's assistants during the filming of "The King of Kings," is assistant director Frank Urson making "Beautiful But Dumb," William C. deMille's first production as associate producer with Cecil B. DeMille. Burns takes the place left vacant by William J. Cowen who temporarily left the DeMille lot to become first assistant director for Douglas Fairbanks.

In order to assure comedy relief in "Bride of the Night," Fox screen version of "Prince Fazil," Director Howard Hawks has added Hank Mann and Dale Fuller to the cast. Charles Farrell and Greta Nissen have the principal roles, with Mae Busch, Vadim Uraneff, Tyler Brooke and Myrna Loy in supporting parts.

Lloyd Bacon finished this week the supervision of cutting and editing Dolores Costello's latest starring vehicle, "The Heart of Maryland," which he directed for Warner Bros. The picture is now ready for shipment east in anticipation of a July release date.

"The Heart of Maryland" brings Dolores Costello in a story of Civil War days. The cast surrounding the star includes Jason Robards, Helene Costello, Warner Richmond, Myrna Loy, Paul Kruger, Carrol Nye, Charles Edward Bull, Walter Rodgers and James Welch.

May Robson and Bessie Love who had featured roles in "Rubber Tires" find themselves again cast in featured roles in "Harp in Hock," now being made under the direction of Renaud Hoffman for DeMille Pictures. They will work with Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coghlan. Joseph Striker, Elise Bartlett, Louis Natheaux and Lillian Harmer are also in the cast of this story which was adapted by Sonya Levien.

An old-fashioned carnival company with its side shows, shell games and like accessories is one of the features of "The Life of Riely," the E. M. Asher production now being filmed by William Beaudine for First National. The show, with its 'big top' and wagons, occupies a conspicuous place on the First National 'lot' at Burbank.

Warner Baxter and other members of "The Coward" company, including Sharon Lynn, leading lady, and Alfred Raboch, director, left the F. B. O. studios this week for Big Bear Lake, in the mountains above San Bernardina, California, where they will inaugurate filming of Arthur Stringer's story of the same name.

This story was published a short time ago in Hearst's International magazine. The exterior scenes will be filmed in the huge pine forests surrounding Big Bear Lake. Others of the cast include Freeman Wood and Raoul Paoli.

Allan Dwan has added seven celebrities to the payroll of "East Side, West Side," which he is now producing at the Fox Films New York Studio.

In "East Side, West Side" are Dore Davidson, Sonia Nodalsky, John Miltern, Holmes Herbert, John Dooley and Frank Allsworth.

Key City Reports

New York City

BUSINESS along Broadway has evidently settled down to a quiet, average summer pace, with no startlingly high grosses but with the influx of tourists and the end of school terms holding the figures up satisfactorily.

No records were broken, although the general average of picture quality might be said to have been somewhat higher than the week previous.

The Roxy was up over the $100,000 mark again, showing "Alias the Deacon," which was excellent for the season.

The Capitol, holding "The Unknown" for a second week, made a splendid showing, conditions considered. The Paramount, with "Ritzy," regarded as a weak picture, was still under the $70,000 mark, but holding its own, aided by the extended engagement of Paul Whiteman.

The Mark Strand, using Van and Schenck as stage headliners to buck the Whiteman opposition, did an average week with "Framed."

Three new pictures opened for runs—"The Way of All Flesh" at the Rialto, "Old San Francisco" at Warners, and "The First Auto" at the Colony—with the first two showing a likelihood of considerable success. The last named seems to be regarded as not so strong.

Cleveland

THE weather stays clear and cool, the pictures are coming along fine, business is getting better and better, and everybody's happy. That's the local report for last week. Suburban houses still report that business is poor, and the report from out of town in the neighboring districts is rather gloomy, still there are fewer houses closed than ever before in the summer and the first-run houses are doing almost mid-season business.

"When a Man Loves" did very big business at the Stillman Theatre. It went even better than "Don Juan," which was one of the outstanding engagements of the season. It was presented with Vitaphone synchronization and Vitaphone specialty numbers. It is being held for another week. "Prince of Head Waiters" was also a big success. The story, the cast and the direction all combined to make this a film with popular appeal. "See You in Jail" pleased the large attendance all week at the State. Just the kind of light, amusing tale to satisfy a summer-time complex. "Ritzy" done in Elinor Glynn style, pleased the Keith Palace audiences, as it is a strictly box office attraction. Surrounded by a good vaudeville bill headed by Wanda Hawley in a sketch, business was better than it has been for several weeks. "Lost at the Front" played its third and last week at the Cameo, and held up strong during the entire engagement. The Cameo has been specializing in comedy features, and has built up a large clientele as the "laugh headquarters" of the movies. The Park Theatre did a good business with "Tracked by Police." These dog pictures always play to full houses. "No Control," did not get a good send-off by the critics, but the paying guests liked it both at Keith's East 105th St., where it played all week, and at Reade's Hippodrome, where it played the first half of the week. "Birds of Prey," with Priscilla Dean as one of the birds, did better than average at the Hippodrome the last half of the week. The Circle Theatre is playing a season of revivals with daily changes and reduced prices.

Philadelphia

BUSINESS at the downtown theatres in Philadelphia tapered off a bit during the past week.

The Stanley, with Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie," augmented by the sixteen Tiller Sunshine Girls and Edna Thomas, singer of negro spirituals, had a fairly satisfactory week.

The Stanton continued to do good business with "The Better 'Ole." The Vitaphone unit, however, was not transferred from the Aldine, where the picture had previously run, to the Stanton.

Business at the Fox with Alma Rubens in the "Heart of Salome," was somewhat below its previous weeks. The program was augmented by Muriel La France, soprano, the Littlefield Dancers, Chico, syncopating harpist, and Herman Timberg in a small revue.

The Arcadia with "Rolled Stockings," had mediocre business to report for the week.

Florence Vidor in "The World at Her Feet," at the Karlton did a little better, but receipts were nothing to brag about.

The Palace, with Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry in "Lovers," had fairly satisfactory business.

"See You in Jail" at the Victoria, even with an elaborate lobby display, did only fair business.

The Capitol, however, with Milton Sills in "The Sea Tiger," reported good business.

Central Pennsylvania

THE John Barrymore film play, "Don Juan," at Loew's Regent, and Clara Bow, in "Rough House Rosie," in the Victoria, enjoyed such outstanding popularity during the past week in Harrisburg that some of the offerings in other theatres suffered somewhat from the box office viewpoint.

In the Colonial the feature film was "Three Hours," starring Corinne Griffith. Notwithstanding the actress did some very clever histrionic work, the play could not compare in pulling power with either "Don Juan" or "Rough House Rosie" with which it had to contend for box office honors. Many who saw it thought "Three Hours" was too gloomy throughout and needed the injection of comedy element to make it really satisfactory entertainment.

The timely title of the play offered at the Broad Street theatre was "The Flying Fool," and although Manager Feldser frankly advertised that Colonel Lindbergh was not pictured in the play, many patrons were drawn to the theatre because of the great vogue for anything relating to flying.

San Francisco

A WEEK of good average business was enjoyed at the motion picture houses in San Francisco during the past week. This applies to both downtown and residential theatres, generally speaking.

"Slide, Kelly, Slide," continued to draw at the St. Francis Theatre for a second week. "Tillie The Toiler," drew well at Loew's Warfield, which together with the presentation acts drew many. But what is supposed to have drawn the largest crowd there was the fact that it was the last appearance of Rube Wolfe, who stayed over another week.

"The Love of Sunya," together with Fanchon & Marco's presentation act, drew crowds, as did their special appearance for two nights in person. "Too Many Crooks" shown at the California Theatre did fairly good. At the Cameo Theatre, "Men of Daring" drew an average crowd.

"The Heart Thief" at the Golden Gate Theatre, together with a very high class vaudeville also drew. At the Pantages Theatre crowds were attracted by both the picture, "The Count of Monte Christo" and the vaudeville acts. The people enjoyed "Out of The West" and "Much Mystery," as well as vaudeville at the Union Square Theatre.

In the residential houses, "Spangles" was liked at the Wigwam Theatre by the people who also were pleased with the musical comedy. "Evening Clothes" was well thought of at the Coliseum Theatre, as were the special orchestra numbers.

Albany

FROM the standpoint of attendance at the motion picture theatres in Albany and Troy, last week presented a series of contrasts. In Troy, business started off exceptionally good on Sunday when an all day rain forced thousands to the theatres with the result that "A Million Bid" did exceptionally well on Sunday and apparently pleased the people to the extent that by word of mouth it was advertised and the Troy theatre found little to complain of during the four days the picture held forth. The last three days found "Cradle Snatchers" doing fairly well when the weather turned cool. At the Lincoln theatre, "Drums of the Desert" running for the week failed to bring anything above ordinary business. "The Four Horsemen" was brought back to Proctors' Rourth Street house the fore part of last week and drew exceptionally well, without any particular regard, apparently being paid to weather conditions.

Theatre owners in Albany characterized last week's business as "terrible." Probably the best week's business was done by the Mark Strand with "A Million Bid" and three selections by the Vitaphone. The Leland took a slump in "The Secret Studio" while the Mark Ritz did nothing with "The Broncho Twister." The Clinton Square ran to small crowds due to weather conditions and also the fact that the street in front of the theatre is in a torn up condition.

Seattle

SPRING weather, warm and sunny, coupled with some mediocre motion pictures at the leading first run houses, knocked the box office down to a rather low level in this city for the last seven days.

Probably the best drawing card in town was the Blue Mouse Theatre with a new Vitaphone show and the feature picture "A Million Bid." The picture was just fair in audience appeal, but the Van & Schenck and Mary Lewis numbers on the Vitaphone program put the bill across to big business. The same show is held for a second week.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre "Tillie the Toiler" played to average houses. It was a pleasing picture, but far from a big production or a big box office success. The Fanchon-Marco revue headed by Leon Vavara, former Orpheum attraction, was weak. Business just average for the engagement.

The Coliseum this week began its summer policy of two changes weekly, playing "Afraid to Love" and "See You in Jail." Under the new policy, this house will present the weaker pictures of the large producers, and a change in box office tempo is noticeable already. The Coliseum, ordinarily the leading box office house, did just fair with the two above-named films.

"The Tender Hour" at the United Artists was just a fair drawing card, building up a little over recent films at this house, but still far below normal. "Heaven on Earth" at the Columbia did a consistently fair business throughout the engagement, with a strong supporting film and musical program.

"Quarantined Rivals" at the Embassy and "The Last Frontier" at Pantages were average attractions only.

Boston

AN anticipated lull in the down town theatres failed to materialize last week in spite of perfect vacation and out-of-door weather. While there was no perceptible falling off in the evening attendance, there was a marked increase in the matinees and the week has been, as a whole, exceptionally good for this season.

Down town Boston theatres are reporting good business at all performances. At the Modern and Beacon, the Twin Houses, "Don Juan" closes this week after three weeks' run in each. This is the first time that any feature has ever been held over even a second week in these houses.

The Metropolitan Theatre provided a ten-feature de luxe program during the week which resulted in a jump in the box office receipts over any week of the summer season. "Barbed Wire" was the feature with a John Murray Anderson presentation. Gene Rodemich and his orchestra, the Metropolitan Grand Orchestra, organ features and especially interesting short subjects and news reels.

Loew's State's showing of "Tillie The Toiler" apparently was a signal for a general rush to the box office and one of the best weeks of the season was the result. Phil Spitalny and orchestra continue as the musical feature.

Boston's only road show, "The King of Kings" completed its second week with receipts far above expectations and its run at the Tremont Theatre will continue for some time to come.

"Babe Comes Home" is playing simultaneously in the Scollay Square Olympia, Washington Street Olympia and Central Square, Cambridge, Theatres to good business. At the Fenway, another Publix theatre, "Chang" is the mystery film enjoying its new England premiere.

Loew's Orpheum is showing "Lovers" and is in addition holding amateur week for Boston talent but on a bill entirely different from anything heretofore attempted for the amateurs. The fifty amateurs have been organized into a Revue and the results have justified expectations.

"Ankles Preferred" is proving a popular film at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre while "White Gold" is being shown at the University and Exeter Theatres. Bills at the other houses are equally as good.

This week brings to a close another legitimate theatre, leaving only the Colonial open.

Baltimore

Carnivals staged for the benefit of the Babies' Hot Weather Fund at the various public parks in Baltimore, and a Bohemian athletic meet at the Stadium, combined with several hot days, put a crimp in the business at the moving picture houses in that city during the week beginning Monday, June 20.

Despite that, however, "The Night of Love," with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, went over very good with the patrons at Loew's Valencia, and at Loew's Century "Knockout Reilly," with Richard Dix, proved a good drawing card.

"The Brute," with Monte Blue, did fairly good business at Warners' Metropolitan up until the last two days of the week. "Moulders of Men" did fairly well at the Garden with five acts of vaudeville, and "The Price of Honor" did pretty good at Keith's Hippodrome, also with five acts of vaudeville.

"Wedding Bills," with Raymond Griffith, did not stand up so well, doing less than fair business at the New Theatre, while "Broadway Nights," with Lois Wilson and Sam Hardy went over poorly at the Rivoli.

The Embassy was out of the running during the week due to some trouble in booking arrangements.

Kansas City

AN uncertain week of weather in Kansas City last week did not result in an uncertain week of box receipts by far. With a fairly strong lineup of pictures, most of the first run houses did a better business than the preceding week, which was about normal.

At the Newman, Lon Chaney in "The Unknown," drew good all week, the total attendance being above the average. At the Royal Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" played its second week to better than average crowds. The "Passion Play" at the Liberty got away to a rather average start, but picked up as the week wore on.

Billie Dove in "The Tender Hour" did a better business than the preceding week, as did Tom Mix in "Outlaws of the Red River" at the Pantages theatre. John Barrymore in "Don Juan," in conjunction with the Vitaphone at the Globe, did one of the biggest weeks that house ever has known.

Minneapolis

BUSINESS was unusually good at the Minneapolis picture theatres last week, and one house even broke a record of a year's standing. This house was the State, which featured the semi-annual Finkelstein & Ruben Kiddies' revue, a juvenile song and dance act recruited from Twin City talent. This act was elaborately presented, and was one of the most successful ever put on by F. & R. The film feature was Reginald Denny in "Fast and Furious," which proved to be very popular. The combination of light comedy and children's revue proved to be as nice a one as any exhibitor could ask for.

John Barrymore, in "The Beloved Rogue," did a fair week's business at the Strand. The Lyric showed "The Telephone Girl," with Madge Bellamy, and had a very good week as a result. A re-showing of "The Scarlet Letter," this time at the Grand, resulted in a good business for that theatre.

The Hennepin-Orpheum featured "The Price of Honor," with Malcolm McGregor and Dorothy Revier, and the film may have helped business a bit. The same may be said for "Matinee Ladies," with May McAvoy, which was shown at Pantages.

Business in the neighborhood houses continues to be very good. When the warm summer days come, people seem to prefer going to the nearest theatre instead of making the trip downtown. The Loring, Lagoon, Rialto, and Lyndale all experienced good weeks last week. Among the pictures which were shown at these theatres were "Taxi Dancer," "Rookies," "Fire Brigade," "Evening Clothes," "Blind Alleys," "Fighting Love," "Love of Sunya," "Venus of Venice" and "Children of Divorce."

The Shubert stock company closed for the summer last week, after presenting Blanche Ring in "Cradle Snatchers." Much of the Shubert's patronage will be diverted to the movies the next few weeks. Pantages has decided to remain open for the summer, which means just so much more competition for the picture theatres.

Milwaukee

AN unusually good week was enjoyed by down town theatres last week, due without doubt to the extensive exploitation of the Saxe theatres for their Jubilee week. The Saxe brothers' 25 years as exhibitors were celebrated by a gala week in all Saxe theatres of the state, and the Milwaukee theatres especially benefited by unusually good patronage. Over one hundred exploitation stunts were carried out in addition to wide advertising of Jubilee week.

The Wisconsin theatre with "Naughty but Nice" as the attraction of the program, drew excellent patronage during the entire week. The Strand with "See You in Jail" was very well attended, and crowds flocked to see "Captain Salvation" at the Merrill. The Alhambra showing "Fast and Fur- ious'' also enjoyed good patronage, as did the Garden showing ''Rich Men's Sons.''

The neighborhood houses of the Saxe chain stimulated business in the outlying sections and all theatres benefited accordingly. ''Knock Out Reilly'' was the feature at the Savoy, Tivoli and Milwaukee and drew good business. The Colonial drew gratifying receipts with the ''Demi Bride.'' The Tower and Modjeska theatres showing ''Children of Divorce'' found patronage very satisfactory.

Salt Lake City

THE average downtown theatre business for the past week was very good with weather conditions being settled and fair after a very cool and unsettled spring and early summer having been had here.

Clara Bow in ''Rough House Rosie,'' went over exceedingly well. A stage offering, in connection with the picture program here, billed as ''The Aeolian Harp Ensemble'' was also well received. ''Venus of Venice'' starring Constance Talmadge, is said to have brought capacity houses to the Victory. The double feature program at the American was a drawing card as usual for this large house; the feature being: Ken Maynard in ''The Overland Stage,'' and Johnny Hines in ''All Aboard.'' The first run showing at the Gem the past week was Bessie Love and Harrison Ford in ''Rubber Tires,'' a comedy which proved to be good entertainment. The opening picture which was shown at the new Rialto, (formerly the Kinema) a second run house, was ''The Winning of Barbara Worth,'' and a tremendous business was enjoyed. Helene Chadwick in ''Stolen Pleasures'' was the feature picture shown at the Orpheum in addition to the Ackerman Harris vaudeville, with the second run of ''Upstage'' being offered at matinees only. The usual large crowds attended the Orpheum performances. Reginald Denny in ''Fast and Furious'' was very well received at the Pantages in connection with the vaudeville program and splendid business has been experienced.

Second run theatres report business to be picking up noticeable as do the local suburban houses. ''The Midnight Sun'' is said to have gone over especially big at the Star, a second run house here, according to Manager Andy Floar.

Oklahoma City

''ROOKIES'' was a perfect box office picture at the Criterion Theatre last week. Business was splendid. There was some extra newspaper advertising done on this picture, and there was also a midnite preview of it the Saturday before the picture was shown.

Lewis Stone, in ''Prince of Head Waiters,'' drew rather well at the Empress all week. The star has a big following at this theatre.

''The Beloved Rogue,'' with John Barrymore, pleased some of the audiences that saw it, and didn't go over so well with others. As far as we could tell the business done on it was good. ''Rolled Stockings,'' which showed at this theatre the latter part of the week, was pretty good as a business getter. There seem to be enough of the younger crowd to make a fair showing at the box-office.

''Fast and Furious,'' with Reginald Denny, went over alright at the Liberty the first part of the week for no reason at all, except a certain amount of people like ''speed'' plays and Denny is a drawer at this theatre. ''Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl'' was so melo it was amusing. This picture played the last half the week to not quite average business.

The weather, which was cool and rainy the first part of the week, helped the theatre business wonderfully, but the heat the last half was responsible for a falling off in the attendance.

Ottawa

THE theatres of Ottawa, Ontario, and Hull, Quebec, had things pretty much their own way during the week of June 20, although business was hurt for all of them by a humidity wave one day of the week.

Manager J. M. Franklin, of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, found that patrons were enthusiastic about ''The Whirlwind of Youth,'' starring Lois Moran, this picture doing much better than ''Rubber Tires'' of the previous week. There was a big week at the Regent where Manager Ray Tubman had ''Tillie the Toiler.'' This was well liked, and business was also helped here by Famous Players' Screen Opportunity Contest, local young ladies appearing nightly in a competition for a trip to Toronto and other prizes. War comedies are popular in Ottawa and there were excellent crowds at the Centre Theatre for ''Lost at the Front.'' At the Imperial Theatre, however, ''The Love Thrill,'' starring Laura LaPlante, was only fair. James Moxley, manager of the Francais Theatre, had steady patronage for three features during the week, these being ''Three Bad Men,'' ''Private Izzy Murphy'' and ''Eagle of the Sea.''

At the Eden Theatre, Hull, there were good crowds for ''Take It From Me,'' Manager Donat Paquin having one of the best recent runs for this Reginald Denny picture. Anne Q. Nilsson in ''Easy Pickings'' was the attraction for the first half of the week at the Laurier Theatre and it was good pickings for the box office.

"Topsy and Eva"—United Artists, Egyptian Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Rosetta Duncan a discovery. Her pantomine, transition from nonsense to pathos something that has been needed in comedy field. Rosetta is to screen what Al Jolson is to stage, a blackfaced artist without equal. 'Topsy and Eva' carries interest through to end. Due entirely to Duncans, whose charm and vivacity would support much less frail scenario structure. 'Topsy and Eva' makes us eager to see Duncans in other comedies."

Record: "Have seen many first night audiences at Egyptian wax exceedingly enthusiastic, but never one as much so as last night, when it paid tribute to Vivian and Rosetta Duncan as they did their stuff."

Daily Express: "Going to be strong draw. Will be great entertainment for juveniles especially."

Illustrated News: "Their remarkable stage work that won for popular Los Angeles girls international fame was remembered and compared by critical first night audience and verdict was that Vivian and Rosetta Duncan had risen to new heights of dramatic and comic entertainment in this, their first motion picture. . . . Eccentric acting of Rosetta Duncan as Topsy filmed to good advantage. Her novel antics sustained fun of picture throughout. Vivian Duncan, as sweet little Eva, shared honors with her sister. . . . Certainly 'Topsy and Eva' has lost none of charm in screen adaptation and provides pleasant comparisons for those who saw stage version and in words of song, 'Remember.'"

"Lovers?" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Philadelphia

Evening Ledger: "It is not too sweeping statement to say that most motion picture stories run along parallel lines with train of thought following action. 'Lovers?' sets out at entirely different tangent, dealing primarily with thoughts, suspicions and their subconscious effect. Result engrossing, intense. . . . Picture that holds unflagging interest. . . . Such picture demands most of actors. Superb cast fulfills every requirement. Novarro plays with touch of youth, idealism, sincerity that makes of it part that is not easily forgotten. . . . Wife is played by exquisite Alice Terry and perfect trio completed by Edward Martindel, who puts sympathy and understanding into role. . . . Direction admirably restrained, tribute to John M. Stahl, photography work of beauty. . . . Moments which are gripping. Duel exceedingly well done. . . . Scenes of exquisite tenderness. . . .

Public Ledger: "Adroitly handled story. . . . Alice Terry's blond beauty pictorially effective."

Bulletin: "Beautifully posed and photographed. . . . Duel of style to create thrill. . . ."

"Old San Francisco"—Warner Brothers, Warner Theatre, New York City

Sun: "Excellent thriller, skilfully acted, directed and lighted. Of particular melodramatic excellence was earthquake. Much credit should be given to Alan Crosland for clever way in which he has fashioned this bit of melodrama. Good entertainment."

Graphic: "Beautiful star, good direction, romantic story sprinkled with intrigue and coated with variegated emotions, able cast, San Francisco fire, exceptional sets—with these was concocted 'Old San Francisco.'"

Journal: "Box-office entertainment. Miss Costello exquisite. Photoplay lavishly mounted. Oland does excellent work."

Evening World: "Earthquake and subsequent fire shown in most convincing manner. No question that little expense was spared in making it realistic."

Times: "Roaring melodrama. Interesting and ingenious. Miss Costello competent and attractive as heroine."

Herald-Tribune: "Miss Costello called upon to do more acting than ever she has done before and she rises to occasion magnificently. We should like to sing separate hymn of praise for each member of cast and for Director Crosland."

News: "Dolores Costello exquisite! Earthquake thrilling!"

Telegraph: "Sound drama. 'Old San Francisco' should hit nation's box-offices like earthquake!"

Time To Love

Griffith Comedy Very Amusing

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

KEEN satirist that he is, Raymond Griffith continues along his way—this time aiming his arrows in the direction of duello—as that practice is or was conducted on the greenswards of France. And with the very good direction of Frank Tuttle, and the assistance of such capable performers as William Powell and Vera Voronina, a picture has been made that certainly ought to be good for a generous quantity of satisfying laughs. A number of the sequences are extremely funny; particularly, those dealing with the captive balloons and the mock duels.

As Raymond Casanouva, a disillusioned Parisian boulevardier, Griffith is first seen with suicidal intent on the edge of a bridge. His leap lands him in the boat of the charming Countess Elvire, and they fall in love—so intensely, that the boat almost drifts over a dam. Elvire's father, an old fellow powerfully interested in seances, has been instructed by his favorite spirits to marry his daughter to the Marquis de Daddo, a very good friend of Casanouva's. Thus, the triangle is formed. In the course of events, Casanouva blithely fights several duels for his friend—and to the consternation of Elvire, eventually arranges another duel with the Marquis. With gendarmes hot on the trail, Casanouva and Elvire hide in a basket which later proves to be part of a balloon to be used as an anti-aircraft target.

The Cast: Raymond Griffith, William Powell, Vera Voronina, Josef Swickard, Mario Carillo, Pierre de Ramsey, Helene Giere, Alfred Sabato. Directed by Frank Tuttle.

THEME: Satire on the duello with romance interwoven.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Direction and good work of entire cast. Duels and balloon sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up names of featured players, comedy angle, and use title for catch lines.

DRAWING POWER: For the better class downtown and neighborhood trade.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, 4,926 feet. Released June, 1927.

Babe Comes Home

The Bambino Scores In Amusing Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SEVERAL years ago Babe Ruth made a picture which was very much to the bush league. He failed to reach first base in the celluloid stadium. But the Bambino has come up again after this long time lapse—and proceeds to demonstrate that he knows his stuff. "Babe Comes Home" is an amusing comedy which tells its little story crisply enough, like the way its star smacks the ol' apple.

Through skillful direction and an ability to adapt himself to the situations, whether serious or humorous, the Babe registers all the necessary emotions. Don't take it from us that he is liable to cause Chaplin, Lloyd, et al., to do a fade-out. Yet, if he wanted to quit the diamond and crash the movies for keeps he would more than make good.

The plot of the Babe's picture revolves around a plug of tobacco. Babe's uniform is always dirty from dust and tobacco juice. The laundress who washes it every week is so provoked over his untidy habits that she cautions him in a letter to come clean. So he gives up the cut plug and goes into a batting slump from which he doesn't emerge until the girl gives him a chew. It will appeal through the acting of the Babe, Anna Q. Nilsson and the assortment of amusing gags.

The Cast: Babe Ruth, Anna Q. Nilsson, Louise Fazenda, Arthur Stone, Ethel Shannon.

THEME: Romantic comedy of baseball player and laundress, the latter causing him to give up chewing tobacco. Goes into a batting slump until the cut plug is restored to his hip pocket.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scene in amusement park. The episodes of Babe and heroine looking over future home. The cuspidor sequence. The moment when Babe cleans up his team-mates in clubhouse. The acting of Babe. The local color of game. The captions.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Babe Ruth and his fame with the bat. Play special performances for ball-players. Attire ushers in baseball uniforms. Stress the comedy.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw through magnetism of star's name and personality. Suitable for big or little time.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, seven reels. Released, June 1927.

The Way of All Flesh

Jannings Proves Master of Characterization

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

STARK tragedy, realistic to the nth degree, not unmixed with touches of symbolism—a character portrayal that shows a depth of human understanding possessed by few artists—a performance that runs the gamut of human emotions—all on view in Emil Jannings' first American-made production. Unlike "The Last Laugh" this picture will intrigue the interest of the masses because its story depicts the actions and reactions of a type of man with which they are more familiar; it is not the abstract character study that was Jannings' hotel-doorman; it will satisfy the devotees of intellectual entertainment and appeal to the elemental senses of those who must have sentimentality in their screen fare; so is the tale constructed.

"The EYES have IT"—though Jannings' make-up ability is a thing to be admired, the lack of it would not prove serious as his every thought is projected through his eyes. The production as a whole is best in the first half with the hand of Jannings evident in the directorial handling of the action; but, though the star continues a flawless performance in the latter portion of the footage, there is a noticeable let-down in both script work and the megaphone wielding; a mushy "Stella Dallas" finish doesn't fit in at all and should be re-vamped. The photography is perfect; the cameraman probably was aided by the director who knows his angles as a result of early training.

"The Way of All Flesh" is one of the best pictures of the year.

The Cast: Emil Jannings, Belle Bennett, Phyllis Haver, Donald Keith, Fred Kohler, Philippe de Lacey. Story by Perley Poore Sheehan. Directed by Victor Fleming.

THEME: Melodrama. Family man, bank cashier in small town, vamped and robbed by Chicago blonde. To save honor of his family, he buries his identity.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Jannings' work, photography and Phyllis Haver's performance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Jannings' first American production. Simplicity of story.

DRAWING POWER: Good for any house, any theatre, any locality.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, 4,926 feet. Released, June 18, 1927.

Broadway Nights

Stage Story Is Trite and Tearful

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT seems almost impossible for a stage story to get away from the beaten track and display anything new in plot or treatment. The film decorated with the alluring title above follows a well-worn groove. It must needs sing a song of sentiment and paint a pinch of pathos in contracting the characters and establishing the conflict. The contrast in such stories must be sharply divided—with the characters carefully catalogued as to type.

In "Broadway Nights" an amateur actress with professional ideas is encouraged to become the partner of a song and dance man. But no sooner do they start their act than the trouper's old weakness for the "rolling bones" gets the better of him. Consequently the girl rejects him to triumph alone while he sinks to the gutter.

Of course with such stories the weakling must get back on his feet. And he accomplishes his come-back via the radio. A reconciliation is effected when the girl hears his voice on the air. She heard him just in time to check out a persistent suitor in the figure of a theatrical manager.

That's how this story is done—with scarcely a moment given up to any shafts of satire or merriment. It is treated with an old-fashioned coating of sobs—which gives emphasis to exaggerated emotions. A little bright by-play would have helped it immensely. Lois Wilson is charming as the girl, but Sam Hardy over acts.

The Cast: Lois Wilson, Sam Hardy, Louis John Bartels, Philip Strange, Barbara Stanwick, "Bunny" Weldon. Director, Joseph C. Boyle.

THEME: Romantic drama of vaudeville performers who have misunderstanding and become reconciled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The amateur night sequence. The acting by Lois Wilson. The stage atmosphere. The reconciliation.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Stress that it's a theatrical story. Play up title. Feature principals, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average trade. Title should attract them.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, seven reels. Released, June, 1927.

Old San Francisco

Old-Fashioned Meller, But It's Well Produced

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH such a title as this picture carries one anticipated something in the shape of an epic. Expectations were that the real story of San Francisco would be unfolded in graphic strips of celluloid. But after an introductory prologue showing the Spaniards establishing the site of the city it swings into a hectic melodrama of the underworld. The plot motivates around the attempt of a political boss (a Chinaman—no less) to win the affections of a fair descendant of the Castilian family, which founded the city.

The girl's family has been killed off—and her beauty conquers every man who comes within hailing distance. A young Irishman carries on the heroics—and saves her in timely melodramatic fashion from the clutches of the oily villain (played with fine gusto by Warner Oland). But when it seems as if she would succumb to his advances her prayer—so the film has it—brings on the earthquake and fire. Her tormentors are exterminated—and she is rescued to live happily ever after.

One must forget the old-time serial touches and look to its color and detail. It does enliven the interest even though its action is retarded time and again while characters and scenes are emphasized. It is not an epic of a great city, the plot not coming within a mile of recording any such idea.

The Cast: Dolores Costello, Warner Oland, Josef Swickard, Tom Santschi, Sojin, Anna May Wong, Walter McGrail, Charles E. Mack, Anders Randolph. Director, Alan Crosland.

THEME: Melodrama of fair Spanish descendant whose beauty inspires evil political boss to desire her. Wins love and protection from youth.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The settings. The atmosphere. The Chinatown scenes. The earthquake and fire climax. The appeal of star and acting by company. The action and suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Stress beauty of star. Play up San Francisco, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Star's beauty and title should draw them. For all houses.

Captain Salvation

Rugged, Well Acted Story of First Gospel Ship

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S a rugged story of regeneration that is unfolded here—which, allowing for soppy sentiment to point the pathos, succeeds in carrying on very well. There is a tang of the salt air about it which helps in lending it strength. Told with fine repression with compact touches and a wealth of atmosphere it commands interest.

The motivating force is the sympathy of a young sailor in a New England port during the late fifties or early sixties. He it is who offers refuge to a repentent sinner from Boston. When he is alienated from the gossiping, self-righteous villagers he ships aboard a boat which turns out to be a convict ship. The girl follows him.

The scenes from this point develop a conflict between the lustful skipper and the crew on one hand and the girl and her benefactor on the other. She kills herself to escape her torturers and after avenging her death the sailor man takes command and brings the boat back—a gospel ship. It rises to fine melodramatic heights, particularly in the fight sequences. The love interest is mostly negligible, but it serves in reconciling the hero with his sweetheart who misunderstood his humanity. The high spots of the picture are contained in the acting, Lars Hanson, Pauline Starke (who rises to real emotional power) and Ernest Torrence playing with depth and feeling.

The Cast: Lars Hanson, Marceline Day, Pauline Starke, Ernest Torrence, Sam de Grasse, George Fawcett, Eugenie Forde, Eugenie Besserer. Director John Robertson.

THEME: Drama of humanity of sailor who brings regeneration to girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scene where youth saves girl. The conflict between hero and villagers. The episodes aboard ship. The fight in the rigging. The atmosphere and fine acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up feature of presenting first Gospel ship. Tell of the marvelous fine acting turned in by principals. Stage prologue in keeping with plot.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, eight reels. Released, June, 1927.

The First Auto

Has Some Good Stuff But it Drags

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THE evolution of the automobile and the retrogression of the horse, as a means of locomotion, is the theme developed in this production which contains a number of good sequences but, all in all, its development is very slow and the action is set at a draggy tempo. The producers had a basic foundation for a good story but they failed in that what should have been stressed has only been touched on; it's a resumé rather than an analysis. There's a half-hearted effort to present automobile history, an attempt to inject comedy and drama and a desire to afford the audience horse and automobile race thrills, but these various elements have not been treated in a manner to extract the most from each; rather have they alternated these story ingredients with the resulted that nothing or no one gets a fair break. It's hybrid.

The remedy seems to lie in reduction of the footage—the elimination of some of the alleged comedy and the hand-waving dramatics to make it an automobile story; Warner Bros. evidently went to considerable trouble and expense to reproduce or secure the old-fashioned types of cars on display. Patsy Ruth Miller hasn't much to do but does it creditably; Russell Simpson is a dramatic pyrotechnist of the old school; the balance of the cast is fair.

The Vitaphone accompaniment will help put over the picture.

The Cast: Barney Oldfield, Patsy Ruth Miller, Russell Simpson, Frank Campeau, William Demarest, Paul Kruger, Gibson Gowland, E. H. Calvert, Douglas Gerrard, Chas. E. Mack. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

THEME: Comedy - drama. Presentation of automobile history with slight dramatic story interwoven, of horse-lover affected by the growing supply of cars and the lack of demand for horses.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The old-fashioned types of autos displayed

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Presence in the cast of Barney Oldfield, pioneer auto racer.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

California

Not as Good as Star's Last But Will Please

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

NOT quite as good as "Winners of the Wilderness" and almost on a par with "War Paint," the latest vehicle to come from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featuring Tim McCoy is nevertheless pleasing entertainment. It is an historical story and is further evidence that the course followed by M-G-M in producing stories linked with history is a wise one. There are no sombreros or spitting guns here, no impoverished theme; what it does present—the conflict between the native Californian and the invading Americans—is something forceful, alive.

We find one or two faults with the production. It is a trifle too long and crowded with detail. The dark beauty of Dorothy Sebastian is very effective in a Spanish setting. The acting of Marc McDermott, Frank Currier and Lilliane Leighton is also noteworthy. McCoy and Van Dyke are a good team; there is generally a long period between their concerted vehicles and that is good because the haste with which the average Western is so often thrown together is usually always apparent; we cannot charge that shortcoming to these historical Westerns as they boast good workmanship.

The Cast: Tim McCoy, Dorothy Sebastian, Marc McDermott, Frank Currier, Fred Warren, Lilliane Leighton, Edwin Terry. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke from Kyne story.

THEME: The war with Mexico serves to bring together American officer and Mexican senorita, the former all ardent and the latter defiant because of the fact that their countries are at war. Coincident with the American victory is the successful conquest by the "gringo" of the girl's heart.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Battle of San Pascual; McCoy's easy and natural manner of outwitting his enemies and escaping peril; the comical figure cut by Miss Leighton.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Plenty of ideas in press book.

DRAWING POWER: Audiences craving Westerns should like it.

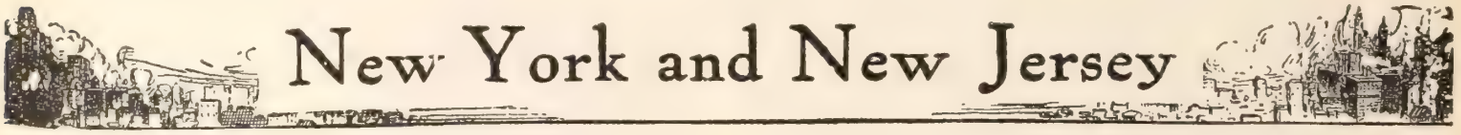
Philadelphia

THE Grand Opera House which has been devoted to a policy of vaudeville and pictures until the last two weeks, when the policy was changed to present tabs and pictures, closed on Saturday night, June 25th. The house will undergo some minor improvements and alterations during the summer. The Stanley Company has closed the doors of the Cross Keys Theatre for the summer. The Broadway, Allegheny, Orpheum and other theatres which have been running a mixed policy of vaudeville and pictures, have changed to straight pictures and an effort will be made to keep them open for the remainder of the summer.

Green and Altman have extended the date of the closing of their Park Theatre until July 25th. It was originally intended to close the house on July 9th, but picture contracts warranted keeping the house open until all contracts had been played. Walter Woodward, resident manager, will go to the new Green and Altman house at 31st and Diamond Streets, as soon as the Park has closed and will have charge of the opening there, which will take place about Labor Day.



Joseph C. Dougherty, manager of the Grand Opera House, has succeded George M. Young, who has been in charge of the Philadelphia interests of the B. F. Keith Corporation. Mr. Dougherty will supervise the extensive improvements being made at Keith's Chestnut Street Theatre. Mr. Young has been transferred to Atlantic City, where he will have charge of the Globe and Garden Pier Theatres, operated jointly by the Stanley Company and the Keith interests and devoted to straight vaudeville policy.

P. A. Bloch, Philadelphia branch manager for Paramount and who has been confined to the Jefferson Hospital for the past four weeks receiving treatment for a stomach ailment, has been removed to his home on Walnut Street. Mr. Bloch, it is thought, will not be able to resume his duties on Vine Street until about the first of August.

The Garrick Theatre, one of the Stanley chain which has been devoted to legitimate productions, has closed for the summer season, leaving only one legitimate house open in the city.

The Equity Theatres corporation of Philadelphia, which includes the pooled interests of Green and Altman, Amsterdam and Korson and Will Cohen, involving some $9,000,000 worth of theatre property, became operative as of July 1st. The Equity Theatres Corporation is the first consolidation of independent exhibitors in Philadelphia and it is planned to take in other small chains before the beginning of the fall season. Twenty-four houses are included in this consolidation. Green and Altman have moved with offices into the Schaff Building and the general business of the Equity Theatres Corporation will be carried on from that office.

The contract for the erection of William Freihofer's new 3500-seat theatre at 69th Street and Ashby Road, Philadelphia, has been awarded to the George Kessler Construction Company and work will begin at once. The building will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will be a combination of theatre, stores and apartments and it is announced that the Freihofer interests will start work on the erection of two other large West Philadelphia theatres in the near future.

New York and New Jersey

THE A. H. Schwartz Theatre Circuit of Brooklyn, according to report, has further strengthened its position in that territory by the acquisition of Fleichman's Manor Theatre, Avenue K and Coney Island avenue, and a new theatre in the Boro Park district. The latter was recently built by Contractor Schwartz. The deal is said to have been closed this past week.

Theatre sites in Jamaica and three different points in Brooklyn, including a 5,000 seat project in the Boro Hall section, are said to have been definitely abandoned by one of the large producing companies, which had announced several months ago their intention of invading the neighborhood field.

Messrs. D'Stamatis and Cocalis, theatre operators of Brooklyn and New Jersey, have their new booking offices at 727 7th avenue, New York City.

H. Osborne is the new manager of the Miracle Theatre, Melrose avenue, Brooklyn.

According to reports, everyone had a good time at the Asbury Park convention—to the extent that some are still trying to recover from the exceedingly bracing atmosphere.

Although a report has been published in one of the local papers to the effect that Sydney Cohen's North Star Theatre, 3d street and Seventh avenue, would soon open, it is said that its present state will not permit its reopening for considerable time.

The S. & S. De Kalb Theatre, De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, has closed for the summer months.

Milton Kronacher, Pathe salesman, expects to leave for his vacation through Canada the latter part of this week. Via Jordan, of course.

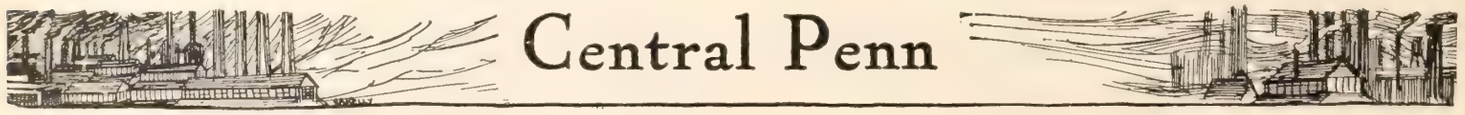
Joseph M. Seider has returned to his offices following the M. P. T. O. convention at Asbury Park.

The Victory Theatre, 13th avenue and 74th street, Brooklyn, has closed its doors until Fall.

H. Tamler, owner and operator of the Colonial Theatre, 5th avenue, Brooklyn, is away in the mountains on a vacation. He will probably return about July 4th or thereabouts.

New theatres continue to spring up in the Dyker Heights section of Brooklyn—this time it's the Fortway, said to be a fine new house almost ready for business at 60th street and Fort Hamilton avenue.

The Armory Theatre, 14th street and 7th avenue, Brooklyn, has gone on a "three a week" policy for the Summer months.



The S. & S. Colonial airdome, located in the Broadway section of Brooklyn, is open for the Summer.

Irving Seidman, one time connected with the Prudential Film Delivery of New York City, is now with Vitaphone in Chicago.

Arthur Greenblatt, branch manager for Educational Films in New York, returned last week from his vacation.

The Capitol exchange, 729 7th avenue, has, as usual, an interesting display of posters and cutouts.

Jerry Adler's dog Rex will probably make his debut on the screen this season. Mr. Adler is on the sales staff at Commonwealth exchange.

W. H. Edwards, former manager of the Neptune Theatre and Strand Theatre in this city, last week was appointed manager of the Society Theatre. He succeeds Mitchell Sutherland who left for Southern California to make connections with one of the larger houses.

Film Row last week was rather barren, due to the migration to the Portland Golf Club of the leading golf lights of this territory. The occasion was the Third Annual Northwest Film Golf Tournament, staged under the auspices of Clyde Walker of the "Motion Picture Record." More than twenty prizes were to be given to the fortunate and lucky contestants.

G. C. Fasken, owner and manager of the Royal Theatre at Cashmere, Washington, last week announced that he plans to erect a 500-seat house in Wenatchee, where he will show second run attractions for 10 and 15 cents. This will be Wenatchee's first house to be operated on a second run policy.

L. A. Samuelson, branch manager of the Pathe exchange, was expected back in Seattle next week from the national sales convention at Los Angeles. He was accompanied on the trip by Managers L. M. Cobbs, of Portland, and W. M. Hughart, of Butte, as well as a large delegation of sales representatives.

Six drapes, valued at more than $100, were stolen from Jensen-Von Herberg's Bagdad Theatre last week, just a short time after the grand opening of the house. The loss occurred while minor renovating was under way, and is fully insured.

Salt Lake City

EDWIN A. MORRIS, who has been manager of the Orpheum Theatre here under the Ackerman-Harris vaudeville policy for a number of years, has been called back to California by Ackerman-Harris, since the purchase of this theatre by the Louis Marcus Enterprises here recently. After disposing of the lease July 1st, Morris intends leaving for the coast about July 6th, he states.

Fred Frederiksen, exhibitor of Louisville, Idaho, is visiting the local film mart for a few days.

Construction of the new neighborhood theatre at Ninth South and Ninth East streets here will begin within the next few weeks it is reported. This house is being built by Earl D. Smith, manager of the local branch of the National Theatre Supply Company, and will represent an investment of approximately $25,000. It is to be named "The Tower Theatre."

The main auditorium will have a seating capacity of approximately four hundred with the balcony accommodating about one hundred. Plans have been provided for a pipe organ as well as all modern first class equipment The front of the structure will be of semi-Spanish design and will be built of concrete, brick, marble and tile.

The opening of the new Rialto Theatre, formerly the Kinema, was a very successful one here Extensive improvements and alterations were made during the past few weeks, with a new ventilating system having been installed as well as other strictly up-to-date equipment.

Albany

CHARLES HENSCHEL, of New York Eastern Division sales manager for Pathe, was in town for a couple of days last week and then went on to Boston.

Gardner Hall, in Troy, closed last week for the summer, and its manager, William Rose, will assist his brothers, James and Harry, at their theatres during the vacation period.

John Garry, manager of the local Clinton Square, last week looked after the Leland, while C. H. Buckley and Alec Sayles were in New York City.

Charles Rose, general manager of the Smalley chain, has been connfied to his bed for a week or so, having strained his back in lifting an automobile.

L. H. Garvey, who runs a theatre in Clinton, has just broken ground for a new house in Hartford, a short distance from Utica.

Tom Northrup, manager of the Palace in Troy, has reduced his admission prices during the summer months.

W. H. Linton, the veteran exhibitor of Utica, reports business as being good but is using some split weeks through the summer.

There is a report to the effect that the American in Troy, which is managed by Louis Saperstein, may close on July 1, for a few weeks, in cutting down overhead and forcing business to the other Stanley theatres in the city.

Joe Kallet and Mike Kallet, the latter one time treasurer of the old Grand theatre in Syracuse, are planning a number of changes at the theatres, according to reports.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy theatres, is now living at his summer home at one of the nearby lakes, but hurried back one night last week in order to be present at the boxing bouts which marked the opening of Troy's new arena.

Charles Stombaugh, former manager of the Pathe exchange in Albany, was in Asbury Park last week attending a convention.

Ed. Hayes, local manager for Pathe, brought his golf clubs here from Buffalo, when he moved to Albany. They have remained in the bag for one straight year in a corner in the office, and are leaning against the wall so long that Mr. Hayes now declares that they are warped out of shape.

Charles H. Goulding, manager of Proctor's in Troy, will continue to use pictures along with his vaudeville throughout the summer.

Bill Smalley, of Cooperstown, owner of a dozen or more houses was in Albany last week, and stated that his new theatre in Stamford would open about August 1.

Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln, in Troy, has a brand new car.

A friend living in Maine wrote Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose in Troy, a letter last week, saying that he was considering the purchase of a theatre, and desired to ask him a few questions. The "few" numbered no less than 36, causing Mr. Rosenthal to write back that he was without a stenographer and could not answer the questions.

W. M. Shirley, of Schenectady, has secured the lease of the Van Curler theatre in that city, from September 1, but has not determined upon the policy of the house.

J. J. McLoughlin, of Poland, has changed the name of his theatre from "Jim's Theatre" to "The Lindy."

Edward Renton, formerly connected with Madison Square Garden, has been engaged as a general field man for the Smalley chain of houses in central New York.

Mrs. Tony Veiller, wife of the manager of the Mark Ritz, in Albany, left last week on an auto trip to Montreal.

Morris Silverman, of Schenectady, summed up the situation last week by saying that if one did not have the picture the business would not come to the theatre no matter how much advertising is done.

Arthur Lucas, Southern manager for Educational Films, and Lucille Hutton.

Dan Creed, of the F B O home office, is in Albany for the summer, assisting in a general way at the local exchange.

Visitors along film row during the week included Mrs. Thornton of Saugerties, Clarence Dopp, of Johnstown, and Mr. and Mrs. McNamara, of Valatie.

The Palace in Troy has been sold to Emanuel Rosen, who formerly ran the Cozy theatre in Schenectady. It appears that negotiations with the Schine brothers fgor the theatre fell through last week.

Fred Robke has been transferred from Warner Brothers' Brooklyn territory to the Albany exchange

Abe Stone, of the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany, has just taken over the Bright Spot in Rensselaer from Charley Miller, and also the Columbia, which has been run by Michael Connery, of Menands.

The theatre in Granville, run by Vincent Dailey, will operate on a two night per week schedule during the summer.

Mrs. H. A. Marchetti, wife of the booker at the P. D. C. exchange, was badly cut about the face a week or so ago, when her husband's car was forced into a ditch.

The family of Nat Levy, the new manager of Universal exchange, is now in Albany, having moved here from Philadelphia, and Mr Levy has left the Hotel Ten Eyck.

The VanCurler theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., which has a seating capacity of about 1400 and which has been operated by the Farish Theatres, Inc., but whose lease expires on September 1, will be taken over by Arthur Klein, former general manager of the Shubert vaudeville circuit and for many years identified with the Keith vaudeville exchange. Mr. Klein will open the house on Labor Day and the theatre will be one of a chain of houses which will be operated.

San Francisco

NAT HOLT, popular manager of the Wigwam Theatre and one of the best-known motion picture managers in the Pacific West, started his own musical comedy known as "Nat Holt's Golden Gate Musical Comedy Co." Each week the company will feature odd and high class stunts.

Wade Renfroe, formerly connected with the Pathe office in Los Angeles, is working in the San Francisco exchange as Head Booker.

Jean Canefield Ferree, with her husband, just returned from a two weeks' motor vacation to Los Angeles.

James Barlow buys the Larkin Theatre from the Kinema Circuit. Mitchell, the former manager, and one of the owners, has moved to Los Gatos, and will take charge of that theatre hereafter.

Al Laurice, assistant manager of Fox, is recuperating from a minor operation and is out on the Row again after several days spent in the hospital.

"Less" Theuerkauf, formerly local manager of the Cameo Theatre, and more recently identified with the S. H. Levin Theatre Circuit, resigned from the latter concern last week and connected immediately with the Portland, Oregon, exchange of P. D. C.

Branch Manager L. M. Cobb, of the Pathe Portland office and a former San Franciscan of the same company, stopped off to see his old friends while en route home from the L. A. Convention. Cobb was accompanied by his city salesman, George Appbleby.

Mrs. Katherine Hansen, contract clerk for the past seven years in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office, resigned her position and left for Salt Lake City. frolic.

Mrs. T. H. Dixon, manager of Welcome Theatre at Knight's Landing, is the chairman of motion pictures for the Northern District of the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

Art Leim, who for several years has managed the Star Theatre at Reedley, for Miss Sheibley, has acquired the Harvester Theatre from Mrs. Williams and will operate it in the future.

The Use of Color in the Theatre

THE wide application of colored lighting in motion picture theatres today makes it advisable for the average projectionist to learn at least the elementary principles of color and its relation to lighting.

In many of the smaller houses the projectionist is largely responsible for the colored illumination, as it applies either to "effect" lighting or to the general illumination of local areas, such as walls, ceilings, panels, etc.

It is time that the extent of his interest in this respect is represented by his control of simple dimmer banks and the operation of projectors designed to produce lighting effects, but it seems reasonable to suppose that his interest in this work would be considerably greater if he had even a surface knowledge of the manner producing the various colors of the rainbow.

With the exception of the more powerful projectors for long distance work, colored lighting is largely obtained by means of incandescent lamps, so that the color characteristics of this commonly used source of light shall be considered. The same fundamental principles, however, apply to such sources as arc lamps as well.

Colors as Commonly Named

The light emitted by an incandescent lamp has a continuous spectrum. That is, it has all the colors of the rainbow in it and gives off light that is ordinarily called white, although actually, the color of this light is slightly yellow.

Color terminology, at best, is somewhat loose and it is seldom that colors as ordinarily referred to are pure, in that they contain but one color and no other. Light composed of but a single color would rightly be called monochromatic, meaning "one color." The greenish light given off by a Cooper-Hewitt Mercury lamp would be a pretty good example of a monochromatic source.

Strictly speaking, a pure color, such as blue, means light having a wave length (the distance between successive nodes) which ranges between rather closely defined limits. In practice, the tendency is to group several colors together. That is we extend these wave length limits. Thus, violet, blue and green-blue are combined and called amber; and red is generally quite pure.

When working with white light, any single color desired can be obtained by removing all colors but the one desired. This can easily be done by using color absorbers (such as colored glasses, gelatines, etc.) which "select" the color desired and eliminate, or absorb, the remaining colors of the spectrum.

Suppose, for example, that red light is wanted. A color medium, such as a piece of red glass, is placed in the light beam so that the blue, green and amber light rays will be absorbed. Similarly, if green is wanted, a color medium must be placed in the light beam so as to absorb the blue, amber and red rays.

To be able to use color effectively, the popularly held idea that colored light is white light that has been changed by the addition of a certain color, must be discarded.

Colors Involve Light Loss

In fact, the production of color from white light involved an actual loss of light, since any given beam contains only a certain amount of a particular color and all the rest of the colors in that beam must be sacrificed to obtain one color alone.

The percentage loss of light so involved will depend upon the color wanted (and upon the source) since the various colors in any light beam are not in equal proportions.

This means that to obtain the same intensity of illumination with color light, from two to twenty times the Wattage will be required as compared with that used for white light.

The approximate absorption figures for the various colors are shown in Table 1. The figures given are subject to considerable variation, depending upon the purity of the color, total absorption, etc.

It is fortunate, however, that colored lighting, as used in the theatre, need not be of a high intensity, since only a general effect is desired.

Methods of Obtaining Colors

There are at present six commonly used methods of obtaining colors of varying degrees of purity. These are by means of:

1. Dipped Color Lamps. 2. Natural Colored Lamps. 3. Glass Color Caps (for lamps). 4. Glass plates. 5. Gelatine screens. 6. Fabrics (such as silk).

Dipped Lamps—These are inexpensive and, while not permanent as to color, are effective. Should the lamp become broken, it is useless, of course, but the lamp bulbs can be so dipped that no white light escapes from the bulb to wash out the color.

Very few lamp dips are permanent, but fade under heat, thus requiring new coatings at fairly frequent intervals. If the lamps are placed in plates where they can not be easily reached, this method is likely to prove quite expensive.

Relatively small lamps must be used since the higher Wattage gas filled lamps will fade the colors.

Gas filled lamps can be obtained with sprayed color coatings which are permanent. So-called opaque coatings are the foundation for this coloring, and as a result the light given off acquires a tint by means of the successive selective reflections from the color particles as the light passes through the bulb. This method is quite inefficient and, furthermore, pure colors cannot be obtained.

Natural Colored Lamps—Lamps which use a bulb in which the coloring is placed in the glass are quite transparent, permanent and very desirable. Such lamps can be obtained in amber, red, green and blue, in any size, but they are fairly expensive as to initial cost.

Glass Color Caps—Such caps are available in all ordinary colors and ball-shaped, having a hole through which the lamp can be inserted so as to make the cap enclose the lamp bulb. Lamps as high as 500 Watts in size can be used and a special holding device must be employed for attaching the cap to the lamp.

Glass Plates—These are rather expensive and somewhat awkward to use. In fact, they can only be placed across the mouths of small reflectors to be effective. The colors, however, can be obtained of a high degree of purity, some of the plates being heat resisting for high heat work.

Gelatines—The most commonly used medium is gelatine, since it is inexpensive, easily used, and is obtainable in a wide variety of colors. Also, the colors are relatively pure in the ordinary sense of the word.

Gelatine is easily affected by heat, cold and moisture, and therefore has a short life even when not handled after once in place.

To offer greater protection, a network of wire is frequently placed across the gelatine screen and a form of gelatinized wire is now available, in which these two items form a single solid sheet for easily handling.

Ordinary gelatine will easily warp under heat and no small amount of experimental work has been done with a view to obtaining a gelatine which will withstand both heat and moisture.

One such product is already available and seems to work quite satisfactorily. More permanent colors are also being claimed for it. It is, however, three or four times as expensive as ordinary gelatine.

Fabrics—Fabrics, such as silk or colored paper screens, are, at best, but temporary and, on the whole, unsatisfactory, although they have been used in some instances.

They should be of a fire-proof character, or sprayed with a fire-proofing liquid to avoid the danger of fire. They are highly absorbing for a certain degree of color modification and are more useful for giving just a touch of color in times of emergency.

They frequently serve for ornamental purposes, but have no place among the more efficient media described above.

The officers and directors elected are as follows:

Board of Directors: Howard E. Wurlitzer, Chairman; Rudolph H. Wurlitzer, Farny R. Wurlitzer, Thomas P. Clancy, James L. Ryan, Raimund B. Wurlitzer, I. H. Lyons.

Other officers: Rudolph H. Wurlitzer, president; Farney R. Wurlitzer, vice-president and treasurer; Thomas P. Clancy, vice-president and assistant treasurer; James L. Ryan, vice-president; John P. Weis, secretary; Walter Wolf, assistant treasurer; Ruth Selby, assistant secretary.

J. H. Hallberg Reports Gain in Sales

J. H. Hallberg, manufacturer of the new Hallberg reflector arcs and motor generators, announces that exhibitors have taken a great deal of interest in his improved product since it made its reappearance in the motion picture supply trade six months ago.

Recent orders of Hallberg apparatus include motor generators for the Wyandotte Theatre, Detroit, and the Strand Theatre, Tecumseh, Mich.; motor generators and reflector arcs for the Strand Theatre, Sharon Springs, N. Y., and several orders for Minusa screens. Snap-lite lenses, Vallen curtain controls, and the Clayton even-tension take-up; all of which he distributes from the New York plant.

Circulars and instructive bulletins will be cheerfully sent to all who desire to keep up with developments along the line of efficient projection.

An outstanding exhibit at the Columbus Convention of the M. P. T. O. Association, was that of the Page Organ Company, Lima, Ohio. This concern in addition to showing two of their standard type organ consoles, had erected a complete pipe organ with swellbox and all the accessories. It was installed in one corner of the large Convention Hall and furnished music throughout the Convention.

Two organists alternated at the console. This exhibit proved interesting to the attending theatre owners. They were particularly interested in the MX-40 Organ, which was exhibited for the first time at the convention.

This instrument is a combination unit pipe organ and player. Two rolls are mounted side by side in the console directly above the manuals, so that it may be played either by hand or by roll. Ordinarily 88-note piano rolls are used.

The rolls can be quickly and easily placed into playing position or rewound, and their speed controlled through the use of a simple lever conveniently located in the key bed of the console. The rolls are kept in perfect alignment by means of a mechanical tracker.

As a relief organist or for the theatre that finds it difficult to employ a full-time organist, the new Page MX-40 is a wonderful step forward in the motion picture industry.

Brief specifications of the new self-playing organ are as follows:

The Page Organ is built complete in itself with individual shutter expressions, traps and percussions. The console is the full horse-shoe type, finished in solid American black walnut. There are two manuals of 61 notes each, having a compass of CC to C. It has a full scale pedal board of AGO pattern with compass of CCC to G and 32 notes. The visible combinations are adjustable at the console.

The player has three playing divisions (1) The pedal consisting of the bases. (2) The accompaniment corresponding to the stops of the first manual of the organ played by hand. (3) The solo or upper manual division. Thus all the effects of a two-manual unit pipe organ played by an organist are obtained with the Roll player.

The pedal division is so arranged that only one pedal note can be struck at a time, just the same as an organist would pedal with the feet.

The solo obligato patented Page feature. It is so placed that a solo can be played on any one of the numerous stops arranged on the solo manual of the organ and may be played at 16 pitch or in unison with the player roll.

The organ pipes are fully unified. There are four complete unit sets of pipes, Tibia Clausia, Horn Diapson, Solo Violin, and Vox Humana. There are 14 of the most essential traps in this instrument. There are two percussion stops, chimes and xylophone or orchestral bells, as preferred.

Ventilating Installations Increase in East

Orders placed for Typhoon cooling and ventilating apparatus by exhibitors at the recent M. P. T. O. of N. J. convention, Asbury Park, N. J., demonstrated to that company's satisfaction that business has shown an increase this Summer in the East that has exceeded any previous period for this territory.

Ocala, Fla., to Have 1,000 Seat Theatre

According to newspaper reports, Ocala, Fla., is to have the largest motion picture theatre and legitimate playhouse in Central Florida. The theatre will be located on Ocklawaha Ave. on the site of the old brick building. The house will be constructed by Walter R. Pedrick and will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Studio Briefs

Director H. Harmon Weight is under contract to Universal to direct Mary Philbin in "Viennese Lovers." He recently directed Mary Astor in "Forever After" for First National.

The Mack Sennett Bathing Girls are playing an important part in the action being staged on California beaches for a new Pathe two-reeler with Billy Bevan and Madeline Hurlock in leading roles. Harry Edwards, who directed Harry Langdon in his Sennett-Pathe successes, is at the megaphone. Vernon Dent is also in the cast.

The combination of Max Davidson, character comedian, and Leo McCarey, director, is now working on its third offering, "Don't Tell Everything." Davidson has the support of Spec O'Donnell, Jess Devorska, Lillian Elliott and James Finlayson.

George Irving has been added to the cast of Richard Dix's next Paramount production, "Shanghai Bound," which Luther Reed will direct. Mary Brian will again appear in the leading feminine role and the complete cast includes Charles Beyer, Jovelyn Lee, Tom McGuire, Arthur Hoyt, Frank Chew and Tom Gubbins.

Ringstrasse, the famous night life boulevard of Vienna, Austria, will be reproduced in F. Harmon Weight's forthcoming Universal production of "Viennese Lovers," according to studio advices. Director Weight is now supervising set construction plans which will show the Austrian capital in all its pre-war gayety and splendor. "Viennese Lovers" is scheduled to start within the next few days, Director Weight said.

Even before the final cutting and editing of the recent Red Grange picture, "The Motor Maniac," has been completed, F. B. O. executives are preparing for a wave of popular demand for automobile racing stories and have assigned their ace scenarist, Ewart Adamson, to write the adaptation of "Deadman's Curve." Adamson recently completed "Shanghaied," and "South Sea Love.'

Al Martin, well known title writer and former newspaperman, has been signed by F. B. O. and his first job will be to title "Helen Troy of New York," one of the featurettes of the Beauty Parlor Series. For the past three seasons Martin has titled all Christie comedies in addition to his work as a free lance title writer.

Evelyn Brent has been assigned the leading feminine role in "Beau Sabreur," the companion story to "Beau Geste," which goes into production at the Paramount Studio this week. Others in the cast are Gary Cooper, Noah Beery and Roscoe Karns.

Lillian Rich has been signed by Universal for an important role in "Now I'll Tell One," Reginald Denny's latest starring vehicle which Fred Newmeyer is directing. "Now I'll Tell One" is an original story by Denny and in addition to the star and Miss Rich the cast includes Barbara Kent, who plays the leading feminine role, Mathilde Brundage, Tom O'Brien and others.

George Lewis, Marian Nixon and Eddie Phillips have been cast for the featured roles in "The Fourflusher," Caesar Dunn's stage play, which Universal will produce under the direction of Wesley Ruggles. Filming will be started within two weeks. Miss Nixon is at present on a vacation in Honolulu after completing a feature role in "The Chinese Parrot."

William Wellman, who directed "Wings" for Paramount, has returned to the lot and will shortly take up the megaphone in behalf of "The Legion of the Condemned," a story of the air by John Monk Saunders.

Frank Reicher, long identified with the New York stage both as a player and a director, has been cast in an important role in Paramount's picturization of the P. C. Wren novel, "Beau Sabreur," which goes into production within a week under the direction of John Waters.

Testsu Komai, Japanese character actor, has been added to the cast of the Richard Dix picture "Shanghai Bound." Komai left yesterday to joint the troupe at Sacramento.

Carey Wilson is producing "American Beauty," starring Billie Dove, an adaptation of a tale by Wallace Irwin. Together with the director, Richard Wallace, he has chosen a roster of players which includes Lloyd Hughes, Alice White, Lucien Prival, Margaret Livingston, Al St. John, Walter McGrail, Freeman Wood, Paul Vincenti and Edythe Chapman.

First National has cast Molly O'Day for a leading role in its new Charlie Murray-George Sidney production which goes into work under the title of "Down Went McGinty," under the management of Efe Asher. Miss O'Day, a sister of Sally O'Neil, is at present playing the feminine lead in Wid Gunning's production of "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," starring Milton Sills.

William Beaudine has been signed by First National to direct the next Charley Murray-George Sidney production, "Down Went McGinty."

Two old-time stars of the speaking stage are acting in Constance Talmadge's "Breakfast at Sunrise," written by Mme. Fred de Grasac from a French farce by Andre Birabeau. The two stars are Burr McIntosh and Marie Dressler. Bryant Washburn is also cast for a leading role with Miss Talmadge. Malcolm St. Clair is holding the megaphone.

An "Unknown" of Hollywood has become a leading lady overnight. She is a Denver girl, Ann Drew, who has a record of a number of minor hits or obscure parts in several studios of the land of films. She has been selected for the lead with Ken Maynard in his first of his second series of six productions for First National Pictures.

Marjorie Beebe, the dancing comedienne in "Rich But Honest," has started work in a Fox two-reel comedy, "Why Blondes Leave Home." The leading male role opposite her is taken by Richard Walling; Dorothea Walbert and Harry Dunkinson are cast in supporting roles.

Final scenes of "Tom's Gang," starring Tom Tyler, were shot at the F B O Studios under the direction of Robert De Lacy. This picture, from an original story by Frank Howard Clark, marks the 16th Western the star has made for F B O and is the last of his second series. A new series is in preparation.

ROCHESTER, N.Y.

¶Flaming orange fountain pens. Purple raincoats. New York to Paris in 33½ hours. ¶A book called "The Story of Philosophy" sells 157,000 copies. Unthinkable five years ago. A brain-taxing game called "Ask Me Another" becomes a nation-wide fad. Stevedores wear knickers over the week-end. ¶A motion picture theatre does $140,000 in a week. A fresh, saucy girl, Clara Bow, is an over-night sensation, displacing the baby-faced idols of yesteryear. A picture called "Chang", made in the jungles of Siam with wild beasts and natives for a cast, sets Broadway and Chicago agog. Another picture, "Beau Geste", without a love story, runs 36 weeks in New York at $2. "Way of All Flesh", with an unhappy ending, sends critics and public into paroxysms of praise. ¶It's a new world in the picture business too! ¶The public is shopping for pictures. They won't fall for just movies any more. New desires, new trends. They cry for beauty, color, life, the unusual. ¶1927-8 is a critical year for you. Are you geared up to the times? Can you satisfy this modern public? There's a way to do it! ¶Paramount had its finger on the vibrant pulse of this new world. Paramount foresaw what was coming. A new, ultra-modern, greatly enlarged studio was purchased and equipped in 1928 style. Deadwood was ruthlessly discarded. New, eager, young showmen. Stars that can shine in this shining age. A new, sparkling type of story material. ¶Paramount Pictures in a brand new style—different from anything else ever seen in this business—pictures attuned to this brilliant age—are flooding forth.

¶ They are your salvation. They are your chance to synchronize your theatre with the trend of the times. Pictures not made according to some star's or director's whims. Pictures not released to build volume or meet a schedule. But pictures shrewdly fitted to the public of today. Pictures a la mode. ¶ Pictures that will pull crowds and pile up record grosses in these breathless days, when any other kind of picture will die on its feet! ¶ 14 of them are finished. Many of them you can see at your exchange. Here's the release schedule of the New 1927-8 Paramount 100% Program for the first three months:

for showmen of today

For the first time in film history a company has rearranged its serial release schedule at the request of hundreds of exhibitors. "BLAKE OF SCOTLAND YARD"—the First Run Serial—originally scheduled for later in the year will now be released late in August to meet the desires and suit the box offices of hundreds of First Runs who have seen it on the screen and want to start their season off to a flying start with the school year.

SET YOUR DATES EARLY—to take full advantage of the money possibilities of the serial that Carl Laemmle proclaimed "A UNIVERSAL JUNIOR JEWEL"—THE INDUSTRY'S FIRST SUPER-SPECIAL SERIAL! Starring HAYDEN STEVENSON with an all-star cast, and directed by ROBERT HILL.

GREAT PICTURES

IN all the years that I have been active in the Motion Picture Industry, I have never viewed a coming production season with such enthusiasm as I now feel in looking ahead at the product that will be released by United Artists Corporation.

This, the year of its Eighth Anniversary, United Artists will offer to showmen the strongest line-up of Big Money Pictures ever distributed through any one company.

So, it is with pleasure and confidence that I gladly place my signature beside those of my associates, as endorsement of my belief in their pledge:—

> that this coming season, for United Artists, will be the most sensational in the history of Box Office Picture Production.

I know you will share our enthusiasm as you read the following pages.

GREAT SHOWMEN

SHOWMEN are judged by the pictures they show.

Showmen become great—by showing Great Pictures.

Never before has it been a film salesman's privilege to offer to showmen as many Great Pictures at one time as is represented in the pages you have just read.

Yes, they are costly, but each of them represents an investment of a fortune—not to speak of the genius and the artistic talent that created each of them.

It is the economic law that "that which costs most is the cheapest in the end."

There's the secret of success of Great Showmen. Pay more—show the best—and make the most money.

As always — — you buy United Artists Pictures individually, on merit. What could be fairer?

It will be our pleasure to fill your best dates. Keep them open!

It keeps theatres CROWDED

RENEWS AND FRESHENS THE AIR

This amazing ventilating invention comes in sizes to meet every requirement, large or small. The size pictured, Model M, more than pays for itself in one year at the rate of

55c a day

And the big advantage of having a quiet Lakeside is that it serves you not only in summer but in cold weather, too. It is easier to breath fresh air than used air. Your theatre will be a more healthful, more comfortable place winter as well as summer once you have a quiet Lakeside on the job.

Makes any house many degrees cooler

Right now, without interfering with a single performance, without inconveniencing a single person, you can have a quiet, low cost Lakeside ventilator put in service in your theatre and your box office receipts will immediately take a spurt.

This amazing ventilating invention—the sensation of the year—means that you don't have to wait till next summer to have a cool theatre. You can have one by tomorrow night if one of our offices is near enough to service you that fast.

And moreover, if the quiet Lakeside does not do everything we claim for it, if you are not satisfied with it in every particular, we will not let you keep it or pay for it.

The quiet Lakeside is not only the lowest priced good ventilator ever built but it is offered to you on a basis whereby you can pay for it as it earns. To get quick action, just mail the coupon—or wire us detailing your requirements.

Endorsed by Engineers

The quiet Lakeside is not only guaranteed unreservedly by its manufacturers but it is also endorsed highly by leading engineers. It is all metal and comes equipped complete, requiring scarcely any attention throughout its virtually unlimited life. The motor is a low speed General Electric. The ball bearings are SKF. The drive is Allis Chalmers Tex-rope. The vertical and horizontal blades may be so adjusted that clean, comfortable, fresh air constantly permeates every single cubic foot of space in the room without the slightest draft.

Dear Partner:—
Sam Rothafel and Sam Dembow is the big news this week. Rothafel is playing another Warner winner at the Roxy: "Dearie", starring Irene Rich. He's got a real one to hold up his business July 4th week! Sam Dembow, who books all the pictures for the Publix Circuit, has also grabbed a warner winner! Dolores Costello, in "The Heart of Maryland", goes into the Paramount Theatre, New York, very soon. This makes the 3rd. time they've played a Dolores Costello in the short while it's been open.

The Bull in the Picture-Shop

The Right Road to Real Economy is in Service

By William A. Johnston

IN all the present furore over economy I have heard but one calm and sane observation and it comes from E. V. Richards of New Orleans.

As the trade well knows, the Saenger Company has suffered severely from theatre losses in the flood-devastated towns of the Mississippi valley.

A less highly organized concern would have gone under; as it was, the company tightened its belt, squared its shoulders and went forth to stiffen its resources all along the line of attack.

And the principle in mind was this: that true economy is had not by superficial and panicky measures but by fundamental cures. In other words, economy is achieved through increased efficiency.

THE Saenger concern is engaged in distribution as well as exhibition, so there were two functions to investigate.

And after a keen inventory of each activity Richards comes to bat with the interesting statement: that not in theatre operation but in distribution was indicated a wide open and deep down opportunity for large improvement.

And this opportunity may be summed up in one word: Service.

AT the mention of this word "Service" I realize that some of the swivel chair operatives in New York will be inclined to stop reading this article in disgust, as merely a vaporing from an editorial chair.

"Service?" "What the Hell is Service?"

So I am pleased that this word of much misunderstanding came, not from an editor nor even coaxed forth by an editor, but directly from as trained, practical, keen and wholly picture-wise a mind as I know of.

If anyone feels otherwise about Richards I would like to sit on the side lines and hear an argument—with one of our sales managers, for instance, or with the Presidents of any of our concerns.

SO Richards discovered that service was lacking in distribution.

His first interview with a number of film salesmen was something like this:

"You gentlemen have just returned from your great conventions—in Los Angeles and elsewhere. You must have some fine new ideas about picture selling and picture exhibition. What are they?"

Now, at this point, my sympathy is with the salesmen. I defy anyone to return from any business convention with any real business ideas.

At any rate, the salesmen considered the question at length—and flopped. One man attempted flippancy. All finally admitted that the conventions this year were the same old "bull." There were bands, songs, special trains, white flannel pants, stunts, parades, photographers, food, drink, handshaking—two million dollars worth of fireworks all spent to one end—to send the salesmen forth to put pictures into exhibitors' hands regardless of any and all considerations save one—rental prices.

Which, said Richards to himself, was all wet and all wrong; and he set out to correct it.

TO cut short a long story of thorough, hardheaded investigation, inspired by the dire situation of a business knocked into a cocked hat by an appalling flood, Richards put into effect a new sales policy.

In principle it was simple enough.

He took the "bull" out of selling and for it substituted service.

The salesman now sells just as hard as ever, but with information—service, instead of hot air, flattery, threats, bribes and what not.

In brief, he says to the exhibitor: Here are the pictures; here are all the facts about them; now—how can we—we, mind you—make the people come to the theatres and pay well for the pictures?

That's what service is.

It means selling pictures for the exhibitor as well as to him.

It means, in the final analysis, selling pictures to the public; which is the one true end of any industrial activity.

And, until this whole industry is rigged up to this one objective—simple as it may sound, well, I for one, and for my family's sake, don't want to buy a single share of motion picture stock.

BUT, again, let me quote Richards, a man who has built up one of the very best film businesses in one of the toughest territories.

He says that this very same policy can and must be adopted by each of the national distributors.

And until it is adopted there will be no economy, because there will be no efficiency in distribution.

You are not going to economize in distribution by merely cutting salaries; you've got to cut deep, right down in fact to the heart of the thing and cut out the policy of downright and unmitigated "bull."

IS service to the exhibitor—and therefore to the public—the policy today of the national distributor?

Let me answer this with a story of fact, as recent as one week ago.

This publication was approached by a representative of one of the national distributors who said he had an elaborate announcement of a season's program of pictures to place in two trade papers. He was instructed to say that it would be placed in those papers which promised the largest number of pages of free publicity to go with it.

As a publisher I am permitted to have my opinion of such a proposition. For one thing, it breaks the ruling of the U. S. Post Office Department, under which magazines are granted a second class mail entry. For another, it seeks to break the honor of the magazine itself, because it would make the publication appear to say in its editorial columns that which the advertiser himself says. For still another thing, if such a practice were universal in any trade it would be impossible, as anyone may see, to publish for that trade a trade paper of any real value.

Of course we turned the proposition down; and, as promptly, we were turned down. And that's that. It was the company's business to make the proposition, and it is our business to decline to sell out. And we are pleased to preserve our property.

BUT there's more, vastly more, to this incident than a mere trade paper angle.

This free publicity ballyhoo—and it has plenty of precedent in this field and is still practiced by other companies than the one I mention—is the Simon-pure evidence of motion picture "bull."

An Editorial By William A. Johnston

Such publicity isn't designed as service. It isn't meant to sell pictures to the public, that one source from which all the money comes. It isn't even designed to sell pictures to the exhibitor. Its main, perhaps sole, object, is to sell pictures to the company's own salesmen.

In other words, it is just more convention stuff—just plain ballyhoo—like the brass bands, white pants, special trains, and all the rest of the whoop-'em-up-boys stuff.

A trade paper is chartered like a special train, editorial columns and all. The free publicity ballyhoo is designed to bull the salesmen so the salesmen will bull the exhibitor.

And in the end it amounts to just what a ballyhoo convention does—and that is nothing; nothing but expense.

THIS industry is rigged up the wrong way. That's why "bull" flourishes. And that's why, every so often, it gets into a panic.

These panics will not be cured, nor even greatly helped, by salary cutting—outrageous as this extravagance is.

We've got to go deeper than this—right down to the economic wrong.

WHAT this industry is doing today is simply this: making pictures and forcing the distribution and exhibition regardless of the merit of the pictures.

In other words, we are pushing product on the public.

Whereas the public should pull the product from the industry.

In other industries public demand comes first. The retailer, knowing the demand, pulls on the distributor and he in turn pulls on the producer. And so the right sort of goods get to market.

In this industry we reverse the process; and that's why we use "bull" instead of advertising service.

That is why producers own distribution and theatres. That is why we have gone in for block booking, forced runs, expensive presentations and all the other paraphernalia to disguise what is a fundamentally wrong structure and procedure.

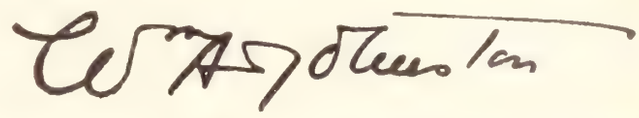
THE righting of a large structure built wrong won't come quickly, but, I believe, it will come, and the rebuilding process cannot start too soon.

In the meantime, pictures are not selling.

That's an immediate problem.

And the loss here in waste motion is, I believe, greater than any other extravagance of the day.



One way to get the goods into the exhibitor's hands is to give him facts—the fullest posible number of facts.

Facts about the pictures; facts to get them to the public.

Service.

Richards is doing it in the South.

Why isn't it done over the nation?

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Big Boy Better

BIG BOY, the three-year-old wonder of the screen, is now safely out of danger after a siege of illness which included whooping cough, a virulent form of measles and double pneumonia. His life was despaired of for a time, but he is now on the road to recovery, and has been ordered to the mountains to convalesce before resuming work in Educational comedies.

Big Boy, we may add, is the one and only screen player to have his or her picture on the wall of the NEWS editorial sanctum.

FIRST NATIONAL gave a tea-dance for its star, Colleen Moore, at the Hotel Plaza, New York, on Thursday, from 4 to 7. Invitations were sent out by Richard A. Rowland to writers for the trade, fan and daily press.

They all come, sooner or later. Holmes Herbert, who has been busy appearing in Coast productions, is in New York for a role in "East Side, West Side" (Fox)

P. D. C. Men Move

THE publicity department of Producers Distributing Corporation is now located on the tenth floor of the Pathe Building at 35 West 45th Street, New York City, due to the recent and well-known merger, we are informed by Frank Pope, publicity dean of the P. D. C. forces.

Edmund Burns, leading man for many American stars who also spent some time in Germany, is off again, this time to the Antipodes to star for Australasian Films

Extra Cast Titles

STARTING next fall, Universal will place a title repeating the cast of characters at the end of each picture. This was done by Universal a few years ago, it will be remembered, but the title was placed at the end and not at the beginning. Now it will be in both spots. In many ways it is an excellent idea. Often a player who attracts no notice on the cast title does such a splendid piece of work that we want to know who he is—and have to sit through an hour and a half of presentation to see the cast at the beginning of the film again.

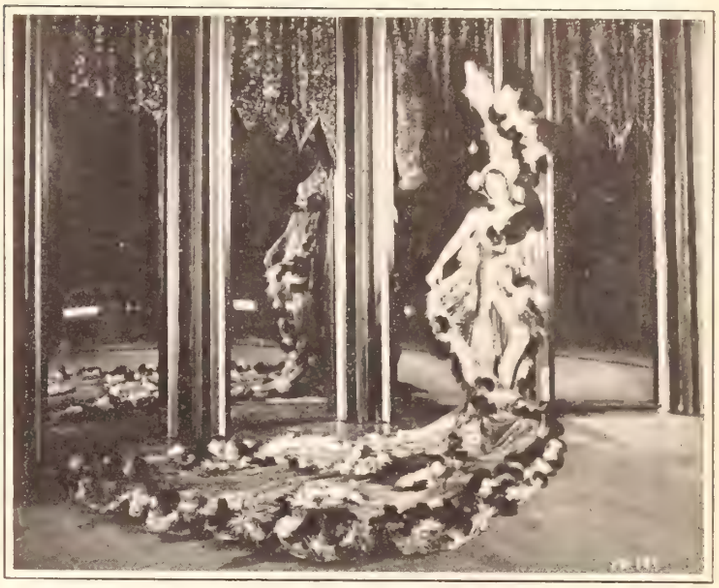
LOUIS MARCUS, for the past 14 years district manager for Paramount in the Salt Lake district, and who is leaving to devote all of his time to his own theatres, was the guest of the home office officials and executives at a luncheon given in his honor last week at the Hotel Astor in New York.



Who Will Win "Rose Marie"?

WHO will be the leading man for "Rose Marie"?

This is the question uppermost in the minds of practically every male star of the screen, with the announcement of the choice of Renee Adoree for the title role in the screen version of the famous Friml opera, which will shortly go into production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. William Nigh, director of the new picture, is now at work on screen tests for the role.

John Gilbert, whose latest starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Twelve Miles Out," is now in production, assists Betty Compson with her make-up for one of the sequences in which she appears

Allene Ray turns cinematographer and Pathexes the Walter Miller family. Walter is Allene's co-star in Pathe serials, Mrs. Miller was formerly a dancer, and Walter, Jr., has not yet decided upon his career

Miss Jesse James

THOSE who thought that all the descendants of Jesse James were driving taxicabs in New York were mistaken. His granddaughter, Jesse Estelle James, is now in Hollywood to appear in Fred Thomson's first Paramount picture, "Jesse James." She will portray her grandmother, whom she is said to resemble remarkably in appearance, and will wear four gowns which were the property of the original Mrs. Zerelda Samuels.

The U. A. Studio

VICTOR M. SHAPIRO, United Artists' Advertising & Publicity Director, recently brought back to New York from Los Angeles photos, facts and figures about the enlarged United Artists Studio. He said, "Although only partially completed, the new United Artists Studio is already one of the few really self-contained picture plants in the industry."

Situated on the old site of the Pickford-Fairbanks plans in Hollywood, the new studio was laid out and constructed so as to embody utilization of ground space, easy accessibility to all buildings and economy in operation, according to Mr. Shapiro.

He said the plant has three of the largest stages in the industry. The two newest are 135 feet wide by 225, with a height of 36½ to 35 feet respectively to the lowest trusses. In one of these is a theatrical stage 64 feet deep with a height of 60 feet. The old stage is 120 by 240.

The administration building, 171 feet long and two stories high, contains 50 executive offices. A third story is planned for this structure. Six bungalows, equipped and furnished to the last detail, are provided for stars.

Eight cutting rooms, 12 x 18, and four projection rooms are housed in a concrete building. On the roof of this structure is a gymnasium, 40 x 72, with a balcony at one end. This space is sometimes converted into a theatre seating 250 persons.

A mill and woodworking shop, 90 x 205, has a clear height of 22 feet and is situated near the stages. Centrally grouped around the mill are the plaster, property, blacksmithing and drapery shops. There is no lost motion in going from one to the other.

The casting department adjoins the wardrobe and "extra" dressing rooms and has a separate entrance. The building is 230 feet long and two stories high. Next to it is the individual

An effective pictorial study of Madge Bellamy as the little Irish heroine of "Colleen," her next picture for Fox. We suppose this might be entitled "Two Harps" dressing room building, 187 x 28, with 76 individual rooms for supporting cast players.

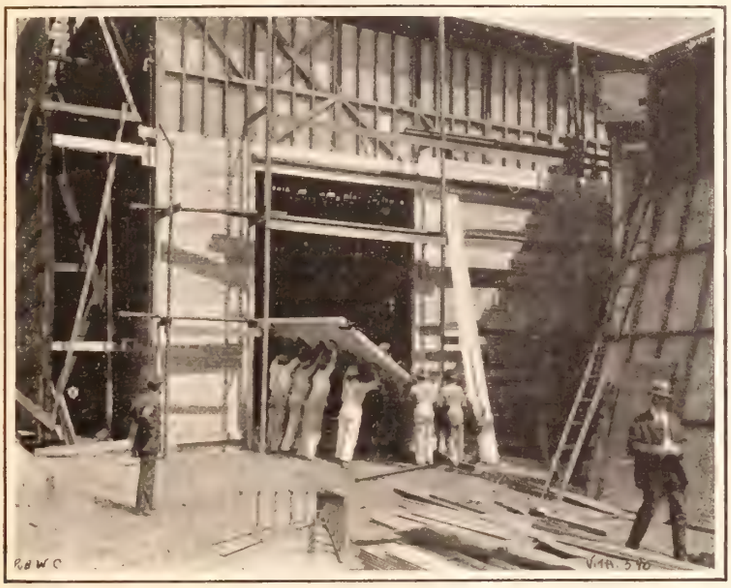
One of the largest out-door tanks in the industry is situated directly behind the central grouping of buildings. Near this are eight fire and theft-proof film vaults and a huge storage shed.

Mr. Shapiro says the studio takes particular pride in the woodworking shop, which is equipped with the most complete line of machinery man's ingenuity could devise. Ponderous planing and milling machines are at one end of the shop, while the delicate lathes used in making miniatures are at the other.



Still more stages and shops are being planned to take care of the increasing activities of the United Artists. These will be situated in the central group so that workmen will lose no time in going from one center of industry to another.

Simon Legree Nearly Exposed

THE Southern California sun and "Simon Legree's" demand for comfort recently led to an embarrassing situation at the United Artists Studio in California, where Rosetta and Vivian Duncan were filming their comedy, "Topsy and Eva." The villainous Simon, in the person of Gibson Gowland, wore a shaggy buffalo coat which reached nearly to the ground.

After sweltering through several scenes, he retired to his dressing room, removed his suit, and returned to the set attired in boots and the all-enveloping fur coat and a hat.

Director Del Lord proceeded to give orders: "Now, Legree, you stride up to Topsy, get ready to whip her, then throw off your overcoat to give you more freedom in wielding the lash."

Gowland spluttered and stuttered a moment and then blurted out, "I can't take this coat off!"

"Can't!" yelled Lord, "What's the matter? Is it sewed on to you?"

Gowland looked first at Topsy, then at Eva, then at Lord.

College Favorites

PRINCETON is the latest university to proclaim Norma Shearer its favorite movie star. Just as Columbia did last year, Princeton this year paid signal honor to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress, who has become definitely established as the favorite of collegians throughout the country.

Renee Adoree, the popular heroine of "The Big Parade,"

E. W. Allen (seated), general manager of Educational Studios, signs Lupino Lane for the 1927-28 season. Lane, who has been in New York the past week with Mr. Allen, will make eight comedies the coming season, instead of six.

has been chosen by the seniors of Wesleyan College as their favorite motion picture actress. In the annual ballot taken by the graduating class Miss Adoree led the field by a decisive majority.

Following "The Big Parade," Miss Adoree has played featured roles in such Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films as "La Boheme," "The Show," and "Mr. Wu," and will soon have one of the most coveted parts of the new season when she plays the title role in M-G-M's forthcoming production of "Rose Marie," based on the international musical hit.

Colleen Moore and First National Reach Settlement of Differences

DIFFERENCES between Colleen Moore and First National Pictures have been amicably adjusted and the star will continue making productions for that company according to her present contract as soon as she has taken a much needed rest.

John McCormick will devote his exclusive time to supervise the productions of the popular actress.

"Synthetic Sin," from the play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, will be the first of Miss Moore's pictures for the new season, to be followed by "Lilac Time," by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin, a George Fitzmaurice production adapted from the stage play of the same title. "Lilac Time" is scheduled to be one of First National's biggest specials during the coming year. Following these two productions, other pictures will be made as planned.

During the past few years Miss Moore has been constantly busy in the studio and is in need of a rest before she resumes work. Within the next few days, she will leave New York for a few weeks, at least, remaining far removed from picture making.

Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager, said that the differences between Miss Moore and First National had never been of a really serious nature and that he always felt certain of their reaching an understanding.

There was a family reunion at the Hotel Plaza, N. Y., Thursday afternoon, where First National gave a tea-dance in honor of Miss Moore and Mr. McCormick.

Hays Attacks Misbranding of Pictures Abroad

Points Out That Foreign Producers Are Selling European Productions in India as American Films

THAT foreign motion picture producers, taking advantage of the preference expressed by the public for American films, are misbranding their pictures and selling European-produced pictures in India as American productions, is indicated in advices from Delhi, India, which tell of the protest of a mob against an "American film."

Will H. Hays suggested this week that this is indicated in the dispatches reporting the recent demonstration by Moslems against "Moon of Israel," which is named in cables as being an "American film."

"An outbreak occurred in a theatre in protest against historically correct scenes," said Mr. Hays. "Cables from London state that 'Moon of Israel' is an American film.

"This production, which was shown in New York City last week, was produced by the Sascha Film Company of Vienna. It was made in Austria from a story written by H. Rider Haggard, an English author. Americans had nothing whatever to do with its production. 'Moon of Israel' is known on the Continent as one of the best of the Austrian productions. The American rights are owned by F B O, an American Company. Why it is designated in India as an American production I do not know, unless it was falsely branded by persons who wished to take advantage of the popularity of American pictures. Either that, or the report charging the riot as due to an American film may be another evidence of the organized effort to discredit American films in certain countries because of their popularity.

"There is, of course, no thought of singling out American films for governmental discrimination in India. The British Government, I am sure, has no such plan in mind. To offer as the cause of a riot that an Austrian-made film of a story by a great English author is an American film is going to rather great lengths. Great Britain's experience in Australia is proof of the status of American films.

"Last year the Australian censors rejected 12.5 of the American pictures and 16.66 per cent of the British pictures. In the first three months of 1927 the Australian censors rejected 9.2 of American pictures and 42.8 of British pictures."

Report More Improvements on Magnascope

LORENZO DEL RICCIO, cinema engineer responsible for the Magnascope, arrived in New York this week from Hollywood to prepare projection effects for "Wings," which will open at the Criterion Theatre on August 1.

Del Riccio comes back to town after an absence of eight months and is making his headquarters at the Criterion Theatre.

Although he declined to reveal his effects in advance of the "Wings" public presentation, del Riccio is reported to have developed and improved upon the Magnascope process to an amazing degree.

"Colleen" and "Married Alive Fox July Releases

James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox Films, announces the release for July of "Colleen," starring Madge Bellamy, and "Married Alive," with a special cast.

"Colleen" was directed by Frank O'Connor and is adapted from an original story by Randall H. Faye. In addition to Miss Bellamy the cast includes J. Farrell Macdonald, Charles Morton, Sammy Cohen, Ted McNamara, Marjorie Beebe, Tom Maguire, Sarah Padden, Sidney Franklin, Tom McGuire and Carl Stockdale.

"Married Alive" is a screen version of Ralph Strauss' novel of the same name, adapted by Gertrude Orr. The cast includes Matt Moore, Margaret Livingston, Lou Tellegen, Claire Adams, Emily Fitzroy, Gertrude Claire, Eric Mayne, Henry Sedley, Charles Lane and Marcella Daly. It was directed by Emmett Flynn.

"Married Alive" is scheduled for July 17.

De Mille to Film "The Wreck of the Hesperus"

Longfellow's world-famous poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," is to be brought to the screen by the DeMille Studio. Published by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in 1842, it has been part of the education of millions of school children.

Harry Carr and John Farrow have written a scenario based on the poem, and Elmer Clifton, who produced "Down to the Sea in Ships," will direct it. "The Wreck of the Hesperus" will mark the further rise of two of the young DeMille players, Frank Marion and Virginia Bradford, who will have the leading rôles.

"Loves of Carmen" New Fox Picture

"Loves of Carmen" is the screen title of the Fox version of Prosper Merimee's "Carmen," which is expected to be released August 14th. For the new Raoul Walsh film six months were required in preparation. Special agents were sent to Spain to make notes, take photographs and order costumes. Casting, including screen tests of almost 100 players, required two months. The actual filming required another six months and took the company over more than 800 miles of territory.

Will Try to Change German Kontingent

AN endeavor will be made by the German Film Industry to change the German kontingent, a dispatch to the New York Times reads.

As the present kontingent system operates on a one to one basis, the German trade seeks to alter it so that four American films can be admitted for German showings for every German film that is brought to the United States.

The new plan is intended as an inducement to American distributors to buy more German product.

General Salary Slash Deferred

Producers Withhold Cuts Until August 1; Companies Prune Distribution Costs; Equity Out to Organize Talent

DEVELOPMENTS of the past week arising from the announced intention of producers to cut salaries of production employees were:

The decision of twelve producing companies to accept the offer of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts to act as mediator in the dispute over salary reductions and the recommendation that action on the salary reduction be deferred until August first.

Gradual elimination of "deadwood" in distribution systems preparatory to the meeting of sales heads in New York on July 14 when sales and exhibition economies will be worked out.

Players, directors and technicians will, in all probability, either form a union of their own or else join Actors Equity as a means of protection of rights.

Paramount, M-G-M and Warner Bros. have decided against the general salary reduction.

An emergency cabinet appointed at Paramount studios to study the production situation; the cabinet comprises representatives of players, directors and technicians and has pledged itself to institute policies which will do away with excessive costs in picture making.

The twelve producers who will work with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts are Joseph M. Schenck, Cecil B. De Mille, William Fox, Charles and Al Christie, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Mack Sennett, Samuel Goldwyn, Jack White, F B O, Universal, First National and Warner Brothers. It is pointed out that the decision to withhold action on the salary reduction will give the various production branches opportunity to thoroughly discuss plans to reduce negative costs.

Distribution costs, it is generally admitted, are topheavy, with the average estimate of 35 per cent for distribution due to duplication of effort considered unnecessary by the major companies; this matter will be thrashed out at the scheduled meeting of sales heads in New York on July 14. At that time the sales personnel of the various companies will be analyzed and those persons whose services are considered unnecessary will be let out. There will be no drastic slashing, according to the program, but rather a steady pruning of expenses which "will bring distribution costs to a reasonable plane."

Theatre costs will also be scanned with a view to affecting economies in the operation of the houses owned by producer-distributors. One means of cutting expenses contemplated will be the cutting down of theatre overhead caused by "the presentation craze."

With regard to the organizing of employees; Frank Gilmore of Actors Equity is at present in Hollywood making a survey of conditions. Equity claims to have about 45 per cent of the screen players on its roster and is following a policy of "watching waiting," displaying a sympathetic attitude. Equity, it is stated, would welcome the players to its fold, after which it would be prepared to fight their case in resisting a salary cut. Players are in the weakest position, for directors are organized, as are the cameramen.

In the event that players, directors and technicians decide to combine into one union it is being proposed that a nationally-known figure be secured to head such an organization. In this connection the name of Clarence Darrow has been mentioned.

Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warners have definitely decided to abandon the general reduction plan. M-G-M's change of plans was announced by Louis B. Mayer at a mass meeting at the Culver City studios of the company, where Mr. Mayer stated:

"The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Producing Organization has united in one common cause. That cause involves the determination on the part of everyone at the studio to do away with any necessity of uniform salary cuts, either on August first or any other time. It has been established that a uniform ten per cent salary cut is wrong. I am happy, therefore, that it will not be instituted.

"It is not and never was the intention of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to do anything that is unfair. At the same time, the fact that something must be done immediately to relieve the present crisis, involving high production costs, is thoroughly appreciated by everyone in our organization. Discussions emanating from the uniform salary cut idea served one good purpose, and that was the realization on the part of everyone that production costs must come down. As a result of our meeting, each person associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will do his or her full share in attaining this end.

Fulton Expansion Plans Listed

Accessories Company Re-Organized; Will Have Branch Offices and Stores in Key Cities; Now Serves Big Circuits

TO silence rumors that have been current for some time past and to clearly indicate the present and prospective position of the E. E. Fulton Co., President C. H. Fulton makes the following statement:

"This company has just completed reorganization in order to function effectively as a nation-wide concern. Branch offices will be opened in all principal cities, supplemented by sales representatives in various important centers.

"Conditions in the motion picture theatre industry have undergone very considerable change in recent years and to meet demands of the present day and age vastly improved facilities are necessary.

"Until recently, practically all theatres of importance, value or consequence were concentrated in the larger cities of the country. During that earlier period, the small town show was usually a small investment proposition and the outlay for equipment and supplies very limited.

"This situation did not justify branch supply and equipment stores to any extent and consequently a large percentage of exhibitors and prospective exhibitors were far removed from markets for theatre goods.

"But everywhere today the standard of picture theatre architecture, decoration, furnishings and mechanical-electric equipment has been raised to such a level that even small towns, often in remote parts of the country, boast of theatres built or contemplated which compare favorably with many metropolitan show houses.

"The immediate result of our reorganization and increased capital will be the creation of many branch offices and stores. In addition to Chicago headquarters and present branches at St. Louis and Indianapolis, offices and stores will soon be opened in New York, San Francisco and Atlanta, with the subsequent opening of branches in: Philadelphia, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio; Milwaukee, Wis.; Kansas City, Mo.; Dallas, Texas; Boston, Mass.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Detroit, Mich.; Omaha, Neb.; Jacksonville, Fla.

"Additional branches contemplated are: Washington, D. C.; Denver, Colo.; Seattle, Wash.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Los Angeles, Cal.; New Orleans, La.

"Sales representatives will also be located in: Oklahoma City, Okla.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Albany, N. Y.; Baltimore, Md.; Tampa, Fla.; Des Moines, Ia.; Portland, Ore.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Charlotte, N. C.; Memphis, Tenn.; Cincinnati, O.

"We are now serving ten of the leading theatre circuits, as follows, and also the subsidiaries of these ten: Paramount Famous Lasky Corp., Universal Pictures Corp., Stanley Company of America, Publix-Saenger Theatres, Inc., West Coast Theatres, Inc., B. F. Keith Circuit, Loew Incorporated, Kunsky Theatres Corp., Publix Theatres Corp., Saenger Theatres, Inc."

More Columbia Exchanges

Five New Branches in Key Cities; John C. Ragland Named Manager of Sales; Buys in New Company

John C. Ragland

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures, of the completion of arrangements by his company for the opening of exchanges in five key cities: Los Angeles, San Francisco, Butte, Portland and Seattle. The new branches, which will be known as Columbia Pictures Exchanges, will be under the management of John C. Ragland, formerly Harold Lloyd's personal representative for distribution.

Mr. Ragland, who has a financial interest in the new company, has been designated head of sales, and will shortly receive his official title, which probably will be president of the West Coast Exchange Company. The negotiations for the new exchanges were engineered by Harry Cohn, vice-president, and Jack Cohn, treasurer of Columbia Pictures. The new acquisitions are in conformity with Columbia's nationalization plan, which was started a year ago when the first exchange was annexed, stated Mr. Brandt.

In commenting on the affiliation of Mr. Ragland with Columbia, Mr. Brandt stated: "I am more than gratified that Mr. Ragland becomes associated with Columbio. We aim to have the best 'brain power' in the industry in every department, so as to enable us to give to the exhibitor not only the greatest pictures of the season but service that will surpass that which has been furnished by any company in the producing or distributing end of the business."

Rupert Hughes to Title "The Patent Leather Kid"

Rupert Hughes, author of "The Patent Leather Kid," which First National Pictures has just filmed, with Richard Barthelmess as the star, will title the picture.

The picture is now in the cutting room for final editing. It will be released as a road show, opening at the Globe Theatre in New York on August 15th.

Theatre Boom in Detroit

Kunsky Leading Building Race With Three Theatres Under Way; Fox and United Artists Have One Each

THEATRE construction in Detroit is increasing with the Kunsky Enterprises leading the field having three houses under construction or planned. The company, dominant factor in the local field and allied with Publix, is building at Royal Oak, Birmingham and Redford.

Fox is building a 5,000-seat house at the corner of Montcalm and Woodward, and United Artists has under construction a Bank building, is drawing sketches for a house at Mt. Elliott and Davison.

Tryon Signed for Five Years by Universal

GLENN TRYON, comedy star in Universal's "Painting the Town," just in from the Coast, has been signed on a five-year contract by the Carl Laemmle organization as a result of his work in the new picture. No intimation of salary is included in the announcement, just made at the Universal home office, but it is thought to be on a sliding scale.

Tryon is a current graduate from short subjects, having been starred in Hal Roach Comedies for a year or so.

In and Out of Town

THERE was celebration at the Lumas Film Corporation offices in New York last Tuesday, the main event being the return to his desk of Budd Rogers, Vice-President of Lumas and Gotham, who is recovering from his recent indisposition.

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, sailed Tuesday on the S. S. Berengaria for Europe. He expects to be away about three months, during which time he will visit all principal countries on the Continent.

AL LICHTMAN, United Artists' vice-president and general manager of distribution for United States and Canada, left New York Wednesday, June 29th, for Los Angeles, there to join Joseph M. Schenck, president and chairman of the Board of Directors of United Artists. The executive will remain in Los Angeles for three weeks.

J. H. SEIDELMAN, assistant-manager of the foreign department of Paramount, sailed Saturday, July 2nd, on the Ile de France for a stay of several weeks in Europe.

E. B. DERR, treasurer of F B O Pictures Corporation, returned to New York today after a three-months' stay at the Hollywood studios of the company.

Laemmle Elected President of M. P. Relief Fund

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has just been unanimously elected president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund of America. He succeeds Cecil B. DeMille in this post.

The Motion Picture Relief Fund of America is a comparatively new organization looking to the needs of the aged and indigent veterans of the industry. It plans, among other activities, the endowment of a national home for film people forced by age or incapacity to seek relief.

Most of the prominent stars, executives and studio officials in the screen world are behind the relief fund movement.

Tiffany Closes Deal With Nathanson

M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, has just closed a contract with Nat Nathanson for the distribution rights for the twenty gems from Tiffany for 1927-1928 for Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania and the Straights Settlements.

Schines May Build Another Playhouse in Syracuse

Overtures from Syracuse building interests which may result in giving Syracuse a second Schine theatre, are now in progress, it was announced this week by L. W. Schine, general manager of Schine Enterprises, Inc., of Gloversville.

Confirmation of the Rialto report that the Schine future plans contemplated another Syracuse playhouse climaxed the recent regional convention of Schine managers from 20 up-State cities and towns.

The Syracuse meeting, which closed with a dinner at the Hotel Onondaga, was the second regional meeting, following upon the heels of the first at Buffalo on Monday. L. W. Schine presided at the gathering.

The Schine circuit now embraces 112 theatres in New York and Ohio, Mr. Schine announced, and the corporation allied with but not a subsidiary of Universal Pictures, considers that as just a start. In Ohio a string of brand-new houses is projected.

The day of the small independent exhibitor is fast passing, Mr. Schine said. The trend in picture circles is toward consolidation, and it will result in some three or four distributing and exhibiting circuits of gigantic proportions, he believes. This spells greater economy all around.

Work on New St. Louis Theatre to Start Shortly

Construction on the new $1,000,000 theatre, store and apartment building for the St. Louis Amusement Company at Hamilton and Easton Avenues, St. Louis, Mo., will get under way within the next few weeks, according to the present plans of Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar, who control the St. Louis Amusement Company.

The new theatre, to seat 2,000 persons, was designed by Rapp & Rapp. The general contract for the building was awarded to the Boaz-Kiel Construction Company, which built the Ambassador Theatre and office building for Skouras Brothers.

Gilda Gray Leaves for West Coast Picture Work

Gilda Gray left New York, Monday, June 27th, for the West Coast, to begin work on "The Devil Dancer," which is to be her first feature under the Samuel Goldwyn banner, for release through United Artists.

Decision in Paramount Case Expected Shortly from Trade Commission

By CLARENCE L. LINZ
Washington Correspondent, MOTION PICTURE NEWS

WASHINGTON, JULY 6.—Members of the Federal Trade Commission are meeting daily this week for the purpose of disposing of some of the cases which have long been pending. At a conference of the Commissioners on July 5, the Paramount case was brought up for discussion and, it is believed, was agreed upon, tentatively at least, although members of the Commission, following the meeting, refused to disclose what had transpired.

In view of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Eastman Kodak Company case, it is believed here that the complaint against Paramount will be dismissed, as theatre ownership and block booking were the only issues of importance. The Eastman decision disposes of the former, and it had been indicated by comment of the Commissioners during the hearings in the case that block booking is considered nearly wholesale selling of films and, as such, not of itself illegal.

It is expected that the Commission in the next few days will announce its decision in a number of cases, including that of Famous Players.

Benefit Results Lauded

Report of Indianapolis Film Board of Trade Shows That Theatres Are Contributing Generously

A PARTIAL report from the Indianapolis Film Board of Trade regarding benefit performances for the Mississippi Valley flood sufferers, shows that 63 theatres in the Indianapolis territory raised $8,003.97. Gratis donations of film valued at $923.50 were contributed by the distributing companies for these performances.

The Philadelphia Film Board of Trade reports that 121 theatres in the Philadelphia territory contributed $16,883.82. The estimated value of free film rental for these performances is $2,006.00.

A final report from the Omaha Film Board of Trade shows that 64 theatres contributed $5,012.32. The value of free film contributed by distributors was $1,322.30.

A report of the Buffalo Film Board of Trade shows that with four theatres to hear from, the total for the Buffalo Territory is $14,201.57. The value of gratis film given by distributors is $2,025.50.

The Cleveland Film Board of Trade reports that 31 theatres outside of Cleveland have contributed $1,881.17 to the Mississippi Relief Fund.

The film donated by exchanges for these shows had a rental value of $881.00.

Theatres in the City of Cleveland are planning for benefit performances which have not yet been scheduled.

A final report from the Oklahoma City Film Board of Trade says that the theatres in Oklahoma City turned over to the Red Cross for the Mississippi Relief Fund, $7,522.23.

The distributing companies through the Film Board contributed film for these shows that had a rental value of $3,243.45.

Seek Reversal of Pa. Supreme Court Verdict

THE ruling of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court upholding the blue laws of 1794, which ban Sunday baseball, and other commercialized Sunday amusements, is to be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, if necessary, in the fight to seek a reversal.

This was made evident on July 2, when an application was filed in Harrisburg with the prothonotary of the State Supreme Court, for a re-argument of the Sunday baseball case.

The constitutionality of the Blue Laws is involved, as applying not only to Sunday baseball, but to movies, which now are banned in Pennsylvania under the terms of the ancient statute, and other amusements. The papers were filed by John R. Geyer, and Paul G. Smith, both of Harrisburg, and Charles G. Gartling, of Philadelphia, as counsel for the Athletics. They contend that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court neglected to consider constitutional questions, and the application for a review of the case specifically asks the court to pass on those matters. It is understood that if reargument is denied or, if granted, fails to result in a reversal in favor of Sunday amusements, an appeal will be filed with the United States Supreme Court which would aver, among other things, the old Pennsylvania Blue Laws are in conflict with the Federal constitution.

Actual Work Started on Lloyd's New York Story

Harold Lloyd started this week on his New York story which when completed will mark his third picture for Paramount release. It will be several weeks yet before the section of Gotham now being built on the Lloyd studio site in Westwood Hills is completed, so that preliminary scenes will be shot around the amusement district of Venice and Ocean Park.

United Artists Buys Half Interest in Rivoli-Rialto, New York, $1,250,000

PAYING a million and a quarter United Artists this week closed negotiations with Publix theatres whereby the former secures a half interest in the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York City, until now controlled by the Publix chain. With these houses United Artists now has eleven of the twenty pre-release houses it set out to build or acquire starting last year. The name of the Rivoli will he changed to Rivoli-United Artists. Another deal recently closed with Loew's, Inc., provides for the joint operation by U. A. and Loew's of houses in Pittsburgh and Columbus.

United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., will spend at least $43,000,000 on new houses, Lou Anger, general manager of the chain, stated upon his return to Hollywood. The money is being spent on theatres under construction or being purchased.

Anger has been on a six months' tour of the country investigating the theatre situation.

T. O. C. C. Calls Meeting On Increased Costs

Exhibitors of Metropolitan Zone to Take Up Higher Overhead and Decreasing Box-office Receipts

A MASS meeting of exhibitors in the metropolitan area has been called July 14 by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City, to discuss the steady rise in operating costs without corresponding increase in box office receipts.

The call for the meeting is issued by Sol Raives, President of the T. O. C. C. "Increased expenses, higher overheads, high-powered selling methods, keener and ruthless circuit competition and a constant falling off of receipts, poor attractions, all face the independent theatre owner," the statement declares.

"The buying season is here—the season that means so much to the theatres for the coming year—and with all the prospects of a crucial year, the Chamber of Commerce is asking for a get-together—a parley—to see where they are going," the statement adds.

The meeting is called for Thursday, July 14, at the Hotel Astor, and the exhibitors in attendance will be tendered a luncheon by the Chamber at 1:00 P. M.

It is understood that many exhibitors in the metropolitan zone are declining to pay rental increases which the exhibitors say the distributors are demanding, and are also disturbed over other increased overhead.

Many are reported not booking new season films at all, pending a meeting of the kind now called by the T. O. C. C., at which concerted action may be mapped out.

$528,000 Publix Contr't for Whiteman's Band

A CONTRACT with Publix which becomes effective in September has been signed by Paul Whiteman and his band whereby the famous musical organization will play for 44 weeks at a sum said to be $528,000.

This agreement, which brings Whitemay a stipend of $12,000 a week, provides that the conductor and his orchestra appear at any Publix house. It is understood, however, that most of the band's activities will be centered at the Paramount in New York, but in the event of traveling Publix will pay the transportation costs.

The contract is reputed to be unique in that it involves the largest amount of money ever paid for theatre music of any kind whatsoever.

Jesse Devorska in F B O's "Jake the Plumber"

Jesse Devorska has been signed by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production at the F B O studios in Hollywood, to play the featured role in "Jake," the Plumber," a feature length comedy on the 1927-28 program. Devorska's services were obtained from Hal Roach for whom Devorska has been appearing in a series of two reelers.

"Jake, the Plumber" will be the young Jewish comedian's first big production.

"Jake, the Plumber," is an original story by Walter A. Sinclair. Edward Luddy will direct the picture. It will go into production early in July.

De Mille to Film "The West Pointer"

With the full cooperation of the United States War Department and the authorities at the United States Military Academy at West Point, a company from the Cecil De Mille studio in Hollywood will invade West Point within two weeks to make "The West Pointer."

William Boyd will be the star of the picture. Donald Crisp will direct. The story has received the official approval of the War Department.

Janet Gaynor Starts New Fox Starring Vehicle

Production has started on "Two Girls Wanted," Janet Gaynor's first starring vehicle for Fox Films, under direction of Alfred E. Green. The cast includes Doris Lloyd, Earle Fox, Glenn Tryon, Marie Mosquini, Joseph Cawthorne and others.

The story is based upon the play by Gladys Unger and will be produced upon a pretentious scale by Fox Films. Exteriors are being filmed in the vicinity of Los Angeles. George Schneiderman has been assigned to work with Green as chief cinematographer.

"U" Schedules Tryon Comedy for Summer

Universal's "Viennese Lovers," a Universal Jewel scheduled for release this summer, with Mary Philbin, Jean Hersholt and Raymond Keane in the featured rôles, has been temporarily withdrawn from the schedule to make room for "Painting the Town," which Universal considers a "surprise" picture.

"Painting the Town" is a William J. Craft production, made from a story by Harry O. Hoyt, and featuring Glenn Tryon and Patsy Ruth Miller.

"Coward" Unit Returns to F B O Studio

After a week spent in the Big Bear Valley region taking exteriors for "The Coward," the F B O company making the photoplay featuring Warner Baxter, the director, Alfred Raboch, and others have returned to the F B O studio where the work will continue on interior scenes. The story was adapted to the screen by Edfred Bingham and Enid Hibbard from a story by Arthur Stringer and its cast includes Sharon Lynn, Freeman Wood, Raoul Paoli and others.

Cast for Tiffany's "The Tired Business Man"

M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany productions, announces the complete cast of the next Tiffany release, "The Tired Business Man," now in course of production. Among the principal players are Raymond Hitchcock, Mack Swain, Margaret Quimby, Blanche Mehaffey, Gibson Gowland, Dot Farley and Lincoln Plummer. Allan Dale, who directed "Redheads Preferred," is wielding the megaphone over "The Tired Business Man."

Vidor's Next Picture Will Be "The Big Ditch"

With the return to the Coast of King Vidor and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer unit, which has been engaged in filming scens in the East for "The Crowd," Irving Thalberg has announced that Vidor's next feature production will be "The Big Ditch," an original story by Laurence Stallings, with the Panama Canal as a background. This will be produced on an ambitious scale. "The Crowd" is now virtually completed.

Toronto Wants Next M. P. T. O. A. Convention

Toronto members of the M.P.T.O.A. are taking serious steps to secure the 1928 convention of the National Theatre Owners Association and are being backed in their efforts by civic officials and the Toronto Publicity Bureau. Toronto has wanted the M.P.T.O.A. convention for the past two years and it is felt around the Ontario capital that the city will be selected this time for the annual gathering.

Those who are sponsoring the campaign for Toronto as the convention city include J. C. Brady, proprietor of the Madison Theatre; Ald. W. A. Summerville, proprietor of the Prince of Wales and Eastwood Theatres, and Ray Lewis, advisory secretary of the M.P.T.O.A. in Ontario. Mr. Brady is president of the Canadian branch of the M.P.T.O.A.

Universal Acquires Two Theatres in New York

The acquisition of the Park Theatre in Manhattan and the Park Plaza in the Bronx was announced last Wednesday by Universal Chain Theatres Corporation. The Park seats 2,100 and is on First Avenue and Eighty-ninth Street; and the Park Plaza has 2,200 seats; to open September 1. The Universal Theatre, at New Utrecht Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, seating 3,000, will open August 1. The Universal Pictures Company has leased the Colony, a first-run house on Broadway, for five years beginning September 1.

Universal is to construct two theatres at Indianapolis and one at Marion, Ind. Another is to be built at Sheboygan, Wis. On completion of theatres under construction, Universal will have 300 theatres, seating more than 270,000.

Large Cinema "The Regal" Planned for London

A palatial new motion picture house, costing £250,000 (about $1,250,000), and called "The Regal," is about to be constructed at Marble Arch, London, which center already boasts the Marble Arch Pavilion, the only picture house ever attended by both King George and Queen Mary. It is intended to open the new theatre in August, 1928.

W. B. Give Long Contract to Promising "Find"

Audry Ferris, newcomer to the screen, in whom Warner Bros. have hopes for developing into starring material, has been signed by that organization for a long-term contract. Her first rôle will be the feminine lead opposite George Jessel in his forthcoming picture temporarily titled "The Broadway Kid." She will also play the ingenue rôle in "Slightly Used."

North and South Carolina Raised $3,778 for Flood

The Charlotte, North Carolina, Film Board of Trade reports that motion picture theatres in the States of North and South Carolina raised $3,778.27 for the Mississippi flood sufferers.

Loew's Gets 50,000 Seats in 20 New Theatres

Houses Located in Principal Cities, Seven in New York; Company in Strong Financial Position

THE building program of Loew's, Inc., now under way which comprises the construction of 20 theatres located in the principal cities of the country will give the company an additional seating capacity of 50,000 to 60,000 seats, according to an article in the Wall Street Journal, which is the eighth of a series on the motion picture industry.

The article states, in part:

The new houses will be located at Evansville, Ind.; Akron, Columbus and Canton, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Kansas City, Mo.; Richmond, Va.; Providence, R. I.; Houston, Tex.; Syracuse, New Rochelle, Yonkers, Fordam, N. Y.; Ninth Street, Brooklyn; Eighty-sixth Street, Brooklyn; Seventy-second Street, New York; Canal Street, New York, and Stamford, Conn. Seven of these theatres are in the Metropolitan area.

Loew's may be considered today in the strongest position of any of the amusement systems. This is true for two reasons. In the first place, earnings have shown a notably large and steady increase, reaching in 1926 a point which makes Loew the largest earner in this group. In four years earnings have grown from $2,415,888 reported for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1923, to $6,388,200 for 1926. Loew's expansion has been handled carefully and conservatively without unduly increasing indebtedness or interfering with the normal growth of profits.

In the second place, at a time when the whole moving picture industry is engaged in the most widespread expansion program in its history, Loew's has the outstanding advantage of having done a large part of its building in 1921 and subsequent years so that its theatres are already strongly entrenched in their territory and were built at costs considerably below those now prevailing, which means lower overhead.

Loew's is also engaged in an extensive theatre building program at present, but the majority of the new houses being built will be financed by local capital so that actual expenditure by the company will be comparatively small.

Loew's differs from other amusement systems in that the company was originally a theatre operating company producing vaudeville. When the development of the moving picture made it an integral part of the vaudeville program, the need for a supply of films became plain and Loew found it advantageous to acquire the Metro Pictures Corp. and later the Goldwyn Pictures Corp., now known as Metro-Goldwyn. The business of film producing has grown to the point where it forms a very large part of annual income of the parent company.

Loew Interests Fail to Contract for Symphony

JAZZ has won over classical music insofar as the $4,000,000 Midland Theatre in Kansas City, to be opened next fall, is concerned. The verbal contract by which an orchestra under the leadership of N. De Rubertis, known in Kansas City as the Little Symphony, was engaged to furnish the music at the Midland, which will seat 4,000 persons, has been reported to be declared off. The New York sponsors of the theatre, which is to be a Loew house of first run pictures, were not friendly to the engagement of the orchestra in the first place, but were persuaded by M. B. Shanberg, Kansas City manager, who knew the quality of the orchestra and the reputation it had established in the Kansas City territory Failure to sign the contract on the part of Loew interests is due to the conviction that the public still wants jazz.

Large Theatre Project Planned for Toledo, O.

One of the biggest building projects in this territory is announced for Toledo. The building will contain 18 ground-floor store rooms, 30 dwelling apartments, 7 large second-story office rooms and a motion picture theatre with a seating capacity of 1,956 persons. The construction represents an investment of more than $750,000, and is being built by the Toledo Theatres and Realty Company. The location, at the intersection of Monroe and Ottawa streets, has a total frontage of more than 700 feet. Plans were drawn by Mills, Rhines, Bellman and Nordhoff.

The Toledo Theatres and Realty Company also purchased the corner of Auburn and Ottawa drives directly across the street from the theatre property for a development which will be announced later.. The Toledo Theatres and Realty Company is negotiating for another building which will be an exact duplicate of the Auburn, to be erected on a site in Broadway near South avenue.

The Toledo Theatre and Realty Company is headed by E. G. Sourbier as president. Howard Feigley is vice-president and Nat Charnas is secretary-treasurer. The company owns and controls an important circuit of theatres in Toledo and in other Ohio towns.

Jean Mihail Will Produce Another Roumanian Film

The Roumanian director, Jean Mihail, who made "Peche," Roumania's best claim on motion picture production, has announced his intention of producing another super entitled "Kiferul," from the book of Barbu Delevrancea. M. C. Nottara, the dean of the National Theatre at Bucharest, will star in this piece. The exteriors will be shot in the Carpathians and in the province of Bukevine, near Czechoslovakia.

"Big Parade" Going Into 87 Week at Astor, New York; May Run 2 Years

AS this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS goes in the mails Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade" is starting on the eighty-seventh week of its run at the Astor theatre, New York City, and, judging from the box-office takings, it will probably round out a full two years at that house, which would mature in October. To date the picture has grossed more than $1,500,000 at the Astor theatre alone.

Outside of New York City the war epic has played 632 cities both in this country and abroad where it was exhibited in all the leading towns of England, France, Australia, Cuba, Mexico, South American and all the Scandinavian countries. It has now begun its run in the cities of the Central Powers, Germany, Austria, etc. It may be roughly estimated that it has been seen by more than five million Americans.

$159,600,000 in 1927-28 for Film Product

Eighty Per Cent of Pictures Will Be Made in Hollywood; Figures of Los Angeles Herald

ACCORDING to a survey of the Los Angeles Herald producers throughout the United States will spend $159,600,000 on 2,433 pictures made during 1927-28; the survey also revealed that 80 per cent of the product will be made in Hollywood at a total cost of about $128,000,000.

State right organizations are expected to contribute 500 films to the 1927-28 schedule, while 11 major distributors list 479, of which 337 are listed as "program" pictures, 102 "specials" and 40 in the roadshow class, according to announcements made.

Compared with the 80 per cent to be made in Hollywood, New York can boast of but 11 per cent of all pictures made in the U. S., while nine per cent is produced elsewhere.

The survey further states that $125,000,000 of the total $1,500,000,000 invested in the industry is invested in Los Angeles and Hollywood. Motion pictures lead the 25 basic industries of California, with a weekly studio payroll of $1,000,000 and 25,000 employees.

Fox' August Releases

"What Price Glory," "Paid to Love," "Singed," "Chain Lightning," and "Tumbling River" Listed for Month

AS a taste of what Fox Films intends offering exhibitors during the new season, James R. Grainger, the Fox Films general manager, announced this week his company's releases for the month of August.

Previously announced for release during September but changed because of a nation-wide request from exhibitors for an earlier release date, "What Price Glory" has been moved to August 28. This picture is the strongest on the Fox schedule.

August 14 is the release date for "Paid to Love," exhibiting George O'Brien in a romantic role. Virginia Valli plays the chief feminine role. William Powell, J. Farrell McDonald, Thomas Jefferson and Hank Mann are included among the support. Howard Hawks directed. Buck Jones will make his first appearance for the new season in "Chain Lightning," which has been set for August 14. Dione Ellis has the feminine role opposite the cowboy star. Lambert Hillyer directed.

"Singed," which will have a pre-release showing at the Roxy Theatre on July 9, stars Blanche Sweet and is that star's first feature role for Fox Films. Warner Baxter is the leading man while the cast is made up of Mary McAllister, Alfred Allen, James Wong and Howard Truesdale. John Griffith Wray directed "Singed."

Tom Mix is represented by a new Western, "Tumbling River," scheduled for August 21. Lew Seiler directed among others Dorothy Dwan, the feminine lead, Wallace McDonald and Tony, the Mix horse.

D. S. M'Gregor Goldwyn's Eastern Scenario Editor

Mrs. Dollie Sullivan MacGregor has been appointed Eastern scenario editor for Samuel Goldwyn Productions.

The new Goldwyn editor has won recognition as a novelist, her most recent being "The Call of the Trail," published by McCauley.

In addition to her writing activities, Mrs. MacGregor is well known as having been associated with the motion picture industry for many years in various scenario departments.

Excel't Signs De La Motte, Marmont and Chadwick

Negotiations were conducted by wireless and arrangements were concluded by cable for Percy Marmont, Marguerite de la Motte and Helene Chadwick to appear in some of the 18 feature productions on the new season schedule of Excellent Pictures Corporation. All three stars, Mr. Marmont, Miss de la Motte and Miss Chadwick, will star in two pictures each, making six productions in all.

The president of the Excellent organization, Samuel Zierler, had to go to Europe while the negotiations were in progress. They were carried on by wireless to the S.S. Majestic and concluded shortly after he reached England last Thursday evening (June 31).

Of the eighteen pictures Excellent will produce and distribute, five are already completed, though the first release is not scheduled until September. It will probably be "Your Wife and Mine," with Stuart Holmes, Phyllis Haver, Barbara Tennant and Wallace MacDonald.

New Advertising-Publicity Head for First Division

Following the resignation of Charles Reed Jones as advertising exploitation and publicity director for First Division Distributors, Inc., and his announcement that he intends to devote his time to writing and a private venture, Mort Shaw, advertising man and title writer, formerly with Universal, Columbia and Red Seal, steps in to take the place vacated by Mr. Jones. The latter has been connected with the motion picture industry in various capacities for about ten years and has recently completed a gook on motion pictures which will be published in the early fall by the Unicorn Press.

Four New Stern Comedies Finished for Next Season

Four "Keeping Up with the Joneses" comedies of the new series of thirteen being made by the Stern Brothers have been completed at the Stern Brothers studio in Hollywood.

The comedies are being made under the direction of Gus Meins. The talent being used in series includes Harry Long, Gene Laymon, Stella Adams and Addie McPhail.

In the order of their probable release, the four comedies already completed are "Keeping in Trim," "Society Breaks," "Passing the Joneses," and "Showing Off."

Rogers Joins Warner's Extended Run Department

Frank B. Rogers, for many years well known as a film executive, has become associated with Morris Safier, sales manager of Warner Bros. Extended Run Department. His duties will be those of special representative.

Mr. Rogers will make his headquarters at the Warner Home Office, covering the New York, New Jersey and Brooklyn territories.

Submit Camera Device to French Academy

M. LUMIERE has just submitted to the French Academie des Sciences, on behalf of M. Chretien, professor at the Optical Institute, an optical combination which is to be put on the objectives of cameras and of motion picture projectors in order to get a considerably wider field, but in one direction only, vertical or horizontal. This system, in using normal film and ordinary apparatus, gives the solution of panoramic motion picture, the projection being effected on double or triple screen surface.

German Showmen Meet to Discuss Summer Prices

The Association of the Motion Picture Theatres of Berlin-Brandenburg held a meeting of its members on June 9, in order to discuss the question of admission prices during the summer season. The fact that several "movie" theatres are reducing the general admission scale is giving vent to a protest by other houses. The Association, together with the Central League of German film distributors, is now planning to issue a regular tariff and to proceed against offenders in threatening a film blockade.

A. J. Nelson Becomes Vocafilm Executive

David R. Hochreich, president of Vocafilm Corporation of America, announces the appointment of A. J. Nelson as general manager. Mr. Nelson has been in the distributing end of the film business since the formation of the old General Film Company back in 1910. He was chosen by J. F. Quinn of Vitagraph to be assistant general manager. In this capacity he served under Mr. Quinn until his death and then was appointed as general manager, which post he retained until Vitagraph was no more.

Definite Title Given New Meighan Vehicle

Supporting the star are: Marietta Millner, Louise Brooks, Montague Shaw, Luke Cosgrave, Shirley Dorman, Fred Kohler, Wyndham Standing, Charles Hill Mailes, Duke Martin, King Zany, and Nancy Phillips.

Standings in First Nat'l's Summer Billings Drive

At the close of the fourth week of First National's summer billings drive the Omaha exchange held first place, with Detroit and Los Angeles in second and third, respectively. All three exceeded their quotas.

Among the districts, the Eastern had jumped to first place, with the Western second and Canadian third.

Ohio Expansion Planned by Schine Enterprises

Circuit Theatre Managers Informed at Convention; Chain at Present Numbers 112 Houses

SCHINE Enterprises plan expansion of theatre holdings in Ohio and Western New York theatre managers for the circuit, in convention at Syracuse, were told by executives of the chain which at present numbers 112 theatres; it is allied with Universal. This information was conveyed to the managers in a speech by L. W. Schine, general manager of the circuit, who presided at the closing banquet for the conventionees.

Chief expansion of the Schines is expected in Ohio, where the company rapidly is building up a formidable chain of theatres. The firm, Schine made clear, is not a subsidary of Universal, but is allied with that company.

In central New York, the Schines are building a new theatre in Cortland, and will remodel and modernize theatres recently acquired in Geneva, Auburn and Oswego. In the first named, the Smith Opera House is the theatre affected; in the other two cities, the Strand is to be enlarged and re-equipped as was the Eckel in Syracuse.

Eight theatres will be built in Cleveland, Ohio by B. C. Steele, E. C. Flanagan and Sam Rosenthal, all of Cleveland. The building program of the new chain provides for completion of the eight by the end of this year.

The trio now control two houses in Cleveland, the Monarch and Terminal, and will build 2,000-seat houses at Alliance and Kent. These will be ready late in August. Two sites are being negotiated and four others are under consideration in various scattered points.

M-G-M's Release Schedule

"Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" Head Output for First Six Months of New Season; Thirty-One Films Listed

WITH "The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" at the top of the group of 31 productions that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has scheduled for the first six months of the new season up to February 4, the company's tentative releasing program assumes record proportions. Twenty-two starring vehicles are mentioned in this tentative schedule. According to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the newly announced program is the most ambitious production and release schedule in its history.

Supplementing the 31 features are the first of the M-G-M short subjects which will be ushered in during August with the first issue of the M-G-M news reel. The short subject output for the year includes 104 issues of the news reel, 10 Hal Roach comedies featuring Our Gang; 10 Hal Roach comedies starring Charlie Chase; 10 Hal Roach comedies with Max Davidson; 10 Hal Roach all-star two-reelers; 25 Ufa Oddities, and six Great Events, the historical two-reeler series that will be made in Technicolor.

The feature releases and their dates follow:

"The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" are set down for September 10 and October 8 respectively. These two dates are definite. The tentative schedule of releases for June and July of this year includes "Twelve Miles Out," starring John Gilbert; "The Callahans and the Murphys," with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran; "The Frontiersman," with Tim McCoy; "On Ze Boulevard," with Renee Adoree and Lew Cody.

Set for August are "Mockery," featuring Lon Chaney; "The Bugle Call," with Jackie Coogan in the stella role; "After Midnight," with Norma Shearer," and the Aileen Pringle-Lew Cody vehicle, "Adam and Evil."

September releases are "Annie Laurie," starring Lillian Gish; "A Certain Young Man," featuring Ramon Novarro; and "Foreign Devils," another Tim McCoy Film. During October will come "The Fair Co-ed," a Marion Davies vehicle; William Haines' "Spring Fever;" "In Old Kentucky," with an all-star cast; "Body and Soul," co-starring Aileen Pringle, Norman Kerry and Lionel Barrymore. Scheduled tentatively for November release is "The Garden of Allah," directed by Rex Ingram with Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich in the leads; "Quality Street," another Marion Davies picture; "Becky," with Owen Moore, Sally O'Neill and Gertrude Olmstead; "The Thirteenth Hour," a "different" detective story.

December sees "The Hypnotist," starring Lon Chaney; "Buttons," with Jackie Coogan; "The Bridal Night," a new Norma Shearer vehicle; "The Lovelorn," a Cosmopolitan production; another Tim McCoy film not yet determined.

Exhibitors will receive in January John Gilbert's "Fires of Youth;" Ramon Novarro's "Romance"; "The Divine Woman," featuring Greta Garbo"; a West Point story with William Haines. The French production, "Napoleon," is slated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for release in February.

Marks Representative for First Division

J. H. Marks, well known to exchangemen and exhibitors in the East, has become special representative for First Division Distributors, Inc., for whom he will tour the entire country. Marks is at present in Atlanta in connection with the establishing of cooperation for the distributing of 18 First Division films, six of which are completed.

Most of Paramount's Units on Locations

Although ten pictures are in production the Lasky studio in Hollywood is practically deserted. The "Beau Sabreur" company is on location at Guadalupe; Pola Negri and her troupe are in the citrus belt of California; Thomas Meighan's company making "The City Gone Wild" is doing a battle sequence in the Los Angeles Streets; Bebe Daniels and her company making "Swim, Girl, Swim" and Clara Bow and her company making her latest Paramount picture, "Hula" are on beach locations. Richard Dix's company are making scenes in Sacramento, for his latest picture, "Shanghai Bound"; and the Chester Conklin and George Bancroft gang making "Tell It To Sweeney" are at the Lasky Ranch. This leaves Florence Vidor making "A Celebrated Woman," Adolphe Menjou appearing in "A Gentleman From Paris" and the Mauritz Stiller company to hold down the fort.

Roach Two-Reeler Heads Pathe's July 17 Program

"Why Girls Love Sailors," a Hal Roach two-reel comedy in which Fred Guiol directed Stan Laurel, Viola Richard, Oliver Hardy, Malcolm Waite, Anita Garvin and others, heads the Pathe short feature program for the week of July 17th, which also includes "The Love Nest'," an Aesop Film Fable; Pathe Review Number 29; "Held in Bondage," the fifth chapter of "The Crimson Flash"; Topics of the Day Number 29 and two issues of Pathe News, the pioneer news reel, numbers 60 and 61.

"The Love Nest," an animated cartoon comedy of the Aesop's Film Fables Series, is the week's cartoon offering. Pathe Review Number 29, presents "Savage Sons of Battle"; "The Supreme Court of Words" and "The Flaming Heart" (Pathecolor).

Seven Shorts Programmed by Fox Films for July

Five two reel comedies, two one reel varieties, and the usual issues of the newsreel are offered by Fox Films for July release.

Under the supervision of George E. Marshall, four series are represented in the five comedies prepared. "Why Blondes Leave Home" and "Mum's the Word" are Imperials; "A Wolf in Cheap Clothing" bears the Animal brand; "Suite Homes" is an O. Henry; while "Her Silent Wow" completes the Helen and Warren series. The two Fox Variety subjects are "Snow Rambles," shot in the Canadian Rockies, and "The Glory That Was Greece,"

Gilbert and Garbo to be Co-starred in "Love"

John Gilbert and Greta Garbo will again appear before the camera together in "Love," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production based on Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina." Edmund Goulding will direct the film.

A strong supporting cast is being assembled in support of the two stars, and work on "Love" is expected to get under way at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio within a short time.

Richard Pearl to Coast For Burr-Hines

RICHARD PEARL, for the past year first assistant in contract and sales work for B. & H. Enterprises, Inc., leaves New York next week for the C. C. Burr-Johnny Hines headquarters in Hollywood, to take charge of the sales and contract department for that producing unit of First National Pictures.

Milestone to Direct "The Garden of Eden"

Louis Milestone has been borrowed from Howard Hughes' Caddo Production Company to direct Corinne Griffith in "The Garden of Eden," her first United Artists picture. Casting is progressing rapidly at the lot, and it is anticipated that the production will get under way in about four weeks. Hans Kraly is adapting the story, an original stage success by B. Bernauer and Rudolph Oesterreicher now creating a furore on the continent. Mr. Milestone has just completed the cutting of "Two Arabian Knights."

Finish Cutting and Editing of "Magic Flame"

Cutting and titling of Samuel Goldwyn's newest Ronald Colman-Vilma Banky feature, "The Magic Flame," directed by Henry King, was finally completed last week. George Marion, Jr., and Nellie Revell are to be listed as associate editors of the picture. The negative has been packed away for storage until about the first of September, when it is to be released through United Artists.

Activity at the Goldwyn studio now centers around Gilda Gray's initial venture on the Culver City lot, "The Devil Dancer."

Six Players So Far For New Veidt Film

Five prominent male players have been cast for "A Man's Past," the film which George Melford will direct for Universal. The leading feminine rôle has been given to Barbara Bedford.

Conrad Veidt, European star, will enact the stellar rôle, while the men supporting him will include Ian Keith, in the juvenile lead, Arthur Edmund Carewe and George Siegmann, as "heavies," and Charles Puffy palying a rôle quite different from his usual characterizations. Production on this film is scheduled to start next week.

Shirley Mason Stars for Sterling in "Stranded"

Sterling Pictures launches its new season with "Stranded," its first 1927-28 release. The story is from the pen of Anita Loos. Its cast includes Shirley Mason, William Collier, Jr., John Miljan, Shannon Day, Cissie Fitzgerald and Lucy Beaumont. The ensemble will be directed by Phil Rosen. "Stranded" goes into production on July 5th.

F B O Sets Seven Shorts for July Release

Seven short subjects are scheduled for release by F. B. O. Pictures Corporation during the month of July. On July 3d, "A Kick in the Dark," the last of "The Wisecrackers" series, will be released. Lorraine Eason, Thelma Hill, Danny O'Shea, Al Coke and Kit Guard portray the leading rôles. On July 4th, "Best Wishes," a one-reel Krazy Kat cartoon, will be shown to exhibitors. "Nothin' Doin'," a two-reel Bowers Novelty comedy, will be released on July 11th. Another July 11th release is "Alice's Medicine Show," an Alice cartoon, while July 19th will see the distribution of "Wild Rival," a one-reel Krazy Kat cartoon. Another Alice cartoon, "Alice The Whaler," will be distributed on July 25th, as well as "Campus Romeos," a Standard Fat Men comedy, featuring "Fatty" Alexander, "Fat" Karr and "Kewpie" Rose.

James J. Jeffries Signed to Play with Monte Blue

Warner Bros. have signed James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, to make his first screen appearance. This will be in the role of the hero's father in "One Round Hogan," a tale of the ring in which Monte Blue will star. Work on the picture will begin as soon as Blue finishes his current part in "The Bush Leaguer."

Von Sternberg to Direct Initial Bancroft Vehicle

Josef von Sternberg is to direct George Bancroft's first starring production for Paramount. Bancroft is at present playing in "Tell It to Sweeney" with Chester Conklin under the direction of Gregory La Cava.

W. B. Frank Managing Sennett's Eastern Office

W. B. Frank

ALMOST simultaneously with the announcement that Mack Sennett will remain with Pathe Exchange, Inc., comes the word that W. B. Frank, now Eastern sales manager for the Hal Roach Company, will join Sennett as manager of the Eastern office on July 2nd. Mr. Frank's association with Hal Roach was of such a pleasant nature that he found it quite a task, he says, to resign. Under the Sennett assignment he will also be at home with Pathe.

Mr. Frank was a highly trained sales executive in another line, Eastern zone manager with the Smith Farmer Tractor Company, prior to 1917, when he was induced to try his hand at selling film. He eventually became feature sales manager for Pathe and held this position until he joined Hal Roach, with whom he has been associated for three and a half years.

Tryon Male Lead in Fox's "Two Girls Wanted"

The leading masculine role in "Two Girls Wanted," Janet Gaynor's first starring vehicle for Fox Films, is being played by Glenn Tryon, who is working under the direction of Alfred E. Green at the West Coast studio of the company. Ben Bard is the heavy and Marie Mosquini plays the part of Miss Gaynor's sister. Doris Lloyd is also cast in the film. George Schneiderman is acting as cameraman. Seton I. Miller adapted the play which is based on a stage success written by Gladys Unger and produced by John Golden.

Production on "Ramona" Will Begin August 1

Production on "Ramona," the second Inspiration-Carewe production for United Artists release ("Resurrection" having been the first), begins at the Tec-Art Studio, Hollywood, August 1st. Edwin Carewe will personally direct "Ramona."

Preliminary preparations for filming of "Ramona," which is to be Dolores del Rio's first starring film, now are being completed at the Tec-Art Studio. Finis Fox, scenarist of "Resurrection," has completed the script for "Ramona." Carewe is now casting the film.

Cast Chosen for Adolphe Menjou's New Film

The cast for Adolphe Menjou's latest Paramount starring picture which bears the tentative title of "A Gentleman of Paris," chosen this week, includes the following players: Shirley O'Hara, Arlette Marchal, Ivy Harris, Nicholas Soussanin and Lawrence Grant. Production started this week. Miss O'Hara, who has played in independent Westerns, is a discovery of Fred Datig, Paramount casting director.

Committee to Consider Tax Revision Oct. 31

MEMBERS of the House committee on ways and means will be called to Washington October 31 to begin their consideration of the tax revision bill to be submitted to the next Congress, it has been announced by Representative William R. Green of Iowa, chairman.

With an estimated surplus for 1928 of approximately $375,000,000 or a little less, it is expected that the chairman of the ways and means committee will propose a cut of one per cent in the corporation tax rate, reductions in taxes on incomes between $30,000 and $100,000, which are now considered out of line, and repeal of the remaining admission tax and some of the other nuisance taxes. This, it is believed, would leave a margin of about $75,000,000.

It has already become evident that the demands of business for a reduction in the corporation tax from its present rate of 13½ per cent to 10 per cent will not be met, as such a cut would involve approximately $325,000,000, or about $25,000,000 more than the present limit placed on tax reduction.

Increase in Authorized Capital Stock of Stanley

INDICATING the extensive expansion program planned by the Stanley Company of Philadelphia is the recently announced increase on the authorized capital stock of the theatre company. The proposed increase in stock will be from 1,000,000 to 2,500,000 and will be voted on July 15 at the annual meeting of the Stanley stockholders.

Of the present authorization, there are approximately 901,000 shares outstanding.

While the increase will enable the company to provide for expansion, the management dos not contemplate issuing any of the new stock at present.

Roach's "Haunted Spooks" Heads Pathe Weekly List

"Haunted Spooks," a reissue of a Hal Roach two-reeler starring Harold Lloyd, is the major release of the Pathe program of short subjects scheduled for the week of July 10. Included in this group are "Eyes and Angles," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "Decoyed," the title of the fourth chapter of "The Crimson Flash;" Pathe Review, Number 28; "Riding High," an Aesop Film Fable; Topics of the Day, Number 28 and two issues of the Pathe News, Numbers 58 and 59. Roach and Alf Goulding directed the Lloyd reissue in which Mildred Davis, the comedian's wife, appears as leading lady. In support are Wallace Howe, Marie Mosquini and other names. The Pathe Review issue presents: "A New Land of Linen," "Speaking of Pets" (Pathecolor), "A Chapeau Tip From Jolly Java" and "The Cow Country Changes."

Sterling Pictures Active on West Coast

With the announcement from Sterling Pictures that "The Cruel Truth," the sixteenth production on the Sterling schedule for 1927-28, had been started on the Coast, comes news from Joe Rock, head of production for Sterling, that he and I. L. Walenstein, production consultant and story supervisor, will complete the few remaining Sterling pictures on the old program in time for the production of the first of the eight pictures that Sterling will produce for the coming season. Phil Rosen is now directing "The Cruel Truth" with Hedda Hopper, Hugh Allan and Constance Howard in the cast. When "The Cruel Truth" is finished there will be but two others on the 1926-27 schedule, "The Cancelled Debt" and "The Poor Fish."

"Finnigan's Ball" Premiere at California Theatre

"Finnigan's Ball," one of the six completed First Division releases, will have its world premiere at the California Theatre in Los Angeles. The general release has been set for September. The production is the work of James Hogan from an original story by Max Graff. Heading the cast are Cullen Landis and Blanche Mehaffey and others are Aggie Herring, Kewpie Morgan, Mack Swain.

Casting Young Players in First National Stock Co.

Al Rocket, Burbank production manager for First National, in accordance with his company's policy of establishing its younger players, has been carefully casting them for important parts in current productions. Virginia Lee Corbin, recently given a long term contract, has been given the feminine lead opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Drop Kick," which Ray Rockett is producing with Millard Webb directing. Miss Corbin has also been assigned a featured role in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Molly O'Day, who is seen with Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid," is playing opposite Milton Sills in "Hard-Boiled Haggerty."

Alice White, Paul Vicenti and Loretta Young are contributing characterizations in support of Billie Dove in "American Beauty." Yola d'Avril, who has just finished a part in "Smile, Brother, Smile," is being considered for a role in a picture to go into work shortly.

Three Stars in Gotham's "Rose of Kildare"

All preliminary production work on the first of the 1927-28 Gotham Productions, "The Rose of Kildare," has been completed, and actual camera work started on June 15th.

Helene Chadwick has the title role and Pat O'Malley the leading male part. Henry B. Walthall has a character role and to Lee Moran falls the comedy relief character. Carroll Nye, Ed. Brady and Ena Gregory are also in the cast.

Harold Shumate prepared the continuity and adaptation from the original Red Book Magazine story by Gerald Beaumont and Dallas M. Fitzgerald is directing at the Gotham West Coast studios at Universal City, California. "The Rose of Kildare" is scheduled for release to exhibitors for August first.

Com. Hears Counsel's Plea at Montreal Sitting

THE Royal Commission which has been conducting an investigation into theatre conditions in the Province of Quebec has been hearing the arguments of counsel at sittings held in the City of Montreal, the hearing of evidence by witnesses having been ended.

An interesting statement made before the Commission on June 30 by Ernest Bertrand, K.C., representing the Crown, presented his argument in favor of the continuance of Sunday moving picture performances in Quebec theatres, claiming that if Sunday movies were bad then the movies were bad at all times. But this was not so. Much of the criticism which was leveled at moving pictures was exaggerated. Sunday was the only day on which many of the working classes could attend. Most of the pictures were no worse than the plays presented in religious colleges.

Mr. Bertrand declared that the civic authorities of Montreal had been grossly negligent in the inspection of local theatres as to fire protection.

Cameras Turning on Seven Warner Pictures

July finds seven production units working at the Warner Bros. studio and scenarists busy on scripts for a number of other pictures to be started shortly.

Monte Blue is finishing this week the final scenes of his next vehicle, "The Bush Leaguer," under the direction of Howard Bretherton. When this is completed he starts in training for his role in "One Round Hogan."

Michael Curtiz has returned from six weeks in the Arizona desert, where he shot exteriors for Irene Rich's next vehicle. Interiors are now in progress. Several new players have been added to the line-up in "Slightly Used," starring May McAvoy with Conrad Nagel. They are Anders Randolph, Eugenie Besserer and Arthur Rankin. Camera work began a few days ago on George Jessel's starring picture, "The Broadway Kid," a temporary title. Byron Haskin is directing, with Audrey Ferris as Jessel's leading lady.

Rin-Tin-Tin, supported by Helen Ferguson and Jason Robards, is scheduled to finish this week "Jaws of Steel," under the direction of Ray Enright. Roy Del Ruth is shooting interiors now on "Ham and Eggs." "The Jazz Singer," now in work with Al Jolson as star, will be continued soon on the Hollywood lot when Alan Crosland returns from New York.

Pictures in the hands of scenarists now which will soon be ready for directors include "A Dog of the Regiment" and "Good Time Charley." "A Sailor's Sweetheart," for Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook, has been adapted by Harvey Gates, who is now at work on "Rebecca O'Brien," the next for May McAvoy.

More Players Sign to Work in Paramount Shorts

The new Paramount-Christie comedies will present many comedians and supporting players of prominence in addition to the regular Christie forces. This is seen in the signing of new talent this week for important parts in coming releases.

Ethel Shannon has been engaged for the Jimmie Adams comedy "Doctor Quack" as leading lady. Babe London is playing an important part with Jack Duffy in the latter's first comedy of the new season. Cissy Fitzgerald, will have a featured role in Anne Cornwall's first starring comedy for the new program. Virginia Sale, sister to Chic Sale of vaudeville fame, has been engaged for an important part with Jack Duffy in a "widow" comedy. Dorothy Vernon, mother of Bobby Vernon, has also been engaged for an outstanding part in the Duffy comedy. Cliff Lancaster, Bud Ross, Gus Leonard, Bobby Watson, and Kalla Pasha have also been engaged for supporting roles.

Chadwick Elected to M. P. P. D. A. Membership

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Directors of M. P. P. D. A. held last week, Chadwick Productions, Inc., were elected to membership in the Association. The membership now totals twenty-six.

Vaudeville Out in Many Stanley and Comerford Houses; Straight Pictures

VAUDEVILLE houses in and around Philadelphia are slowly giving way to the more popular picture and presentation type of entertainment; this movement it attested by the recent changes in policy of a number of theatres of the Stanley Company of America and the Comerford circuit's houses in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre.

Convinced of the growing demand for pictures the Stanley management has changed the policy of the Orpheum, Chelten and Germantown Avenues from a vaudeville-picture combination to a straight film exhibition, following the Stanton and Aldine with repeats. It had been found that straight pictures boosted receipts in other theatres of the chain. There are but three weeks of vaudeville time lft on Stanley's local circuit.

Comerford has adopted a straight picture policy for the Poli houses at Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, and if the experiment proves successful, the policy will be made permanent.

At Hazelton, the Feeley has switched to a straight picture policy, after ten years as a combination house.

F. N. Resumes Activities

Slack Season Passed; Three Pictures Go Into Cutting Rooms; to Finish Five More in Two Weeks Time

THREE First National productions which have been on the Burbank lots for some time were finished last week. Now that they are in the cutting rooms for assembling, cutting and titling the First National producers are concentrating on five more pictures which they expect to have finished inside of two weeks. The brief slack season which always takes hold of Hollywood at this time of the year has notably decreased and as a result the Burbank plant is the scene of much activity. Al Rockett, production chief on the West Coast for First National, is now announcing the start of new pictures and future plans.

The three completed productions referred to above are a Harry Langdon vehicle, a Ken Maynard Western and a farce starring Constance Talmadge. They will be released during July. Langdon worked on his new picture, as yet untitled, for six or seven weeks. It is from a scenario by Arthur Ripley. Appearing opposite the comedian is Gladys McConnell. Others are Agnes Steele, Francis Raymond, Henry Barrows, Hohn Kolb and Cornelius Keefe.

Immediately following the Langdon comedy was "The Red Raiders," a Charles R. Rogers production with Ken Maynard in the feature role. Marion Jackson did the story and continuity. Supporting the Western star are Ann Drew, Paul Hurst, J. P. McGowan, Harry Shutan, Tom Bay, Hal Salter, Chief Yowlache and the horse, Tarzan.

Four days later Malcolm St. Clair completed "Breakfast Before Sunrise," Constance Talmadge's new picture in which Don Alvarado appears in the masculine lead.

Six pictures are in work at the Burbank plant and five of this total will be finished in two week's time. The five are "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," starring Milton Sills"; "The Rose of Monterey," with Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland in the feature roles; "American Beauty," a Billie Dove Vehicle; "The Drop Kick," Richard Barthelmess' college story; and "The Crystal Cup," with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall.

Rapid progress is being made on "The Life of Riley," co-featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney. Before the lapse of many days Will Rogers will start his first feature picture for some time, "The Texas Steer."

Brager to Head Warner's Accessories Sales Dep't

Louis R. Brager has joined Warner Bros., where he will organize a new department to be known as accessories sales, of which he will be the manager. Brager has had extensive experience over a period of many years as exploiteer with large distributing organizations and theatre chains.

As the first step in the establishing of this new work he will start at once for a six weeks' tour of all Warner exchanges. Upon his return to New York the activities of the accessories sales department will haxe extended in scope to embody a field force.

First National Switches July Release Dates

By a change in its schedule of releases for July, First National will release "The Prince of Head Waiters," featuring Lewis Stone, on July 17th instead of the 31st.

Ken Maynard's "The Devil's Saddle" will be released on the 10th instead of the 17th, while "For the Love of Mike" will be released July 31 instead of July 10th. This is to give time for the editing, cutting and titling of the sequences showing the annual Harvard-Yale boat race which is a big feature of the picture and which was shot last week.

The release dates of "Lonesome Ladies" (July 3rd) and Johnny Hines' "White Pants Willie" (July 24th) remain unchanged.

Key City Reports

New York City

DESPITE the season, Broadway managers had little real cause for complaint last week. No records were broken, to be sure, but business was by no means what we used to think inevitable during summer months.

Roxy's playhouse had as its feature film attraction "Moon of Israel," and went up around the $100,000 mark again. This picture was received quite favorably by the critics, on the whole.

The Paramount can probably credit a fair share of the business done on "Wedding Bills" to Paul Whiteman and his band, who are to tour the Publix circuit at a weekly stipend announced at $12,000.

The same is true of the Strand, which featured a band strongly as opposition along with "Broadway Nights." The picture drew some good notices, but Waring's Pennsylvanians were undoubtedly responsible for much of the draw.

"The Way of All Flesh" is off to a big start at the Rialto, and the holiday week-and saw lines a block long at the box office.

The two-dollar attractions have all slipped a little, though not seriously.

Boston

ATTENDANCE at the downtown theatres started to slide off as the week advanced and, by Friday, had fallen considerably below the high level which has been maintained uninterruptedly since early in the fall.

For the first time in months one may now approach the Metropolitan theatre box office without waiting in line. Attendance has been above expectations, however, and the few vacant seats cause no uneasiness. The Paramount Junior stars in "Rolled Stockings" has been the feature, and has met with favorable comment from everyone who has witnessed the showing. Boston is particularly interested in the Junior star films, and always gives them a warm reception. Maid of the Mist is the Publix stage number with plenty of music and beautiful scenes. The number would probably have gone just as well with a little less of the bird notes running through the music. Whistling and shrill twitterings go a long way but, like seasoning, sometimes are found in too real volume. Rodemich and his jazz company continue.

Loew's State presented "The Taxi Driver," which was also well received, although box office returns showed a decline from the previous week. Phil Spitalny and his band supplied the stage musical number with Steve Weniger and Johnny Dove in vocal and dance numbers.

The New England premiere of "One Increasing Purpose" at Loew's Orpheum, averaged fair returns which may be called good for this season.

"The King of Kings" at the Tremont, Boston's only road show, continued fairly good receipts, playing to a $1.50 top. Apparently it has a number of weeks' run here before it.

"Chang" drew well at the Fenway in its second week, the first hold-over in months at this theatre. "The Better 'Ole," at the twin houses, the Modern and Beacon, had a good opening week and holds over another week. "Don Juan," which went three weeks at the twin houses, has moved across the river to the University Theatre. "Resurrection" at the Capitol and the Lancaster, "Framed" at the Washington Street Olympia and Scollay Square Olympia, are among other features showing.

Central Pennsylvania

THE lighter types of pictures, for the most part, were offered at the leading Harrisburg theatres the last week of June, and seemed to appeal to the popular fancy in weather which was quite warm though not unseasonably so. Colleen Moore, in "Naughty, But Nice," made a strong showing at the Colonial, winning popular approbation from the start, and another of the Will Rogers travel pictures helped to stimulate interest there. In Loew's Regent the main attraction was "Frisco Sally Levy," with Sally O'Neill, and provided sprightly warm weather entertainment that kept the box office busy, aided by Geo. Lyons, singing harpist, on the stage. The Victoria showed a lively Western, Zane Grey's "Drums of the Desert," which also cashed in strong.

The film attraction at the State was "The Price of Honor," and did good business with a return showing for Harrisburg of the John Barrymore play, "The Beloved Rogue." This showing was skillfully timed as it followed on the heels of "Don Juan," featuring Barrymore, which had made a big hit in Loew's Regent the week before. This naturally stimulated local interest in any Barrymore film. The practice, by the way, on the part of neighborhood theatres in following up big successes in first run houses with a different and second-run play by the same star, the next week, has been skillfully employed by some of the smaller Harrisburg theatres.

The Russell theatre showed "The Winning of Barbara Worth," with Ronald Coleman and Vilma Banky, and the National brought "McFadden's Flats" back to Harrisburg for a second run.

Chicago

CHICAGO'S first torrid spell of weather for the year brought attendance at most theatres down to a minimum, regardless of pictures or shows presented, only those houses with adequate cooling systems doing anything like normal business.

In the loop it was noticeable that matinee business of these houses was better than normal. At McVicker's "Beau Geste" offered for the first time at popular prices, did a good week's business, and "Chang" continued to hold up fairly well at the Roosevelt. "Rolled Stockings" on the screen and Paul Ash and his Gang in "Jazz Fireworks," accounted for very satisfactory business at the Oriental, and the Chicago, which offering as its attractions "Man Power" on the screen, backed by an excellent stage show, did fair business.

The outlying, de luxe houses faired well considering the weather. At the Capitol "Fast and Furious," Vitaphone and a stage show brought normal attendance and the same was true at the Tivoli, which had as its feature "Naughty, But Nice," and Bennie Kreuger with his band. "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," and Charles Kaley and his band, did fair business at the Granada and the same was reported from the Marbro, where "Slaves of Beauty" and Benny Meroff were augmented by the appearance of Jack Osterman. The Sheridan's business with "Fast and Furious" on the screen and Verne Buck and his band on the stage, was just about normal.

Chicago
(Previous week)

BUSINESS continues far from satisfactory to the majority of Chicago exhibitors, even strong feature pictures failing to fill the houses.

At the Chicago Theatre "Captain Salvation" on the screen with H. Leopold Spitalny's orchestral feature and a Publix offering, "Patches", accounted for fair business. "Resurrection" closed its run at McVickers' Theatre, the week's business being slightly below that of the previous seven days. At the Roosevelt "Chang" continued to prove a good box office attraction. The Oriental held up in a satisfactory way with "Fast and Furious" as the screen feature and Paul Ash and his musical gang offering "Swiss Cheese Follies."

On the southside, the Capitol with "Special Delivery," Vitaphone, and Del and his Capitol Merrymakers, had a fair week. The same was true of the Tivoli, which had as its screen feature, "McFadden's Flats," "Vienna Life" as its stage specialty and Herbert Rawlinson in person.

"Slaves of Beauty," Vitaphone, and Meroff, were the attractions at the Granada, where business was almost normal. The Uptown, with "Rough House Rosie" on the screen, and Bennie Kreuger with his stage show, "Hello, Lindy," a slight improvement was noted over the previous week. The Sheridan showed "Monte Cristo" and, with Verne Buck and his band on the stage, had a fairly successful week. The Marbro had a good week with "The Yankee Clipper" as its feature, and Charles Kaley and his singing band on the stage.

Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS had its hottest weather of the season last week and, with the mercury soaring well into the nineties, attendance took a slump at some of the houses. The city has many lakes and beaches, and extremely hot weather is apt to make these more attractive than the theatres.

The State, however, which has a very excellent cooling system, had a very successful week. Undoubtedly the temperature of the house—claimed to be always maintained at 70 in the hottest weather—drew many people, but there was a good program besides. "Rolled Stockings" was the feature film and, as an added attraction, there was "Pleasure Pirates," a three-reel photoplay, which was made in Minneapolis with an all-Minneapolis cast under the direction of Finkelstein & Ruben and The Minneapolis

Journal. A good deal of publicity had attended the making of this film, and it was undoubtedly responsible for a fair share of the State's patronage this week.

Lon Chaney, in "The Unknown," did about an average business at the Strand, and Johnnie Harron, in "Love Makes 'Em Wild," played to fair crowds at the Lyric. "Rookies" returned for a week at the Grand and was very well received.

At the Pantages, Tom Mix in "The Circus Ace," shared honors with a children's revue recruited from local talent, and together they were responsible for a good turnout. At the Hennepin-Orpheum, "The Romantic Age" rounded out an "all-star" bill in good style.

Business at the neighborhood houses ranged from fair to good. Among the pictures which were shown at the Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale, Minneapolis' chief neighborhood houses, were "Mr. Wu," "Lillian Gish in "The Scarlet Letter" and "Michael Strogoff."

Cleveland

EITHER one of the two evils that befell Cleveland last week would have damaged the motion picture theatre business, but both of them coming together proved absolutely fatal. One was the excessive heat which ran the mercury up to 100 per cent as a steady temperature. The other was the national Grotto convention, which brought over 50,000 visitors to the city, and which staged its own show daily on the streets with parades and public street dancing.

Consequently the reports of the week do not do justice to the pictures, for all the houses barely existed. "When a Man Loves" closed its second week at the Stillman with a fair average. It was a big drawing card the first week when weather conditions were favorable. "The Callahans and the Murphys" didn't get much business at the Cameo, but it is being continued, so the next week ought to tell the real story of its box office ability. "Monte Cristo" did very well at Keith's Palace. This one bright spot was due to an extensive treasure hunt staged by Manager John Royal involving free distribution of $10,000 worth of merchandise.

"Man Power," a good picture, couldn't meet the competition of the street, and only got by at the Allen with a fair average. "The Sunset Derby" also did "fair" business at the State, where it was rated as "an average race track picture." "Arizona Bound" would have excited interest any other week in the calendar, as there is considerable local interest in Gary Copper and his work. However, it got a bad break last week at Keith's East 105th St., where it played all week and at Reade's Hippodrome, where it played half the week. "Paying the Price" didn't fare any better the last half of the week at the Hippodrome. "Captain Salvation" played its second run engagement at the Park. Good picture but poor business through no fault of its own. The Circle is playing revivals.

Salt Lake City

SATISFACTORY summer business was enjoyed last week by all of the Salt Lake downtown picture theatres. The weather, which was exceptionally warm for the first part of the week, cooled off beautifully after a few summer showers.

A great deal of exploitation has been employed in the form of twenty-four sheet space as well as the regular amount of newspaper publicity.

Florence Vidor, in "The World at Her Feet," proved to be very popular at the Paramount Empress, with an added stage attraction being offered also. The picturization of Gene Stratton-Porter's noted story, "The Magic Garden," was received with great enthusiasm by large crowds all week. The Victory Theatre housed fairly large crowds during the showing of "Beware of Widows," starring Laura LaPlante. Irene Rich, in "The Climbers," and Monte Banks, in "Horseshoes," proved to be an attractive double-feature program at the American. "Cradle Snatchers" went over very good at the Pantages, in addition to the regular vaudeville program. The first run picture shown at the Orpheum this past week was "The Princess of Hoboken," and the second showing of Lon Chaney in "The Road to Mandalay" was offered as an added attraction at matinees only. The Rialto here, formerly the Kinema, found the second showing of Harold Lloyd in "The Kid Brother" to be a big drawing card.

Milwaukee

SWELTERING, sultry weather played havoc with theatre business last week in Milwaukee. Despite the strong attractions, theatres could not compete with the beaches and outdoor amusements, and consequently experienced the first week of traditional summer attendance.

Constance Talmadge, in "Venus of Venice" at the Alhambra, attracted many and was generally popular. The Wisconsin, popular because of its low temperature in the summer, attracted a fair share of patronage to see "Lovers." "Wedding Bills," at the Strand, and "The Callahans and the Murphys," showing at the Merrill, drew the fun-loving folks in numbers about as large as could be expected at this time of the year. Lon Chaney in "Shadows," which was recently re-issued, made its reappearance at the Garden and was well accepted.

The neighborhood theatres also assumed the usual summer slump. "Don Juan" was the feature at the Tower and Modjeska theatres, and business was fair. "Rookies," at the Milwaukee and Colonial drew fairly well. "Puppets" was the attraction at the Savoy, and the Venetian theatre showed "The Love of Sunya," both of which are popular.

Ottawa

DESPITE the strong counter-attraction of the observance of the Diamond Jubilee of Canadian Confederation for three days, the theatres of Ottawa, the Canadian capital, were able to report very fair business during the week of June 27.

Manager J. M. Franklin tied up with the general enthusiasm by conducting a "Jubilee Week" at B. F. Keith's Theatre with "Special Delivery" as the feature attraction, and the generous crowds were satisfied.

The Regent Theatre, Ottawa, secured fair business with "The Love of Sunya," starring Gloria Swanson, with a Will Rogers short subject added. "Sunya" drew quite well largely because of the fact that it had opened the new Roxy Theatre in New York.

The Imperial Theatre was better than average with Bebe Daniels in "Senorita," the star having quite a bit to do with box office returns here. The Imperial Theatre is getting better pictures all the time and the result is being noticed at the cashier's wicket.

Manager Don Stapleton at the Centre Theatre found that the split-week policy for the summer months helped some. "See You in Jail" was hardly a success, but "High Hat" was comparatively much better.

The Eden Theatre, Hull, Quebec, secured improved business with "Love's Blindness" through the judicious use of Elinor Glyn's name, and also because its companion house, the Laurier Theatre, has been closed for an enlargement. "Diplomacy" had a particularly good run at the Capitol Theatre —much better than for two or three weeks past.

St. Louis

FOR the first time this season real summer weather was on tap this past week and, as a result, the big first run palaces that are equipped with modern cooling systems, and the big airdomes received the bulk of the week's amusement business.

The Municipal Theatre in Forest Park also reported a gain of about 10,000 patrons over the previous week.

Business generally speaking was somewhat improved this week and the outlook locally is more encouraging. An indication of this trend is in the building industry, and the drift curve is now upward instead of downward. From the Coal Fields of Southern Illinois the view is not so dark. Some close students of mine conditions are predicting an early settlement of the strike.

Lon Chaney was again on the screen at Loew's State last week and, as usual, he pulled big business. "The Unknown" was the title of his new offering. Chaney is one of the big money getters in St. Louis.

"Rolled Stockings," personally selected by Brooke Johns for his birthday party at the Missouri Theatre, proved an attractive offering.

Across the street at the Grand Central Theatre the feature film was "Michael Strogoff." This picture was also shown at the Lyric Skydome and the West End Lyric. It drew excellently.

The Ambassador Theatre had a very good week. The feature picture was "Dance Madness."

At the St. Louis, in conjunction with five acts of Orpheum vaudeville, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" pleased generally. Business can be said to have been satisfactory for this big house.

Oklahoma City

"THE POOR NUT," at the Empress Theatre, went over well compared to the way theatre business has been acting here for the spring and summer months. But "Love of Sunya," at the Criterion, didn't do as well as expected. The attendance was scanty for this theatre, and the opinion of those who saw it was divided as to the merits of the picture. Both the Empress and Criterion ran their programs for the entire week.

"The Secret Studio," at the Liberty, the first part of the week made business good at the box office, and the picture seemed to please. "Outlaws of Red River" was an equally fortunate selection for the last half the week, for Tom Mix fans and the children enjoyed it immensely.

"Drums of the Desert" did average business the first part of the week at the Capitol. "Time to Love," made a better showing for the last half.

The weather last Saturday (the day the programs change here in Oklahoma City), as well as Sunday and Monday, was the hottest of the season so far, so that accounts somewhat for a decrease in business. However, it cooled off some for the rest of the week. No extra advertising being done.

Detroit

DESPITE excessive heat three first run houses did very nice business because of their adequate refrigeration systems and good attractions.

The Michigan leads this week's list with highest box office average, making huge sums on "Is Zat So?" and Ted Lewis, assisted by his stage band. Women shoppers checked their parcels with the ushers and cooled off at the matinees while the sun blazed forth temperatures around 90 degrees outside.

At the Capitol, Charlie Murray made comfortable patrons forget the thermometer in "The Poor Nut," which drew extremely well in connection with a presentation program.

"Drums of the Desert," the State photoplay with Ford Sterling, and an ordinary stage bill registered better than last week's offering. Matinee crowds packed this house also. Attendance dropped off slightly at some of the evening shows.

A third and final week of good business was experienced at the Adams, where "Chang" held the screen.

Syd Chaplin, in "The Missing Link," drew just ordinary crowds to the Madison. Business ran along on a fifty-fifty basis during the greater part of the week.

Kansas City

COOL nights as the aftermaths of unusually hot days saved all Kansas City first run houses from a big decrease in attendance last week, despite a good lineup of pictures. Matinee business, composed 80 per cent of women, was not up to the usual standard, although not far below.

At the Newman "The Whirlwind of Youth" held up unusually well and the week's attendance was satisfactory. At the Royal, "Ritzy," Elinor Glyn's story with Betty Bronson, did not suffer hardly at all from hot weather, playing to good crowds all week.

"Backstage" at the Liberty, although highly praised by fans who saw it, did not come up to the usual weekly mark in attendance, which also can be said of "Framed," with Milton Sills, at the Main Street. "Tarzan and the Golden Lion" at the Pantages, slumped about 15 per cent under normal business, while "Don Juan," featured as a Vitaphone presentation for the second week, fell short of the opening week.

San Francisco

BOTH downtown and residential houses did the average good business during the past week, due partly to weather conditions which were not too warm, and tending to be cool.

The Columbia Theatre, did especially well with "Old Ironsides," which was shown at advanced prices. "Time to Love" was popular at the California Theatre, as was "The Better 'Ole" at the St. Francis, the local public liking comedies.

"Naughty, But Nice," was popular at Loew's Warfield Theatre, which together with the O'Neill Sisters' Kiddie Revue attracted people. The Granada Theatre did fair with "Rough House Rosie," but the Fanchon & Marco Idea, "Chinese Nights," drew the crowds. The Golden Gate Theatre did well with "High Hat," which, together with the six acts of vaudeville, packed the house. "Ankles Preferred" did good at the Pantages Theatre, the vaudeville packing the house. "Money to Burn," together with "Don't Fire," and with five special vaudeville acts filled the Union Square Theatre.

"The Scarlet Letter" did well at the residential house, the Majestic Theatre and, "A Man Four Square," together with Nat Holt's Musical Comedy Company, filled the Wigwam Theatre. Manager Richardson reports good business at the Coliseum Theatre with "Three Hours" and their special musical acts.

Baltimore

PATRONAGE at the moving picture theatres fell off considerably during the week beginning Monday, June 27, in Baltimore, the only house doing a good business was Loew's Valencia with "The Night of Love" in its second week, which held up exceptionally well and did almost as good as during its first week.

"Crime and Punishment," the German Neuman production shown for the week at the Keith vaudeville house, the Maryland, by the Motion Picture Guild, drew fairly well with the intellectuals, but did not appear to appeal to the public generally.

The new policy at the Embassy did not pan out as well as expected with the tabloid musical comedy "McFadden's Flats" being shown with "The Enchanted Island," and only a fair business was done throughout the week.

Other pictures which went over fair included "The Taxi Dancer," at Loew's Century; "The Sunset Derby," at the Rivoli; "The Secret Studio," at the New Theatre. Those pictures which did a less-than-fair business included "Dearie," at Warner's Metropolitan; "The Prairie King," at the Garden with five acts of vaudeville and "The Cruise of the Jasper B," at Keith's Hippodrome with five acts of vaudeville.

Albany

THE one outstanding feature of last week in the downtown theatres of Albany was the extraordinary business done by the Leland theatre, which broke all existing summer records for the week with "The Callahans and the Murphys." The picture opened to big business on Monday and on Tuesday, with Barnum and Ringling's circus in town as a counter attraction, the theatre was jammed to capacity, and hundreds were turned away. This business was done in the face of warm weather, daylight saving and counter attractions, including the circus.

At the Mark Ritz, also a downtown first-run house, "A Kiss in a Taxi" did what the management declared as being fair business, for the three days played. The last part of the week was given over to "Mother," with business characterized as being good. The Mark Strand, which is a direct competitor with the Leland, reported business as being excellent during the week, when "Naughty, But Nice" was featured, together with the Vitaphone.

A visit to the neighborhood houses of Albany brought forth the report generally that business was only about normal, and the same condition of affairs was reported generally in Schenectady and Troy in both the downtown and the residential theatres.

Philadelphia

NEW cooling systems, which keep the temperature uniform at 70 degrees, have been installed in the Stanley and the Fox, and make those houses delightful places in which to spend the warm evening.

Eddie Cantor, a good drawing card in Philadelphia, whether in pictures or in person, gave the Stanley a good week in his new offering, "Special Delivery." The De Marcos with their Sheik Orchestra offered a dance divertissement that was well received. Bert Rome and Henry Dunn, in "Harmony as You Like It," were recalled more than once and a Will Rogers travelogue as a special feature rounded out the bill.

Patronage at the Fox held up well throughout the week with the Fox production, "Rich But Honest," the bill being enhanced by Llora Hoffman, prima donna, Josephine Head and Albert Hugo, delightful dancers, and Jim Toney and Ann Norman, in a clever skit, "A Man About Town."

The Stanton continues to do fairly good business with Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole."

The Arcadia had a fair week with "Time to Love," featuring Raymond Griffith.

Business was not up to a satisfactory mark at the Karlton with "The Heart Thief."

At the Palace there were good receipts with John Barrymore in the "Beloved Rogue."

Zane Grey's "Drums of the Desert" at the Victoria pulled in fair patronage for the week.

The Capitol, with Harry Langdon in "His First Flame," did not fare so well as some of the other downtown houses.

Tampa

NOTING the growing popularity of Lon Chaney in Tampa, Manager Carroll billed his coming in "The Unknown," according to the proverbial circus style, and he got 'em. Result, a record Sunday and three big days following. "Rolled Stockings" was the feature attraction for the last half and it drew very good. The Tampa is putting on excellent short subjects in addition to the features, and playing up the "New Idea Orchestra" as an added attraction.

When "Rookies" played the Tampa it proved such an excellent draw at 60c that Manager Peck, of the Strand, decided to break the first run rule and brought back this feature for a three days' run at their 15c and 35c prices. His judgement was good, for "Rookies" gave the Strand three big days. "Broadway Nights" and "Time to Love" were the features used the other four days, two days each, and they both pulled very good.

Patrons of the Franklin just naturally love western and action pictures, so Manager McLaughlin has educated his customers to the fact that they can depend upon his supplying their favorite dish. As a consequence Mac has a fine, steady patronage. This week he gave them "Prairie King," "The Last Outlaw" and "Avenging Fangs." Business was right up to standard.

The air mail and "Convoy" (First National) both profited by a stirring publicity stunt in Seattle. Prints of the film were shipped by air mail from Portland to Seattle, where the picture showed at the United Artists theatre. Photos above show Pacific Air Mail Pilot Miller delivering the film to Lieut. T. J. Konnig at Portland. Center, part of the airplane convoy trailing the mail plane carrying the film to Seattle. "Breakfast Matinee" for Atlanta Stenographers

Novel Exploitation Event For "Tillie the Toiler" is Staged at Loew's Grand Theatre

AN absolutely unique and highly successful exploitation of a picture in Atlanta was put over recently for "Tillie the Toiler" at Loew's Grand, when the theatre entertained 500 stenographers at a "breakfast matinee," which began at 6:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Not only were the girls the special guests of the theatre at the early morning showing of the picture, but immediately afterwards they were entertained at breakfast at the Ansley Hotel rathskeller, following which they were taken for a brief ride about the downtown section in four huge double-deck busses of the Georgia Power Company, each stenographer being taken to a point within a few blocks of her office.

James W. Clark, exploiteer for M-G-M in the Atlanta district, acting in co-operation with Manager Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand, worked out the details and put the stunt over with the very wholehearted assistance of the Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, with which the tie-up was made. The first story of the affair broke a week before the date set for the "breakfast matinee" and every day afterwards the paper carried feature articles by Kitty Peavy, staff writer, and also a drawn "comic" strip by Jack Ryan, Staff artist.

To qualify as a guest of the theatre, each girl was required to sign a coupon, appearing daily in The Georgian, and give the name of her employer.

In addition to the regular newspaper stories, added interest was worked up by sending a notice of the event, through the mails, to every stenographer in Atlanta.

Half an hour before the time set for the showing of "Tillie," the girls began arriving at Loew's Grand, where they were welcomed by the management and escorted to seats, the entire staff of ushers being on duty.

Just before the showing, Manager James read a telegram from Marion Davies, star of the picture, addressed to the stenographers of Atlanta.

After the picture, the girls also enjoyed a well-served and highly satisfying breakfast at the Ansley, one of the city's largest and most popular hotels. Then came the bus ride to within easy walking distance of the various office buildings.

On Monday, the day of the matinee, Davison-Paxon Company department store put in an elaborate "Tillie" display which remained the greater part of the week and attracted no end of attention.

The publicity on the picture had a decided effect on business at Loew's Grand, because from 11:15 to 2:30 Monday there was a line at the box-office that stretched along North Pryor Street to Houston and down that street for a fourth of a block. Tuesday morning's line formed at 11:30, with doors opening at 12:10, and patronage kept up throughout the week.

On Monday afternoon The Georgian carried pictures showing the crowd of stenographers as they left the theatre and on Tuesday also printed pictures of the long line at the Grand's box-office. The paper went to the story strong and gave it a wonderful break in the news.

Manager James expressed himself as immensely pleased with the success of the "breakfast matinee" and all it features, declaring it to be one of the best ever put over since he has been manager at Loew's Grand.

Police Aid Ballyhoo for "See You in Jail"

A two-day ballyhoo which directed attention to the showing of "See You in Jail" at the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., was made possible through a tie-up arranged by Manager Charles S. Morrison and the city Police Department. The police furnished a "Black Maria" wagon which participated in the street stunt in which a man dressed in prison garments and carrying a sign reading "See You in Jail" was placed under arrest and given a ride two or three times a day.

When the man wasn't walking he was riding in the "Black Maria." At different intervals during the two days, the patrol wagon would come around and arrest the man and put him in the wagon.

This stunt was worked especially in the business district and where crowds congregated, such as at the baseball park, and bathing beach entrances, and other public places.

When the patrol wagon was not being driven through the streets, it was parked in front of the theatre. The wagon also carried banners on both sides advertising the picture, theatre, and play dates.

An invitation was extended to all members of the police department and their families to see the picture.

Patrons Name Feature Act for State Presentation

A ballot of candidates, much like that of city elections, is the method being used by the State theatre in deciding upon the performers who will appear during "Old Favorite" week July 16, at the State theatre in Minneapolis. Thirty names of acts are on the ballot, and each act or performer has appeared previously at the State. The four acts which receive the most votes will be used as the center of a revue which the State will stage that week. Among the names listed on the ballot are Hal Sherman, Sissle and Blake, Aileen Stanley and Rudy Wiedoeft.

Motion Display Features "Tillie the Toiler"

Manager J. G. Evins had a mechanical window display that attracted plenty of attention when "Tillie the Toiler" was the attraction at the Lucas Theatre, Savannah, Ga.

The window was fitted up to resemble an office, with desks, chairs, files, and typewriter to give it the desired effect. A cut-out of Marion Davies was sitting at the desk and cut-out of her boss at another desk. The cut-out of the boss was in standing position and so arranged that he was shaking his fist at Marion.

The fist was kept in motion by an electric motor.

Prepares Clever Copy for Tie-up Heralds

Manager W. F. Brock of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., arranged a clever tie-up with a local dairy in which novelty heralds attached to bottles of milk featured his showing of "See You in Jail."

The copy on the heralds read, "Good morning! Are you happy and healthy? A patented milking and bottling machine makes Jack Mulhall and Alice Day rich and happy in See You in Jail—Rialto May 30-31-June 1. . . . You'll be happy if you see this picture and healthy if you drink milk from our pure-bred Jersey cows, bottled and capped by the strictest sanitary methods. Grant-Patten Milk Company."

Wrecked Plane Exhibited In Front of Theatre

Manager Chas. H. Amos went to a little extra expense in getting a smashed aeroplane parked in front of the theatre when "The Sky Raider" was an added attraction with the showing of "Matinee Ladies" at the Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

Banners on both sides of the plane announced the appearance of Captain Nungesser in "The Sky Raider" as well as pictures of Lindbergh in the News Reel.

Novel and effective exploitation resulted from a tie-up between the Pantages theatre in Salt Lake City and a local tea merchant. Photo above shows the lobby display, a booth at which tea was served patrons, during the run of "Mr. Wu" (M-G-M).

Passaic Youngsters Organized to Boost Montauk Theatre

PASSAIC, N. J., youngsters are giving loud cheers for the Montauk theatre in that city in appreciation for the free showers, erected at the back of the theatre, and the bathing suits distributed to them by the management of that house, operated by the Stanley-Fabian circuit.

The shower is an open air affair consisting of two spraying arms, six feet long, which send out jets of water in all directions. It was built at the suggestion of Dave Beehler of the theatre company. The shower is now in operation and is being patronized by large numbers of youngsters.

Manager Frank G. King of the Montauk distributed through the courtesy of Mr. Fabian 100 bathing suits in the Passaic colors of red and blue, with the name "Montauk" in white letters.

King has launched another movement of interest to the children of the town, this being an Indian Tribe of boys and girls. The Tribe will hold pow-wows every Monday afternoon in front of the theatre.

An impressive Indian ritual and initiation is one of the features of special appeal in this organization. The purpose of the pow-wows is to teach true Americanism, love of parents, kindness to animals, honesty and truthfulness.

The organization and its activities are proving popular with the young people. It has made a tremendous appeal to the play spirit and there is growing enthusiasm on the part of the boys and girls.

Tie-up With Athletic Meet Advertises "Slide, Kelly"

The Lyric Theatre in Springfield, Ill., profited as a result of a tie-up with a track meet of the local high schools. The picture exploited under the arrangement was "Slide Kelly, Slide." Manager H. E. Walters of the theatre and the Illinois State Journal got together on the stunt and entertained contestants in the meet at showings of the feature at the Lyric. The special showing was held the second day of the engagement of "Slide, Kelly, Slide."

"The Love Nest"

(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THAT animated cartoon wives treat their animated husbands in much the same fashion as practiced by their human counterparts is the knowledge conveyed in the current issue of Aesop's Fables, which details once more what happens to the prodigal husband when home he wends his weary way after a prolonged absence, a-partying.

And the reception he gets from friend wife! He is assaulted and battered with everything within reach of the irate spouse and forced to beat a hasty retreat accompanied by the pal who sold him the idea that a gift of flowers would smooth over the difficulty. Then the "pal decides to try his luck at his own home but fares no better.

The hospital for the pen-and-ink husband and laughter for your audience.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Cupid and The Clock"

(Fox Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

AN excellent pair of legs—the property of a lady, of course and purported to be in the million dollar class—are back of the efforts of a reporter and photographer to secure a first-hand story from the owner of said property. So, the two enterprising young gentlemen hie themselves to the campus of a girl's school where the legs are being used to good advantage in a baseball game. A mix-up in identification leads them to follow a fat girl who becomes very much flattered by the attention. The adventures of the two take them through the school dormitories—pursued by the athletic instructor and his assistant. The mistake is finally straightened out. This is a fair piece of work.

"Surprised Honey"

(Universal Bluebird—One Reel)

IN this one Neely Edwards has visions of his happy home being all broken up by an automobile salesman love-thief, but it turns out that his wife is only trying to spend some of their joint bank account for Neely's birthday. There are some most eccentric moves made by this particular car and everything is explained satisfactorily in the end. It's an amusing little single reeler.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Snow Rambles"

(Fox Variety—One Reel)

MORE shots of the majestic Canadian Rockies which, in our estimation, would show up a lot better if someone had not attempted to tint them. However, they are interesting and always prove good program filler if your audience hasn't seen too many of them. These are particularly suitable for summer fare.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Why Girls Love Sailors"

(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

COMEDY of the slapstick type made to order for laughs. The cast comprises well and favorably known comedians and it performs the business called for in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. As the title indicates the story is of the briny deep with Stan Laurel in the role of a natural born he-man of the great wet open spaces whose eyes even are watery. Stan loses his sweetheart to another hulking brute who shanghaies the fair lady but Stan is on his trail and gains access to the ship.

Through divers methods Stan disposes of most of the crew and when the other brute's wife arrives our bold sailor regains his sweetheart and they go "to face the dawn of a new day." We like better the type of comedy Mr. Roach has presented in his star series which gives the intelligence a better break; this is out-and-out hokum but, as stated in the beginning, it will draw mirthful chuckles.

"The Plumed Rider"

(Universal Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

FAST action is what puts over these two reel westerns in the houses that book them and this one has it—and how! More riding than we've seen in one in a long time—fast riding and some fancy stuff thrown in for good measure. Fred Gilman is still with the Rangers and this time he seems to have been promoted to rank of Sergeant, for he wears a badge to that effect. He's also the "Plumed Rider"—his disguise for outwitting a band of outlaws. As usual there's a bit of romance. It looks as though Fred Gilman's efforts under Director Taylor will rank about as high, or higher, than the usual run of these kind of pictures.

"Ah, Gay Vienna"

(Universal Bluebird—One Reel)

"TOO many crooks spoil the broth," reads the farewll subtitle in this Charles Roly Poly Puffy single reeler, after he and a number of his underworld friends disguised as waiters muddle their ludicrous attempts to get away with a lady's necklace reputed to be worth millions. A gentleman escort of the lady's beats them to the prize. An amusing situation is brought about with the first attempt to steal the jewel. The lights go out—all the waiters escape and meet in a shady cafe to divide the loot only to find that they have all failed. Puffy's comedies are certainly improving under the direction of Harry Sweet—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"A Hot Potato"

(Fox-Van Bibber Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

A VERY strange old Arabian custom whereby one is quickly relieved of a wife or wives is the means of getting our friend, Van Bibber, in a lot of trouble. Over in Arabia, this is accomplished by a kick in the pants—so, this picture illustrates, and lo and behold, one is immediately divorced from all female encumbrances. Van Bibber, in this manner, acquires a harem which does not further his wishes to wed the lovely tourist, Nancy. Difficulties are finally ironed out. This one is amusing.

"On Furlough"

(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

ALTHOUGH his buddies in the A. E. F. appear to outshine Sid Saylor in the art of soldiering, when it comes to winning the affection of a fair lady he's miles ahead of the hard boiled sergeant who also has one of her photos pinned close to his heart. In possession of a furlough, Sid, alias Private George, gets into plenty of trouble with his arms full of war trophies, which include several healthy hand grenades. He bumps his future father-in-law into the mud and the latter and the buck sergeant pursue him, only to be outwitted by George and his lady-love. There's some real good laughs in this one.

"Snookums Cleans Up"

(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

SNOOKUM'S daddy has worked so hard that the boss gives him a day off as a reward. Home he goes to wife and kid only to be assigned to a lot of "home work," including the strenuous task of furnishing amusement for Snookums. There's a lot of monkey business to this one and Snookums does his usual stuff with his accustomed winning ways. It is a good two reeler—and it may not be amiss to state that Major Bowes ran this at the Capitol Theatre about a month ago. This is indeed a recommendation, for the Major picks his comedies carefully.

"A Man About Town"

(Fox Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

HERE'S a jazz version of another O. Henry story of how an inferiority complex may be done away with by the application of some electricity. Amos, the town dreamer, buffeted around by everyone, pictures to himself that he's really a Knight of olden days. There is also a girl in the case and Amos hopes some day to impress the lady. This comes to pass with the purchase of an electric belt—guaranteed to put pep into the weakest individual. Amos cuts loose and cleans up all the gang, only to discover that the belt's battery has been missing all the time.

"Pawns and Queens"

(Universal Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

OUR hero, Edmund Cobb, is this time a special deputy sheriff endeavoring to round up a gang of crooks whose depredations have caused havoc among the horse breeders. Acting upon information that a certain ranch owner is about to be deprived of his herd, he hires out to this outfit so as to keep in touch with developments. Discovering that the ranch foreman is in the employ of the outlaw, he is able to uncover the plot and save the herd. Yes, there's some romance, too—and riding, and hand-to-hand fighting. All in all, this will do very well for this kind of material.

"Eyes and Angles"

(Sportlight-Pathe—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE'S current pictorial treatise on sport shows a variety of popular games and some not so well known in this country. Various angles as to the methods of playing these games are given by experts; Al Espinosa on the golf links, Kinrey Matsuyama at billiards, Helen Wills on the tennis courts and Jimmy Colley on the polo field. Other games and players on exhibition are roque, similar to billiards, a sport of the Basques, and Jai Alai, a mixture of handball and squash, imported from Spain and Cuba.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Buster's Handicap"

(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

PROMPTED by the fat boy of this troupe of players, a vampire again tries to steal Mary Jane away from Buster, but right always triumphs in the end and the villain not only loses Mary Jane and the vamp but the auto race as well. And by the way, this auto race is a novel affair. All kinds of vehicles are put in use with Buster's at length winning out. It's quite exciting and on the whole, this one of Stern Bros. is on a par with others of the same brand.

Rubber Heels

Ed Wynn Takes His Cinema Bow

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SILLY, deliciously droll, downright foolish! How many adjectives all indicating an imbecile state of mind are summoned in describing the antics of Ed Wynn! The title of his stage piece, "The Perfect Fool," fits him like a rubber glove. In his first cinema appearance he evokes wonderment at the possibility that one can be so dumb. As a sleuth of the Hawkshaw type his weak mind is all the more evident in his helplessness and hopeless methods which he employs in his endeavors to emulate Sherlock.

They have given Wynn a good vehicle with which to start his screen career. Plenty of opportunities are afforded him to display his tricks and put over the laughs. It looks as if Wynn can make the grade of transferring his popularity from the stage to the screen. As Homer Thrush, the detective, he is very good although he does not as yet fit perfectly into the knack of studio methods of acting before the camera and at times his stage mannerisms are plainly noticeable, for instance his delivery of dialogue.

The Cast: Ed Wynn, Chester Conklin, Thelma Todd, Robert Andrews, John Harrington, Bradley Barker, Arnold Cortez, Ruth Donnelly, Mario Majeroni, Truly Shattuck. Directed by Victor Heerman.

THEME: Graduate of correspondence detective school, hired to guard fortune in jewels, loses them but through miraculous dumb luck is instrumental in returning them to their rightful owners. Comedy burlesque.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Wynn's antics. The scene in the telephone booth where he endeavors to hoodwink the crooks. The scene where he goes over Niagara Falls in a box. Excellent suspense and humor here.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title has plenty of possible twists. Mention Wynn's fame on stage and fact that he is following footsteps of Eddie Cantor and W. C. Fields in trying his skill at screen acting. Give it strong advertising and mention Conklin's name.

DRAWING POWER: Fair, because Wynn's name is unknown to screen fans.

Released, June 11, 1927. Footage, 5,614 feet.
Produced and distributed by Paramount.

Code of the Cow Country

A Mediocre Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

DOES a picture have to show greatness to be considered entertaining? Not necessarily. Blasé audiences become irritated while looking at shallow stuff, while other types of audiences viewing the same bit from a different perspective regard the whole work as a pleasing spectacle. This is especially true in the case of Westerns, which generally employ an ancient formula. Even if this recipe for the proper ingredients that go into the making of films dealing with the wide open spaces is not new, it is at lease worthwhile, for in it are basic elements synonymous with human nature. Probably the possibilities of the formula have been exhausted by now; notwithstanding that fact, the ever recurring theme and variations will carry a responsive appeal if intelligent direction and a proper sense of production values show their hand in the finished product.

Remembering these facts, we would say that "Code of the Cow Country" will be considered fair entertainment for the numerous Western fans, even though the vehicle follows the common-place grooves of conventional thought and exhibits not one whit of creativeness that the average picture does not contain. Old stuff it has in frantic heroines in the power of dangerous runaways and the stupefying odds that the hero overcomes in proving once again that evil has no chance to hold court in the outdoor action drama

The Cast: Buddy Roosevelt, Hank Bell, Elsa Benham, Melbourne McDowell, Sherry Tansey, Richard Neill, Walter Maun, Frank Ellis, Ruth Royce. Directed by Oscar Apfel.

THEME: New foreman on ranch loves girl whose brother hates him bitterly. The brother's subjection to a gang of villains is broken in spectacular style by the hero, who incidentally clears up the misunderstanding that separates him from the girl. Western drama.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The rescue from the runaway. The fight in a lonely shack.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Roosevelt as college graduate and clean-cut young man. Mention the action.

DRAWING POWER: Average audiences will find it pleasing enough.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Pathe.
Length, 4,512 feet. Released, June 19, 1927.

Pals in Peril

Buffalo Bill, Jr., Does Good Work

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

OF the foursome of Westerners that appear in the vehicles produced by Lester F. Scott, Jr., for release through Pathe, the best is undoubtedly Buffalo Bill, Jr. In spite of the fact that he bears this historic but somewhat dubiously histrionic name he has much to commend him. A personality that registers, a physical endowment that enables him to look a "he-man" part, and a proper sense of humor are attributes that he uses to favorable advantage. He has a naturalness that we like.

Corresponding with the star's appeal is the entertainment value of "Pals in Peril," a well-knit, interesting and entertaining Western. There are enough slugging matches and hard riding in its length to please these exacting movie-goers who crave plenty of quick moving, whirling figures on the screen, engaged in the elemental pursuits of subduing villains, rescuing helpless heroines and what not. Comedy in generous measures is had through George Ovey, who cavorts in a style reminiscent of Chester Conklin. The rest of the cast all give good support, the best of them being Raye Hampton as the mother beset by care and worry.

The Cast: Buffalo Bill, Jr., Olive Hasbrouck, George Ovey, Edward Hearn, Robert Homas, Bert Lindley, Harry Belmore and Raye Hampton. Directed by Richard Thorpe from story by Walter J. Coburn.

THEME: Family in dire straights is elevated to former high position after two wandering cowpunchers have come to their aid and defeated the difficulties that beset them. The hero gets his reward for his praiseworthy tactics when the girl of the family reciprocates his love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fist fight which lands the two in jail. Their method of conquering the plotters. Star's performance and unforeseen twist relative to the fate of one of the villains.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star whose vehicles are better than the average..

DRAWING POWER: Good for lovers of Western screen stories.

Produced by Action Pictures. Distributed by Pathe. Released June 26, 1927. Footage, 4,710 feet.

The Land Beyond Law

Light in Structure and Punctuated With Thrills

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

KEN MAYNARD opens his bag of tricks and scatters them profusely throughout the length of his latest opus, "The Land Beyond Law," which means that the lovers of Westerns will find it good entertainment. But although such punchful sequences as steer wrestling, cattle stampedes and superb horsemanship lend the piece their drive the story is not constructed as logically as it could have been. The lithe young deputy sent by the governor of New Mexico to rid the state of villainous cattle barons is too capable a young man to ring true. As a matter of fact a little characterization, a more human halo around him, would enhance his feats and give his performance a reality that is lacking. It may be true that Maynard's personality does not "click" before the camera; but as in a Western that is not vitally important, and as action and not the play is the quality so sought after the above criticism could be dismissed as extraneous. However an entertainment should be strong in all the respects, if that be possible. The story is the work of Marion Jackson and its central figure, of course, succeeds in his mission of driving crookedness and deceit into cover. But he does this in so easy a manner that it will test the gullibility of an audience. For instance the ease with which he brings Noah Young to his viewpoint of what is wrong and what is right. A natural note is had in Young's work and this comedian's humor and general good work obtain for him the picture's acting honors.

The Cast: Ken Maynard, Dorothy Dwan, Billy Butts, Tom Santschi, Noah Young, Gibson Gowland. Directed by Harry J. Brown.

THEME: Lone hand representing authority of the state brings a degenerate region into a semblance of virtue by annihilating rustlers. He wins girl whose possessions were almost seized by the thieving element.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The action, comedy, excellent photography

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Use all your "magnetic attractions" for Westerns.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for the many Western fans.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length 6,157 feet. Released, June 5, 1927.

Regional News from Correspondents

Baltimore

CHARLES WINSTON, publicity representative for Loew's, Inc., here, handling the Century, Valencia and Parkway theatres, made a hasty visit to New York over Saturday and Sunday, June 25 and 26.

Henry D. Matcher, former floor manager at the Baltimore Rivoli Theatre, has been appointed assistant to Frank Price, Jr., managing director of that playhouse. Mr. Matcher has been with the company operating the Rivoli for 11 years and prior to the opening of that house was at the old Wilson theatre on part of the same site.

Hamilton Smith, moving picture director and a pioneer in the film industry, who was at one time general manager for the old Kalem Company, visited Baltimore during the week beginning June 20, to interest capitalists in making a new feature production.

The Apollo theatre, Washington, D. C., has just had installed a new ventilating and cooling system.

During the summer months, the Liberty Theatre, Berkley, Va., will be dark.

The Piedmont Amusement Company, Auditorium Building, Winston-Salem, N. C., is to construct a balcony costing $10,000 in the Pilot theatre, which they operate in that city.

Two deaths have occurred within the past ten days in the office of the Frank H. Durkee Theatrical Interests, here. The first was Royston B. Hall, 38, who died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Wednesday, June 22, from stomach trouble. He had managed the Community theatre, Hamilton, Md., for several years and had been in the film business for twenty years.

The other death was Henry B. Durkee, 67, father of Frank H. Durkee. He died Monday morning, June 27, at the Harlem Lodge, a private hospital, Catonsville, Md., from a complication of diseases and paralysis. The funeral took place Wednesday, June 29, and he was buried in Loudon Park Cemetery. For the past ten years Mr. Durkee has been in the film business with his son Frank.

Contract to build a motion picture theatre has been let by the Buena Vista Theatre Company, Buena Vista, Va., to the Shewey Supply Company and C. B. Clough. The house has been leased by L. M. Lyons, Lexington, Va.

Elliott Goldman, of the Bluebird Theatre, and George Lessy, of the Diamond Theatre, Philadelphia, were instrumental in stopping a street carnival which opened at 12th street and Susquehanna avenue, in the vicinity of their theatres.

There has been a change of policy at the Embassy here. A musical comedy with about 25 persons in the cast was presented during a recent week. Joseph Levy, formerly with Wilmer and Vincent, is now managing director of the house.

OFFICIAL announcement has been made that A. M. Bowles, formerly of this city, has been made the manager of all the West Coast houses in and around San Francisco. Charlie Thall will be his chief assistant.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Spickett of Juneau, Alaska, on their way to Los Angeles for the annual vacation which they take every Summer, were recent visitors. He owns the Palace there.

Dave Bolton, who has been working as salesman for FBO in the San Joaquin Valley, has resigned his position to accept the management of the Monterey Theatres for the Golden State Circuit. Bennett McGilton is replacing Mr. Bolton on the FBO staff.

George Mann has been in Eureka for the past two weeks overseeing the remodeling of his Rialto Theatre. It is being completely renovated repainted, and retinted. Mann is also installing a new organ.

Johnny Dalezal, Sacramento Valley salesman for Fox, has sent his family to Chicago for an extended visit.

Max Weiss of Sacramento, Max Ratner of the Blumfield Theatres Circuit, and Samuel C. Levin, the other big money man, are going to Lake County for a vacation.

Al Chamberlin was in town recently and stated the Rex Theatre in Oreoville is closed for alterations. A new proscenium arch, new walls, new floor and floor level, new organ and increased seating will be part of the improvements. The house is expected to be ready to reopen some time in July. Immediately following the reopening, the Gardella will be closed and alterated.

A diamond ring raffled off by the First National employees and Abe Morkowitz was won by Harry Eckles of the Oakland branch of the Newman Howell Service.

Charles Chicazola, owner of the Lincoln Theatre, Pleasanton, was a visitor on film row recently.

Jimme Meyers, ad sales manager of Paramount's local office has been transferred from his department to the sales department. Al Taylor, ad sales manager of Portland, is successor to Meyers and Roy King, ad sales manager in the San Francisco office, has been transferred to the Portland office.

J. Edward Lowery, formerly of the Varsity Theatre, Palo Alto, has been appointed manager of the New Stanford Theatre, Palo Alto. He succeeds Harry C. Speipel, who has purchased two theatres in Oreville. George F. Teckemyer has been appointed manager of the Varsity Theatre.

Ackerman & Harris, who will soon be opening their new theatre in San Bruon Avenue, San Francisco, have selected the Simplex Projectors for installation in their projection room in this new edifice.

Oklahoma

THE Griffith Amusement Company purchased a controlling interest in the University and Billings theatres at Norman, Okla., this week from Harry Britton.

E. L. Walker, formerly with Paramount, has joined the sales force of Peterson Freezem Sales Co.

J. C. Klock, who has been in the theatre supply business for himself nisce the first of the year, has joined the National Theatre Supply Company here.

M. A. Lightman purchased more theatres—the Ozark Theatre at Fayetteville from E. C. Robertson, and the Capitol and the Newport Theatres at Newport.

The Housley Brothers, who are in the mercantile business at Hot Springs, Ark., are building a new theatre on Ouichita Avenue, just across from the Coma Hotel. The theatre will seat 500 and will run at popular prices. A contest will decide the name of the new theatre.

C. E. Longacre, who has had the Hobson Theatre at Hot Springs, has given up this theatre and is opening a new 600 seat brick theatre in South Hot Springs about August 1. This theatre will be called The Best.

T. W. Sharp of the New Theatre at Little Rock, is remodeling and redecorating the old Main Theatre there and renaming it the Little Roxy.

Roland Siegle of the Community Theatre at Pine Bluff is opening up a suburban theatre on July 15.

Ritter and Mustain are opening up a new theatre at Elm Springs, Ark., called The Cozy.

Mac Holstein, former salesman and later, branch manager for the office here, is back in Oklahoma City selling for F.B.O.

The Oklahoma City branch of Warner Bros. received a silver cup for their collection efficiency in a national contest.

Joe Kline, home office representative for Warner Bros., was in town the first of the week visiting the local office. Warners have put on two new salesmen here, Ray Berry and C. D. Jackson.

Wallace Walthall left last week for New York City to combine business with pleasure. Mr. Walthall, who is manager of the Oklahoma City office of Enterprise Film Corp., received this visit as a reward for good work done in a recent sales contest.

C. H. Muncie was in town last week making arrangements for the opening of his new theatre at Sanford, Tex. The theatre will seat 325.

The William Smith Enterprises of Tulsa will build a 1,500 seat theatre in that city, it was learned last week. The new theatre will be directly across the street from this company's present Main Street Theatre. It will be called The Tulsa. September 15 is the approximate date of opening.

Chas. Blaine, who recently sold out his theatre interests in Okmulgee and Henryetta, Okla., is spending a month or so at Albuquerque, N. M., for his health. Mr. Blaine is recuperating from an attack of pneumonia.

It is reported that J. F. Via is soon to start the construction of his new theatre in Blackwell, Okla. Mr. Via now has the Palace Theatre at Blackwell. The new house is to be called the New State.

H. K. Buchanan, vice-president and general manager of Home State Film Company, was here from Dallas last week for a short visit with the local office. Home State has moved into its new home at 704 West Grand.

The Oklahoma Board of Arbitration held their first meeting since April 25, when they met last Monday. Seven claims were heard, four were postponed and seven more were settled and withdrawn.

Canada

PROBABLY the most strenuous time on record for the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa was during the three-day celebration for Canada's Diamond Jubilee of Confederation, July 1, 2 and 3, when the historical events of the programme at the Canadian Capital, including the arrival of Col. Charles Lindbergh, with an escort of 12 U. S. Army planes on July 2, were shot for Governmental purposes.

Capt. Frank Badgley, M. C., acting director of the Canadian Government Studio, directed the operations of no less than 30 moving picture cameramen and photographers, and announcement was made that on July 1 alone some 10,000 feet of film was used.

Moving pictures of the official celebration at Ottawa were rushed through by the laboratory staff of the Government Bureau, and the night trains leaving the Capital carried many prints addressed to film exchanges and others who had ordered Government films. In addition, there were numerous news weekly cameramen and independent cinematographers.

An effective tie-up with the Canadian Government's official radio broadcast from Ottawa of speeches and musical features at Parliament Hill on the night of July 1 was made by Manager Ray Tubman, of the Regent and Imperial Theatres, Ottawa. Special receiving sets, with loud speakers, were installed in the theatres, and after the close of the evening performances the general public was admitted without publication by Manager E. R. out charge to the limit of seating capacity to hear the broadcast, which continued until late at night. The two theatres were crowded with people who did not care to stand with the huge throngs at the Parliament Buildings for the official concern.

Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has acquired the Regina Theatre at Regina, Sask. Pete Egan, manager of the Capitol Theatre in that city, a Famous Players house, will also have charge of the Regina.

A situation affecting the Strand Theatre at Sydney, Nova Scotia, has been cleared up through the Lynn of a facsimile of a telegram received from C. E. Bent, of the Nova Scotia Board of Censors, Halifax, that there was no need for a special inspection of the Strand Theatre. It was pointed out in the telegram that no complaints had been received by the Nova Scotia Board, because the theatre had lived up to the requirements of the Theatre Act.

Haskell M. Masters, formerly of New Haven, Conn., has become established at Toronto, Ont., as general manager of United Artists exchange in Canada in succession to J. W. Berman, a veteran exchange man, who has been appointed sales manager of the Toronto branch of United Artists.

Extensive alterations have been made in the Princess Theatre, Listowel, Ont., which have modernized the house.

Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, is once more figuring in local sport activities by its representation in the Toronto Industrial Softball League. The Famous Players' team last year all but won the Ontario softball title, and has got off to a splendid start again this season.

St. Louis

THE Missouri Theatre baseball team downed the fast Ambassador Theatre team 14 to 9 in the Skouras Brothers Baseball League competition, and on Wednesday, July 6, will tangle at Forest Park with the West End Lyric team, considered the fastest in the league.

Following a tour of the country, Kendall returned to St. Louis and opened a dancing school that is still in existence. He personally supervised it for a year, but at the end of that time the call of the footlights proved too strong, so he ventured forth on new theatrical work. He landed as a principal with the Greenwich Village Follies, after which he joined the Murray Anderson production of "Birth Stories."

Out-of-town visitors of the week included Tom Reed of Duquoin, Ill.; Jim Reilly, Alton, Ill.; Chester Gruber of Collinsville, Ill., and Oscar Wesley of Gillespie, Ill.

Barney Rosenthal, president and general manager of Columbia Pictures Corporation, reports that since his exchange moved into its handsome new home at 3306 Olive street it has enjoyed a very gratifying increase in business.

Plans for the remodeling of the Marquette Theatre at 1806 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, Mo., has been prepared by H. W. Guth, architect, 813a Chestnut street. The improvements will cost about $30,000.

Harry Weiss, manager for First National, reports that his organization will move into its new exchange about July 15. It will be in the Olive street film district.

The airdome season is on in full blast in the St. Louis district and the Weather Man has finally awakened to the fact that it is necessary for him to do his part. So during the week of June 26 some real honest to goodness Summer temperatures were on tap. Four days with the thermometer hitting above the 90 mark made that guy down in Washington who said that 1927 would be the year without a Summer appear a very bad guesser.

Cleveland

CLEVELAND exhibitors are slow buying the new fall product, so the report goes forth from the majority of the local exchanges. The reason for this is because the city is in the process of being re-zoned. As soon as the difficulties of re-zoning are ironed out, things are expected to pick up.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington circuit, last week sold his Amphion theatre, Cleveland, to Mike Hudac. The Amphion is a 500 seat neighborhood house.

The Schine Enterprises of New York have invaded Massilon and have purchased the Lincoln theatre from our old friend, F. A. Kelly. Kelly is one of the old-timers in the picture business. He is retiring permanently—as permanently as is possible to a showman.

The Pike theatre at Dover, O., changed ownership last week when Edwin F. Allman sold the house to Roscoe Spidell and Chester Huprich, both of Strasburg, O., where they have had the Hall theatre for the past dozen years.

M. C. Barth's address is once again the Cozy theatre, Cleveland. Barth owned the lease on the theatre and operated it for a good many years. He re-leased it last year and dropped out of the picture for a while.

Ed. A. Keene, proprietor of the Oxford Theatre, Oxford, Ohio, recently installed a new Wurlitzer unit organ that is claimed to be the equal of a 100-piece orchestra.

L. R. Wallace and George C. Martin are reported to have opened a new theatre at Mt. Victory, called the Majestic.

Gradwell Sears, local First National exchange manager, had the pleasure of spending the hottest week in the year in New York. He got back last Saturday.

Mrs. Carrie LaRue has sold her Habit theatre in Convoy, Ohio, to Walter Fandree.

George W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, and his family spent the Fourth of July in Buffalo.

Robert Cotton, P.D.C. district manager, left Cleveland on Saturday to spend the Fourth on the shores of Lake Michigan. One reason for choosing that location is that he owns quite a bit of territory there.

Harry Klein has opened the Kay Film Attraction office in 401 Film Exchange Bldg.

C. M. Wiener, division manager for Tiffany is spending a week or so in the Cleveland territory as the guest of local exchange manager, Mark Goldman. He brought out tests on the new Third Dimension pictures and is doing a little pioneer work explaining what it's all about.

Leo Dwyer, who headed the Theatre Supply Company of Cleveland prior to its absorption by the National Theatre Supply, and who later was general manager of the local office of the National Theatre Supply Company is now living in Salina, Ohio. Dwyer bought the Salina theatre there.

"Fatty" Arbuckle came to town on Saturday to open his first vaudeville engagement at Loew's State theatre in a new sketch which he will take on tour to the other Loew houses in the country. The theatre management gave him a rousing welcome and a big publicity campaign that started the week before his coming and lasted during his entire engagement. Here are some of the stunts arranged by M. A. Malaney, publicity director for Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc.: double street car card space; banner over theatre marquee; lobby displays; trailer announcements; stories in all newspapers; teaser ads in all newspapers; big 3 x 7 (29 ins.) in all papers on Friday preceding his coming; photos in newspapers; advance radio announcements; reception at train by theatre, newspaper and cameramen; luncheon at Statler Hotel on Tuesday for the Women's Press Club, and a banner automobile parked in front of the ball park. Nowhere was there heard any comments on the former banning of Arbuckle either on the stage or on the screen.

Jack Flanagan, head of Tristate Film Company and local Pathe cameraman, is out pretty nearly all of last week's sleep. Flanagan was busy getting pictures of the national Grotto convention which was in session in Cleveland. The Grotto members didn't come here to sleep, so Jack had to keep pace with them. He had the satisfaction of having his pictures of the convention to reach the local screens first.

Vitaphone is silent at the Circle and Lincoln theatres for the summer months. The Stillman is the only local house playing Vitaphone now.

It is unofficially stated that S. W. Manheim has taken over the East Ninth Street theatre from the Universal-Brody interests. The East Ninth Street house was built during the winter by U-B. It has approximately 2,000 seats.

Keith's Palace won the first prize in the big Grotto parade last Thursday night for having the most beautiful float. It was all white and showed the Spirit of St. Louis approaching the Effel Tower. John F. Royal, manager of Keith's Palace, designed and supervised execution of the float.

WILLIAM J. HEENAN, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, elected the following committees to serve for the ensuing three months:

Membership: Ben Amsterdam, Harry Weiner, Edgar A. Moss; Credit: Charles Goodman, Jay Von Tilzer, S. Wittman; Transportation: Oscar Neufeld, Henry Lewis, Robert Lynch; Arbitration: Gene Marcus, Percy A. Bloch, Wm. Humphreys.

Nominations for a new board of officers will be made at the August meeting of the Film Board of Trade and election will take place in September. Until last year the election had been held in the spring but a general upset in picture politics brought about another election in the fall. There has been no intimation as to whether there will be more than one candidate in the field.

Sam Lefkoe, who resigned from the Masterpiece Exchange forces several weeks ago after being with Masterpiece for many years to join Al Blofson in the newly created Tiffany Exchange, has severed relations with Tiffany and returned to Masterpiece.

Sam Stiefel, of the De Luxe Exchange, who has been devoting his time very largely to executive duties, is doing some of the outside selling and Charles Weintraub has been added to the sales force and will cover the upstate territory.

The Crosskeys Theatre, a Stanley combination house in West Philadelphia, has closed for the season. Minor improvements and alterations will be made before the house reopens on Labor Day.

The second holdup of a motion picture treasurer in Philadelphia within three months occurred last week when John Matershead, of Mike Lessy's Daimond Theatre, Germantown Ave. near Allegheny, was waylaid as he was taking the day's receipts of $400 to a nearby bank for deposit. Segal's Palace also recently lost a day's receipts when its treasurer was waylaid at midnight in the heart of the city while en route to the bank.

Harry Ritter, who was formerly associated with M-G-M and United Artists as a member of the sales force, has been added to the personnel of Tiffany's new exchange.

J. A. McHenry, at one time manager in Philadelphia for P. D. C., has returned to Vine street as a special representative of the National Theatre Supply Co.

Harry Weiner, branch manager of the Columbia Exchange, recently acquired the services of Ben Tolmas, who has been connected with Universal Independent and other exchanges on the street in a sales capacity.

Chicago

BALABAN and KATZ expect to open the Paradise Theatre, wich they recently took over from National Playhouses, Inc., as reported in this column, about the first of the year. It is understood that it will present Publix units.

Traveling Auditor J. C. McConville, of P.D.C., who has been in Chicago for several days, expects to leave this week.

Frank Schaefer, of the Crystal Theatre, is leaving for Delavan, Wisconsin, this week. He will be accompanied by his wife and a party of friends.

John Balaban, of Balaban & Katz, has left for New York City, where he will make his headquarters in Publix office, during Sam Katz' absence in Europe.

Jules J. Rubens, of Great States, enjoyed the national holiday at Elkhart, Wisconsin, where his entire family participated in a reunion.

Great States Theatres, Inc., are finding the "Who's Who" movies, which have been produced for their Elgin, Decatur and Aurora Theatres, to be a good box office attraction and will make "Who's Who" movies in other cities in which their circuit operates.

It is reported that the advertising departments of Balaban and Katz, and Lubliner and Trinz, will be consolidated at an early date. It is understood the combined departments will have its headquarters in the new office space recently acquired by Balaban and Katz, in the Loop End Building.

Harry James, formerly of Producers Distributing Corporation, now is in charge of Vitaphone's office at 845 S. Wabash Avenue, Paul Swift, who established the Chicago Vitaphone having returned to New York.

T. S. Scott and James Weber have sold their Rialto, Grand and Scott Theatres, Jacksonville, Ill., to Dominick Frascini, who operates houses in Pana, Taylorville and Mattoon.

Throughout the Chicago territory more theatres are reporting closing this summer than for a number of years. Already 103 more houses are dark than a year ago, having suspended for the season.

Adam Dernbach of the Grand Theatre, Wheaton, accompanied by his family, is away on a vacation trip motoring in the East.

Lee Barnett has sold his Star Theatre, Davenport, Ia., to J. W. Thornton.

Nat Bernstein, former Michigan and Florida exhibitor, was visiting on film row this week and is planning to make his future home in Illinois.

Paul Benjamin, production manager of National Screen Service, New York office, is vacationing in Chicago.

Rockford will have two splendid, new theatres this fall. Mrs. Rose Anderson of the Dreamland is pushing the completion of her fine 800-seat house on the Southside and plans to open it to the public about October 1st. The Coronado, Balaban and Katz Great States Theatre of 2500 seats, is also booked for opening about that date.

Detroit

AL MERTZ, with Universal many years as booker, salesman and assistant manager, and for the past two years F. B. O. city salesman, has accepted the management of the Detroit Branch of Standard Film Service. He assumed his new duties as successor to A. M. Goodman Monday morning. With Bill Onie, the district manager, he went to Cleveland over the week-end for the purpose of conferring with Harry Goodman and Jess Fishman, who owns Standard.

Three important changes have occurred in two of the larger film houses. Steve Christ, until recently manager of London Brothers' Regent, has left there to take office as manager and advertising director of the Miles. B. G. Clare resigned from the Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises a few weeks ago to handle publicity at the Regent. The appointment of Christ followed Ben Bodec's resignation.

Ramona is the name chosen by Henry S. Koppin for his new million dollar theatre on Gratiot Aveune at the Six Mile Road.

The industry lost another film inspector last Saturday. Miss Betty Fuller, who has been looking them over lately for Warner Bros., was married to Raymond Mansker.

Sam Gilbert, popular salesman for Universal, has signed up with First National, and will take orders throughout the western part of the State.

It is rumored that Bert C. Whitney, who presents legitimate attractions at the New Detroit, has started negotiations to purchase a lease of the Fox-Washington or Broadway-Strand for the coming season. Mr. Whitney's action is said to have resulted from the fire marshal's order against the New Detroit's opening this season until drastic construction changes are made in compliance with the State fire laws.

James V. Allen, Detroit manager for Warner Brothers' exchange, reports eight permanent Vitaphone installation orders in Michigan. The list runs as follows: Madison Theatre, Detroit; Regent, Detroit; Hollywood, Detroit; Ferry Field, Detroit; Oakman Boulevard, Detroit; Gladwin Park, Detroit; Macomb, Mt. Clemens, and the Regent in Grand Rapids.

Carl Sonin, M-G-M manager in Cincinnati, who was badly smashed up in an automobile accident two weeks ago, is well on the road to recovery, although he will be confined in the hospital for several weeks to come.

Studio Briefs

After a vacation of several months Dorothy Mackaill is again busy at the First National studios. Having finished her featured role in "Smile, Brother, Smile," last week, she is now at work in "The Crystal Cup," being produced for First National Pictures by Wid Gunning, and will be directed by John Francis Dillon. It is from Gertrude Atherton's novel.

Jack Wagner has been engaged to supply the "gags" in "American Beauty," Billie Dove's starring picture for First National which Richard Wallace is directing. He was associated with Wallace in making "The Poor Nut" and "McFadden's Flats."

Flora Finch, who rose to fame fifteen years ago as the member of the comedy team of John Bunny and Flora Finch, will play an important role in George Fitzmaurice's new First National production, "The Rose of Monterey."

Lucien Prival, recent First National "discovery," has the best role of his screen career in "American Beauty," in which Billie Dove is starring. Prival also played a prominent part in "The Patent Leather Kid."

Edmund Lowe, after a two months vacation, will begin work at Fox studio, about July 1st on "Come To My House," a screen adaptation of a magazine serial by Arthur Somers Roche.

"The Cruel Truth," Sterling's sixteenth production of the 1926-27 season, was recently previewed in Hollywood.

The picture is "The Cruel Truth," and stars Hedda Hopper, Hugh Allan, Constance Howard, Frances Raymond, and Ruth Handforth. Phil Rosen directed.

Charles Kenyon, Universal scenarist, is working with Director F. Harmon Weight in preparing the continuity of "Viennese Lovers," a forthcoming Universal film. The story will star Mary Philbin. Filming is expected to start early next week.

Al Martin, free lance title writer, has completed the titling of "French Dressing," the first Christie comedy to be released under the new Christie-Famous Players Lasky 1927-28 release contract recently signed, and "Helen of Troy, New York," for F B O, one of the featurettes of the new Beauty Parlor series.

"Breakfast at Sunrise" is the new title of Constance Talmadge's current United Artists vehicle, which features Bryant Washburn and Don Alvarado. "Dejeuner de Soleil" was the former title.

In rounding out the eighteen productions of the Sterling 1926-27 schedule, Sterling announces that "The Poor Fish," the seventeenth picture, and now in production at the Coast, will be known as "Face Value" in release. "Face Value," directed by Phil Rosen, boasts a cast featuring Fritzie Ridgeway, Gene Gowing, Edwards Davis, Jack Mower, Betty Baker, Paddy O'Flynn, and Joe Bonner. It is already more than half completed, leaving only "The Cancelled Debt" to consummate the season's program.

Paul Sloane is reading stories at the De Mille Studio preparatory to resuming work following his Honolulu vacation.

Inquiries and Comments

220 Volt Meters on 110 Volts

MANUEL TURPIN, of Stanford, Kentucky, comes to us with the following questions:

"Dear Sir:

I am coming to you for a little information as follows:

A. How many kilowatts per hour would a meter run on one arc with the Compensarc set on 60 amp. on a 110 volt line if the arc burned continuously for one hour?

B. If a 220 volt meter would be "hooked" on the above, with meter testing 100 per cent efficient, would the meter run too fast or too slow? I mean would the kilowatt hours run too many or not enough?

Very truly yours,
Manuel Turpin."

What Kind of Compensarc?

As for the first part of your question, Friend Turpin, we shall have to do some guesswork since you tell only half the story instead of giving us enough information on which to base a satisfactory answer.

You mention the use of a Compensarc, for instance—but do not go on to tell what type of Compensare you are using. The word Compensarc is a trade name of the General Electric Company and is applied to three different kinds of machines, as follows: a D.C. to D.C. motor generator set for converting line voltage alternating current to arc voltage direct current; and a straight transformer type Compensarc for converting line voltage AC to arc voltage AC.

These devices do not change the voltage to exactly that required by the arc in each case, but allowance is made for using a suitable resistance to bring the voltage down to that required to operate the arc.

All three of these machines are known as Compensarcs so just mentioning the name does not convey a clear idea of what is meant.

However, we can take a sample problem by assuming that you are using the transformer type of Compensarc as it is quite likely that you are using such a device.

It is first necessary to know what the arc voltage is and we must guess at this, too, since the only thing you give is the current, which enables us to indirectly guess at the voltage.

Now, assuming that you are using an AC carbon set at 60 amperes, the arc voltage will be approximately 33 volts so that the total power consumed by the arc will be

$$60 \times 33 = 1980 \text{ Watts}$$

This represents the power in the arc alone and does not take into consideration the power loss in Compensarc nor that lost in lines between the meter and the Compensarc and the Compensarc and the arc.

This latter may or may not be great, depending upon the length of the lines and the size of wire used.

There is hardly any use attempting to compute other than the loss in the Compensarc since your conditions may be anything.

The efficiency of the Compensarc is in the neighborhood of 80 per cent, taking into account the loss in both secondary and primary coils and in the two secondary current control coils, and the 1980 Watts computed above represents this 80 per cent, or the power left after the Compensarc takes its toll of the power supplied by the lines.

Thus

$$\frac{1980}{0.8} = 2475 \text{ Watts total}$$

loss in the Compensarc and arc lamp.

The power, as measured by the meter, will actually be greater than this by the amount of the additional losses in lines between the meter and the arc, but this, as we said before, can scarcely be calculated unless specific information on your wiring conditions are given.

Kilowatts and Kilowatt Hours

Now this 2475 Watts (or 2.475 Kilowatts) represents the rate at which power is being consumed for each minute that the arc is operated and where a rate alone is specified, the power is expressed in kilowatts.

The thing you pay for, however, and that which is measured by the electric meter, is kilowatt hours, which is an expression for total power consumed by any device. Thus the rate, multiplied by the total time involved, gives the total power consumption, expressed in kilowatt hours.

Since you wish to know the total power consumed in one hour, the answer will be the same as the rate (or kilowatts) because the hour is taken as the unit of time in power measurement. The number of kilowatt hours, therefore, would be 2.475. This figure, multiplied by the light company's cost rate for power consumption, would tell you the total cost of operating this 60 ampere arc for one hour.

For example, if the cost rate is, say, 5 cents per KW-hr., the total cost would be

$$2.475 \times .05 = $0.124 \text{ or } 12 \text{ cents.}$$

220 Volt Meter on 110 Volts

Answering your second question very briefly, we would say that if a Watt hour meter which was constructed to operate on a 220 volt circuit were used on a 110 volt line instead, it would register very low, meaning that the kilowatt-hours as indicated by the meter would be lower than the actual number of kilowatt-hours taken by the arc and its accessory equipment.

In this connection, it should be remembered that a watt-hour meter, in its simplest form, is nothing more than a delicate motor and operates as such, inasmuch as it has field coils, an armature, and a light metal disc which acts as a load on the armature.

This metallic disc is very carefully compensated and is precisely balanced so as to float in the magnetic field created by the magnets.

In a meter of this kind the field coils are connected across the line so as to be influenced by the line voltage, and the armature is connected in series with the line so as to be influenced by the line current. A set of coils, therefore, is used to measure the effect of both line current and line voltage in order to arrive at the power being consumed by the load.

Since the current in the field coils is proportional to voltage and this in turn affects the turning effort on the armature, any reduction in line voltage over the rated voltage of the meter will result in a reduction in turning effort.

Connecting a 220 volt meter on a 110 volt line, therefore, would mean a reduction of 50 per cent in line voltage (as regards the meter) so that the armature would naturally revolve at greatly reduced speed. Furthermore, the reduction in line voltage would be so great as to seriously affect the accuracy of the meter, with the result that it would read much less than the actual number of kilowatt hours.

Your questions, Friend Turpin, can be answered indirectly by yourself by asking this question: If you connected a 220 volt motor on a 110 volt line would the motor run slower or faster than normal speed?

The answer, quite naturally, is that it would run slower and, as a matter of fact, if it were connected to a normal load it would not run at all.

Universal's New Racine Theatre Under Way

Construction work has started on Universal's new theatre in Racine, Wisconsin, according to announcement made by Dan Michalove, General Manager of Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc.

The building will cover a plottage of 80 feet in Main Street, 120 feet in Lake Avenue. The depth of the structure will be 240 feet. The theatre will seat 2000.

The theatre building will house two stores on the first floor, while the second, third and fourth floors will be occupied by the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

The house will be of the atmospheric type.

Mr. Michalove expects that the theatre will be ready for opening by November 1st. This will be the second house Universal has in Racine as they are now operating the Rialto Theatre in this city.

HEADS OF NATIONAL SUPPLY COMPANY'S NEW DEPARTMENTS

Right: A. Pernetti, who will supervise organ sales in the Central States.

National Supply Adds Two New Dept's

Appoints Specialists on Organs and Scenery for Newly Created Mid-West Divisions

THAT the National Theatre Supply Company is branching out still further in its field is indicated by the recent addition of two new departments to take care of a demand for pipe organ and scenic equipment. A. Pernetti will be in charge of organ sales in the mid-west division, while P. L. Landis will supervise the scenery and drape department out of Chicago.

Mr. Pernetti has for several years been very prominently identified with the organ industry and with Geo. Kilgen & Sons, manufacturers of the Kilgen Wonder Organ. Mr. Pernetti has established quarters in the general offices of the National company in Chicago, from which point he will have direct supervision over sales in the Central states. Other organ specialists working under his direction will be located in the several branch offices, quite a number of which will soon have special organ demonstrating rooms with instruments on display.

The new department will also handle the sales of the Seeburg player organ which is now being distributed by the National Theatre Supply Company.

Mr. Landis is quite well known in the theatre industry and through experience is splendidly qualified to assume his duties with National. He also will maintain offices at the National headquarters and will look after the interests of the company both by personal contact with the trade and through specialists in scenery and stage-craft, house draperies and floor coverings, working under his direction and located at the various branch offices.

A new scenic studio has been outfitted in Chicago, known as Wm. Lemle Co., Inc., with Mr. William Lemle in charge. Mr. Lemle is also a former member of the original Sosman & Landis Co. While the National Theatre Supply Company has no financial interest in the Lemle Studios, it has assumed distribution of the entire output of the latter, featuring the latest creations in both fabric and painted draperies and settings and novelty developments for the modern stage.

Similar departments are already in operation in the Southern division, under the direction of Joe Shear, located at the National district offices in Atlanta, Ga., and in the West Coast division under A. M. Larsen of the National Interior Decorating Department in Seattle, Wash. Another scenic department is being formed for the Eastern division and will be announced shortly by the officials of the Eastern district in New York City.

Debrie Camera Co. Market Time Saving Device

The manufacturers of the Debrie motion picture cameras have recently devised a new instrument of precision which they call the Visograph.

This is a device of the finder type, the purpose of which is to save the time of both director and camera man ascertaining absolutely correct field and angle of the picture being taken, advising what focal length lens to use, the exact proportion or dimensions of the subject to be photographed and the photographic value of colors and tones in the subject.

The instrument is made entirely of metal and is small in size—75 mm. x 75 mm. x 45 mm. It weighs not quite a pound. It can be carried either in the pocket or over the shoulder by a strap—like binoculars. It sells for $15.00.

Composed of two parts, forming a box. These parts are brought together or separated by a set of lazy tongs and they will indicate angles of view taken in by any motion picture lens up to 8¼ inches. A measure on one side indicates the focal length of lens, after sighting through the back of the apparatus to ascertain the field or angle. There is a mask slot in the center, which corresponds to all models of professional cameras. The apparatus indicates the portion of the picture affected by masks employed. To assist in determining photographic values of colors and tones in the subject, a blue-green glass is conveniently located to pull down over the eye-piece.

Donovan Amus. Co. Building at Taunton, Mass.

The new Taunton Park theatre, Taunton, Mass., under construction on Broadway for the Donovan Amusement Company, and which it is estimated will be ready for opening the first week in October, will replace the Park theatre destroyed by fire on Court street last November. The new construction represents a building expenditure of $250,000, and is one of the most costly building undertakings that Taunton has had in many years.

The new theatre will be of the stadium type of construction, with a seating capacity of 1,700 seats and balconies, and when completed will be one of the most beautiful theatres in southern New England.

John Edmund Kelly of Boston is the architect and designer. Walter H. Barker of Taunton is the builder. The officers of the Donovan Amusement Company are Harrison W. George, president; James J. Donovan, treasurer; William H. Donovan, clerk, and Fred J. McAloon, general manager.

Transverter Sales Mark Theatre Increase

Erection of new theatres continue unabated according to the Hertner Electric Company, who offer as evidence for their statement a list of recent new Transverter installations: Tibbets Theatre, Coldwater, Michigan; Grant Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. C. Coffee, Amarillo, Texas; Hunt's Casino Theatre, Wildwood, New Jersey; New Theatre, Lexington, Virginia; Jefferson Theatre, Roanoke, Va.; New Norwood Theatre, Norwood, Mass.; State Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich.; Capitol Theatre, Passaic, New Jersey; Monta Vista Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio; Ancient Order of Pilgrims Auditorium, Houston, Texas; Ritz Theatre, Tolleston, Indiana; Zarah Theatre, Great Bend, Kansas; Novelty Theatre, La Follette, Tenn.; Strand Theatre, Tupelo, Texas; Pharr Theatre, Pharr, Texas; Family Theatre, Gary, Indiana; Pearson's Theatre, Clayton, New York; Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas; Bernard Eagle Home, Cincinnati, Ohio; Bonnie Kate Theatre, Elizabethton, Tenn.; Paramount Theatre, Kokomo, Indiana.

Ward Leonard Electric Co. Issues New Booklet

The Ward Leonard Electric Company of Mount Vernon, N. Y., have recently issued a new descriptive booklet on Vitrohm dimmers—the interlocking resistance type for complete control of theatre lighting. Other bulletins which will be sent to exhibitors upon request are those on field rheostats, motor starters and controllers, radio resistor kit, theatre lighting, battery-charging rheostats, resistance boxes, and laboratory sliding contact rheostats.

Penn State Bureau Approves 3 New Film Safety Devices

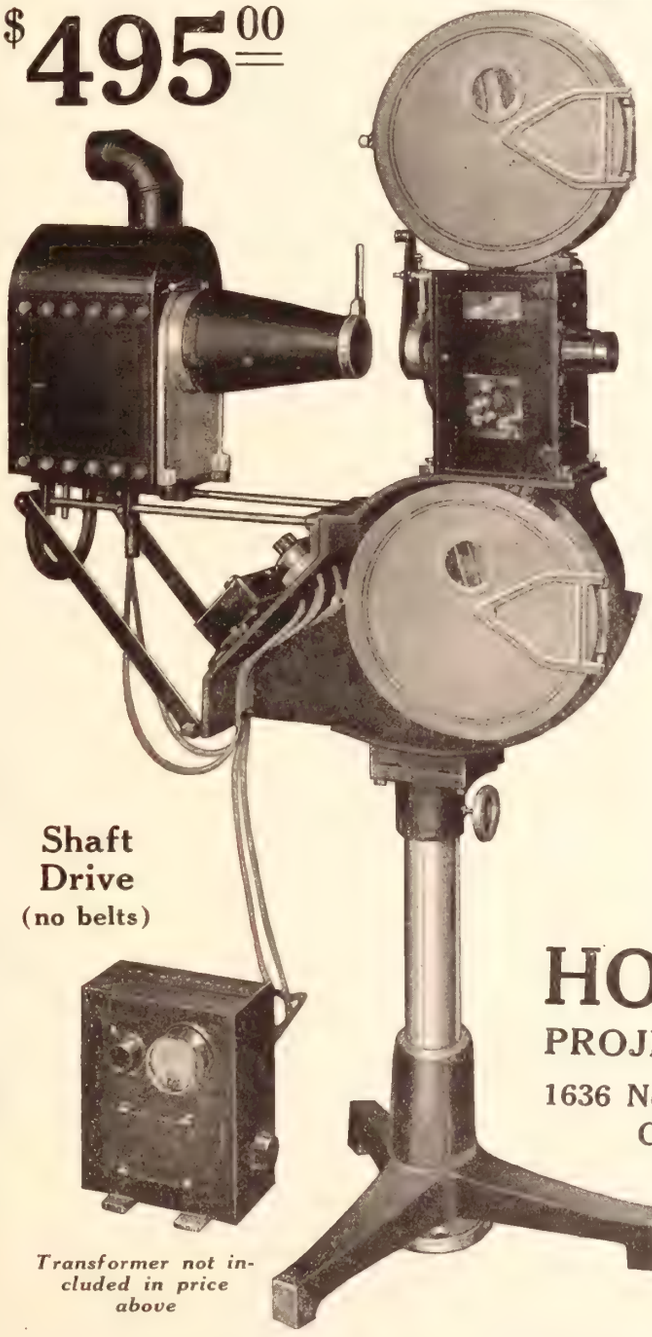
THE Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry, at the capitol in Harrisburg, has just formally approved, through its Bureau of Industrial Standards, of which J. M. Sandel is director, three new inventions, which have the backing of three separate companies, which, it is claimed, practically eliminate all danger of fire in motion picture projection booths.

The devices, in each case, are declared by the Industrial Bureau not only to assure safety but are declared to be entirely practical of operation. They are expected by their inventions to solve completely the long-standing problem of fire prevention in booths.

The companies whose devices have been approved are:

The U. S. A. Fire Douser Company, of 86 East Market street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., whose device was invented by Robert Fine, who for a number of years has been a projectionist in one of the theatres of the Comerford chain.

The Sentry Safety Control Corporation, Lincoln Building, Philadelphia.



John C. Pfeil, chief electrician for the Grand Amusement Company, controlling several large theatres in Johnstown, Pa.

The principle is similar in each of the three devices, which are mechanisms which automatically cut off the rays of light at the aperture in the projection machine the instant a film that is being projected breaks or becomes jammed.

It is understood that in the case of each device a patent either has been obtained or applied for, and that they will be put on the market at once. Before giving its approval to the devices the Bureau of Standards had its expert, J. P. Lilley, pass on them. Mr. Lilley is assistant chief of the Building Section of the Department of Labor & Industry, in charge of emergency lighting and the licensing of motion picture projectionists.

Silversheet Representative Returns from Europe

Roy Chandler, who has been promoting American products in foreign countries for over twenty years, recently returned from a successful 22,800 mile trip through South America, South Africa, Egypt and Europe, in the interests of the Electrocolor Advertising Equipment, Inc., of New York, of which he is president, and the American Silversheet Company, of St. Louis, for whom he is foreign representative.

"Motion picture theatres in South America, South Africa and Egypt are mostly of the type that ours were fifteen years ago, and I am convinced that there is an extensive market for screen equipment in all countries that I visited," stated Mr. Chandler.

Ventilator System Sales Show Increase

Still further evidence of increase in theatre construction and demand for cooling and ventilating systems can be determined by a report from the Supreme Heater and Ventilating Corporation, St. Louis, Mo., which claims that over 200 theatres have purchased their system since Feb 1, and that repeat orders have been placed by several of the large circuits. Features radically different from other types are said to have been incorporated in the design of the Supreme.

This concern also manufactures the Supreme blower type heater, a moderately priced heating system.

Rumor Two More Theatres for Kansas City

Rumors of two more large motion picture theatres are going the rounds in Kansas City. A $500,000 project is repeorted to be under consideration at Spring and Main streets, with a 700 foot frontage. The largest theatres in Kansas City will be erected at the corner of West Linwood boulevard and Main streets, according to reports received by Matt Shinnick, superintendent of buildings.

Studio Briefs

A new newcomer to the screen is Fay Webb, Santa Monica high school girl, who has just stepped out of the class room into the films. Miss Webb, green-eyed brunette, and daughter of Santa Monica's chief of police, Clarence Webb, was last week signed to a long-term contract by Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwn-Mayer studios.

Lane Chandler has been signed to a five-year contract by Paramount just prior to starting on his first starring picture, "Open Range," the picturization of Zane Grey's latest melodrama, which will be directed by Arthur Rosson.

Gertrude Astor has been signed for a principal rôle in Warner Bros.' picture, "The Broadway Kid," the temporary title for George Jessel's new starring vehicle. The production is now in work on the coast, with Byron Haskin directing. The leading feminine rôle has been assigned to Audrey Ferris, a new Warner "find."

William Le Baron is assembling a strong cast for his F B O production, "South Sea Love." Allan Brooks has been added to the cast.

With his latest First National picture, "White Pants Willie," in the cutting and editing room, Johnny Hines and his producer, C. C. Burr, are now busily engaged with their staff of scenario and gag writers whipping Edward People's famous stage play, "A Pair of Sixes," into shape for the screen. This screen version will be produced under the personal supervision of C. C. Burr at the Tec Art Studio in Hollywood.

W. C. Fields, Paramount star, has just arrived in Hollywood, after an auto trip from New York to the Coast. He will be idle until the start of "The Side Show," in which he will be co-starred with Chester Conklin.

George Fawcett, noted character actor of stage and screen, is the latest addition to the cast of principals supporting Milton Sills in his next First National picture, "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," which Wid Gunning is producing and Charlie Brabin directing.

Louis Stern has been added to the cast of "Romance," Ramon Novarro's new starring vehicle. Stern was one of the first stage actors to enter pictures, and appeared with Mary Pickford in "The Foundling," Marceline Day has the featured feminine rôle, while Roy D'Arcy is the principal villain. The supporting cast contains such players as Marc McDermott, Cesare Gravina, Bobby Mack, Otto Matieson and others of note.

Rockcliffe Fellowes is the first player to be selected for the supporting cast of "The Crystal Cup," according to announcement from Henry Hobart, who is producing the story for First National Picture. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are to be featured in the picturization of Gertrude Atherton's daring novel, and John Francis Dillon will direct.

Ralph Spence, and not Neal O'Hara, as announced, will write the titles for Buster Keaton's second United Artists picture, "College."

Thelma Todd is definitely set for the lead in "Open Range," starring Lane Chandler. The production is scheduled to start July 18.

Sojin is playing a sinister rôle in "Foreign Devils," a new film production based on the Boxer uprising in China. "Foreign Devils" is an original screen story, written by Peter B. Kyne especially as a starring vehicle for Tim McCoy. Claire Windsor has the featured feminine rôle. The director of the picture is W. D. Van Dyke.

Mitchell Lewis has been cast for an important rôle in Paramount's production of "Beau Sabreur," P. C. Wren's companion story to "Beau Geste."

"By Correspondence," the second of the series of one-reel comedies, starring Arthur Lake under the Universal banner, has been completed under the direction of Ansel Friedberger. The third of the series, which portrays Lake as a "drug store cowboy," will be started immediately with Max Kimmich directing. "Bubbles" Steifel plays the leading feminine role and Buddy Messenger is included in the cast.

When Alfred Santell begins production of "The Gorilla" for Asher, Rogers and Small at the First National Studios next month, he will not be guided by the theatrical version of the Ralph Spence story in his direction, but will film the mystery comedy-drama from an original angle. Santell believes that "The Gorilla" lends itself to ideal picturization.

Maurice S. Revnes, for some time associated with Fox Films as purchaser of story material, has joined the Gloria Swanson organization, producing for United Artists in a similar capacity. Mr. Revnes has already obtained one story for the star, the nature or name of which is not revealed. Mr. Revnes has just returned to Hollywood after a trip to New York in search of screen plays.

Louis Wolheim has been signed to a long-term contract by John W. Considine, president of Feature Productions, a United Artists unit. Mr. Wolheim has just finished a rôle in "Two Arabian Knights," is already at work in Herbert Brenon's "Sorrell and Son," and is scheduled to play in "Tempest," starring John Barrymore. He will be seen in at least one additional rôle this year.

A new term comes into existence in Hollywood—that of "chief make-up technician." John W. Considine, Jr., president of Feature Productions, Inc., a United Artists unit, has signed Robert Stephanoff for that post. Stephanoff's real name is Blagoe Stephanoff Pop-Petroff, and his duties will consist of, it is said, in applying grease and salve to faces that are fortunes in themselves. He was technical advisor to Von Stroheim during the filming of "The Merry Widow."

The illness of Ruth Boyd, who was obliged to undergo an operation for appendicitis, has caused a delay in the production of "The Woman Who Did Not Care," starring Lilyan Tashman. Several retakes were necessary, and Olive Hasbrouck assumed the rôle of Diana Payne in the screen version of the Rida Johnson Young story which Gotham is making.

Sandow, Pathe dog star, whose current release is "Avenging Fangs," is on location at Lake Arrowhead, in the San Bernardino mountains of California, for scenes in "Primitive Justice," his next release. The humans in the cast are James Pierce, Helen Lynch, Lee Shumway, Whitehorse, Edward Coxen and Thomas F. Brooker.

Australia, for years one of the largest consumers of American motion pictures, is now in the movie limelight. Phillis Gibbs, winner of a beauty contest held in Australia and New Zealand, is representing Australia as her first beauty contest winner to make a bid for film honors. Miss Gibbs, who triumphed over more than 1,200 girls, arrived in San Francisco last week on the steamer Sierra, to start her film work under a long-term contract with Cecil B. De Mille. Upon her arrival at Hollywood the newcomer was met by a coterie of film celebrities, all of whom hail from Australia, among them Rupert Julian, May Robson, John Farrow and E. C. Gurney, of the De Mille studio.

Louise Du Pre, a native of Atlanta, recently visited the city of her birth, and made personal appearances in connection with local showings of "On Guard" in Pathe serial. Mis Du Pre appeared at the Tenth Street, West End, the Ponce De Leon and the Fairfax. During her stay at the Southern city she also spoke through the microphone of WSB.

Harry Crocker, feature player, who appeared with Marion Davies in"Tillie, the Toiler," has been signed to play an important rôle in support of Patsy Ruth Miller, in Ralph Ince's F B O production, "South Sea Love."

Production is scheduled to start about June 27 at Santa Ana Canyon, California. All of the exteriors will be made at this place and along the Santa Ana River. Interiors will be completed at the F B O Studios.

Robert J. Flaherty, director of "Moana" and "Nanook of the North," who has just signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, left New York last week for the West Coast.

His first assignment will be a photo-drama with a South Seas background. Before he left New York, Mr. Flaherty said that he understood exterior scenes would be made in authentic locations in Tahiti.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Moon of Israel" — FBO, Roxy Theatre, New York City

Daily News: "Lavish, stupendous production, mob scenes deftly handled and scenic effects gorgeously conceived. Love story running through effort forceful one. Maria Corda lovely in role of Merapi. Director Curtiz has done good job."

Tribune Herald: "Well worth one's while to visit Roxy Theatre this week."

Times: "This is an excellent production. In a scene of splendid cinema sorcery, the miracle of the ages is wrought again before astonished eyes, and the seas roll back to free the innocent, while the guilty are engulfed in God's own wrath. Cast of untold thousands, magnificent panoramas, mighty theme plaintive melody of man's love for maid."

Evening World: "The sets excellent . . . acting of Maria Corda indeed impressive."

Evening Graphic: "Roxy has booked one of best cinema attractions his theatre has shown since opening."

Evening Sun: "Proved to be interesting, exceptionally handsome film. Settings massive and beautiful and pageantry of Egyptian and Israelite mobs captivating in poetic movement and flow. Maria Corda performs admirably."

Morning Telegraph: "Here's a spot. Another one of those 'Sleepers' that are God's gifts to showmen—via FBO. Merits adjective 'Stupendous,' for it is just that in magnificence of theme, in grandeur of background, in tremendousness of production value, and in showmanship potentiality. A 'prestige' picture—one that will boost bank balance at same time it builds patronage. It is something for showmen to shout about. For towns will talk of it for time to come."

Mirror: "Beautifully done bit of cinema, fully equal in technical effects to De Mille opus."

World: "Happily free of hokum tricks so many directors seem to think essential to filming of any story not strictly historical. Small parts well cast and as well played. Crowds expertly handled, much use being made of effect of raising of hundreds of pairs of hands in prayer or protest, process used to great advantage by Max Reinhardt. Scenes . . . breaking toward liberty and pursued by Egyptian chariots and horsemen finely done. Maria Corda plays with warmth and sincerity that is refreshing."

"Tillie the Toiler"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Chicago

Tribune: "Smart, gay, amusing. . . . Lively comedy, Marion Davies again proves that she is pretty, funny and can act. . . . Is gayly farcial and amusing. . . . Subtitles smart and staging, direction and photography up to scratch."

American: "Marion Davies dazzling screen Lorelei. . . . Brings laughs galore. . . . Always beautiful, Marion has grown even more lovely with each succeeding picture until in 'Tillie' she is simply dazzling. . . . Really splendid piece of work. . . . As for outfits Miss Davies wears, girls, you just mustn't miss 'em! . . . Her wardrobe positively stunning. . . . A mighty interesting story back of blond stenographer's adventure. . . . Awfully good supporting cast. . . . Clever titles. . . . Stream of laughs. . . . Really awfully likable photoplay. . . . Will prove highly amusing."

"Tillie the Toiler"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Boston

Boston Globe: "Amusing characterization of pretty but dumb stenographer. . . . Miss Davies joy to behold in ultra short skirts, her cocky little walk and her amusing mannerisms."

Traveller: "Marion Davies does neat piece of acting as we've seen for many day. . . . Most satisfactory bit of entertainment. . . . We hope Miss Davies will devote her future acting to pictures of this sort. . . . 'Tillie' proves her worth as cemedienne in no uncertain terms."

Boston American: "Marion Davies' best comedy. . . . Under brisk direction of Hobart Henley action flows along with velvety smoothness. . . . Without exception cast perfectly chosen. . . . The blond star's 'Tillie' composite of all little office flappers of big city. . . . All in all, 'Tillie' huge success. . . . Even most soberly inclined audience cannot resist it."

"Atta Baby"—Educational, Forum Theatre, Los Angeles

Times: "'Big Boy,' that popular baby star (he is 3 years of age)—infant with big shoes, derby hat and diapers—is furnishing man's-sized quota of entertainment at Forum in short comedy presented on laugh program. This little comedian has something more to offer than cute baby face and universal appeal of children. 'Atta Baby' more of fast action comedy than previous ones, because child's ability has increased and he can do more difficult things."

"Atta Baby" — Educational, Washington, D. C.

Star: "'Atta Baby,' effort on part of producers to give longer and better comedies, and in this particular one they have certainly succeeded. 'Big Boy,' perhaps youngest and smallest star known, and yet gives highly amusing and worthy performance."

"Broadway Nights"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Times: "With its many human touches and competent acting, 'Broadway Nights' emphatically good entertainment. Story well told and clever camera work adds to interest. Players throughout their performances perfectly natural."

American: "In the category of really 'original' stories. . . . Box office picture . . . packed with fascinating back-stage atmosphere, glittering with glorious girls. Bound to intrigue audiences. Lois Wilson charming . . . looks prettier than ever. Sam Hardy splendid pantomimist as well as a good actor."

Herald-Tribune: "You're almost sure to like 'Broadway Nights.' Best part Lois Wilson ever had. Sam Hardy most attractive screen role has yet appeared in."

World: "Competent direction and acting. Above average of Broadway films. Lois Wilson brings vivacity, good looks and charm to her role. Hardy ably supports."

Daily News: "Convincing. . . . Direction happily suited to tale and performances of cast expert. Lois Wilson different Lois . . . but puts it over as well as any reel jazz baby might have done. Hardy . . . one of screen's best bets for any sort of male role."

Telegraph: "'Broadway Nights' good show any day. . . . Will attain greater than usual degree of popularity with wide range of theatre-goers. Story good and told in convincing fashion. Hardy plays with great effectiveness. Is sincere and convincing. Lois Wilson extremely beautiful. Proves conclusively she can bring personality before public more effectively in acting general run of roles than by sticking to 'Westerns.'"

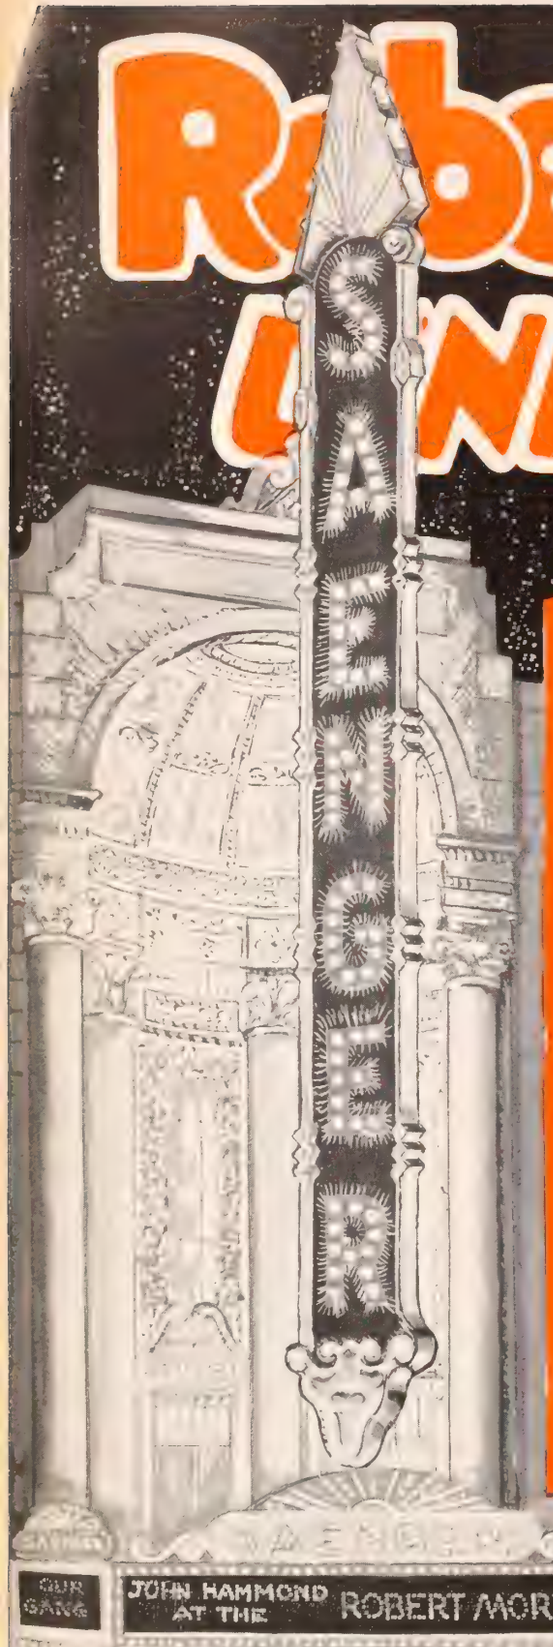
Sun: "Lois Wilson, Sam Hardy and Louis Bartels do their best. Unpretentious but cleverly built and human picture. Has refreshing air of back-stage authenticity. Miss Wilson admirable and Hardy better than he has ever been. Bartels contributes as clever a bit of acting as screen has witnessed in months."

Evening World: "With Sam Hardy playing first serious role and with Lois Wilson better than her former best, 'Broadway Nights' holds more than average amount of interest.

Does it Pay!

¶ If someone asked your advice as to the requirements of a first class theatre you would most likely call particular attention to those features which you know are lacking in your own theatre.

¶ You know what every good theatre should have. You know what improvements you should make in your theatre. The only question in your mind is whether the improvements would pay for themselves in additional business.



¶ The best answer to that is the success of the big new houses in the show section of New York---the Capitol, the Embassy, the Paramount, Roxy's and others have been added in the past two or three years and each one is filled to capacity at practically every performance. They do not draw patronage from one another, but from less adequately equipped theatres.

¶ The public is the average man and woman. It likes progress and endorses it heartily wherever it's found. That is why every progressive exhibitor has learned that better projection pays. That is also why Simplex Projectors have become so increasingly popular.

Robert Morton UNIT ORGAN

in the New SAENGER New Orleans

Conceded by architectural critics to be one of the world's most palatial theatres, the New SAENGER theatre at New Orleans is an artistic triumph.

The progress of the great SAENGER organization has been nothing less than marvelous. Building constructively and permanently, they have shared in the general prosperity of the industry, without departing from the highest possible standard of buisness ethics.

The same resourceful showmanship and discerning judgment that created this wonderful organization, is responsible for the choice of the Robert Morton Super-Unit now installed in the world's most beautiful theatre, the— GREATER SAENGER New Orleans.

2 Great Road Shows

with the rich cream of their profits unskimmed

now released to exhibitors

36 weeks in New York—16 weeks in Boston—15 weeks in Philadelphia—9 weeks in Chicago—10 weeks in Los Angeles, and other long runs. Just enough to spread the fame of "Beau Geste" all over the country and still leave YOUR Profit in. Mystery melodrama of the French Foreign Legion, in the heart of the hot Sahara. The reputation of the picture, the novel, (a best seller for years), and the national advertising back of it, has millions all over the country waiting to see "Beau Geste."

BEAU GESTE

The World's Greatest Melodrama

Herbert Brenon Production with RONALD COLMAN (by arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn) Noah Beery, Alice Joyce, Neil Hamilton, Mary Brian, William Powell, Norman Trevor, Ralph Forbes, Victor McLaglan. From the novel by P. C. Wren.

Paramount 100%

Extensive road show engagements already set were sacrificed to provide you with sure-fire box office material now. And if anything was ever "sure-fire" "The Rough Rider" is IT. Tender romance, rich humor, thrills, action, excitement—"The Rough Riders" has EVERYTHING. A universal appeal—it will bring out the old folks and the children, the flappers and their beaus, husbands and wives—EVERYBODY. Like "Beau Geste," the rich cream of its profit is still unskimmed.

THE ROUGH RIDERS

Cyclonic Epic of American Courage

Victor Fleming Production with this great cast of stars—Noah Beery, George Bancroft, Mary Astor, Charles Farrell, Charles Emmett Mack, and Frank Hopper. From the story by Hermann Hagedorn. B. P. Schulberg, Associate Producer.

Exhibitors in choosing their product for the coming year might well bear in mind the name, Columbia Pictures. This efficient organization, without blare of trumpets, had already stood the test of time and can now be named alongside of every important producing and distributing concern in the country. During the past year this company has succeeded in establishing a closer contact with exhibitors than ever before. Personally-owned exchanges and especially selected franchise holders distribute a product of established merit which warrants national recognition. The announcement of Columbia's Perfect Thirty is another opportunity for the exhibitor who thinks before he signs.

NEW YORK CITY, JULY 8, 1927

IT is with a good deal of gratification that we note the booking of a picture from one of the newer national distributors in the Roxy, the world's greatest showhouse. This is "The Blood Ship," a Columbia picture.

It is gratifying—it must be to everyone—because it is a further striking indication of the fact that production is still a pretty wide open affair with no particular honors to any one studio. It was my distinct impression, while in Hollywood this spring, that most any studio might exceed any other studio in the quality of its program offering—this year, and next and next year. And, while a broad one, that is a most important observation.

ACRES OF DIAMONDS

Remember the man who traveled the world looking for a fortune, who got back home discouraged and broke, and discovered there were acres of diamonds on his own farm?

Patheserials are that to you, acres of diamonds, if you give them a chance. They give you ten weeks of word-of-mouth advertising; ten weeks of regular patrons coming back to find out "what happens in the next"; ten weeks of special appeal to young people and a lot of "steadies" among the oldsters; and there's nothing better as a rejuvenator of summer business.

"The Crimson Flash" is a good one to start on.

Theatres of the Publix Group

FULFILLING THE PUBLIC'S DEMAND FOR COMFORT

PEOPLE have learned to feel for themselves and to recognize immediately the health-giving comfort of Carrier Conditioned Theatres. These theatres of the Publix Group, among them the first completely air conditioned theatres of the country, have taught the patrons what air conditioning means—a cool, non-humid atmosphere in Summer—temperate, healthfully humidified air in Winter cleansed fresh air always poured into the theatre without a sense of draughtiness. It is significant that in this group of Carrier Conditioned Theatres is the great new Paramount, "at the Cross Roads of the World". Carrier acceptance of complete responsibility has made air conditioning an indispensable asset to the theatre and a boon to the public.

THE BLOT ON MY THEATRE!

—read this experience of a well-known showman—does it apply to you?

"I TAKE the greatest personal pride in every detail of my theatre," said a well-known showman. "Cleanliness, courtesy and all 'round class have set my property apart from other houses.

"ONE DAY recently I got the shock of my life. A patron approached me and said:

'I have long admired the splendid management of your house and I make this criticism because I feel that you welcome the interest of your patrons.'

"I ASSURED him that I was eager to hear any complaint or suggestion.

'How is it possible,' he asked, 'that you who are so careful of every other detail are so lax in the attention you pay to your shorter pictures? I have sat through some of the cheapest, stupidest comedies in your theatre. They are the only blot on your house.'

"MY ANSWER to this complaint was action. I have studied the short subject field to find comedies and novelties that I can be proud to show in my theatre. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has them! Nowhere can I equal the class and quality of HAL ROACH'S 'OUR GANG,' CHARLEY CHASE, MAX DAVIDSON and ALL-STAR COMEDIES—I want the M-G-M NEWS. It is aggressive. And I think my patron will agree that the other Shorts—M-G-M GREAT EVENTS IN TECHNICOLOR and M-G-M ODDITIES are of a quality to merit showing on my program. Exhibitors can no longer afford to insult the intelligence of their patrons with short-subject 'time-fillers'. This blot on theatres has to be removed. M-G-M is the solution of this problem."

Block-Booking and Deadwood

Comment on the Decision of the Trade Commission

By William A. Johnston

THE decision of the Federal Trade Commission in the Paramount case strikes squarely at the industry's sales structure.

With a single exception, all the major companies sell pictures in block or by groups.

Mr. Zukor is therefore correct when he says that if the commission's order is sustained by the courts, the issue raised will have to be dealt with by the whole industry and not Paramount alone.

By the same token, the "cease and desist" order issued to Paramount becomes vital to the whole industry's life, and the ultimate result no man can foresee.

The text of the findings and conclusion in the case cover fifteen pages of closely-typed material. In main outline, however, they are:

The three leading respondents are adjudged guilty of conspiracy in restraint of trade; they are ordered to discontinue block-booking; and to cease theatre acquisition insofar as it may have to do with alleged coercion or intimidation of the independent exhibitor.

CHIEF interest at the moment centers on the block-booking question. Now, just what does the decision say? It is necessary to understand this before proceeding to any guesses as to what the future may hold.

The Commission says that it is forbidden to:

1. Lease to the exhibitor pictures in a block of two or more at a designated lump sum price for the entire block only;

2. Require the exhibitor to take all of the block or get none;

3. Offer the exhibitor a block or two or more at a lump sum for the group and at separate prices for single films;

4. Or for a number of pictures less than the total block, which "total or lump sum price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select" only such films as he may desire.

THERE are other provisions, all to the same end, which is this: The Commission says, in effect, that pictures must be given individual prices, picture by picture. There must not be one price for a picture if bought in a group and another price if bought singly.

In other words, forcing pictures upon the exhibitor, or refusing to sell him any, is, in the Commission's view, equally illegal.

If sustained in the courts, the decision means that pictures will have to be sold on individual merit, and not as part of a block, some of it good product, some of it not.

On this point, the findings of the Commission are in part: "A block is so constituted as to contain certain films which the exhibitor feels compelled to lease and also other films of a lower quality which the exhibitor does not desire to lease and exhibit and which the exhibitor considers to be unacceptable to his patrons".

In its broader application to the industry, this is the heart of the decision; "It (block booking) destroys the freedom of exhibitors to choose according to their judgment and taste films for exhibition and to exhibit only films that in their opinion are meritorious and

Speaking of Economy

THE salary slash movement turns out to be a postponement, if not a fizzle. But the wide publicity given to it is having some concrete results in newspaper discussions abut just what the film industry might do in the name of economy.

And it's quite interesting to note that the newspapers, too, think that efficient service is, or should be, the keynote of genuine economy.

For example, Chester B. Bahn, photoplay editor of the Syracuse Herald, after commenting unfavorably on the proposed salary cut as a real cure, gets down to cases with this:

"Let them change the slogan 'bigger and better pictures' to just 'better pictures.' The 'bigger' evil is the industry's worst foe today. We have 'bigger' press sheets, 'bigger' publicity releases, 'bigger' assortments of 'stills' for newspaper use and what not.

"Gaudy, be-gilted campaign books do not make good pictures; neither do streams of laudatory adjectives, applied to a picture not yet made. The average press sheet is a joke, and a sad joke, from its 'prepared reviews' to its bombastic display copy. No motion picture editor of repute would permit a house-written review to see daylight in his column."

OF course, what Mr. Bahn is most vitally interested in is the industry as it comes in contact with his own work as a photoplay editor. He continues: "The endless stream of publicity from the majority of producing organizations is a sheer waste of good money.

"In publicity, quality, not quantity should be the measuring rod. The news value of each story should be tested; the p.a. should be as hard-boiled as any city editor. How many are?

THE trade paper editor fully understands what Mr. Bahn is talking about because he, too, is on the receiving end of this deluge of publicity, which comes over his desk, most of it on its way to the waste-basket.

With intelligent publicity, designed to give actual information, of service to the reader, nobody quarrels. But publicity for the mere sake of getting so many words printed about something or somebody is a waste of time, money, energy.

The test of a story in this office is whether or not it is news. If it is, it is printed. If it is not, out it goes. And, of course, that is also the rule in every well-conducted newspaper office.

Block-Booking

acceptable to their patrons; and the public is deprived of the power to influence exhibitors in the choice of films and of the benefit of continuous exhibition of meritorious and acceptable films only".

There can be no question that, if the decision is made finally effective by the courts, the entire sales policy of the industry will have to be revampel.

There is also no doubt, in our minds at least, that the death of block-booking would mean, in picture quality, a new order of things. Deadwood on the screen and deadwood in the studio would have to go.

OF grave import also is the Commission's finding that "the purpose and necessary effect of 'block booking' is to lessen competition and to tend to create a monopoly in the motion picture industry."

Since the case against Paramount was started, the industry has gone far along the road of merger and consolidation, but remember:

The industry lives and deserves to live only because it serves the great public. Mergers and manipulation inside the industry are, in themselves, of no concern to the public unless they affect entertainment quality or restrict freedom in picture-making, or exhibition.

The Trade Commission decision comes at a time of upheaval over economy and other things. It should serve as a solemn reminder that the public interest is, or should be, the main concern of this industry.

Any policy or business practice that gets in the way of a free screen and good entertainment for the public has no excuse for existence.

The "U" Outing

THE home office force of the Universal Pictures Corporation and the force of the New York Universal exchange, in all several hundred strong, were the guests of Carl Laemmle last Wednesday on an annual outing. The party consisted of an all-day boat-ride up the Hudson River with a stop-over at Indian Point for games and contests.

The Universalities left New York at nine o'clock aboard the Peter Stuyvesant, the new river liner. Dancing, dance contests and other amusements featured the trip up the river. The boat proceeded as far as West Point, returning thence to Indian Point. Luncheon was served just before debarkation at the picnic grounds.

The afternoon program consisted of baseball games, track events, both real and comic; swimming races, tennis, golf, a bathing beauty contest, dancing and more dance contests. The return trip was made early in the evening.

Nat Rothstein, director of exploitation, was chairman of the outing committee. E. H. Goldstein, Universal treasurer, was chief judge of the various contests.

Maynard Visits Coolidge

KEN MAYNARD celebrated the close of filming on his latest picture, "The Red Raiders," at Lodge Grass, Mont., by driving over to Rapid City, S. D., to pay his respects to President Coolidge at the Summer White House.

The President was much interested in Ken's 20-gallon hat and expressed a familiarity with the Western star's work on the screen.

While Maynard made the overland trip to the Summer White House, Al Rogell, his director, and H. J. Brown, supervisor of production, returned ahead of him to the studio to confer with Producer Charles R. Rogers regarding the next picture in the Maynard series.

Finlayson Sails

JIMMY FINLAYSON, Hal Roach comedian in Pathe comedies, sailed Tuesday, June 28th, aboard the S.S. "Berengaria" to enjoy his usual European vacation, which always includes a visit to his native land, Scotland. This year Finlayson's trip is particularly interesting because he will act as best man at the wedding of Ambassador Houghton's daughter in London, and is accompanied by the happy bridegroom. Also Jimmy will visit his old friend, Sir Harry Lauder.

Finlayson has the distinction of having produced "The Night Before," the only play ever written by Sir Harry, the engagement taking place at the Copley Plaza Theatre at Boston.

Finlayson's two months' vacation abroad will find him spending most of his time at Labert Stirling Shire, Scotland, his native town; but, of course, he will pay his usual respects to Paris and London.

A Cheesecloth Sunrise

THE latest in screen effects is known as "the Christensen Sunrise." And the secret of one of the strangest light effects a studio has ever seen is contained in a couple of bolts of cheesecloth.

Great screens, made by mounting cheesecloth on huge frames, so that at the bottom only one thickness intervenes between the studio lights, and at the top some fifty layers effectively shut out the light, represents the apparatus used. These latter "taper," so that first one thickness, then two, then three, and so on, pass before the lights. The huge screens are then moved so that gradually the light increases, from darkness to bright sunlight.

The new effect is one of several odd devices the Danish director is using in Lon Chaney's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle, "Terror," production on which is now under way.

Her Picture in the Paper

ANN CHRISTY never had a personal press agent. Only stars can afford these. But three weeks ago her picture appeared in a Los Angeles newspaper demonstrating one of the latest wrinkles in fashions.

Lingering a little longer than usual over breakfast that morning, Harold Lloyd gave the newspaper a glance and was attracted by Miss Christy's picture. In the afternoon, at the behest of Lloyd, John L. Murphy, production manager of the Lloyd Corporation, instituted a search for the girl and yesterday the bespectacled comedian's six months' hunt for a new leading lady was ended with Miss Christy signing a contract that many of the young beauties in Hollywood have been trying to win.

Three other girls before Miss Christy have started their climb to fame in motion pictures as the leading lady for Harold Lloyd. Bebe Daniels was first, Mildred Davis came next, and later became Mrs. Lloyd. Jobyna Ralston after thre years with Harold immediately jumped into stardom when her contract with the corporation expired.

Ann Christy is nineteen years old and came to Hollywood from Logansport, Indiana. She had no idea of going into the movies, being bent on a business career. But some friends in Hollywood induced her to take a chance before the camera —and she did. Miss Christy is five feet tall and is one of a small group of unbobbed. She has brown hair and blue eyes. One of the strong points in favor of her selection by Harold Lloyd is that she represents the typical New York girl. Lloyd's new picture is laid entirely in New York City and his leading lady is supposed to be a girl who hails from Sheridan Square.

Columbia's "The Blood Ship," which has its world premiere at the Roxy theatre in New York shortly, brings an unusual group of character types to the screen. Theodore Roberts Back

THEODORE ROBERTS, grand old man of the screen, is back in Hollywood after a year's absence touring a vaudeville circuit. So far as is known Roberts is the only man in the picture business holding a life contract. Paramount has an agreement for his services until the end of his days. Although Roberts still supports himself with a crutch, he says he has almost entirely recovered from the long siege of illness that kept him at death's door for many months.

Sport News

FOX FILMS advanced from third to first place in the Movie baseball tournament by defeating First National at Protectory Oval on Saturday, the score being 8 to 4. In a second motion picture game First National won from Warner Brothers by a score of 10 to 2.

Factors in the Fox victory were Dahill's impressive twirling, Klein's fielding, and timely hitting by Freedman, Weiner, Star, and McEvoy. Meehan, of First National, made three fine catches, and engineered a double play assisted by Williams.

So far Fox has won five games and lost only one. Pathe holds the runner up position in the league with four victories and one defeat. Warners is third with five games won and two lost, and First National is fourth with three wins and three games lost. United Artists and Consolidated are in fifth and sixth place respectively.

This Saturday Fox and Pathe will meet in a game that will practically determine the motion picture championship this season.

Back to Hollywood

J. FARRELL MACDONALD, Fox Films' character comedian, left for Hollywood July 7th with his wife and daughter, Lorna, after seven weeks in New York during which he worked in "East Side—West Side," with George O'Brien and Virginia Valli, under the direction of Allan Dwan.

As soon as Macdonald unpacks his bags in Hollywood he will report to Sol Wurtzel, studio superintendent.

Brenon Expected in New York

HERBERT BRENON and party are expected in New York, Thursday, July 14th, according to wire received by United Artists from Hollywood. He left Los Angeles, Sunday, July 10th, on "The Chief" on the Santa Fe, arriving in the metropolis over the Twentieth Century at 9:45 A. M. Thursday, July 14th.

As he will have completed "shooting" Hollywood scenes for "Sorrell and Son," the Warwick Deeping novel which he is bringing to the screen, the object of the trip east is to sail on the Majestic Friday (July 15th, midnight), or Saturday (July 16th noon), for England, to film exterior scenes for the same United Artists picture.

Accompanying Mr. Brenon will be H. B. Warner, who plays the role of Sorrell, and Mr. Warner's ten-year-old daughter, Lorraine. Also in the party will be a juvenile player, Mickey McBan, and his mother, Mrs. Fred McBan, Norman Trevor, Nils Asther and Mary Nolan, the principal members of the cast; also Mr. Brenon's assistants, Ray Lissner and Julian Fleming, as well as James Howe and Leo Tover, cameramen.

While in England, Mr. Brenon expects to join Warwick Deeping, the author, in a production session at the various original "Sorrel and Son" locations of the novel which they previously selected as a background for important sequences of outdoor scenes.

Make-up Man Returns

ROBERT KLEIN, character actor and make-up expert of Fox Films Hollywood studios, arrived in New York this week from his native France, where he went for two months' rest after eight years of continuous work at the coast motion picture plant. Klein, although born in France, served in the American army with distinction during the late unpleasantness and he departed for Washington this week, where he is to transact some business connnected with the military service before returnnig to Hollywood.

A Daredevil Stunt

WITH hands shackled to the steering wheel of his car, "Daredevil" Jack Vance left Los Angeles on July 7 for a ninety-day round trip to the Atlantic Coast which will net him, if successful, the fat end of a ten thousand dollar wager. A. G. Palmer, millionaire clubman of Los Angeles, is the man who made the bet. Vance carried with him, for delivery to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offices in New York, the first reels of King Vidor's "The Crowd" and Clarence Brown's "The Trail of '98."

Prior to his departure from the Los Angeles City Hall, where Mayor Cryer sealed the lock which will keep Vance chained to his steering wheel for three months, Vance visited the M-G-M studios to pick up the rolls of celluloid and receive the best wishes of stars and directors on his unusual venture. Vance, who will eat, sleep and exercise while handcuffed to the wheel of the car, holds the present endurance record of keeping a car in continuous motion for one hundred twenty-seven hours and fifty-six minutes, while tied to the wheel.

Vance will visit M-G-M Exchanges on his cross-country trip.

American Legion at Roxy

THE Roxy Theatre was the scene of a very unusual ceremony Monday night, July 11th, when the American Legion initiated a new member via the radio in the broadcasting room with Roxy as Master of Ceremonies. The regular ritual was observed with several high officers and honor men officiating. Among those who took part in the ceremonies were State Commander Arthur E. Brundage, Past State Commander Major Wm. F. Deegan, Past State Commander Harry Wilder, Past State Commanders Russell E. Sard and Edward E. Spafford, Congressional Medal of Honor Man Dan Edwards, Congressional Medal of Honor Man Sydney Gumpertz and Queens County Chaplain Rev. Father Ward B. Meehan. The member installed was Rev. Dr. Cross, Chaplain of Richmond Hill Post No. 212. The guests included Major General Wm. Weigel, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Asst. Sec'. of War F. Trubee Davison and General Albert Wingate.

Roxy prepared a special musical program appropriate for the occasion in which the whole artistic staff of the theatre, including symphony orchestra, chorus, organ and soloists, was utilized.

Major Bowes Touring France

WORD comes from abroad that Major Edward Bowes, who is enjoying his first extensive holiday from the multitudinous duties of the Capitol Theatre, has left Paris and is motoring through rural France. At the personal invitation of Dr. Lefort, Director of the Rheims Memorial Hospital, he is paying a visit to this particular section of the country. Dr. Lefort, who was decorated by the French and Belgian governments for heroic and memorable services during the war, is thoroughly familiar with the battle area and is acting as his guide on a complete tour covering all the points of historic interest.

Trade Commission Now Seeks Ban on All Block Booking

Decision in Paramount Case Orders Practice Discontinued; No Change in Sales Policy, Zukor Announces

THE long-awaited decision of the Federal Trade Commission in the Paramount case was rendered July 9. It ordered discontinuance of block-booking; found Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Famous Players guilty of conspiracy to restrain competition; and prohibited them from acquiring or threatening to acquire theatres as a means of intimidating or coercing exhibitors to book pictures distributed by Paramount.

In a formal statement issued July 12, Mr. Zukor announced that no change in the existing sales policies of Paramount will be made at present.

While official notice had not been given up to the time Motion Picture News went to press, it is indicated that Paramount will fight the Commission's order in the courts in an effort to have it set aside.

All other charges in the original complaint are dismissed, and all charges are dismissed so far as the other respondents are concerned, they being Realart Pictures Corporation, The Stanley Company of America, Stanley Booking Corporation, Black New England Theatres, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Inc., Saenger Amusement Company, the late Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Black, Stephen A. Lynch and Ernest V. Richards, Jr.

The commission held that "the respondents Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have conspired and confederated together and from time to time with other persons unduly to hinder competition in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films in interstate and foreign commerce and to control, dominate, monopolize or attempt to monopolize the motion picture industry." The respondents, and their officers, directors, agents, representatives and employees, are ordered to cease and desist:

"Cease and Desist" Order

1. From continuing in force, recognizing, complying with, carrying into effect or enforcing, or attempting to comply with, carry into effect or enforce the conspiracy heretofore made or entered into by and among the respondents or any of them, or by and among the respondents or any of them and any other person or persons, for the purpose of lessening and restraining competition, and restraining trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, in the business of producing, distributing and exhibiting motion picture films for profit or the business of producing and distributing such films, and from making or entering into any like conspiracy among themselves or any of them, or among themselves or any of them and any other person or persons, for any of the purposes above

Trade Commission Calls Leading Producers to Conference on Block-Booking; Will Go to Courts if Paramount Defies Order

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Circuit Court of Appeals in New York will be asked to declare valid the order issued by the Federal Trade Commission in the Paramount case and require compliance with its provisions, if Famous Players refuses voluntarily to abide by the Commission's demands, it was indicated at the offices of the Commission today.

No action, however, will be taken until the expiration of the sixty days given the respondents to report their compliance with the order, and it was intimated at the Commission's offices that no fears are entertaind that the order will be defied.

The Commission, anxious to stamp out block booking in the picture industry, is sending to leading producers an invitation to attend a conference at which its prohibition as an unfair method of competition would be discussed. The time and place of the meeting will not be set until it is indicated by a substantial majority of the producers that they will have representatives in attendance.

If Paramount issues a defi of the Commission, it is probable that other important distributors would refuse to attend such a conference until the courts have finally passed upon the legality of block booking.

Text of Zukor Statement Announcing No Change in Sales Policies

THE following statement was issued Tuesday by Adolph Zukor, President of Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation:

"The formal order and findings of the Federal Trade Commission were served upon us yesterday. We are glad to find that, after the Commission's searching investigation begun in 1921 and but recently completed, the only existing business practice of this corporation to which its order purports to apply is the sales method of offering pictures in groups, referred to by the Commission as "block booking". This is the offering of a number of pictures as a unit. It is also the offering of a number of pictures for an aggregate price substantially less than the combined prices for various pictures in the group if purchased separately. In other words it is the offering of a group of pictures at a wholesale price below the retail price of single pictures. It does not prevent exhibitors purchasing pictures singly. The average advance upon the price of single pictures as against the block price of such pictures is only about 25 percent. This sales method is not peculiar to our company, but is almost universal in the industry. It will thus be seen that the Commission's order, if sustained by the courts, will present a question which will have to be dealt with not alone by the Paramount Company, but by the entire motion picture industry. Therefore, no change in our existing sales policies is contemplated at the present.

"The Commission's order does not attempt to interfere with the ownership and operation of the existing theatre holdings of the Paramount Company, known as the Publix Circuit, nor with any additions thereto which may be made in the normal development and expansion of our business in the future."

set forth and enumerated in this paragraph of this order.

2. From leasing or offering to lease for exhibition in a theatre or theatres motion picture films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump sum price for the entire block or group only and requiring the exhibitor to lease all such films or be permitted to lease none; and from leasing or offering to lease for exhibition such motion picture films in a block or group of two or more at a designated lump sum price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which total or lump sum price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition; or shall bear such relation to each other as to tend to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any portion or portions thereof; or shall bear such relation to each other that the effect of such proposed contract for the lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any part of the certain line of commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, involved in said proposed sale, to-wit: the business of the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films to the public, or the business of production and distribution, or of production or distribution of moving picture films for public exhibition.

3. From building, buying, leasing or otherwise acquiring, or threatening so to do, any theatre building or buildings or theatre or theatres, for the purpose and with the intent or with the effect of intimidaing or coercing an exhibitor or exhibitors of motion picture films to lease or book and exhibit motion picture films produced or offered for lease or leased by respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Block-Booking and Monopoly

The commission, in a 15-page statement of findings, declares with respect to block booking that "the purpose and necessary effect of such distribution policy is to lessen competition and to tend to create a monopoly in the motion picture industry, tending to exclude from the market and the industry small independent producers and distributors of films and denying to exhibitors freedom of choice in leasing films."

Discussing theatre ownership the commission found that Famous Players on June 30, 1926, had an interest in 368 theatres throughout the country; in 128 theatres this interest was 100 per cent; in 13 theatres more than 50 per cent, in 128 theatres exactly 50 per cent, and in 99 theatres less than 50 per cent. In Philadelphia, Dallas, Jacksonville, Miami, and Tampa, the company, directly or through subsidiaries, has from time to time acquired the control of all or nearly all of the first class motion picture theatres, including the first run houses, the Commission declared.

The respondents are required to report within 60 days to the commission what action has been taken to comply with its orders. It is considered probable that the company will appeal to the courts for a construction of the commission's findings, with a view to having the order declared invalid.

The decision of the commission was unanimous, all commissioners participating. It was signed by Commissioners C. W. Hunt, chairman; William E. Humphrey, Abram F. Myers, J. F. Nugent and Edgar A. McCulloch.

Finding on Block-Booking

The Commission's position with regard to block-booking is set forth in the following excerpt from its findings:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation adopted the fixed method of leasing, and does lease, its films under a system known in the trade as 'block-booking.' Under such plan films are offered in 'blocks' only. A block is a group of films offered as a whole. The number of films in a block is not uniform. The numbers most frequently offered are sufficient to occupy the available exhibition time of a theatre for three months or for one year. Such blocks contain 13 or 26 films, or 52 or 104 films according to whether the theatre changes films once or twice a week. The individual films in blocks being offered at any time are not always identical. Films are included in a block offered to an exhibitor which the agent of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation chooses for that purpose, and which he deems to be within the revenues of the exhibitor. A block is so constituted as to contain certain films which the exhibitor feels compelled to lease and exhibit and also other films of lower quality which the exhibitor does not desire to lease and exhibit and which the exhibitor considers to be unacceptable to his patrons.

Policy Called Unfair

"Respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has maintained and still maintains said unfair distribution policy. It offers to lease, and does lease, blocks of films as such, the exhibitor taking all as offered or none. If an exhibitor declines to take all, the block is successively offered to his competitors until a sale is made. As an alternative, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation sometimes offers to permit an exhibitor, who declines to lease a block, to lease less than the whole block at prices so high as to make it impossible for him successfully to compete with rival theatres, to-wit: at prices arbitrarily fixed at from 50 to 75 per centum

Woodhull Sees Sales Changes in Verdict

R. F. WOODHULL, President of the M. P. T. O. A., sees in the decision of the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount many new trade methods to be worked out by the distributor in the event the verdict of the commission is upheld by the courts.

In a statement, issued by President Woodhull, he says in part:

"This is a problem that will be met in a way that will prove a benefit to the exhibitor in film rentals and the securing of pictures appropriate to his neighborhood without the producer being compelled to sacrifice quality in any way.

"The other decision, which distinctly frowns upon the acquiring or threatening to acquire theatres by producers and distributors, should tend to act as a stay in the present over-seating of communities, which is conceded to be a menace to our industry by both independent and producer theatre-owners."

higher than the estimated prices of such films as parts of the block. The purpose and effect of such alternative offer is to coerce and intimidate an exhibitor into surrendering his free choice in the leasing of films and into leasing films in blocks as offered, thereby denying to such exhibitor the opportunity or privilege of leasing and exhibiting certain other films of higher qualities and which such exhibitor's patrons demand and which such exhibitor desires to exhibit. Only in case all competitors in any community refuse to lease a block of films does Famous Players-Lasky Corporation lease for use in that community the films contained in such block upon some other basis to be arrived at by negotiation between the sales agent of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the exhibitor.

"The purpose and necessary effect of such distribution policy is to lessen competition and to tend to create a monopoly in the motion picture industry, tending to exclude from the market and the industry small independent producers and distributors of films and denying to exhibitors freedom of choice in leasing of films.

"Because of the dominant position of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the motion picture industry, its methods of competition, policy and practice are necessarily followed, adopted and maintained by all competitors of Famous Players- Lasky Corporation that are strong enough to acquire and operate first-class first-run theatres to exploit their most meritorious pictures and to offer to lease, and lease, films in blocks only and in sufficient numbers to occupy the available exhibition time of exhibitors. Thereby it is made difficult for small and independent producers or distributors of films to enter into or remain in the moving picture industry or market, or to lease individual pictures on merit. It destroys the freedom of exhibitors to choose according to their judgment and taste films for exhibition and to exhibit only films that in their opinion are meritorious and acceptable to their patrons; and the public is deprived of the power to influence exhibitors in the choice of films and of the benefit of continuous exhibition of meritorious and acceptable films only."

Case Lasts Six Years

The Famous Players complaint is one of the outstanding cases in the history of the Federal Trade Commission. It probably holds the record for longevity, having originated August 31, 1921, although an amended complaint, on which the proceedings have been based, was not issued until February 14, 1923.

The complaint named, in addition to Famous Players-Lasky, Realart Pictures Corporation, Stanley Company of America, Stanley Booking Corporation, Black New England Theatres, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Inc., Saenger Amusement Company, and Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Black, Stephen A. Lynch and Ernest V. Richards, Jr.

The respondents were charged with having conspired and confederated together to hinder competition in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films in interstate and foreign commerce, and to control, dominate, monopolize or attempt to monopolize the motion picture industry. They were charged with having entered into a progressive program of acquiring or controlling motion picture theatres throughout the United States, particularly first-run theatres, and of compelling and coercing exhibitors to book and exhibit all the pictures produced or distributed by Famous Players. It was also charged that block-booking was forced in an effort to take up all or a large portion of the exhibitor's available exhibiting time and close their theatres to the films of competitors of Famous Players, the complaint alleging that "the respondents, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation procured millions of dollars to put said program in successful operation." A number of other charges, amplifying these allegations, were included.

The taking of testimony required two years, agents of the commission touring the country to secure evidence from exhibitors, motion picture actors and others who were believed to be affected by the respondent's alleged activities. Seventeen thousand pages of testimony embodied the proceedings of these hearings. The case was argued before the commission in 1926, after the filing of briefs and cross-briefs, counsel for Famous Players alleging bias and improper acts on the part of the trial examiner in upholding objections of then Chief Counsel W. H. Fuller to questions propounded to witness by the respondents' lawyers. On the basis of this allegation, the commission ordered the case reopened, additional hearings were held and the record was enlarged by some 8,000 pages.

Final arguments on the case were heard before the commission late in January of this year, since which time it has been studied by the commissioners. The only charge of importance remaining in the case related to block-booking, other allegations having been cast aside from time to time as unimportant, while the second most important allegation, that of theatre ownership, also was finally discarded.

The complaint of 1923 was signed by Commissioners Victor Murdock, chairman; John F. Nugent, Huston Thomson, Vernon W. Van Fleet and Nelson B. Gaskill. Of these, only Mr. Nugent is now a member of the body, his term of service not expiring until September of this year.

Trade Should Welcome Verdict, Says Steffes

THE entire industry should welcome the verdict of the Federal Trade Commission against Paramount, in the opinion of W. A. Steffes, head of the Northwest exhibitor association. Steffes, in Minneapolis, said the decision should do more to stabilize the picture business than anything that has happened in years.

"There is no doubt but that block-booking is an evil and a menace to the industry," said Steffes. "This applies not only to theatre owners, but to producers as well. In my opinion it forced building of many a theatre which would not otherwise have been in existence, if producers had realized this evil a few years ago. The grabbing of theatres by Paramount and other companies had to end some time. The Federal Trade Commission ruling will let them out gracefully."

Embassy in Elizabethport, N. J., Opens Oct. 1

The Embassy, a new theatre in Elizabethport, New Jersey, and latest house of the Combined Theatre Enterprises, will open on October 1, 1927, the theatre's operators announce. Officers of Combined Theatre Enterprises are Stanley Sobelson, president, Jacob H. Safiro, vice-president, Fred Unger, secretary; Louis Heiman, assistant secretary, James J. Thompson, treasurer, and Harry Lesser, assistant treasurer. The company believes that in publishing the opening date it is offering substantial refutation to false rumors circulated in exchanges to the effect that the Embassy is to open on January 1, 1928.

Combined Theatre Enterprises also operates the West End and Lincoln Theatres in Newark, the Elmoro at Elizabeth and the Empire at Bayonne. The Embassy has a seating capacity of 1,500 and will adopt the policy of pictures and vaudeville at popular prices.

Famous Players Canadian Declares Dividend

Because of a substantial increase in earnings, Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has declared its first dividend in seven years on the second preferred stock, the amount of such dividend being in the ratio of $80,000 per annum. Intimation has been given that the company intends to continue payment of this dividend regularly.

Figures of the Canadian company show that the net profits for the past year were $800,582, when $265,409 was allowed for depreciation instead of the $180,000 depreciation allowance of the previous year.

Detroit Leads in First National's Summer Drive

At the end of the fifth week of First National's 1927 summer billings' drive, the Detroit exchange stood in first place, with Los Angeles second and Omaha third. Each of the three leaders had passed their quota. Among the districts, the Eastern ranked first, with the others in the following order: Southern, Western, Canadian.

Booking Slump Is Widespread, News' Survey Shows

Exhibitors Generally Holding Back on New Season Product —In Some Territories Situation Amounts to Blockade

EXHIBITORS are holding back on bookings for new season product to an unprecedented extent this year. In fact, in the greater number of exchange territories, a definite booking slump is on.

These facts are clearly shown in first-hand field reports to Motion Picture News from its own correspondents, trained in gathering trade information, unbiased and authoritative.

It is clear, from their reports, that film sales this year are far behind the normal. Offerings of new product to theatres for the 1927-1928 season are meeting stubborn resistance, amounting in some instances to a definite blockade.

The causes assigned for the situation are due, in some territories, to local conditions. But, generally speaking, the reasons nationally sum up this way:

Big circuits are not closing for product as rapidly as in former years, thus holding up subsequent bookings. This is not universally true, but the movement is very widespread.

Exhibitors are more skeptical than usual about how good the new product will be, their doubt being based to some extent on disappointments in this season's pictures.

Rental prices asked for new product are in general said to be far above prices of previous years. Many territories indicate that theatres are awaiting to see if the prices will come down.

Due to block-booking and loading up with pictures, theatres in many cases have product in plenty for several months ahead. This is one of the prime causes of the indifference being shown to new season product.

"Watchful waiting" sums up the general attitude. Reports in detail, as gathered thus far in the News' first-hand survey follows:

Chicago

THE unvarnished truth about the contract situation in Chicago and its territory is that exhibitors, both circuits and independents, are generally holding back on buying of 1927-28 product, and the total of business secured to date by Chicago exchanges is approximately fifty per cent of that closed during the same period one year ago.

While this applies to the grand total of business closed to date, at least two exchanges and possibly three, none of which rank as among the largest in the industry, have done better than they did one year ago.

The reason or reasons back of this reluctance on the part of exhibitors to close contracts for the new theatrical year are practically impossible to define, a wide diversion of opinion as to causes existing. One exchange manager sized up the situation as follows: "The unusual sales pressure put upon the exhibitors by the various selling organizations has caused the prospects to become suspicious of the motives of the film men and as a result the majority refuse to do any business at the present time, acting on the theory that prices cannot go any higher and in all probability purchases may be made cheaper at a later date. Then, too, business has been considerably below normal in this territory for two and one-half months or a longer period, and exhibitors are waiting to see whether the tide is going to turn before obligating themselves for product. Warnings voiced by exhibitor leaders and certain publications, that caution should be exercised in buying and hurry avoided, also played its part."

Interviews with exhibitors brought out their feeling that materially higher prices demanded by certain of the film companies were unjustified and impossible to meet and that only by holding off could there be any hope of securing pictures on a more reasonable basis.

The above quotation from an exchange manager and the opinions expressed by exhibitors pretty well cover the various viewpoints in the Chicago territory.

It is evident that the various mergers and talks of further developments in this line have also played their part in unsettling the minds of the exhibitors and leaving them in an uncertain state where they hesitate to close contracts.

While salesmen are returning to their offices with reports which are very unsatisfactory both to themselves and their managers, exchangemen generally state that many of the large circuits are on the point of closing, and that when these contracts begin to roll in business practically will again be normal.

Kansas City

IN the Kansas City territory a rather peculiar condition exists on bookings for the new season. Three of the six larger first run houses are booked more heavily than last year, due to the fact that pictures have been used for longer runs than at first was anticipated, leaving a larger "carry-over" for the new season. In the smaller towns exhibitors are more cautious in their booking and are not so heavily booked as last year. Suburban houses of Kansas City show little difference in the booking last year and that now.

The average small town theatre owner in the Kansas City territory is booked six months in advance, probably comprising 20 per cent of his playing time, many of the pictures being "hang-overs." Most first run houses of Kansas City are booked for four or five months in advance, comprising about 15 per cent of their playing time.

"It is a fact that exhibitors are holding back on their bookings," said a widely known exchange official of Kansas City. "It is due to the fact that there were so many disappointments last year. A big lineup of pictures was anticipated, when, in reality, there were few good money-makers. Exhibitors were disappointed on many deliveries in block bookings and they are a bit more skeptical this year. Although this fall's lineup of pictures is conceded to look more promising, the theatre owner seems to have vowed to wait a while longer and be convinced of that fact. Industry and commerce in the smaller towns has not been what it should be, which is reflected in advance bookings, also. When the time arrives I think the bookings will be just as brisk as ever before, but it will come later than last year."

"Business among the first run houses in Kansas City has been all that could be desired," said the manager of one of Kansas City's largest theatres. "We have extended the runs of many pictures which did far better than we had anticipated. Therefore, we are booked heavier than we were at this time last year, due to the fact that we have played fewer pictures. Conditions in the larger cities of this territory are far better than in the smaller towns, comparatively speaking. Crops, floods and other conditions have played an important part in making it a bit more difficult for the small town exhibitor."

Philadelphia

EXHIBITORS in Philadelphia and vicinity are holding off their 1927-28 bookings for two reasons—first, because unsettled economic conditions do not give any indication as to whether the theatreman may expect good business next season, and second because it is felt that by holding off the distributors may give some price concessions.

Block booking has resulted, of course, in many houses closing for their season's product as usual, but yet on the other hand many more have not closed, and it is estimated in many instances by those who are in a position to judge intelligently that only a little more than half the theatres have booked up to this time.

Some theatremen feel that picture prices are going higher and higher with the exhibitor unable to increase his admission prices, and that the exchanges must be brought to realize, this year, that too many straws will break the camel's back. These men are holding out for better prices and hope, not only to better the figures offered by the exchange, but also to get pictures at a price lower than last year.

There has been widespread complaint in Philadelphia recently about the trend of business in general, and lack of patronage and buying in all lines. That this will react ultimately on the box office even more noticeably than it already has is the opinion shared by many theatre owners, and for this reason they are not binding themselves to purchase pictures that may have to be screened in the face of hard times.

In other words, the watchful-waiting policy has been adopted as the best means of taking the pulse of business. Some houses have booked only ten per cent of their product for the year; others 25 per cent, but with the majority 50 per cent has already been placed. Some exhibitors believe that the independents will get a bigger percentage of the bookings than in any previous year because of price, and because many want to get away from the block booking system. And the whole situation may resolve itself into seeing who will outwait the other.

Washington, D. C.

IN the booking of pictures for the new theatrical year in Washington, only a comparatively small part of the negotiations have been completed. Again, it would seem that business is backward this year; that there is no little haggling over prices, and some question as to the quality of this year's product.

Speaking of the chain of theatres over which he presides, Harry M. Crandall announced that his organization was going ahead with booking arrangements. They do not look for materially lower prices, but Mr. Crandall predicted that if the forthcoming year's offerings are not materially better than those of the closing year it may be expected that prices will show a substantial drop in the future.

Mr. Crandall expects to carry on negotiations for his requirements. He points out that it is possible to make the necessary adjustments as between seller and buyer that will prove advantageous to both and permit of agreements being reached. He and his associates are making analyses of the offerings and determining from the stories, their writers, those who play the parts and the directors, the worth of the features to his theatres. He estimates that from the study he has thus far made that the new lot of pictures will be materially better, and he looks forward to a successful season.

While the operators of theatre chains are anxious to get the business of booking completed that they may devote their entire attention to other matters, the exhibitors having but one or two houses are not so quick to jump at offerings. While the exchangemen say everything looks lovely, the men who patronize them are not so optimistic. The former charge that the latter are being led by propaganda against early booking which has for its object the lowering of prices.

Pathe Elected Member of M.P.P.D.A., Inc.

AT a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., on Tuesday, Pathe Exchanges, Inc., was elected a member of the Association. J. J. Murdock, president of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., was elected a member of the Board of Directors.

This brings the total of membership in the Hays Association to twenty-seven.

Cleveland

EXHIBITORS of Cleveland report that they are slower booking the new film product this year than previous years. The reasons given for this state of affairs are various. One reason is because the new zoning plan now in course of construction is not yet completed and they won't buy until it is completed. Another reason given is that the first-run houses are behind with their releases and this slows up the release of the old product all along the line. As long as the exhibitor is getting plenty of product, he is in no hurry to buy more.

A prominent circuit owner stated that in his opinion exhibitors are holding back with buying because last year's business was not good enough to warrant paying as much for pictures this year as they did last year. Local business conditions generally are poor. The building business, the foundation of local prosperity, is at a standstill.

Two other factors tend to slow up the booking programs in the opinion of many. They are the growing theatre circuits and the growing co-operative booking companies. Everyone is waiting to see what the other fellow is going to do. Outside of Cleveland in the territory, the situation is more serious than in Cleveland. The independent theatre owner has adopted a watchful-waiting policy. And the big circuits are booked in New York.

Albany, N. Y.

BUSINESS is stagnant along Albany's Film Row of thirteen exchanges, supplying more than 400 motion picture theatres in central and northern New York. Exchange managers and film salesmen admit the fact, although it is plainly perceptible to the eye. A visit to several of the leading exchanges along the Row for the purpose of ascertaining the present booking situation throughout New York state reveals an interesting situation. In the first place, bookings for the new theatrical year, which is generally taken as of September 1, are far under last year, or previous seasons. In fact, it is said that only about 10 per cent of playing time has been thus far booked for the new season.

The whole situation, so far as the exchanges are concerned, and there was a reticence on the part of exchange managers to have their names used, is that each exhibitor is apparently watching the other fellow and, furthermore, that nearly all of the exhibitors have plenty of pictures to tide them over for another month or two.

There is also another situation existing in central and northern New York at the present time that is almost an entirely new one, and one that is having a big effect today on the booking of pictures. During the last few weeks, the larger chains have been absorbing smaller houses on a booking arrangement, although it is not being publicly divulged that such arrangement is the prime factor in the case. This is occurring day after day in New York state. Announcement will be made that such and such a chain has acquired an interest in such and such houses, but when an attempt is made to ascertain just what interest has been secured, it is generally revealed that the whole idea is a booking arrangement whereby the chain will do the booking for the smaller houses under some scheme which will bring about smaller prices being paid for pictures. The whole thing, in so far as the Albany territory is concerned, is more or less shrouded in mystery, the heads of the chains refusing to make public the exact nature of the transaction whereby they have secured what they term an "interest" in neighborhood houses. It is known that in some cases that the smaller houses have been induced to come under the wing of the chain on the assertion that their pictures will cost less and that they will be placed in a far more aggressive position not only in buying pictures, but also in the showing.

There is also another phase that is entering into the situation and that is that many of the exhibitors believe that if they wait for a time they can secure pictures for less money than if they rushed pell mell in at the present time.

The exchange managers in Albany believe, however, that when the break comes there will be plenty of buying, but they are loath to predict any date for the break. Film salesmen on the road report that they are not able to sell any of the new product to speak of, and exhibitors coming to Albany, and visiting the exchanges, show little or no disposition to place any orders.

Take C. H. Buckley, for instance, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, both first-run downtown houses that always play to big crowds. Mr. Buckley is not booking any of the new product and is frank in admitting it.

"I do not intend to be rushed into booking pictures that I do not want," said Mr. Buckley, as he cited an instance of a salesman that had come to him and offered him 26 pictures without giving him the privilege of booking five or six which he desired. As Mr. Buckley stated, it was a case of take the twenty-six or none. "Why should I worry?" said Mr. Buckley. "There will be enough pictures to go around, and in the next place, the prices being asked are far too high. I think that the majority of exhibitors are sparring for time and are sure that they will be able to get product without being forced to take whole groups or single pictures at prices that are beyond all reason. That seems to be the feeling among other exhibitors that I know and the general thought of exhibitors in this section."

Other exhibitors in the territory, some of whom preferred not to have their names used, quickly admitted that they were booking little or none of the new product, the great majority saying that the prices being asked were too high and they preferred to wait to see how the situation would iron itself out.

When exhibitors were asked what percentage of playing time had been booked for the coming season, the answer was generally around ten per cent. In the meantime, there is almost total lack of business along the new product on Albany's Film Row.

St. Louis, Mo.

THE national coal strike, Mississippi Valley floods, Coolidge prosperity, Hollywood economy and Missouri mule sense combined have held back bookings of 1927-8 pictures in the St. Louis territory. As usual, it is very difficult to separate the bull from the business and exact percentages on new bookings are not obtainable, but with the possible exception of a few independents it can be safely stated advanced bookings for the new season are very far below what they should be.

National distributors have suffered in sales because the proposed new zoning plan has not been put through. Neighborhood theatres of St. Louis' metropolitan area insist on protection from alleged unfair rules of this old zoning arrangement and are holding back bookings on new product until that point is settled.

The talk of economy that floated eastward from Hollywood and westward from Wall street fell upon eager ears here, and, generally speaking, exhibitors of eastern Missouri and southern Illinois feel that if there is to be any economy exercised in the motion picture industry the rental of films is the most fertile field for the reaper to begin his work. So tense is the financial situation, the neighborhood theatres of St. Louis have served notice on the musicians' union that unless orchestral costs are cut the musicless movies will be the rule in the Mound City neighborhoods after August 15.

Film rentals must also be reduced, most exhibitors have decided definitely, and they are not signing for new pictures at the prices they regard as entirely too high. Veteran exhibitors are delaying bookings because experience has taught them the early fish gets the hook. They are watchfully waiting developments.

Indianapolis

LOW box-office receipts for the past season are blamed by Indiana exhibitors for holding back on next season's bookings. Uncertainty as to the coming year was given as a reason for not rushing contracts by a number of exhibitors. Most theatre managers confidentially admit that business has been off the last year in Indianapolis.

Robert Hesseldenz, uptown manager, said he was in no hurry to sign up because he hoped for "general improvement of conditions."

"I generally buy for six to eight months ahead," he added, "but am not ready to sign up because I have plenty of films to last until late in November. They may be cheaper in three months."

Allen S. Glenn, managing director of the Circle, said he was holding off only to see what distributors are offering and to "separate the wheat from the chaff." Glenn said his bookings were not behind last year.

Detroit

HENDERSON M. RICHEY, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, declares the exhibitor will be more cautious this year than ever before.

Portman New Mgr. Loew European Circuit

HARRY PORTMAN, youthful American theatre manager, who has been acting as representative to Loew's Inc., in connection with the Loew's Inc., holdings in France, has been raised to the post of managing director of all the Loew theatre properties in Belgium and England as well as France. He is now supervising the construction of the new Empire Theatre at Leicester Square, London.

Several changes have also been executed in the Loew theatre circuit in the United States. E. A. Schiller, vice-president of Loew's Inc., enumerates them as follows: Livingston Lanning, formerly of New Haven, to Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh; Harry Greenman of Pittsburgh to Loew's State, St. Louis, and Howard Price Kingsmore of St. Louis to supervise the operation of five theatres under Loew control in Memphis, Tenn.

"He must be shown that he will get what he contracts for and not a substitute," said Richey. "I also believe the exhibitor will investigate every phase of the contracts and what they call for before placing his signature upon it. Yes, sir, this will be a year of careful buying."

An unusual condition prevails in Detroit booking circles in view of the activity of the Co-operative Booking Agency, which buys and dates for nearly 50 theatres in Detroit, inclusive of the downtown first runs. C. Buermele, manager of the agency, who daily interviews Detroit exhibitors, declares that while business conditions are off, exhibitors are already busy making plans for the new season.

This agency has already contracted for the First National output for its circuit and expects to have several other leading producers lined up before many days pass.

The situation in general is apparently not up to normal.

Oklahoma City

"PLENTY of pictures; why be in a hurry?" is the reason given by W. Z. Spearman, president of the Oklahoma M.P.T.O., for exhibitors in this territory holding off on booking new product. To this he adds that last year's product lacks three to five months of being played up and he sees no immediate need for pictures.

He declares that, within the last month, salesmen are asking considerable increase in prices.

R. E. Griffith, head of the Griffith Amusement Co., which has about 50 theatres in the territory, says the same thing about prices. He adds that last year's product was very disappointing and finds fault with the practice of not delivering what is contracted for and taking out good pictures for specials. His company's books are in process of being closed for last year's business. A check-up will be necessary before they can know what pictures they want.

It seems to be a fact that independent companies are showing a nice increase in business this year over last. Even big companies are slow to admit any difficulty in selling, but some lay it on the fact that salesmen are expected to sell too early and that exhibitors won't need pictures for several months.

Milwaukee

CONTRACTS for new season's product are coming into Milwaukee exchanges slowly.

The booking situation in the city is tied up pending the outcome of the F. & R. merger now under consideration by Saxe Amusement Enterprises. Saxe has signed no contracts for its 35 theatres and will not until the deal is decided. Until the Saxe first-run and pre-release houses are accommodated, bookings for other theatres in the city cannot be arranged.

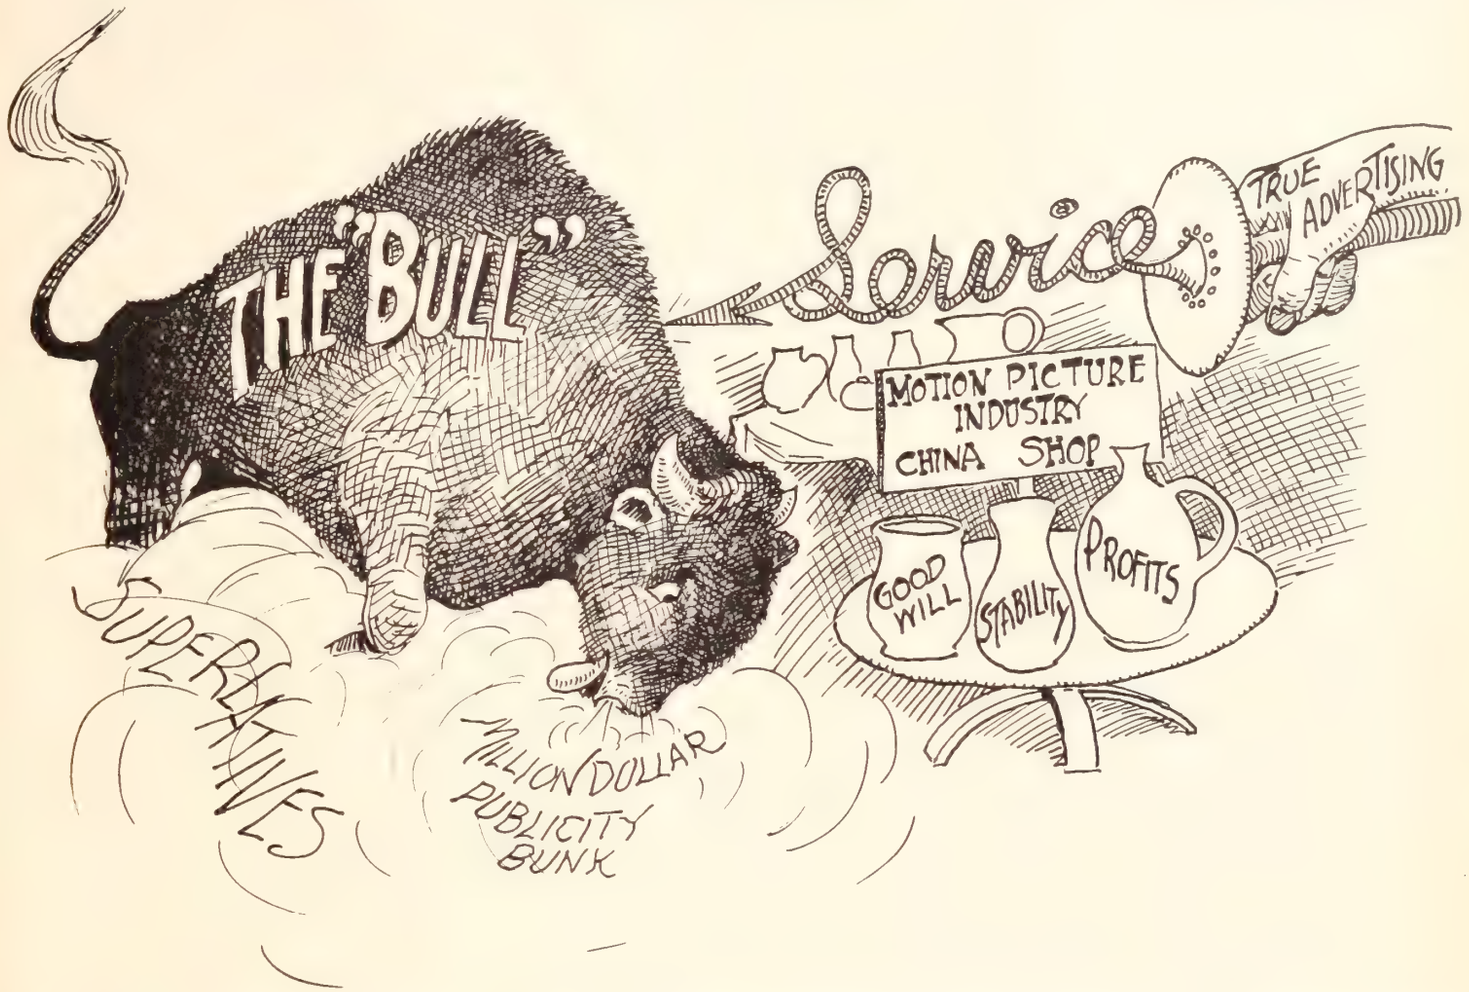
Contracts for the eleven Universal theatres have not yet been signed.

A deal is pending in the Upper Peninsula whereby the Butterfield Circuit and the Delft chain are considering a merger and is holding up booking in that locality. The situation is unsettled because of the several pending mergers.

E. A. Eschmann of Pathe sees nothing alarming in the present situation. He feels that the exhibitors are becoming more cautious and are going to wait for the circuit houses to buy before signing for the new product.

State in Trenton Leased By Ten Eyck and Thropp

Beginning with the expiration on September 1, 1928, of the existing lease on the State Theatre, Trenton, New Jersey, Thomas H. Thropp and George B. Ten Eyck, the present lessees, who have just entered into a contract with Ogden D. Wilkinson, will take over the operation of the theatre for a period of ten years.



The lease was signed last week by all three of the contracting parties, Marvin A. Riley, Sr., representing Mr. Thropp's theatrical interests. The State will be added to the chain controlled by Mr. Ten Eyck, the Orpheum, the Broad, the Gaiety and the Embassy, the latter house soon to be constructed. Mr. Thropp and Mr. Ten Eyck will be equal partners in the operation of the State.

The two business men plan fundamental alterations in the State. The seating capacity of the house will be increased and the gallery will be eliminated. The gallery entrance from the street is to be abolished, an entire new front will replace the old and an elaborate scheme of lighting will decorate the theatre's interior. Mr. Thropp is one of Trenton's most prominent business men and was recently appointed by Governor Moore as a member of the New Jersey State Board of Commerce and Navigation.

New Motion Picture Firms Obtain N. Y. Charters

Motion picture companies continue to incorporate in New York State, the past week bringing the following new companies which were granted charters by the secretary of State in Albany: Stillwell Theatre Inc., capitalization not stated, Isaac and Nettie Katz, Charles N. Dibner, Brooklyn; Colomb Amusement Co., Inc., $20,000, Ethel Bader, Benjamin B. Weinberg, Harriet Cohen, New York City; Mascot Pictures Corporation, $5,000, Nat Levine, Frances J. Levine, Lulu Fertig, New York City.

Stop Him!

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S editorial in last week's issue of Motion Picture News, entitled "The Bull in the Picture Shop", has brought forth approval from all parts of the industry. Letters and wires of commendation are pouring in.

A well-known cartoonist voluntarily contributed the above cartoon, so forcefully did the editorial appeal to him.

Newspapers on Film Economy

Flood of Editorial Comment Follows Proposed Salary Slash—Leading Journals Give Their Views

THE recent announcement of a ten per cent slash in salaries at Hollywood, which has been postponed until August 1, brought forth a flood of editorial comment in the newspapers.

These comments are highly significant, because they reflect the all-important attitude of the public. In summary, MOTION PICTURE NEWS presents the chief points made, and advises everybody in the industry to read them carefully:

San Francisco Bulletin.—The inevitable has happened at Hollywood. The still, small, stern voice of economic law has finally made itself heard above the tumult and the shouting of the press agent.

The Question of Halos

Los Angeles Times.—There may be genuine difficulty in finding halos that will fit all movie people. However, they are not the only ones who are having trouble in the halo and harp department.

Denver News.—Hollywood may be sad, but the rest of the country will have little reason to regret the decision of the Motion Picture Producers Association to reduce the salaries of film stars. . . . If the result of the ridiculous salaries was localized, the whole question would be of little moment. Instead, it is felt in every community. The mannerisms and antics of Hollywood are imitated in every high school.

Washington Star.—Whether the public will get the benefit of these savings remains to be seen. Undoubtedly the motion picture industry has been overpaid.

Hartford Courant.—It is a good thing that a start has been made toward getting movie salaries back somewhere near nor-maley and it will be well if the reduction is passed along to the ultimate consumer.

Miami Herald.—The savings will amount to millions and it is possible that the men, women and children who pay their way into the theatres and thus make the industry possible will ultimately benefit a trifle. Possible. Not probable.

Sioux City, Iowa, Journal.—This fabulous return to the motion picture people is directly responsible for most of the conduct—and misconduct—observed in screen colonies for years.

Lowell, Mass., Leader.—Now that salaries have been cut, the leading women will have an opportunity to engage in those homely, domestic duties which hitherto they have practiced only in the imagination of their versatile press agents.

Brains vs. Money

Springfield, Mass., Union.—The enforced economy in Hollywood may have the beneficent result of compelling the producers to depend more upon brains and less upon purchasing power, more upon imagination and less upon a checkbook in composing their opera.

Boston Transcript.—But for the paler luminaries such a cut in earnings may well cause hardship. It may be necessary to ride around in cars of lower price than the gilded roadster. . . . It may even be necessary to dispense with the services of the press agent.

Minneapolis Tribune.—The leaders of the film industry have apparently got together and decided that their industry was being run with needless extravagance. The public had arrived at that conclusion long ago.

Albany, N. Y., News and Journal.—The industry may sometime get down to a businesslike basis. It will have to do so. And it has learned that lavishness is not art.

New York Herald Tribune.—Since this industry became prominent, its promoters have considered it good publicity to allow the public to believe that its shining lights were paid far in excess of Presidents of the United States, and even vice-presidents of trust companies.

New York Times.—Sooner or later, the spoiled darling of all the arts and industries was bound to run up against those inexorable twins of human activity, Costs and Overhead. . . . This should come when pictures are produced with fewer shekels and more brains and taste.

New York Women's Wear.—At first the talk of million dollar salaries and million dollar features was impressive but it came to mean nothing to the public, or nearly nothing. . . . The public is placing its own valuation on the films and is only mildly excited about their original costs.

Make 'em Better

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Eagle-News.—If pictures were made merely better, rather than bigger, the industry would be better off.

Pittsburgh Press.—If the cost of producing pictures is cut materially the public will scan the price-list at the theatre box-office to see whether it is going to receive any share of the benefits from economy.

Richmond Times-Dispatch.—This inordinately high cost is due chiefly to two factors: one is the enormous amount of footage that is thrown away, and the other is the absurd scale of salaries paid the movie actors.

Cleveland Playgrounds Offering Free Movies

FREE movies are being offered in 49 Cleveland playgrounds under the supervision of the physical education department of the Cleveland Board of Education. They are being presented outdoors. A large screen is erected on a wall, and the projection machine is placed on a table in the yard. Electricity is supplied through an extension cord which is connected with the building.

Four different programs, offered simultaneously in widely scattered parts of the city, include everything from educational films to comedy features. The four programs are interchanged so that every playground may have an opportunity to see them, and others are substituted for them every three weeks. It is expected that 5,000 Clevelanders will see these pictures nightly.

Houston, Tex., Post-Dispatch.—The producers must not forget that they themselves are responsible in some measure for the "hold-ups" by the stars, for they encouraged the big salary idea by making a point in their publicity of the amounts paid their stars. . . . The stars do not need a union to do their bargaining for them. They have their public. The box-office speaks for them. They have its voice to support them when they bargain with the producers.

Woonsocket, R. I., Call.—If reduced salaries will bring some of these gay folk to their senses, create better moving pictures and thus revive interest in the silver screen it may be worth a battle between the artists and the industry.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.—Doubtless there are places in which costs can be cut without damage to the spirit of the industry. But it is a fact that American movies have been the best in the world because of a willingness of their promoters to pay any price for genius and creative talent and to give men and women of new ideas endless scope and all the money they needed. That policy has been enormously profitable, and Mr. Hays and his associated magnates will make a great mistake if they attempt to change it.

Handwriting on Wall

Columbus, O., State Journal.—The feeling has prevailed for some time that the salaries reported to be paid film stars are quite out of reason. . . . There is evidence at last that the industry itself sees the handwriting on the wall.

Watertown, N. Y., Times.—The movie business seems to suffer from swollen bank rolls. The sky has been the limit and the wasteful practices which have been employed would send any other concern into bankruptcy in no time.

Dallas News.—The amazing thing about the motion picture business to staid workers in older and long-established industries has been its extraordinary disregard of waste. Bankers do not like bond issues floated on a sea of dreams. . . . The efficiency man seems to have come to Hollywood. It is to be hoped that the fellow is an artist as well as an auditor.

Luporini Becomes Tiffany's Latin Representative

A contract between Tiffany Productions and Ferdinand V. Luporini has been recently consummated, an announcement from M. H. Hoffman, the Tiffany vice-president, reads. By means of the agreement Mr. Luporini becomes the exclusive Latin American representative for all Tiffany pictures for a period of four years. The contract becomes effective with the release of the first Tiffany film on the 1927-28 schedule.

The countries involved in this deal and in which Tiffany Productions will have one hundred per cent representation are: Brazil, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chili, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, West Indies, Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico and Central America.

Construction Completed on Param't News Laboratory

Completion of construction on the new Paramount News Laboratory, 43d Street in New York City, was announced this week. Emanuel Cohen, in charge of the Paramount Newsreel and short features, ordered the erection of the four-story structure in the heart of the city, believing that speed in the distribution of live news shots is an essential service that the exhibitor should receive.

Following the lull after the finish of construction activities, developing and printing machines are now being installed. The laboratory will be equipped with every modern scientific contrivance, including an air conditioning system that will reduce the length of time taken in drying film.

Vandals Damage Florence Theatre in Seattle

Damage estimated at close to $5,000 was suffered last week by John Danz's Florence Theatre in Seattle, Washington, one of a string of downtown second run houses operated by Mr. Danz. The damage was done by two unmasked marauders who entered the house at 6 o'clock in the morning, bound two janitors working at the time, and then locked all doors and proceeded to smash the theatre's various accessories.

The damage included a smashed screen, two smashed projection machines, draperies cut to ribbons, and serious damage to the pipe organ. Prompt work by Seattle theatre firms enabled the Florence to open the following afternoon.

F B O Office Closed on Summer Saturdays

THE home office of F B O Pictures Corporation will be closed all day on Saturdays, starting immediately, up to and including August 27, a statement from Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O, reads.

Mr. Kennedy feels that since both the studio and the home office have been working speedily during the last few months his employees are entitled to a two-day week-end holiday during the hot summer days.

Newsreel Resume

By L. C. Moen

THIS week's newsreels have been unusually interesting, offering a wide variety of subject matter. In the newsreels for the first half of the week, International seemed to us to have a shade on the others, while the most interesting of the releases for the last half, personally, was Kinograms.

Highlights of International Newsreels No. 56 were the only shots of Byrd's "America" in the water at Ver-sur-Mer; a fine story on Coolidge in his "cowboy suit;" good human interest stuff of a baby hippopotamus; and the eclipse of the sun photographed with a 40-inch lens at Gigglewich, England.

Fox News No. 82 had, among other subjects, a good handling of the Renown arriving in England with its royal passengers; a complete story of the greyhound racing at Tijuana, Mexico; the Grand Prix in Paris and the reception given Byrd.

High spots of Kinograms No. 5307 were the Sacco-Venzetti mass meeting in New York; beautiful shots of the Interlake cup races; interesting sea shots of the naval reserve boys leaving on a cruise.

Pathe News No. 57 included Sharkey in training; good thrill stuff of shooting rapids; a good story on the arrival of the Renown; the Long Beach swimming and diving events; a children's beauty show and slow motion shots of the greyhound racing at Tijuana.

International No. 57 showed Byrd's welcome in Paris, with splendid crowd shots; Rockefeller and his annual birthday; the Foster girls in some good water stuff; corking shots of the trial flight of the new Curtiss Condor bomber, with the camera plane flying under the battleship; and Helen Wills winning at Wimbledon.

Fox No. 83 showed Sharkey sparring in slow motion; the reception given Maitland and Hegenberger in Hawaii; Tilden defeated in England; and the Henry Ford retraction and apology to the Jewish race.

Kinograms No. 5308 showed Byrd welcome in Paris, splendidly covered; the Boy Scouts making Governor Smith, Will Hays and others members; Helen Wills winning at Wimbledon; Chinese festival scenes in Portland, Ore.; Judge Landis digging up the golf links with his driver; cooling snow scenes with ski jumping and some good comedy; and Sharkey in training.

Pathe No. 58 showed what were, if memory serves us rightly, the only scenes obtained of Maitland and Hegenberger actually landing in Hawaii; Sharkey in police uniform in a Boston stunt; splendid snow stuff at Rainier Park and in Denver; a striking daredevil feature with the Flying Greggs loop-the-looping one auto over another; Byrd in Paris; the tennis matches; and the boy scout event.

Al Rogell Will Direct "Shepherd of the Hills"

Al Rogell has been selected by Al Rockett, West Coast production manager for First National Pictures, and by Charles R. Rogers, the producer, to direct a picture to be based upon Harold Bell Wright's novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills."

German Business Leaders on New Ufa Board

Prominent Industrialists, Bankers and Other Outstanding Figures in Executive Group of Film Organization

ACCORDING to advices from the Berlin correspondent of the NEWS, Ludwig Klitzsch, an important figure in Ufa, will come to America shortly to personally survey production and exploitation methods and to confer with Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives associated with Ufa in the operation of Parufamet in Germany.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, the remarkably representative group of German leaders in every line on the new Ufa executive board. The personnel of this group is as follows:

President: Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, Geheimer Finanzrat (Title). Formerly president of the Krupp concern, now president of the Association of German Coal Mines. He owns the Scherl Corporation, which comprises the Scherl Printing & Publishing Co., then the Telegraphen-Union (T.-U.), next to Wolff (W. T. B.) the most important German News Agency, which also furnishes approximately 300 newspapers with articles; furthermore, the WIPO, an economic political correspondence for newspapers, and the Vera Verlag, a press organization. Hugenberg is also member of the Reichstag (Nationalistic Party).

Vice-President: Dr. Emil Georg von Stauss, Director of Deutsche Bank.

Members of Hugenberg Concern; Ludwig Klitzsch, general manager of Scherl Verlag. Was originally in the book trade, then manager of "Leipziger Illustriert Zeitung" (illustrated weekly published at Leipzig). He is one of the founders of Deulig (Deutsche Lichtbild-Gesellschaft).

Director J. B. Mann, former navy officer, now Hugenberg's general secretary.

Josef Windeck, manager of Scherl Verlag.

Dr. Guenther Donner, lawyer, legal adviser of Scherl Verlag.

Wilhelm Wiedeman, general manager of Deutscher Ueberseedienst (German Overseas Service), a press organization rceiving assistance from the Government.

Industrials: Dr. Fritz Thyssen, son of August Thyssen, most prominent representative of the Rhineland heavy industry (coal and iron). Nationalistic.

Otto Wolff, Cologne. Originally in the iron business, now prominent representative of the "heavy industry." Closely connected with Deutsche Bank. Member of the Zentrum (Catholic Party). In this connection should be mentioned that the new executive committee does not exist exclusively of members of the Nationalistic Party, but that some of its members also belong to Deutsche Volkspartei (People's Party—modern nationalistic), and to the Catholic Party, the Zentrum.

Dr. Paul Silverberg, leading member of the Association of German Industry. Originally connected with coal mining (Braunkohle). Was much spoken about years ago when he made a speech in favor of the Republic. Member of People's Party.

Heinrich von Schroetter, Managing Dirrector of Lignose A. G. (raw film). Connected with Phoebus and also with Deulig.

Consul Kummer, Director of Glanzstoff A. G. Cologne, the leading manufacturers of artificial silk.

Dr. Hans Meydenbauer, formerly government official, head of department at some Ministry. (Title, Ministerial-Direktor A. D.) One of the leaders in the Rhenish heavy industry, member of many boards of coal mining corporations.

Dr. Paul Mamroth, Kommerzienrat. General Manager of A. E. G. (Allgemeine Electricitaets-Gesellschaft), the leading electrical company in Germany.

Bankers: Siegmund Bodenheimer, one of the owners and directors of Darmstaedter Bank.

Herbert Gutmann, Director of Dresdener Bank.

von Wassermann, Kommerzienrat, owner of the bank of A. E. Wassermann.

Richard Pohl, is on the Board of the banking firm of Hardy & Co.

Louis Hagen, Geheimrat, of Cologne, the most prominent banker of Western Germany.

Dr. F. A. Freund, Berlin, one of the Directors of Darmstaedter Bank.

Dr. Fritz Tetens, Director of Ostdeutsche Privatbank (East German Private Bank) at Koenigsberg, East Prussia, Consul Marx, owner of the Internationale Handelsbank (International Trading Bank).

Miscellaneous: Egbert Hayessen, Domaenenpaechter. (This means that he has rented one of the big estates belonging to the State.) Farming.

Hans von Goldacker, owner of a big country estate (farming). Member of the Reichstag, representing the Agriculturists-Nationalistics.

Dr. Leo Wegener, Landes-Oekonomierat, of Kreuth. Also with considerable farming interest, and, to judge from his title, probably with some semi-official capacity.

Dr. Otto Schrey, Geheimer Baurat. Architect.

Feeley in Hazleton Will Continue Mixed Policy

THE last issue of the News carried a statement that the Feeley Theatre, in Hazleton, Pa., had changed its ten-year policy of combination bills to a straight picture policy. The statement is not at all accurate. As a matter of fact the Feeley has not abandoned its vaudeville-picture bills but has only closed down until the latter part of August. Manager Marie Feeley has closed contracts for general improvements throughout the house, which rehabilitation necessitates the closing of the house. Upon reopening, the Feeley will continue to book as in the past.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Get 20 New Houses

Will Start Operation Under Pathe-P. D. C. Deal With Opening of New Season

WHEN the 1927-28 season opens Keith-Albee and the Orpheum circuits will open twenty new houses, twelve of them in the New York metropolitan district. These will be opened in affiliation with F. F. Proctor, B. S. Moss, S. Z. Poli, Wilmer & Vincent, Fred Schanberger and the Interstate interests.

These Keith-Albee and Orpheum houses in their entirety are among the houses included in the Pathe-P. D. C. combination recently effected and which is expected to bring about changed exhibition alignments next season.

The B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre in Boston is among the new vaudeville Theatres that will be in full swing with the opening of the season. The Orpheum Palace in Chicago will have its first full season in 1927-28.

Included in the Metropolitan district the new vaudeville theatres to be operated under the expansion plans are the Beacon Theatre, Myrtle and Wyckoff Avenues; the Chester Theatre at West Farms and Boston Road; the Kenmore at Church Avenue and Kenmore Place; the Putnam at Richmond Hill; the Bristol in Brooklyn; the Marlboro at 207th street and Broadway, and the Concord at King's Highway and Ocean Avenue.

Proctor's new theatre at Schenectady and one at New Rochelle are also added to this list, which will play Keith-Albee vaudeville and feature pictures, as will the new F. F. Proctor East Eighty-Sixth Street Theatre.

Among other houses added to the Keith-Albee circuits are the Fountain Square at Cincinnati, another at Huntington, West Virginia; the Keith-Albee at Rochester, the Keith-Albee at Flushing, L. I., and the unnamed Keith-Albee Theatre at White Plains.

The Orpheum circuit will open new first class theatres in Seattle, Vancouver, Omaha, Memphis, Springfield, Ill., Madison, Davenport and will take over a number of others already operating.

British Film Production a Real Factor Soon

"BRITISH production will be a world factor to be contended with from now on," is the opinion of Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, general manager of foreign distribution of United Artists Corporation, who returned last Friday, July 8, on the Aquitania after several months of travel in Europe on business for his corporation. Mr. Kelly said that he found a condition of greatest importance in Great Britain and great activity in Germany over production and exhibition interests with considerable theatre construction going on in the latter country. In other countries on the continent the theatre situation remains comparatively stationary and colorless.

The opinion was expressed by Mr. Kelly that the British industry is in deadly earnest in its ambition to produce films eligible to compete anywhere. There is no lack of capital available to realize the ambition and, moreover, that capital is being supplied and organized as well. According to the United Artists executive it is a foregone conclusion that the British quota measure, the Cinematographic Bill, will go through and will naturally stimulate through the empire the production and exhibition of British films.

Names News Reel Staff

Hatrick Announces Executives Who Will Have Charge of New M-G-M News

EDITORIAL executives for the new M-G-M News have been appointed by Edgar B. Hatrick, in charge of the motion picture interests of William Randolph Hearst. The M-G-M News makes its first appearance August 15th.

Michael D. Clofine has been named by Hatrick as Editor-in-Chief, with Claude R. Collins, News Editor; Herman G. Stockhoff, Associate News Editor, and Leonard Mitchell, Film Editor. These executives have been perfecting their organization for the past two months, and it is now ready to start actual functioning.

Michael D. Clofine

The new news reel will be produced by Hearst News Service, Inc., a subsidiary to the world-wide Hearst news and picture gathering organization. It will be distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Mr. Clofine, who has been named Editor-in-Chief, is entirely familiar with the duties that go with the assignment. For several years he was editor of International Newsreel. He is a newspaper man of ability, having served on many papers in different parts of the country. He joined the Hearst organization as a member of the staff of the New York Evening Journal.

Mr. Collins was former night editor of the Philadelphia Press, and afterwards was associated with the New York Evening Journal, Universal Service and other Hearst enterprises.

Mr. Stockhoff has been connected with the Hearst organization for more than 20 years, while Mr. Mitchill was formerly well known in the New York newspaper field. The latter in recent years has been prominent in the motion picture industry. He was also with the United States Shipping Board, developing its motion picture travel departments in this country and Europe.

In launching M-G-M News Mr. Hatrick said it would be entirely separate and distinct from International Newsreel, and that the spirit of competition between them would be as keen as between any other newsreels.

First Nat. Schedules Four Films for August Release

Four productions are scheduled by First National for release during August. They are "The Poor Nut," "The Stolen Bride," "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," and Harry Langdon's new comedy, for which no title has been supplied as yet. "The Poor Nut" is Jess Smith's version of the play, with Jack Mulhall, Charlie Murray, Jean Arthur and Jane Winton in the leading rôles, will be released on August 7th.

On August 14th, Billie Dove's first stellar vehicle, "The Stolen Bride," written by Carey Wilson, also its producer, will be generally released. The August 21st release is the new Milton Sills production, "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," produced by Wid Gunning. The Langdon comedy will be generally released on August 28th. Gladys McConnell is Langdon's leading woman.

Santell Again Chosen to Direct Barthelmess Film

Alfred Santell will again direct Richard Barthelmess after the star has completed "The Drop Kick." Santell directed "The Patent Leather Kid." He will also direct "The Noose" and "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," in which Barthelmess will subsequently be starred. Ray Rockett will produce both pictures.

"She's a Sheik," New Daniels' Starring Vehicle

"She's a Sheik," an original story by John McDermott, has been selected as Bebe Daniels' next starring piece, following "Swim, Girl, Swim." The continuity for "She's a Sheik" is now being written by Lloyd Corrigan. Clarence Badger will direct the story.

Why TIFFANY Will Give "THE BETTER ENTERTAINMENT"

TIFFANY the youngest but the most progressive National Organization in the business.

New methods made Tiffany what it is.

According to old prescribed methods a company would present you with a hundred page Year Book in many colors—it would at least spend the cost of a good negative and then cheapen production in order to make up the cost

According to old prescribed methods a company would enumerate and promise a long list of stars and by the time the pictures were delivered you might find five percent of stars promised appearing in the picture.

According to old prescribed methods a company would make the same empty promises regarding authors, stories, cost of production, directors and numerous other things—which promises would invariably not be kept.

And it is natural that the company making such promises would have to accept one of two evils—namely, either adhere as close to the promises as possible, which would result in poor pictures because the casts, the directors and authors may not fit eventually—or, as stated above, all promises would have to be broken in order to try and make some good pictures.

In order to make the progress that Tiffany has made and the greater progress it intends to and will make, Tiffany has pursued a more progressive, more efficient—a modern policy—of making no promises unless they can be kept, and making very few of those. The results of this policy speak for themselves, and to further establish the confidence of exhibitors and public, Tiffany will continue with that policy and will confine itself to facts—not imagination——to proof—not promises.

J. H. Hoffberg

THIRD DIMENSION PICTURES

Controlled by TIFFANY

ONE of the most interesting phases of the Third Dimension Pictures controlled by Tiffany is the fact that there will be no installation costs or expenditures to speak of.

The projection machines now being used no matter what the make, will not need any remodelling or replacing.

The screens, large or small, have no bearing on the effectiveness of this new method of production and projection of photoplays.

The size or age of the theatre will have no bearing on it. In other words no matter how small the theatre or how long ago it was built, the projection of the Third Dimension Pictures will be just as effective in small ancient theatres as it will be in the most modern or palatial.

The lighting effects have no bearing on this new method of photography and production. Whatever the theatre employs for the showing of the present day pictures, will suit just as well this modern evolution in the motion picture industry.

No stage is required.

Wherever there is a projection machine and a screen, the Third Dimension Pictures can be shown.

The patents and processes employed, and other necessary things that are done to bring forth the effect upon the screen of DEPTH in photography, are done with the camera, the development of negative, and the printing of positive.

Everything is taken care of by the producer before the picture reaches the exchange or the exhibitor.

Tiffany contemplates making its first big special production in the Third Dimension Pictures.

Tiffany also contemplates the making of some short subjects with this process.

"The Grain of Dust"

The struggle of a human soul torn between sacred and profane love. Portrayed with the wisdom of a judge, the idealism of a Saint, the humanity of a sinner. Passionate, powerful masterpiece of the American Balzac—David Graham Phillips.

"Grass Widows"

In these divorcing days, you never know exactly who's whose. Everybody will enjoy a good-humored satire on the re-married set. A sparkling comedy, pepped up with just the proper dash of sex.

"LADIES OF THE NIGHT CLUB"

A broad comedy of Broadway, peppy as the latest slang intriguing as a hide-away cafe. Dramatizing the headlong pace of this dizzy age. Beauty and baldheads, youth and humor.

"Domestic Relations"

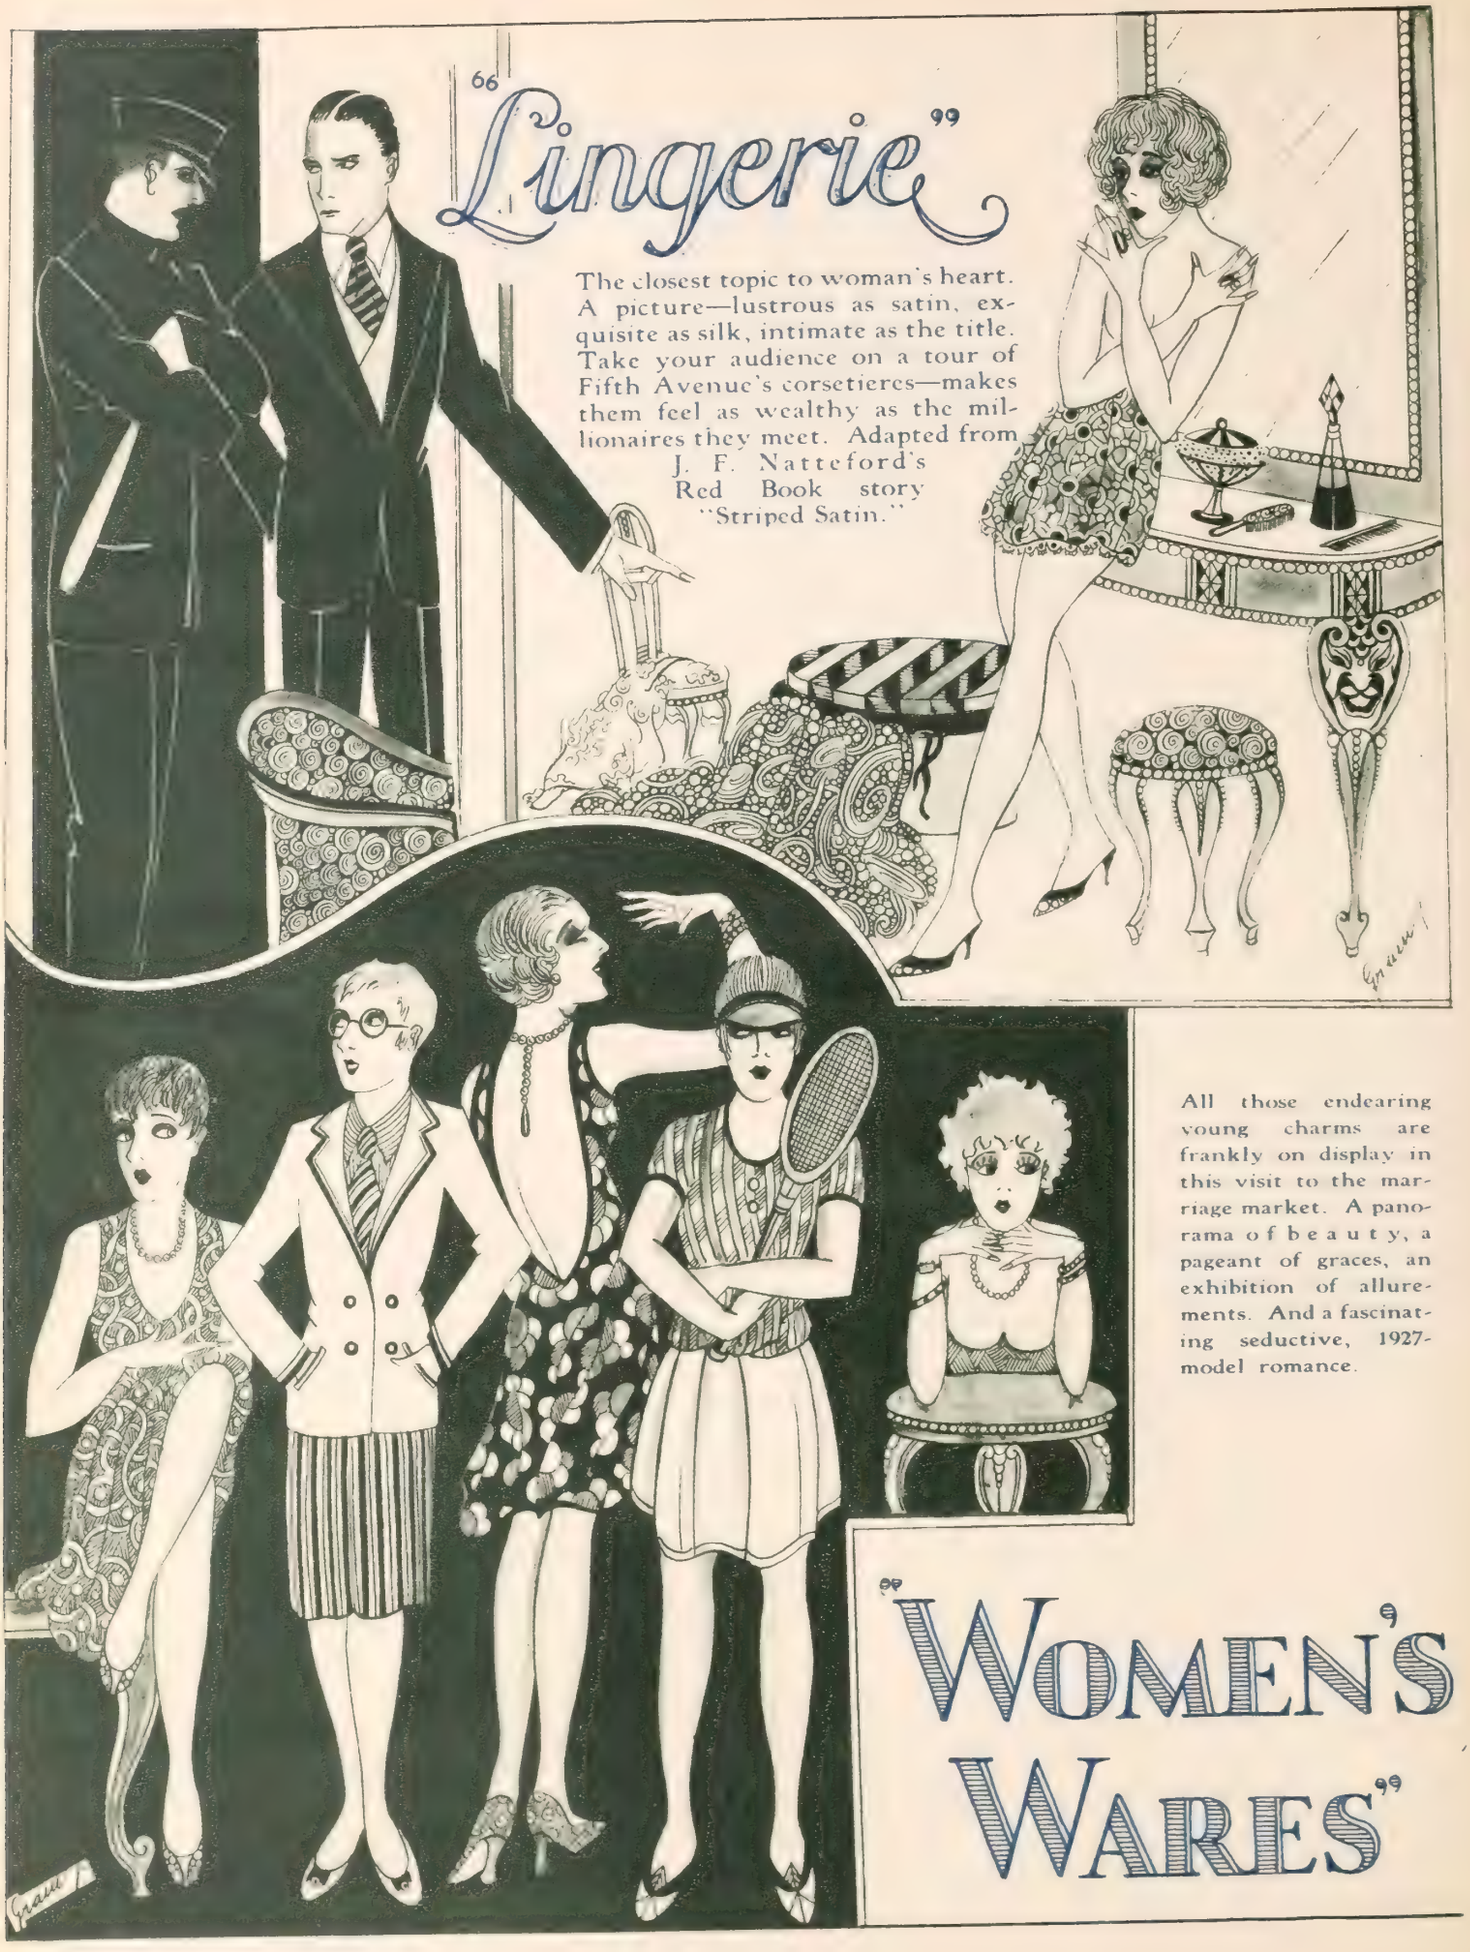
Drama true to the life of this land of quick, cheap and convenient divorce. The comedy of love, the tragedy of marriage. It hits HOME.

"Once and Forever"

Reaches every heart that has ever thrilled to romance. All the tenderness of a girl's love, all the strength of a boy's—woven into a Humoresque of laughter and tears.

"The Girl from Gay Paree"

She was the flattest tire in town—till she borrowed the wicked glamor of the city by the Seine. And then how she did balloon out socially; A hilarious comedy of appearances—a banquet of entertainment, with only the menu in French.



"Their Hour"

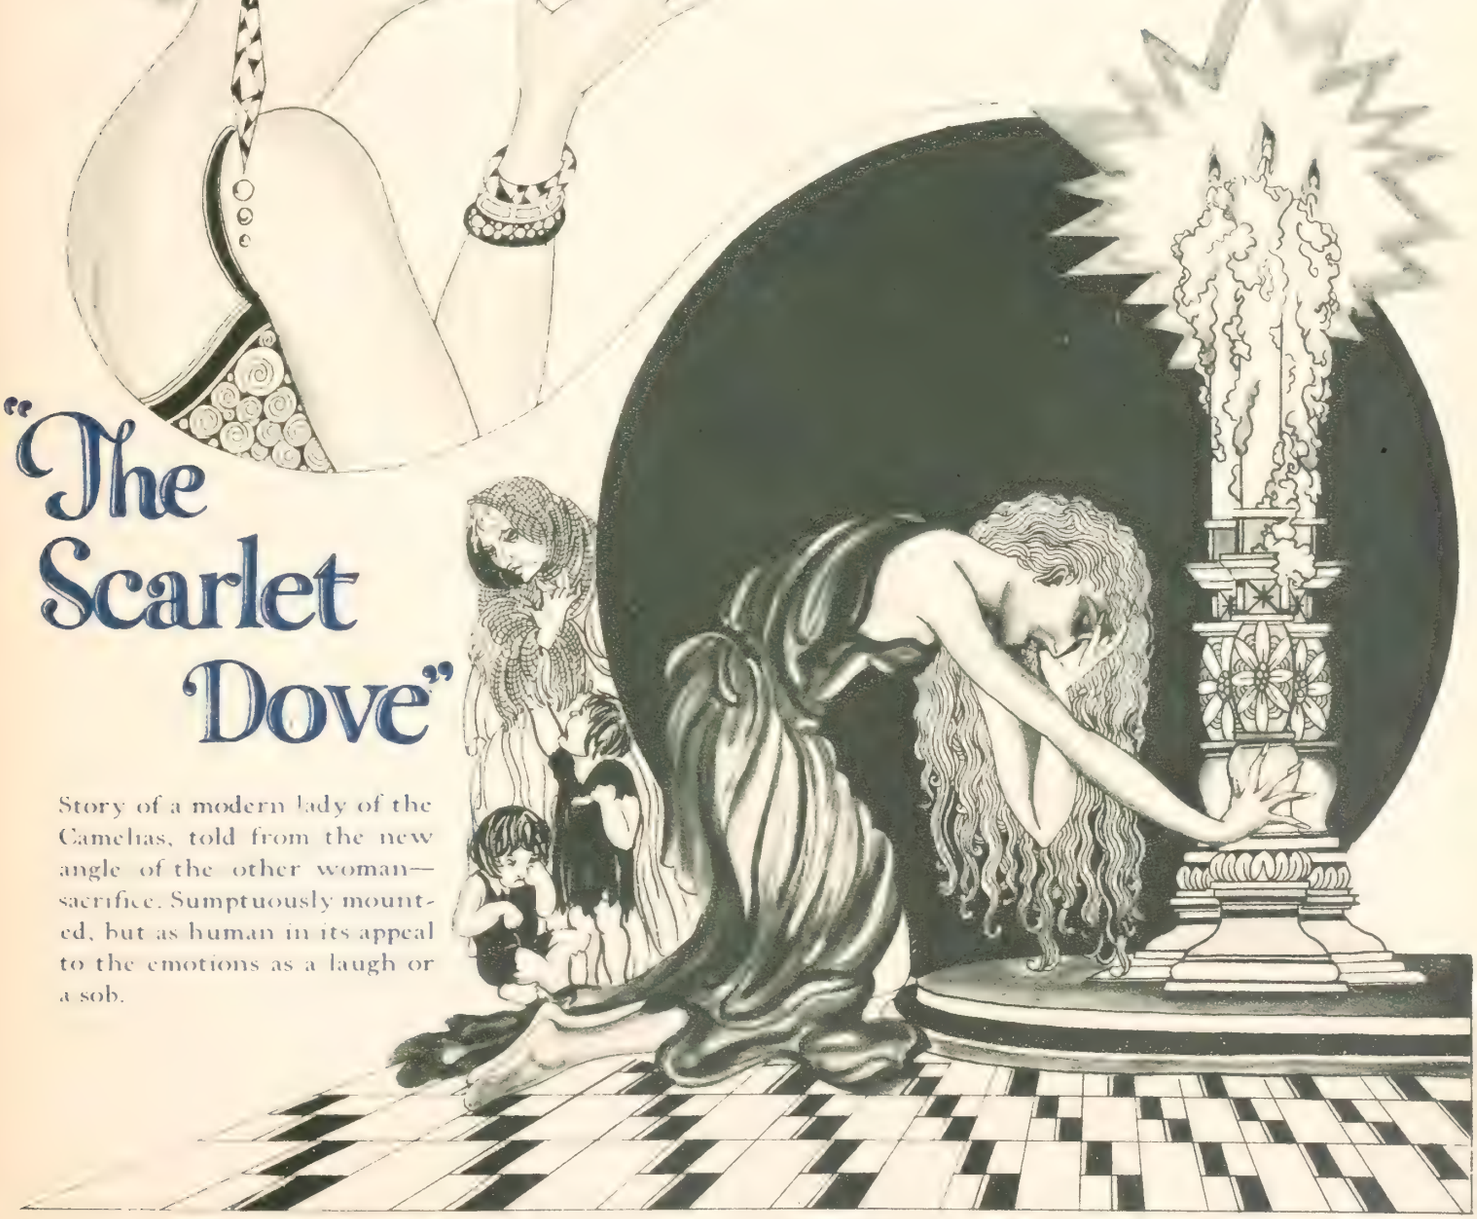
A new triangle—the man, the woman, and the clock. Dramatic story of love, temptation, passion—the things that move the hearts of audiences profoundly.

City of Asians and Caucasians—city of tourists and tramps, harlots and harpies, missionaries and madams, girls and gin

Background for a tale of the lotus blooming in the muck—the miracle of lust turned to love.

"STREETS OF SHANGHAI"

"Lingerie"
The closest topic to woman's heart. A picture—lustrous as satin, exquisite as silk, intimate as the title. Take your audience on a tour of Fifth Avenue's corsetieres—makes them feel as wealthy as the millionaires they meet. Adapted from J. F. Natteford's Red Book story "Striped Satin."
All those endearing young charms are frankly on display in this visit to the marriage market. A panorama of beauty, a pageant of graces, an exhibition of allurements. And a fascinating seductive, 1927-model romance.
"Women's Wares"



"A WOMAN of the WORLD"

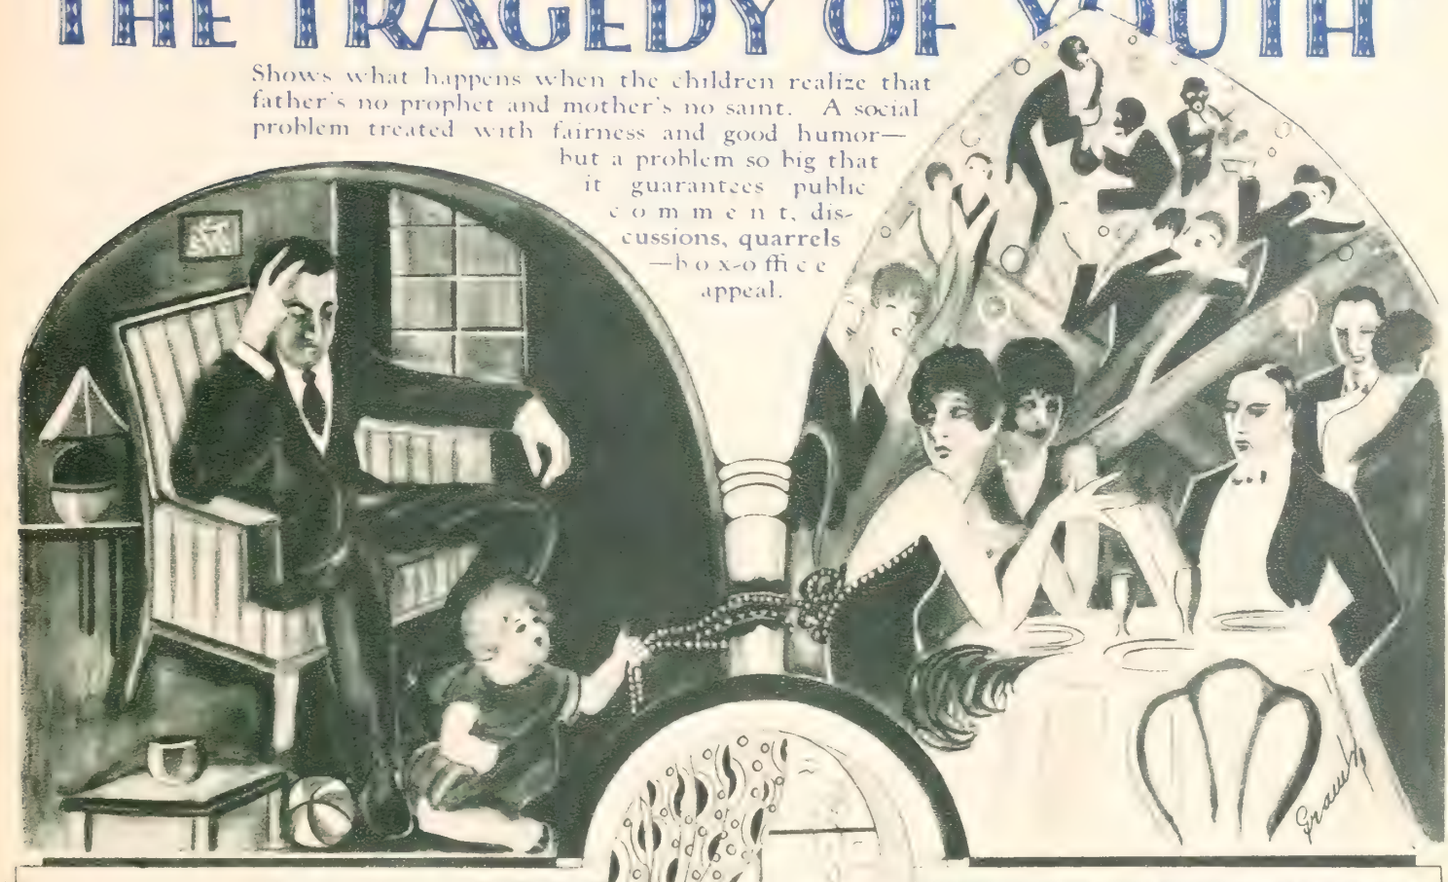
All the world her stage, she the player. Hers the part of an adventuress. But under the mask of rouge and powder she was just a loving, suffering, self-sacrificing woman. A dramatic gem of world-wide feminine appeal.

"The Scarlet Dove"

Story of a modern lady of the Camelias, told from the new angle of the other woman—sacrifice. Sumptuously mounted, but as human in its appeal to the emotions as a laugh or a sob.

"Tia Juana Rose"

A tale of the town of bangtails and cocktails, where the land of liberty ends and the land of license begins. Only thirty minutes from San Diego—but what a long and weary way back to decency and honor. The thrill of a hundred-to-one chance, the drama of a fighting come-back—the entertainment an audience loves.



BEAUTIFUL BUT DUMB

Hilarious situations in the life of a human with a vegetable brain. Her beauty always got her in, and her stupidity always let her out. They told her that beauty was only skin deep, but she thought that was deep enough—and in the end, was she right or wrong?

"THE TRAGEDY OF YOUTH"

Shows what happens when the children realize that father's no prophet and mother's no saint. A social problem treated with fairness and good humor—but a problem so big that it guarantees public comment, discussions, quarrels—box-office appeal.

"The HOUSE of SCANDAL"

Love with a background of spying eyes and lying tongues. Suspenseful situations that build and build until nobody knows whether the outcome will be marriage or murder.

"BACHELOR APARTMENTS"

What goes on behind the bachelor's door? This discreetly daring revelation answers what every woman wants to know. A Tiffany entertainment of gasps, chuckles, howls—and just enough drama to make it sure-fire.

"CLOTHES MAKE THE WOMAN"

This title has been famous for three generations. A luxury picture—An exotic, gorgeous pageant of fashion and passion.

"NIGHT LIFE"

A flashlight turned upon the city's darkness, with its joys and sorrows. Thrilling romance, glorious adventure, baffling mystery. All the clash and conflict that makes box-office power.

"The Albany Night Boat"

The mystery ship of forbidden romance. Are there any respectable people on board? Yes, the Captain has a license and a certificate. And some of the passengers are married. A swift comedy of this dizzy age—taking the searchlight off the shore and turning it on the staterooms for the first time

Several Special Productions Suitable for Extended Runs

You hear a lot said about Special and super-special productions. We are making them all the time but do not boast about them, nor do we use them as a whip to get blood out of a stone. Instead of that the Tiffany exhibitor buys the Specials at the average price and the more big productions he gets from us the better we like it.

What we mean by Special Productions are pictures suitable for extended runs and Tiffany will make those for the sole purpose of helping its customers —not robbing them. Tiffany will only use the specials for extended runs for a sufficient length of time to establish their Box Office value. They will not be run indefinitely to take off the cream and turn over the skimmed milk to the exhibitor as others have been doing.

24 TIFFANY COLOR CLASSICS

You will also notice that Tiffany will not give to the exhibitor the ordinary short reel subjects. The very fact that they are from Tiffany will make them entirely different from the average short reel features and a progressive step forward in such entertainment.

Harold Flavin, for eight years with Motion Picture News, who becomes trade paper publicity man for Paramount

Harold Flavin, of News, Joins Paramount

Harold Flavin, for the past eight years connected with The Motion Picture News, and a leading member of the editorial staff, this week assumed his new duties in charge of trade paper publicity for Paramount Famous-Lasky, under the direction of Charles E. McCarthy, publicity director.

Mr. Flavin is somewhat unique among the figures in New York's film colony in that he was born in New York City. He was educated at the Cathedral School in New York and at Fordham. Upon leaving school he became connected with one of the largest silk firms in the country, from which he came to The News.

Beginning with The News in a minor capacity, his initiative and industry won for him an important place on the editorial staff, re-write and make-up coming largely under his supervision. He leaves with the friendliest of feelings on both sides, and with the good wishes of his associates.

He is succeeded on The News by Chester J. Smith, formerly a member of the staff.

Harry Lachman Trying His Hand at Directing Films

Harry B. Lachman, an American artist and friend of Rex Ingram, who has been in France for several years, has forsaken his easel to try his ability as a motion picture director. He is now making a picture—written, directed, financed and, in some cases, photographed by himself. Inside of one month he expects to have two productions finished—one of the Riviera and the other of Africa. Mr. Lachman's films will be of the comic travelogue type and will be called "Travelaughs."

Two years ago Mr. Lachman delivered himself of the opinion that painting was a dead art, and that the motion picture was its logical successor. He has worked himself up from still photographer to general production manager of the Rex Ingram Cine Studio at Nice. Among Mr. Lachman's company are several French artistes, three English university men and Madeline Guitty, a French comedienne.

Hurrah For "Painting the Town"!

ONCE upon a time a young man named Fairbanks, of whom most picture fans had never heard, made some pictures that bothered not at all with theme, expensive sets, art, or big moments. These stories just breezed along to the eternal prestige and fame of the actor and the general satisfaction of the public, the exhibitor and the producer.

"His Picture in the Papers" was one and "Manhattan Madness" another, that ten years of seeing countless other productions has failed to erase from memory.

All of which is just a preface to enthusiastic approval of "Painting the Town" which Universal has just brought to town without blare of trumpets or loud shoutings about "another knockout."

"Painting the Town" is just as good a picture story as "His Picture in the Papers" and the featured player Glenn Tryon has just as much prospect of jumping into overnight popularity as did Doug. Here we have the kind of a picture that the writer is old-fashioned enough to believe is the main objective of the photoplay—to provide entertainmnt for the whole family, sending them home with a smile, feeling that the evening has been well spent.

Universal has placed star and director of "Painting the Town" under long-term contract which is good business but just signing contracts does not insure more picture as good as "Painting the Town," if history in the motion picture industry is to be accepted as a criterion.

The big job will be to keep actor and director on this very much right track. Hollywood atmosphere and a big success have done regrettable things to other Hollywood heads. Mr. Fairbanks now goes in for brewery horses, with white wings floating like a stork over fleecy clouds, all in the name of art and probably to him "His Picture in the Papers" is but a dim, dark memory to be regarded as a youthful indiscretion. Let us hope that Mr. Tryon and Mr. Craft profit by the success they are bound to achieve in "Painting the Town" to the extent of making more pictures just as good. A lot of people will have a good time in both the near and distant future if they do and trade paper people will have something to laugh with and not at.

Dan Michalove Tours Chain

Universal Theatres Executive on Extensive Tour Throughout Country

DAN MICHALOVE, who in March was appointed by Carl Laemmle as General Manager of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., left recently on a tour of inspection of all of the Universal houses that will keep him in the field for the next month or so and that will probably bring about a number of changes in the chain.

Michalove's trip will take him as far west as California and along the coast to Seattle, where Universal has extensive holdings. His first stop was scheduled for Chicago, after which he was to confer in Milwaukee with Nate Blumberg, Wisconsin Division Manager for "U." The company is building theatres in Racine, Milwaukee, Kenosha, Sheboygan and other cities in the Wisconsin division.

In the three months that have elapsed since Michalove was appointed by Mr. Laemmle there has been effected a complete reorganization of control and operation throughout the "U" chain. The better consolidation of effort under Michalove has led to marked economies and more efficient individual management of all of the "U" theatres. While on the tour Michalove will complete plans for further re-equipment and remodelling of numerous houses and the extension of building plans in many places.

Among the first announcements made by Michalove on his tour is the re-opening of the State Theatre, State Street near 27th in Milwaukee. The house has been completely remodelled and many innovations were added for the safety and comfort of its patrons. The State is now regarded as one of the most up-to-date and comfortable houses in Milwaukee.

Universal is contemplating extension plans in the Southern Division and in the Mid-Western Division. Willard C. Patterson, Southern Division Manager, and Charles Branham, Mid-Western Division Manager were in New York last week discussing these plans with home office officials.

Will Erect $250,000 House in Lake Forest, Ill.

Vincent Quarta has had plans made for a new eight hundred and fifty seat theatre he intends erecting at the northwest corner of Westminster Avenue and Bank Lane, Lake Forest, Ill. Besides the theatre, the plans call for several shops and apartments, the cost of the project being estimated at $250,000. Elmer F. Behrns is the architect. It is understood that Polka Brothers have obtained the lease on this theatre.

Equity Looms in Clash Over Salaries

Eight Hour Day is Among Proposals Offered; Writers Propose Organization

EQUITY looms large as a result of the proposed salary slash suggested by some of the leading producers for stars, directors, writers and others. As a result of all of the controversy it seems assured that the motion picture branch of equity will gain many new members and that organization will be perfected to protect those who would be most affected by the reduction in salaries.

In Hollywood they are discussing a proposed new basic arrangement between Equity and the producers. One secret meeting has already been held and others are being arranged. If an amicable agreement cannot be reached between the producers, actors and others who would be affected, Equity stands ready to arbitrate, according to Frank Gilmore, executive secretary of Equity, who is in charge of the organization work in Hollywood.

These negotiations provide for protection only to Equity members. It is stipulated that members of Equity are to appear in the same casts, that work be confined to eight hours a day, that salaries start on date stipulated in contract and an agreement on amounts to be spent on costumes and arbitration of grievances.

The secret meeting brought out 700 players who voted to joint the motion picture branch of Equity and to demand an eight hour work day. The agreement reached by those in attendance is said to outline powers given to both producers and actors. Equity players would not be allowed to work on pictures if non-members are employed.

Conrad Nagel presided at this secret meeting, while on the speakers' platform were Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery, Charles Ray, Thomas Meighan, Bert Lytell and others.

The Screen Writers Guild of the Authors' League of America, at a meeting held the night of June 28th passed a resolution requesting its members not to accept or acquiesce in reductions of salaries or compensation under existing contracts. It also pledged its cooperation in every possible way with the organized directors, actors and technicians to prevent the threatened invasion of rights and threatened evasion of obligations by the organized producers. The resolution charged the excessive cost of motion picture production to executive mismanagement rather than to high salaries paid directors, actors, technicians and writers.

"U" Advances "Deacon"

Dates Also Shifted on Five Other Jewel Productions for New Season Starting in September

"ALIAS THE DEACON," the Universal Jewel, starring Jean Hersholt, will be among the first group of Universal pictures to be released during the coming fall. The company announces the advance of the release date from July 22, 1928 to October 23, 1927. The comedy drama was adapted from the Broadway play of John B. Hymer and was directed by Edward Sloman. Universal also announces five other shifts in the early fall releasing schedule. The rearranged Jewel program for September and October follows:

"Back to God's Country," to be released on September 4. In this picture Renee Adoree is the starred player and Robert Frazer and Walter Long appear in supporting roles. Irvin Willat directed the story, an adaptation of a James Oliver Curwood novel.

"The Lone Eagle," to be released on September 18. War-time aviation is the theme of the story and Raymond Keane and Barbara Kent are featured. Emory Johnson directed and Lieut. Howard Blanchard wrote the tale.

"Painted Ponies," to be released on September 25. This Western, a new Hoot Gibson production, has Ethlyne Clair as the chief feminine player and Slim Summerville in a comedy role. Reaves Eason directed from a story by John H. Hamlin.

"Silk Stockings," to be released on October 2. Laura La Plante is the star in this comedy drama directed by Cyril Harcourt. In the cast are John Harron, William Austin, Otis Harlan and Burr McIntosh.

"Cheating Cheaters," to be released on October 9. Betty Compson and Kenneth Harlan are featured in this one, which is an adaptation of a stage success by Max Marcin. Edward Laemmle directed.

M. H. Karper Signs Mme. Wagner for Screen Work

Mme. Amelia Wagner, opera and concert singer, has been placed under a long-term contract my M. H. Karper, motion picture press and personal representative, who will henceforth guide both her operatic career and screen work. Following a concert tour which Karper has arranged for her, the vocalist will enter upon her screen work via the Lange-Joy Films, which company is now producing a series of comedies starring Al Joy for release through Cranfield and Clarke. Mme Wagner is a direct descendant of Richard Wagner, and has appeared all over the world in practically all of the Wagner music dramas.

In and Out of Town

WILLIAM LE BARON, vice-president of F B O Pictures Corporation, in charge of production, arrived in New York last Monday, July 11th, for a ten day conference with Joseph P. Kennedy, president of the company.

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., left or California on Friday, July 8th, on his usual mission of co-operating with the various Tiffany production units.

GENERAL SALES MANAGER ED. J. SMITH, of Tiffany Productions, Inc., left on Friday last for a trip to the Mid-Western Tiffany exchanges for conferences with the various exchange managers to outline the intensive sales campaign to be inaugurated immediately.

WILLIAM M. VOGEL, general manager of Producers International Corporation, Foreign Distributors of DeMille Pictures, sailed on the S. S. Leviathan, Saturday, July 2.

AL JOY, comedy star for Cranfield and Clarke, arrived in New York recently via automobile from Hollywood.

NED E. DEPINET, general sales manager of First National Pictures, returned last Thursday, July 14th, from a week's selling trip in Chicago and other of the company's Middle Western exchanges. Stanley W. Hatch, Western sales manager, who joined him the first of the week, is also back at his desk.

EUGENE J. COUR, Pathe News editorial representative in Chicago, is spending a few days at the headquarters office at New York in conference with Editor Ray Hall.

THREE Universal executives have just left New York for the West Coast. They are Beno Rubel, personal representative of Carl Laemmle; Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager, and H. M. Herbel, Western sales director.

A. J. MOELLER, president of American Cinema Association, departed this week for the Coast where he will supervise activities attending the inauguration of the new season's ACA product. H. S. Manus, vice-president, will be at the helm in the New York offices.

"Home Made" Substituted as J. Hines' New Comedy

"Home Made," a story by C. B. Carrington, a humorous writer, is the selection of C. C. Burr as the comedy that will follow "White Pants Willie" on Johnny Hines' present schedule of feature length comedies for First National. The Carrington story is substituted for "A Pair of Sixes," with which it had been originally intended to follow up the comedian's latest release, but the change in stories was made because of the absence from Hollywood of players that Mr. Burr had in mind for featured rôles, and because of the fact that "Home Made" calls for a large number of outdoor scenes, while "A Pair of Sixes" means an abundance of interiors. Mr. Burr believes that the prevalent fine weather conditions would make "Home Made" a simpler task to produce. The comedian, his scenario and gag staffs are now whipping "Home Made" into shape for screening immediately.

Sterling Pictures' Foreign Department Reorganized

Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation will hereafter operate in all foreign territories under a direct sales plan termed by Irving Briskin "extraordinarily successful," and calculated to eliminate the foreign brokerage system now in use in the case of practically every American independent producer. The head of the new Sterling foreign department has been announced by Henry Ginsberg, as Mr. Briskin and he will have his central office in New York. According to the foreign department head the following representatives for Sterling has been chosen and are now conducting their business in these key points:

Jean Vonderhyden, with offices in Paris, represents Sterling for France; A. Fried, with offices in London, represents Sterling in Ireland and Great Britain; the Helios Film Company, with offices in Berlin, represents Sterling in Germany, and the Belgian market is taken care of by Mr. Vanderhyden through his offices in Brussels.

Griffith Abandons Work "La Piava"

D. W. Griffith has postponed the production of "La Piava," announced as his first United Artists picture, in favor of "A Romance of Old Spain," founded on an old classic situation adapted by Jack Lloyd. Estelle Taylor, who was to have played in "La Piava," will be one of the featured stars in the Spanish story. Lionel Barrymore has been invited to play the duke in the production and Gilbert Roland has been mentioned as the male lead, but the latter's engagement for the role has not been confirmed by the director.

Bray '27-28 Output Has New McDougall Series

The 1927-28 schedule of Bray Productions, Inc., include a new series of the "McDougall Alley" two-reel comedies. These kid comedies are meeting with a favorable reception, a statement from Bray reads.

A series of two-reel comedies entitled "Skylark Comedies," and set for release during the forthcoming season, also holds an important place in the future line-up of Bray product. The series will be directed by Glenn Lambert, and will feature Andy Clyde, Bill Irving and Molly Malone.

Sunday Movies Score Victory in New Haven

MOTION picture entertainment on a Sunday has been legalized by the Board of Aldermen of New Haven, Connecticut, the measure being adapted 20 to 7, after a bitter struggle with the minority which exhausted every possibility to have the matter referred to the city in a referendum vote. The ordinance proclaims that the admission price of a motion picture house on a Sunday shall not be greater than that of evening week days.

Route of Publix Stage Acts Extended to Embrace Loew De Luxe Chain

ABOUT September 1 the stage presentation acts now routed by Publix Theatres in key cities throughout the country will be made to embrace the De Luxe Theatres operated by Loew's, Incorporated, a telegram from Sam Katz of Publix and E. A. Schiller of Loew's, Inc., announces. This step is considered a progressive move that makes for better entertainment both for the Publix and De Luxe audiences. A further effort to elaborate and concentrate on entertainments is made possible through the additional strength of the present De Luxe theatres and others in the course of construction.

The Publix and Loew production departments are now formulating plans for presentations during the fall. The addition of the Loew theatres on the Publix theatres embraces New York, Syracuse, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington, Baltimore, Providence, Boston, Indianapolis, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Omaha, Denver, Birmingham, Brooklyn, New Haven, Minneapolis, Toledo, Des Moines and Louisville.

Labor Troubles Threaten in Many Cities

Washington Musicians See k 27 per cent Raise; Other Revisions Urged

LABOR troubles, as usual at this time of the year, appear in the immediate offing from all directions. Some of them threaten serious complications, while others will doubtless be compromised or settled in some other manner.

Musicians in Washington are reported to be seeking an increase of 27 per cent in the scale. They ask a raise from $67 to $85 weekly. Theatre managers declare these demands all out of proportion and are preparing to offer united resistance.

Musicians in Kansas City are also demanding an increase in the face of poor business. They also ask a cutting down in playing time. Minneapolis and St. Paul are asking employees to bear with them because of a falling off in business. Musicians are asked to revert to the 1925 scale, a reduction of about 5 per cent. A similar reduction is asked of stage hands, while operators are asked to take a 10 per cent cut. All crafts are requested to make a nine months' contract instead of the one and two year agreements heretofore demanded.

The Denver Theatre Managers Association has notified the State Industrial Commission that it wishes to reduce the salaries of all union musicians 25 per cent. The notice to the Industrial Commission advised that notice had also been given to the Denver Musical Protective Association together with a notice that the managers are now ready to start negotiations for a new contract. The old contract expires September 1st. No mention has thus far been made concerning any contract changes with the Operators Union.

Lionel H. Keene, southern division manager of the Loew circuit, was expected to reach Memphis last Saturday from New York for an important conference looking toward arbitration of the differences that precipitated a walkout of projectionists at Loew's Palace and Majestic theatres last week.

Unless present differences reach amicable settlement, it is said that musicians and stage employees will join with motion picture machine operators and stage a walkout throughout the entire Loew circuit.

Loew's Palace and Majestic theatres of the Marcus Loew chain at Memphis are reported operating with non-union projectionists following a walkout at 1 o'clock Wednesday when the houses opened. The theatres were closed from 1 to 7 p.m.

The annual threat of a strike among Washington theatre musicians looms as a result of demands submitted to the theatre managers by the Musicians Protective Union for an increase in salary from $67 to $85 a week and a 20 per cent increase in the size of orchestras. However, as usual, it is expected a strike will be averted at get-together meetings between union officials and A. Julian Brylawski of the Motion Picture Theatre Managers Association and Roland S. Robbins, president of the Theatre Managers Association. The present agreement expires September 1.

Bell to Direct Gilbert in "Fires of Youth"

Monta Bell, who years ago directed John Gilbert in "The Snob," is to direct that star's next production, "Fires of Youth," which will be based on an original story by Bell with a metropolitan background. Production is scheduled to get under way just as soon as Gilbert has finished his rôle opposite Greta Garbo in "Love." Bell has but recently completed the direction of "After Midnight," a Norma Shearer vehicle.

Ben Lyon in Europe on Vacation

Thomson's First for Paramount Starts Soon

Within a few days the cast will be complete for Fred Thomson's first Paramount picture, "Jesse James." Production is scheduled to begin July 11 and exteriors will be made at Bridgeport, Cal., about 185 miles Northwest of Los Angeles in the Sierras.

Harry Woods has been signed to play the role of Bob Ford, Jesse James's cousin. William Courtwright will be cast Old Bill, another associate of the James brothers.

"The Thirteenth Juror" New Title for "U" Film

"The Thirteenth Juror" has been chosen as the title of a Universal crook drama which Edward Laemmle is now producing at Universal City from Henry Irving Dodge's story "The Counsel for the Defense." This picture has had the working title of "Honor and the Woman."

Francis X. Bushman, Anna Q. Nilsson, George Siegmann and Walter Pidgeon have the leading roles.

Camera Work Finished on "Uncle Tom"

A TWO million dollar picture that took six months of preparation and eighteen months of actual filming was finally finished early this week when the message: "Finished Forty Seven Nine," was wired from the Universal City plant to the home office in New York. Although the task of filming has been completed many weeks of cutting, editing and titling still remain to be done by Director Harry Pollard and his corps of assistants.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is remarkable in many ways, not only in its huge cast of 109 principals, but in the many locations that it embraces. Location trips were taken to Plattsburgh, N. Y., Franklin, Pa., New York City, Memphis, Tenn., along the Mississippi, and numerous points in New Orleans and thereabouts. Besides these trips several hundred thousand dollars were spent on sets at Universal City, where an entire Southern plantation was constructed. The cost of the picture runs up to the $2,000,000 mark. More than 600,000 feet of film have been exposed; the final picture will be about 12,000 feet. The picture will have its world premiere at the Central, in New York, around September 1.

Tiffany Begins Sales Contest on Nat'l Scale

THE inauguration of a national sales contest, open to all Tiffany fieldmen, branch manager, salesmen and bookers of the various exchanges, is announced by General Sales Manager Ed. J. Smith of Tiffany Productions.

The exchanges declared the winners will divide a certain percentage of the prize money among the branch manager, salesmen and other employees of the exchange. There will also be three separate prizes for bookers. The winners will be decided by the gross they obtain above their quota for their territory on the 1926-27 pictures in addition to the greatest amount obtained on the 1927-28 product.

The particulars of the Tiffany sales contest were outlined in a two-page spread that ran in "The Sparkler," the Tiffany house organ. The contest extends from July 5 to October 1, 1927.

"The Kid Sister" Columbia First Release for July

Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures, announces that the company's first release for July will be "The Kid Sister," adapted by Dorothy Howell from "The Lost House."

Marguerite de la Motte plays the chorine and following cast of principals supports her in the Columbia production: Malcolm McGregor, Ann Christie, Brooks Benedict, Barrett Greenwood, and Sally Long.

Nora Lane Leading Woman in Tom Tyler Western

Robert De Lacy, who is to direct Tom Tyler in "The Flying U Ranch," has succeeded in securing Nora Lane to play opposite Tyler in this production.

To do this it has been necessary for him to arrange his production schedule so that Miss Lane can complete her work opposite Mr. Tyler in time to start opposite Fred Thomson in his first Paramount picture, "Jesse James," about the middle of July.

Param't Changes Release Date of Aviation Cartoon

August 13 is the new release date attached to "Aero Nuts," advanced by Paramount from October 8 because of the timliness of its subject. In the story Krazy Kat takes an aeroplane flight from New York to Paris. "Tired Wheels," another of the Krazy Kat cartoons, will fill in the place left vacant in the releasing schedule.

"For Ladies Only," Columbia July Release

The second release to come from Columbia Pictures during the present month is "For Ladies Only," a comedy of American business life in which Jasqueline Logan and John Bowers are featured. Edna Marion, Ben Hall and William Strauss are also members of the cast.

Rogers Reel Heads Pathe Week of July 24 Program

Another of the Will Rogers travelesques, "With Will Rogers in London," heads the Pathe program of short subjects for the week of July 24. Besides this single-reel other entertainment on the schedule includes "Subway Sally," an Aesop Film Fable; "Checkmate," the title of the sixth chapter of the serial, "The Crimson Flash"; "Taking Punishment," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; Pathe Review, No. 30; Topics of the Day, No. 30, and Nos. 62 and 63 of the Pathe News.

Incorporated in the current Pathe Review are three topics: "The Last Word in First Aid," "Just a Love Nest" (Pathecolor), and "The Call of the Clouds."

"Stranded," Sterling Film, an August 15 Release

"Stranded," the Anita Loos story now being filmed by Sterling Pictures as the first release on its schedule for the new season, has been definitely set for August 15 release. Shirley Mason and William Collier, Jr., are the two stars of the picture and they are working under the direction of Phil Rosen. The supporting cast includes John Miljan, Lucy Beaumont, Cissy Fitzgerald and Shannon Day. The continuity and adaptation are by Frances Guihan, with I. D. Walenstein and Joe Rock in general production supervision.

Param't Announces Title of New Ralston Vehicle

"Heaven Help the Working Girl" is the title announced by Paramount for Esther Ralston's next starring picture. The story, a comedy-drama, is the work of B. F. Zeidman, who but recently joined the Paramount production staff as supervisor of Western screen dramas. Richard Arlen will play opposite Miss Ralston and Edward Sutherland will direct. Production is expected to start within a week.

"The Glory Girl," previously announced as Miss Ralston's next picture, has been postponed to a later date.

Joan Crawford to Appear in "Business Wives"

Joan Crawford will be the featured player in "Business Wives," the Cosmopolitan production to be filmed soon at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. The story, by Winifred Van Duzer, ran as a serial in the Cosmopolitan Mazazine, and will soon be syndicated by a number of newspapers. Marion Blackton and Llewellyn Totman are preparing the scennario. Miss Crawford recently completed the leading feminine rôle opposite John Gilbert in "Twelve Miles Out."

Title of Florence Vidor Starring Picture Changed

Florence Vidor's new vehicle for Paramount, still in production under the direction of Frank Tuttle, has had a change of title. It will be definitely known as "One Woman to Another," instead of "A Celebrated Woman," a temporary title.

F B O Studio Busy; Bob Steele in Hospital

F B O's production schedule underwent some quick changes during the past week. One reason was because of the humming activity at the company's studio and another reason was the unforeseen accident to Bob Steele, Western star, who was hurt in the fight scenes with J. Morley, a character actor, in his initial starring vehicle, "The Mojave Kid." As a result of the mishap, Steele is in the French hospital in Los Angeles for three weeks of confinement, encased in a plaster cast, while two cracked ribs and two fractured vertebrae are healing. Steele's next picture, "The Bandit's Son," has been postponed.

Another accident happened to Ralph Ince, who sprained his ankle while preparing for his new picture, "South Sea Love." Ince, therefore, will not be able to play in the South Sea picture.

The complete cast for "In a Moment of Temptation," which Phil Carle will direct, was announced this week. It includes Charlotte Stevens, Cornelius Keefe, Kit Guard, Tom Ricketts, Grant Withers, Marie Walkamp and John McKinnon. Initial scenes were made at the city jail, where a number of sequences in the story are laid.

Christies Filming Four Shorts for Paramount

The Christie forces making comedies for release by Paramount are vigorously engaged on new numbers for the short feature program. Three of the comedies have already been completed and four units are now working on Christie, Vernon, Dooley and Adams fun reels.

The finished comedies, all August releases, are "Short Socks," with Bobby Vernon; "Row, Sailor, Row," starring Billy Dooley, and "Doctor Quack," featuring Jimmie Adams.

Neal Burns is making progress on "French Fried," his first Christie for Paramount. Scenarist Frank Conklin wrote the story after returning from a honeymoon trip to Paris. With Burns are Daris Dawson, Sid Smith and Buddy, a canine actor. Arvid Gillstrom is the director. Bobby Vernon is engaged on "Crazy to Fly," a comedy of airplanes, which Harold Beaudine is directing from a story by Sig Herzig. In the support are Frances Lee, Sid Smith, Eddie Baker and Bud Ross.

"A Money Mariner" is the title of Billy Dooley's next comedy, now being filmed by William Watson. Appearing with the gob comedian in this comedy are Vera Stedman, Billy Engle and others. The story, by Hal K. Wells, has Dooley shot in a rocket up towards the moon. Ann Cornwall is being starred in a comedy of a haunted house, written by Hal Conklin. In the cast with her are Jack Duffy, Jimmie Harrison and Cissy Fitzgerald.

Forbes Opposite L. Gish in "The Enemy"

The rôle of leading man in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming screen version of the Channing Pollack play, "The Enemy," has been assigned to Ralph Forbes, who is scheduled to start his work in this Lillian Gish vehicle some time next week. Miss Gish has just finished her rôle in "The Wind," while Forbes is completing his in "The Trail of '98." Frank Currier is the second member of the supporting cast in "The Enemy," and will play the part of Miss Gish's father.

Principals Chosen for "The Shield of Honor"

Principal roles are now being assigned to Universal actors for "The Shield of Honor," the Emory Johnson production which is now going into work at Universal City. Ralph Lewis has been announced for the title role. Dorothy Gulliver will be the chief feminine support. Other players already selected for the cast are Nigel Barrie and William Bakewell. The entire Universal plant has been placed at the disposal of Mr. Johnson for the filming of this story by his mother, Emilie Johnson.

Dorothy Sebastian in "Tea for Three"

Dorothy Sebastian has joined the cast of "Tea for Three," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture in which Robert Z. Leonard is directing Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, the company's new comedy team, and Owen Moore, Phillipe Smalley and others. Miss Sebastian has just finished the feminine lead in Tim McCoy's new Latin-American starring vehicle.

"Pajamas" New Feature for Olive Borden

"Pajamas," an original story by Bill Conselman, a former New York newspaper cartoonist, is planned by Fox Films as a vehicle for Olive Borden; Counselman also contributed the scenario. In addition to the star the cast includes Lawrence Gray, Jerry Miley and John G. Clark. The film is to be made at Banff, where practically every picture dealing with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police has been filmed. Miss Borden has already worked around the Banff section, as she last season made Jasper National Park her headquarters while on location for "The Country Beyond." Production has already been started by Director J. G. Blystone. Glenn MacWilliams is doing the photography.

"The Jazz Carnival," staged as a presentation with First National's "The Tender Hour," at the Brooklyn Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y. This is one of the new type of band act presentations now offered by Managing Director Ed. Hyman at that theatre. The scene is based on the cabaret incident in the picture

Band Act Presentations at Brooklyn Strand

Musical Number Based on Scene from Film Introduced by Hyman on Bill Headed by "Tender Hour"

A NEW type of stage show, of the increasingly popular band act style now enjoying such vogue at the large picture theatres, has been instituted at the Brooklyn Mark Strand, Brooklyn, N. Y., under the managing directorship of Edward L. Hyman.

The new show was introduced with the presentation of "The Tender Hour" recently. On this program the film portion of the bill ran 1 hour and 22 minutes, of which time 1 hour and 15 minutes was given over to the feature picture. The topical review used up 7 minutes. The stage act ran 32 minutes and in addition there were other musical incidents which made up altogether 57 minutes for this end of the show.

Opening each of the deluxe performances was the Overture "1812" by Tschaikowsky and played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra under the direction of Willy Stahl. Eleven minutes were used for this overture, which was lighted as follows: amber and lemon spots across ceiling; blue borders full; red borders ¼; 2 lemon floods on orchestra from dome; bridge No. 1 orange on draw curtains and side; bridge No. 2 violet on draw curtains and side.

For incident number two, Fabiano, who plays a cello in the orchestra, stepped from his chair to the apron of the orchestra stage and played on the mandolin a medley of selections including "Zigeunerweisen, "Waters of the Minnetonka" and "Tea for Two." He was spotted from the dome by an amber light and all other lights were dimmed off. Fabiano was given 3 minutes.

The Vitaphone presentation was Marion Talley and Beniamino Gigli in a duet from Verdi's opera "Lucia De Lammermoor." This duet was 11 minutes and was preceded by the orchestra in a brief introduction from the opera, this introduction being played while the opening titles were run on the screen.

After the Topical Review came the big stage number called, "The Jazz Carnival," running 32 minutes. It opened up in special setting disclosing Art Landry and his Victor Recording Orchestra seated on the stage, in white and black clown costumes, backed up by a silvercloth cyclorama, upon which were hung red and blue balloons. Streamers of various colors were hung from the flies. A scrim was at the proscenium opening when the act started and this was raised at the chorus of the opening selection. Art Landry then as master of ceremonies introduced the various specialties, including "Dream of Love" by the orchestra and lighted by amber, red, lemon, pink, green, light blue side spots shooting through streamers; light blue borders; blue foots; bridges deep blue floods on scrim; dome deep blue floods on orchestra. On cue white borders, white bridges and dome. "Tootsie" was the next orchestra selection, followed by a waltz by Jules and Josie Walton, specialty dancers, who were covered from the dome by steel blue spots. After "Sam the Accordion Man" by the orchestra, the Waltons did another dance, then Walter Smith, baritone, sung a ballad, "When Day Is Done." All lights dimmed off, with the exception of a blue spot from dome on the singer. A violinist then played the same number, covered by the same spot from the dome. Harry Breuer, the xylophonist of the orchestra followed with a medley of popular songs. A steel blue spot also covered Breuer. For the finale by the entire company all stage lights off; bridges lemon floods on second and third choruses, bridges working in tempo with music, changing colors and finishing white.

Namesakes See "Callahans and Murphys" Free

The Capitol theatre in Steubenville, Ohio, observed a "Callahan" and a "Murphy" night during the run there of the screen feature "The Callahans and the Murphys." The stunt was cleverly handled by Manager James Slanicus of the Capitol and a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploiteer who assisted in the campaign.

Newspaper advertisements were the main feature in building up interest in "The Callahans and the Murphys." Two nights were put aside as Callahan and Murphy nights, respectively. The advertising on this idea was put over in a very effective manner. The ads were run in advance, two columns six inches in size. The copy read "Are You a Callahan? The Capitol theatre will present a laugh hit of Irish feuds and Irish love, 'The Callahans and the Murphys.' Next Thursday night, June 23, is Callahan night. If your name is Callahan fill out the blank, mail to the Capitol theatre, and receive a free ticket to see this joyfest." The following day another display ad was run, asking: "Are You a Murphy?" It called attention to the fact that Friday evening of the engagement was Murphy night.

Dance Contest Filmed for Theatre Showing

With 500 photographs of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars included among the prizes, approximately 4,000 couples competed for terpsichoran honors at the four-day "See Yourself in the Movies Ball" held recently at the Roseland Ballroom, San Francisco.

Striking a new note for public functions of this kind, the dancing was conducted under the powerful, brilliant glare of a battery of many Kleig lights while several reels of motion pictures were taken of the merrymakers in general and the winners of the various contests, which ranged from the old-fashioned waltz to the modern Black Bottom.

The novel idea of using Kleig lights and taking pictures of the dancers, utilized for the first time in San Francisco, attracted a record attendance, over 2,000 men and women crowding the ballroom each night during the ball. After exhibition at the ballroom, the film taken during the event was shown the following week at the Cameo.

Studio Briefs

Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production for Columbia Pictures, has assigned E. H. Griffith to handle the direction of "Alias the Lone Wolf," the third special on Columbia's 1927-28 schedule. This will mark Mr. Griffith's first assignment for the company since he was signed on a long-term contract to direct exclusively for Columbia. The company has already signed Bert Lytell, the original Lone Wolf portrayer, and Lois Wilson for the leading rôles.

Mary Pickford has engaged as comedy constructors for "My Best Girl," her new film, Timothy Whalen and Allen McNeill. The director of "My Best Girl" is Sam Taylor, who made four Harold Lloyd comedies. Miss Pickford herself is authority for the statement that the hilarity of "My Best Girl" will form sharp contrast with the pathos of "Sparrows," her last picture.

Columbia Pictures has "loaned" Dorothy Revier to First National for an important rôle in the college picture "The Drop Kick," starring Richard Barthelmess. After the completion of "The Drop Kick" Miss Revier will return to the Columbia Studios, where she is scheduled to appear in a special picture.

Edward Sutherland is to direct Esther Ralston's next starring vehicle for Paramount. This production, as yet untitled, has been substituted for "The Glory Girl," previously announced as Miss Ralston's next picture.

Following a brief rest, Lupino Lane is in the midst of production on a new two-reel comedy, the second in his series of eight starring vehicles for Educational for the 1927-28 season. The production will show Lane as a sort of comedy Daniel Boone. The story is laid in the hills of Kentucky during the frontier days.

Johnny Arthur has completed his first Educational-Tuxedo comedy on the new schedule which calls for six of these comedies, in which he will play the leading comedy rôle. Arthur plays the rôle of a cub reporter sent out to cover a jazz-murder trial. His encounters with beautiful vamp involved in the case form most of the humorous moments.

Paul Sloane, one of the most talented of the younger directors, has just signed a new contract which assures the DeMille Studio of his services for a long period. General Manager William Sistrom had the contract waiting for Mr. Sloane when he returned from his recent vacation in Honolulu. Sloane recently completed "Turkish Delight." No announcement has yet been made at the DeMille Studio as to his next production.

Two more important members were added this week to Columbia's "Sally In Our Alley," when Florence Turner and Paul Panzer were signed for important rôles in the tenement sequences of the new production. "Sally In Our Alley" is now nearing completion. Walter Lang is directing.

Hobart Henley has been re-signed to a longterm contract with M-G-M, and will be given one of the most important of the early season releases. Henley has made more than one hundred and fifty pictures, including features and one- and two-reelers.

Sonya Levien, scenarist of "Harp in Hock," now in production with Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coghlan in featured rôles, has signed a long-term contract with the DeMille Studio. Among the scenarios are "The Princess from Hoboken," the adaptation and script on "The Heart Thief," and "Harp in Hock."

Another stage comedy hit went into production last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sturios, when Director Robert Z. Leonard filmed the opening scenes of "Tea for Three," new co-starring vehicle for Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, and the second in a series of comedy features in which these two popular players will be paired. "Tea for Three" was adapted from Roi Cooper Megrue's play of the same name. Owen Moore, M-G-M stock player, has become the third side of the triangle in the new film.

Ivan Lebedeff, considered by D. W. Griffith as one of the most promising of the younger screen actors, has been signed up by the DeMille Studio, and will have an important rôle in "The Angel of Broadway," in which Leatrice Joy will star under the direction of Lois Weber.

Sally Rand, blonde screen luminary, has been signed to play the leading feminine rôle in "Galloping Fury," Hoot Gibson's forthcoming starring vehicle for Universal, it has just been announced. "Galloping Fury" will be a screen version of the story "The Tidy Toreador," by Peter B. Kyne, and is scheduled to be Gibson's most pretentious offering to date. Reaves Eason will direct. The support includes Duke Lee, Edward Coxen, Max Asher and "Pee Wee" Holmes.

Elise Bartlett and Clarence Burton have been added to the cast of "The Angel of Broadway," the Leatrice Joy starring picture which Lois Weber will direct for the DeMille Studio. Miss Bartlett in private life is Mrs. Joseph Schildkraut, and has just completed work in "Harp in Hock."

Addition of Gertrude Olmsted, Lars Hanson and Roy D'Arcy to the cast of "Buttons," Jackie Coogan's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, was a recent announcement from M-G-M. Miss Olmsted will have the feminine lead, with Hanson playing opposite her. George Hill will begin directing in a few days.

Doris Hill has been assigned the leading rôle in "Tell It To Sweeney," the first Chester Conklin-George Bancroft starring production for Paramount. Miss Hill was leading woman with Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole."

Mack Sennett has just completed a Pathe comedy with a vacation theme, entitled "Smith's Farm Days." The release features Mary Ann Jackson, Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee. Phil Whitman handled the megaphone. Harry Edwards is directing a "newlywed story," with a cast featuring Billy Bevan, Vernon Dent and Alma Bennett, with Irving Bacon, Andy Clyde and Bill Searby also in the line-up of fun-makers.

Helen Foster has been selected to play the lead opposite Jack Dougherty in the thrill star's new Universal chapter-play, "Haunted Island," which has just gone into production under the direction of Robert F. Hill. Other members of the cast selected thus far are Grace Cunard, John Prince, Al Ferguson, Myrtis Grinley and Scott Mattraw. Miss Foster is a discovery of William Lord Wright, head of the Western and Serial departments.

Victor Varconi, Austrian actor, has been selected as leading man for Leatrice Joy in "The Angel of Broadway," her first starring picture on the coming programme of DeMille Studio productions. "The Angel of Broadway" is from an original story by Lenore Coffee, and will be directed by Lois Weber.

That every cloud has a silver lining was proved last week when Gwen Lee was handed a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract, just as an ambulance called at her home to take her to the Hollywood Hospital following an acute attack of appendicitis. She will be operated on in a few days. Miss Lee has just completed an important part in Norma Shearer's new starring film, "After Midnight."

From playing an organ in a motion picture theatre to the position of actress in a picture is the step just taken by Jeanette Loff, who has been engaged to appear in DeMille Studio productions. Miss Loff, blonde and blue-eyed, is of Danish descent. She has spent most of her life in Saskatchewan. Recently she took a vacation and made a trip to Hollywood, where the lure of the camera caught her.

George Lewis, Universal star, has just begun work at Universal City in "The Four Flusher." This originally was bought for Reginald Denny, but that star's full schedule gave Universal the opportunity to use it for Lewis. Wesley Ruggles is the director. Marian Nixon is the feminine lead. Buss McIntosh and Eddie Phillips have rôles.

Glen Lambert, comedy director, has been signed by Bray Productions, Inc., to make the new Bray series of two-reelers, "Skylark Comedies." Lambert's work is known both by the larger and the smaller independent companies.

Key City Reports

New York City

BUSINESS was spotty last week on Broadway with some of the houses showing the best returns in some time and others nothing to brag about.

The Roxy and Paramount theatres were both well up in the money, though neither had a feature rated as a strong attraction, "Dearie" being the picture at the Roxy and "Fast and Furious" at the Paramount.

Attendance at the Roxy has now passed the 2,000,000 mark, having averaged more than 125,000 persons weekly since opening on March 11 of this year.

"The Way of All Flesh" is doing remarkable business at the Rialto, and last week was no exception.

"Camille" at the Rivoli, followings its surprisingly strong two-dollar run, is likewise making the box-office happy.

"Annie Laurie" proved disappointing at the Capitol, as it did at the Embassy.

After a splendid showing the previous week the Strand dropped back with "Naughty, But Nice."

"Big Parade," "King of Kings," "7th Heaven," "First Auto" and "Old San Francisco" doing nicely.

Los Angeles

AN attractive film line-up at the Los Angeles theatres this week has resulted in satisfactory attendance although the hot summer weather has set in.

John Barrymore, in "When a Man Loves," at the Forum is doing a fair week's business. The Criterion, showing Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh," reports satisfactory box office receipts.

"Mr. Wu," the first down-town showing of Lon Chaney's new picture at Loew's State, reports less than average attendance.

Pola Negri, in "Barbed Wire" at the Metropolitan, with the added attraction of Rube Wolf in the stage presentation "Blues," reports to have the best box-office receipts of all the theatres.

Monday night marked the one hundredth showing of "King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood. This picture is still attracting heavy attendance, as is "Seventh Heaven" at Carthay Circle.

"Convoy" at the Uptown, and "Chang" at the Million Dollar report only fair business. "Topsy and Eva" at Grauman's Egyptian is not coming up to expectations.

San Franciso

THE past week in San Francisco's down-town and residential houses was considered good, but receipts would have been much better had not the three best days been so abnormally hot, an unusual condition for San Francisco.

"Old Ironsides," playing at advanced prices at the Columbia Theatre, did not do so well the second week, as it was thought of by the populace as being too educational for this time of year. "The Rough Riders" drew crowds to the California Theatre, even on the hottest days.

"Barbed Wire" drew crowds to the Granada Theatre as Pola Negri always does in this city. The presentation act "Modern Women" did a great deal to help fill this theatre. "The Unknown," shown at Loew's Warfield Theatre, did fairly well, but Lon Chaney was not considered as good as usual. Walt Roesner's orchestra and stunts attracted many. "The Better 'Ole" attracted many to the St. Francis Theatre for a second week.

"Vanity" as shown at the Golden Gate Theatre, drew crowds, but the majority came to see Harry Carroll and his 1927 revue and "California Collegians." "Winners of The Wilderness" drew many to the Pantages Theatre, as did the "Siamese Twins" and other acts. "Money To Burn" and "Don't Fire" attracted many to the Union Square Theatre, as did the vaudeville acts. In fact this house did exceptionally well. "The Silver King" drew crowds to the Cameo Theatre.

"Private Izzy Murphy" did well at the residential house, The Majestic and "Three Hours" attracted many in the Richmond District to the Coliseum Theatre. Nat Holt's comedy at his residential house, the Wigwam, drew many thousands and they all enjoyed "A Man Four Square," shown there on the screen.

Chicago

AN ecouraging note was seen in Chicago motion picture theatre situation last week with attendance at many of the houses showing a better record for the period.

The Chicago, with a well-timed holiday week show, "Rookies," on the screen, Spitalny's patriotic stage spectacle, "Year of 1917," and the Publix "Sports Revue," did an excellent business. "Beau Geste" continued to pull well at McVicker's, and an excellent holiday week box office report was turned in by the Oriental, which had "The World at Her Feet" as its feature, Paul Ash and his Merry Gang in "Goofy Golfers" on the stage. At the Roosevelt, "Chang" was in its next to last week and again proved a strong attraction. Bennie Kreuger and his band in "Jazz Jingles" with Billie Glason, headed the bill at the Uptown, which had as its screen offering "Naughty, But Nice," and drew well. "Captain Salvation" and Verne Buck and his band on the stage were the features at the Sheridan, where business improved. The Granada shared in the better business of the week with "The Secret Studio" as its feature picture and Benny Meroff and his band on the stage in "Benny's Hi-Hatters."

On the south side the Tivoli did one of the best weeks in its history with Waring's Pennsylvanians and Roy Cropper on the stage and on the screen "Rough House Rosie." The Capitol offered "The Yankee Clipper" as its screen attraction, Vitaphone and Del Delbridge in a holiday stage production entitled, "Fireworks of Jazz," business being satisfactory.

The Marbro, with "The Secret Studio," plus Charles Kaley with his stage band and Laura Lee, musical comedy favorite, did well.

Cleveland

LOCAL business jumped way up last week at all of the first-run houses. Sunday and Monday (Fourth of July), they were all very quiet, but on Tuesday things took a decided turn and kept getting better every day until the final total for the week was considerably above its predecessors.

"Fatty" Arbuckle was the big drawing card at the State, which was filled to capacity at every performance. The picture, "Framed," was not up to the Milton Sills standard. "Annie Laurie" was enthusiastically received at the Stillman. A beautiful and exciting picture with universal appeal. It is being held a second week. "The Callahans and the Murphys" have settled down for a continued run at the Cameo,—that's how well folks like the picture. It goes into its third wek next Sunday. "Fast and Furious," claimed by local critics to be one of Denny's best pictures to date, and an unusually diverting picture, did exceptionally well at Keith's Palace. Lon Chaney's "The Unknown" played to big houses at the Allen. Chaney's personality, and not the picture which overflows with horrors, was responsible. "The Brute" was well liked by the large audiences at the Park, because it is a good western made over a new pattern. "Sensation Hunters," was well received by film fans at Keith's East 105th St. Theatre all week, and at Reade's Hippodrome half of the week. The Hippodrome also did well the last half of the week with "The Bachelor's Baby." Neighborhood houses reported that business looked up a bit last week. Two summer resident dramatic stock companies are cutting into the picture business. In previous summers Cleveland has had but one summer stock company. Business out in the territory is said to be poor.

Tampa

BUSINESS still continues good at the Tampa theatres, but fell short of the previous three weeks' records. The programs of the past week did not seem to have the "appeal," and only one picture brought receipts up to the very good class. "Is Zat So?" opened the week at the Tampa. The picture seemed to please, and the four days' business was good. "Naughty, But Nice" opened Thursday to capacity, and drew very good the following two days. This is the one picture of the week that registered strong at the box office. The star, Colleen Moore, a former Tampa girl, is a favorite with Tampa fans, and all her pictures do well.

The Strand had a good week, but not up to standard. Buster Keaton, in "The General," failed to prove the draw expected. The picture had plenty of big stuff, but the yells were few. The three days were just good. "Bitter Apples" and "The Kid Sister" both did good, and rounded out a satisfactory week for Peck's "cool and comfortable" Strand.

The Franklin maintained a satisfactory average with "The Circus Ace," "Taxi, Taxi," and "The Arizona Whirlwind."

Minneapolis

A WEEK of bright, cool weather brought good business to Minneapolis picture houses this week. The State reported a very good week with Colleen Moore in "Naughty But Nice," and Bebe Daniels in "Senorita" proved an excellent drawing card at the Strand. At the Lyric Zane Grey's "Drums of the Desert" with Warner Baxter drew in the crowds in a very satisfactory fashion.

Tom Mix's latest, "The Circus Ace," was well exploited at Pantages, and was responsible for a very good attendance. Buck Jones in "The War House" proved a popular attraction at the Seventh street, while "Pleasure Before Business" was the feature film at the Hennepin-Orpheum.

Nearly all the neighborhood houses reported good business for the week. Among the pictures shown were "Don Juan" at the Loring"; "Mr. Wu" at the Lagoon; "The Fire Brigade" at the Rialto and "Afraid to Love" at the Lyndale.

About the only competition for the week was the American association baseball games, with Minneapolis returning home for a long stand at the local park.

Philadelphia

"RESURRECTION," at the Stanley Theatre, played to exceptionally good business considering the fairly warm spell. Its attractiveness was enhanced by a prologue of 35 people known as Ouglitzky's Russian Vocal Ensemble and Vladimir Mikolaichik and the Stanley Ballet Corps.

The Fox had only a mediocre week with "Slaves of Beauty." Bob Nelson, a "Roxy" Silhouette, "On the Bowery," and Joe Thomas's Sax-o-tette were added attractions.

The Stanton opened an extended run of "Convoy" with fairly good results. The Arcadia, with "The Night Bride," with Marie Prevost, had only a fair week. May McAvoy, in "Matinee Ladies" at the Karlton, drew only fair patronage.

The Palace offered "Rough House Rosie," and box office receipts were all that could be expected. "Getting Gertie's Garter," featuring Marie Prevost, ran along to mediocre business at the Victoria. "Three Hours," at the Capitol, enjoyed good patronage.

Central Pennsylvania

A COMBINATION of fine weather—considerably cooler than usual for this time of year—the advantage of a holiday, and diversified types of attractions, made the week of July 4th a fairly satisfactory one for the downtown theatres in Harrisburg.

The Victoria offered a combination bill including the Paramount Juniors in "Rolled Stockings," and "Alaskan Adventures," a four-reeler with lots to recommend it, which jointly had a lot of pulling power.

Loew's Regent accomplished average box-office results with "Altars of Desire," with Mae Murray and Conway Tearle in the stellar roles. Tom Mix, who never fails to attract in Harrisburg, brought a lot of thrills to the Colonial in the Western, "Outlaws of Red River," which entertained good-sized mid-summer audiences, composed in large measure of masculine and juvenile Tom Mix fans.

A return to Harrisburg of the Harold Lloyd picture, "The Freshman," in the Russell Theatre, brought encouraging receipts, due probably to the success of this play in the same city when it appeared there originally some months ago. The successful operation of a new $60,000 ventilating system in the State Theatre, duly exploited in the newspaper advertisements, was in part responsible for good-sized audiences there where the film feature was "What Happened to Father?"

The Colonial was not the only theatre to offer a Tom Mix photoplay, for the New Rialto put on the Tom and Tony combination in "The Broncho Twister." The Capitol showed "Flaming Forest," and the Grand featured Fred Thomson in "The Circle."

Albany

THE motion picture theatres of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, were favored last week with an exceptionally good break in the weather and, as a result, at least one house, the Leland in Albany, was able to report the biggest Fourth of July in the history of the house. Other theatres reported business as being exceptionally goood. At the Leland, Ward Crane, the well known star, who is an Albany boy, made a personal appearance and jammed the theatre. "The Lady in Ermine" was featured at the Leland for the week, with Mr. Crane appearing in one of the leading roles. At the Mark Strand, good business was done with "The Whirlwind of Youth," and the usual Vitaphone presentations. Business was only fair at the Mark Ritz in Albany with "Drums of the Desert," which got off to a poor start due to a severe panning on the part of the newspaper critics. Residential houses in Albany reported business as being good throughout the week.

In Troy, "Naughty, But Nice," proved the best bet the Troy Theatre has had in the past four or five weeks, opening big and standing up well during the days that followed. "Dearie" played at the Troy theatre during the last three days of the week, and while it pleased those who saw it, the crowds were only normal. At the Lincoln, "Man Power" ran well. Probably the biggest drawing card of the week in Troy was "Monte Cristo," at Proctor's Fourth Street house. Weather continues to remain cool.

Detroit

TICKET purchasing ran from light to heavy in the downtown section. The houses in general failed to exceed last week's quota.

At the Michigan, however, "Rolled Stockings," featuring Louise Brooks, and Vincent Lopez with his orchestra, broke all records in this district. This theatre was jammed during every performance from morning until the closing hour.

The Madison listed Marie Dressler, Polly Moran and Sally O'Neil in "The Callahans and the Murphys." Business was good here.

Fair attendance viewed Dolores Costello in "The Heart of Maryland," a southern romance of Civil War times. The stage show helped slightly.

"Sunset Derby," with Mary Astor and William Collier, Jr., moved along at a normal pace in the State while the Adams' revival of "The Covered Wagon" attracted some interest.

Salt Lake City

MANY of those who had intended visiting the canyons and resorts over the Fourth last week, remained home due to the frequent and fickle thunder showers, and consequently the picture theatre business was exceptionally good and has remained very satisfactory throughout the week.

Pola Negri, in "Barbed Wire," was well received at the Paramount Empress. A special presentation act was also offered at this house.

A very good week was enjoyed at the Victory Theatre, where the feature offering was "Rolled Stockings." "The History of Our Flag," done in technicolor, was also shown here as an added attraction.

The American Theatre reports business to have been surprisingly good, especially during the fore part of the week. The double feature program, which proved to be a drawing card here, consisted of "Convoy," and also "Pals First," with Dolores Del Rio and Lloyd Hughes.

Jetta Goudal and Kenneth Thompson, in "White Gold," drew capacity business as a first-run showing at the Gem.

The second showing of "New York," starring Ricardo Cortez and Louis Wilson, went over big at the newly opened Rialto. The Dempsey-Tunney fight was an added feature at this house.

The feature picture topping the Pantages' vaudeville was "Winners of the Wilderness," and the regular full houses were had.

Baltimore

CONTRARY to the usual run of business for this time of the year in Baltimore, the week beginning Monday, July 4, started off fairly well despite the fact that there was no rain on Fourth of July night and finished up fine for most of the first run houses in the Monumental city.

Doing top-notch business for the week perhaps, was "Resurrection," which brought crowded houses to Loew's Valencia every day. Running next to that was the business done at Loew's Century with "Special Delivery" starring Eddie Cantor.

At the two family vaudeville houses, Whitehurst's Garden, with five acts, "Drums of the Desert," went over very good and at Keith's Hippodrome, with five acts, "Easy Pickings," proved a very good drawing card also.

"What Happened to Father," shown at Warner's Metropolitan, did not go so well during the first part of the week but picked up toward the latter part and did good business on Saturday.

"The Little Adventuress," with Vera Reynolds, proved a pretty good drawing card at the New Theatre.

Kansas City

IF hot weather holds no more terror for Kansas City exhibitors than it has thus far this summer there will be no slump in business as there was last year.

Practically all of the first-run houses did a normal business on pictures that were not overly exploited, or pictures which could not be called big, despite the fact that the temperature remained around 90 degrees all week.

"The Callahans and the Murphys," at the Newman, played to the biggest attendance of any theatre, the crowds there being much larger than those of the last several weeks. "Drums of the Desert," at the Royal, played to normal crowds, as did "The Red Kimono," at the Liberty.

"Lost at the Front" did better than average business at the Mainstreet, while "Monte Cristo," at the Pantages, and "The Better 'Ole," at the Globe, attracted good crowds all week.

Oklahoma

"THE BETTER 'OLE" had a successful run at the Criterion Theatre all of last week. There was a little advance advertising done on this picture in the newspapers, and a midnight preview of the picture held a week before it started its run helped to pass the word about that it had good comedy.

Milton Sills, in "Framed" at the Empress all week, did a nice average summer business at the box office—which wasn't anything to brag about.

"Bitter Apples," at the Capitol the first half of the week, didn't take any too well, as it was considered too "mellow," and the story depressing. The last half the week "Arizona Bound," another western, played for three days. Business just fair.

"The Lily," at the Liberty the first part of the week, had fairly good business. Belle Bennett's acting was highly praised by critics and audiences alike. "The Romantic Age," though, the last half the week, brought forth a good showing at the box office.

With crowds out of town over the 4th, and a couple of days of real heat, the theatres are not bragging about business.

Milwaukee

A RATHER brisk wind-up to an otherwise dull week somewhat cheered Milwaukee theatre managers. Business at the beginning of the week, due to the double holiday, was very poor, but toward the middle and end of the week, picked up in an encouraging fashion. Cooler weather was no doubt accountable for the increased business.

"The Red Mill," at the Merrill, was generally considered the most popular picture showing in the downtown theatres. Richard Dix, in "Man Power," was the attraction at the Wisconsin, and played to fair houses. "Lost at the Front," showing at the Alhambra, although very well exploited, was not received with the enthusiasm the picture warranted. "Devil's Island," at the Garden, drew a fair share of patronage. "Drums of the Desert" did good business at the Strand.

Neighborhood houses fared much the same as the downtown theatres. "The Tender Hour," at the Tower and Modjeska Theatres, had fairly good patronage, especially toward the end of the week. "Three Hous," playing at the Milwaukee and Savoy, drew average houses.

The Oriental, which opened on July 2nd, was crowded at every performance during the entire week. Crowds flocked to the theatre as much to see the picture as to view the much exploited splendor and beauty of the theatre. "Don Juan" was the feature for the opening.

St. Louis

GENERALLY speaking business was decidedly off during the past week, but a few of the airdomes reporting fairly good business.

The extremely hot weather hit some of the first runs and most of the neighborhood box offices right square between the two eyes and the bank balance has not yet recovered from the shock.

During the week there was a decided change for the worse in the Coal Fields.

King Coal when dethroned brings down with him everything else in Egypt, as Southern Illinois is very well known, and motion picture houses suffer with every other form of business.

Reports from Southest Missouri are also very poor and business has been very much off at the houses in that section still operating. Elsewhere in Eastern Missouri general business is slightly better.

The Ambassador Theatre showed "Manpower" as its screen feature of the week, and had a fair week's business. The Missouri had "Running Wild," and enjoyed above the average, considering general business.

The Grand Central showed "Dearie," but didn't establish any new records for attendance. But the management shouldn't complain at that. Neither did any other house in the city.

At the St. Louis Theatre, the city's largest amusement palace, Madge Bellamy was featured in "Colleen." Business held up during the week. Loew's State got its share of the patrons with Mae Murray and Conway Tearle in "Altars of Desire."

Boston

BOSTON'S downtown houses have experienced a week below the average, with perhaps one exception. The Metropolitan Theatre has grossed above the average. In this exception, however, it may be said that this week's presentation at the Metropolitan is probably one of the best ever staged, taken from every angle. That the attendance has been well maintained throughout the week may be some reflection of the praise given the presentation number, "The Peddler," one of Andre Charlot's revues. It is so exquisite in execution as to quite overshadow the rest of the bill. Should Publix ever hold over a presentation for a second week, it is safe to predict that "The Peddler" would receive first honors in Boston.

"Man Power," at the Metropolitan, accompanied the the presentation, by Gene Rodemich and his Merry Makers with a new group of assistants, and the usual orchestra and organ numbers, enjoyed the best reception of any of the films.

At Loew's State "Captain Salvation," an ever-popular sea-going melodrama, with excellent cast and clever direction, was deserving of better grosses, although the first two days were heavy. Phil Spitalny and his jazz band and Delores Farris provided the stage number.

The Fenway, with "Chang" in its second week, did fairly well, and the film is to be held over for a third week, an unusual occurrence for this house.

Other attractions at the downtown houses include "The Night Bride" at the Keith-Albee Boston, "Frisco Sally Levy" at Loew's Orpheum, "All Aboard" at the Washington Street Olympia, the mystery jungle film "Tarzan" at the Scollay Sq. Olympia, and "Don Juan" at the Bowdoin Square, a collection of films of better than the average. "The Better 'Ole" is held over for another week at the twin houses, the Modern and Beacon. "Sunset Derby" at the Capitol; "Rich Men's Sons" at the Exeter Street; "Rookies" at Codman Square and Field's Corner; "Wedding Bills" at the University; and the fourth week of "The King of Kings," at the Tremont, provide plenty of diversity for selection.

Seattle

SHOW business in this city centered around one theatre last week—the Fifth Avenue. The reason was two-fold. First there was the initial week's engagement of Eddie Peabody, diminutive new musical director from the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles, who created a sensation at each performance. Then there was Lon Chaney's "The Unknown," which was quite satisfactory as a film feature. A pleasing Fanchon-Marco "Spring Idea" revue made an unusually complete bill. Eddie Hitchcock, publicity chief who handled the Peabody campaign for the theatre, can be thanked for a capacity week—the largest in the history of the house with the exception of the opening week almost a year ago.

The box offices at the other houses showed the effects of the tremendous business at the Fifth Avenue. The United Artists Theatre, with "The Mysterious Rider," and the personal appearance of the Seattle Lions Club Quartet, just back from a vaudeville tour, played to average business only. At the Coliseum, "White Gold" attracted only ordinary attendance, and failed to please most audiences.

Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre stood patrons out each night with Vitaphone and "Simple Sis," playing the opening week of a two-week engagement. Vitaphone is apparently doing a great share of the business at this theatre; the pictures are earning very few compliments and the box office is apparently beginning to show this fact.

At the Columbia, Reginald Denny in "Fast and Furious" pleased the Denny fans and satisfied the others. Business held its own—always about the same at this house. The Embassy, which is doing very good business at 25c, showed a pleasing week's gross with "Christine of the Big Tops" and an atmospheric circus stage revue.

John Danz raised the price of admission to 50c at his Strand Theatre and slipped in "Is Your Daughter Safe?" for an extended run. It is being exploited as a big sex picture, with special shows for men only and women only (children under 16 barred), and has been doing a better business than his previous 25c second run films.

"Is Zat So?" at Pantages seemed to please the audiences, used in conjunction with an ordinary program of vaudeville. For the neighborhood houses, Hamrick's Egyptian set the pace with "Don Juan." It was the first showing since the Vitaphone premiere at the Blue Mouse several months ago, and it did a very fine business.

Weather has been quite warm, but apparently the houses that have the programs will do business despite the elements.

"Frederick Chopin"
(Fitzpatrick Pictures—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A MOST interesting presentation is this Music Master film. Lovers of music (and their number is legion) will find in it much that is commendable. One thing about these films that James A. Fitzpatrick has produced is their appropriateness for so many occasions. For instance at the time of the recent Beethoven centennial there was available a little sketch of the German master in celluloid and during the annual music week celebrated throughout the country there was on hand a whole series of film versions of the lives of the world's musically great.

Another point that should be mentioned concerning the Fitzpatrick series is that they can be revived time and time again. There is a tendency nowadays in the publishing field to present in novel form biographies of illustrious people now dead and gone. Little film biographies, pitched in a popular note, are not amiss when you are considering a well balanced program. As a matter of fact they support a bill of screen fare in a distinctive way.

It should be said that the film has its weak spots, but it must be remembered that portraying erratic genius is not an easy task. The melancholy Chopin, a finicky man whose nature so needed feminine sympathy, is portrayed satisfactorily here, the best scene being of his last moments. The mannish George Sand with her long black cigars, certainly a complex figure to interpret, also satisfies. On the whole the impression of the piece should be of satisfaction even from the cavilling artistic viewpoint.

"No Cheating"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

EMPLOYING the idea of a house party guest who discovers that his hostess is none other than an old time sweetheart, "No Cheating," carries an average amount of fun and has its constant play of hide-and-seek because of the fact that the husband is terribly afraid that a jealous wife will discover his former relations with his hostess. St. John has the part of one of those "goofy" characters who are always getting into hot water no matter how hard they try to act normal. He has his hands full getting untangled from the compromising situations in which his wife finds him. To top them off, burglars invade the house and the guests scurry all over the place colliding with one another in the darkness and receiving numerous cracks on the head. These situations can be counted on for their laughs. This release was issued to exhibitors on June 26. Al does his usual hard work and Lucille Hutton is his irate spouse. The remainder of the cast has Jack Lloyd, Blanche Payson, Phil Dunham, Clem Beauchamp. Director Stephen Roberts worked under the supervision of Jack White.

"Pathe Review"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS review, number 30, offers some interesting and instructive topics, combining first aid demonstrated by Uncle Sam's sailors, a bit of bird life under the title of "Just a Love Nest," and some exceptionally good shots of climbers reaching the peak of Mt. Grepon in the French Alps.

Bandaging leg wounds, head injuries and broken jaws offers something in the way of instruction by the gobs. They do their work rapidly, skillfully and apparently effectively. They also demonstrate how the injured victim should properly be carried.

"Just a Love Nest" in Pathecolor is a pretty little episode showing the daily life of two little birds from the time they get up in the morning until they retire at night.

The Alps climbers provide some real thrills which make one wonder how the satisfaction of reaching such a difficult goal can repay them for their hardships and the danger they undertake.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"With Will Rogers in London"
(Pathe—One Reel)

WILL ROGERS takes his audience with him to London in this single reeler of the travelogue series, whose titles abound in the Rogers humor. There are some good shots of many of the points of interest about London, including Buckingham Palace, the House of Parliament, Scotland Yard and others.

Rogers refers to London as "John Bull's Home Office." Regarding the gait of the famous grenadier guards he says; "These boys got used to walking up stairs—then someone took the steps away." Scotland Yard is referred to as "England's calaboose." The picture is interesting in itself and is doubly attractive because of the Rogers humor.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Pick a Pet"
(Educational—One Reel)

ALL sizes and manners of pets are seen in this new issue of the Curiosities, the Movie Side-Show series. From the black bird and a novel scene of a kitten in the arms of a monkey up to the huge elephant and tiger practically all sorts of pets are brought right up close to the camera for your critical inspection. A whole menagerie of animals is crowded into the reel and if you like any one animal best, well, you just make your pick. As a rule, pictures of a zoo's inhabitants are not so satisfactory from an entertainment angle, although they are educational. This release should please the most critical.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Ko-Ko Makes 'Em Laugh"
(Red Seal—One Reel)

WHILE Ko-Ko does not arouse uproarious mirth he gives lots of evidence of his ability to arouse chuckles. His creator, Max Fleischer, gives him a hard assignment in this one—that of making a wooden-faced Indian smile. The Inkwell clown does his best, receiving much help from his faithful cartoon hound; but it is only after exhausting his whole repertoire of tricks that Ko-Ko makes the Indian laugh. After this little act, the cartoonist restores both Ko-Ko and the dog to the ink bottle where the clown and his dog evidently plan their many and varied tricks. Their latest effort is amusing.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Subway Sally"
(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

SUBWAY SALLY is an animated Miss in cartoon form who can show up the best of the Broadway gold diggers. She is even bolder in extracting the bankrolls of her victims than those fair damsels who ply their trade where the lights are brightest. Sally operates principally on the subways, but finds the digging just as profitable. She goes in for cash, watches, jewelry, or what have you.

Sally in an adept crook who is as successful in evading the law as she is in rifling pockets. Long sought by the police she leads them many a merry chase and eventually makes her successful getaway on the rear platform of a subway. Cartoonist Terry injected the usual amount of humor and mixed it up with some lively situations. It is up to his usual standard.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Oh, Taxi!"
(Universal Stern Bros.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

SID Saylor, a dilapidated taxi inherited by Sid from Uncle Abner and good direction by Francis Corby combine to make what we think to be a better than usual two-reel comedy. Furthermore, we unhesitatingly state that there are some gags employed that are brand new. Now, try and beat that.

Paying court to his sweetie, Sid's suit is not too encouragingly received by his prospective father-in-law, even though the possession of Uncle Abner's taxi is well on the way towards setting him up as a successful man of the business world. There are many ups and downs and tricks in the taxi profession—and most of them will get a flock of laughs from your audience.

"The Square Shooter"
(Universal Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

AGAIN we have Fred Gilman with us, and again Mr. Gilman and his associates manage to cram two reels of film full of some excellent action. And, a word for Director Wyler, who has added a few action close-ups which we have not noticed before in this brand. They have the effect of lifting these Westerns out of the ordinary run.

Fred Gilman, as usual, is on the verge of matrimony; this time, with an attractive little Miss, who is being badgered by the villain on account of some notes he holds that belonged to her father. A race with a $5,000 stake is the means Mr. Gilman takes to run the villain out of town and win both prizes. It is well done.

"Short Shots"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

AN issue of the Castle series that does not fail to live up to the series' general excellence. The bits contained in it are lively and will keep the interest on an audience. They are somewhat in a news reel vein, but strung all together in short and snappy fashion they could not be called a news reel as the events they contain do not strictly come under the "news" category but are novelties, varieties ,or what ever you may wish to call them. Among its table of contents are remarkable exhibitions of the skill of a whip marksman who, with 75 feet of swift moving leather, can mow down obstacles that would daunt the ordinary rifle marksman. Then there are angles of the latest dance craze, the Black Bottom. The dancer is shot from real "angles" dancing on a glass base with the camera trained upon her underneath. The reel is sprightly.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Little Feet"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

THE gurgling crow of a healthy baby determinedly pulling away at its stockings instantly wins the favor of an audience. There are several shots in this Castle release of an appealing infant whose winning ways will produce those long "Ahs" that a collection of men and women now and then send up when they meet something that is decidedly pleasing to them. This friendly contact established, the reel proceeds to show the industry and versatility of young folk who bend their energies to master dancing in all its different and difficult forms. The Ernest Belchier dancers, who are employed, prove their artistic prowess, in their presentations of the dance. Grecian sylphs with long flowing white garments flutter in a pretty spot near a lake and Bowery urchins, with Apache fervor, strut their wares on a sidewalk. The film carries plenty of appeal.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Fast and Furious

Lively Film Fare For Denny and You

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THAT Denny man has been setting a stiff pace for himself ever since the wise ones picked him as Wally Reid's successor—but like the late lamented star, Reginald is becoming addicted to stories which place a premium on speed. Indeed the star's films are fast entering a groove. The new entry is a lively affair which, while it uncovers nothing original, does succeed in packing a deal of action in its allotted footage.

The star has become quite an adept at farce. He knows the knack of taking his pantomimic hurdles with mock-seriousness. Here we find him a champion auto driver—with the scenes manipulated to uncover a zippy climax in the shape of the big race. Denny has his work cut out for him and when the action becomes too hot it turns to farcical channels and releases its share of laughs.

Reg does much the same sort of thing that Wally did a few seasons ago—that is act in an easy, natural fashion. He is perfectly at home at the wheel—and really looks big time—as if he drove a car for a living. The scenes are appropriate—the script is compact and the technical trimmings are perfectly Okay. Clean and exciting fun and entirely suitable for the dog days.

The Cast: Reginald Denny, Barbara Worth, Claude Gillingwater, Armand Kaliz, Lee Moran, Charles K. French, Robert E. Homan, Kingsley Benedict, Edgar Norton. Director, Melville W. Brown.

THEME: Farce-comedy of amateur auto driver who, mistaken for professional, enters big race and wins it. Also wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Mistaken identity. Gags. Comedy moments. Climax showing race. Star's easy playing. Appeal of Barbara Worth. Settings and action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title lends itself to a teaser campaign. Tie up with auto dealers, etc. Play up as typical Denny film.

DRAWING POWER: Star has following. Name should draw them. Also title. O. K. for all types of houses.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Naughty But Nice

Not Much Plot, But Garnishings Help

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE Colleen Moore pictures are fast becoming standardized. That is, the prankish pet of the younger element is still cutting up the necessary didoes—which spell popularity for her and prosperity for the cinema showmen. The idea exploited here is pretty weak—being nothing but the escapades of a boarding schoolgirl—which are stretched out to feature length. The star plays a rich oil man's daughter who indulges in an afternoon off by pretending to be married to a man she has never seen before. All of this lends a small amount of spice since the high jinks are carried on in a man's bedroom.

There isn't much to it—and it expends itself early. To keep it going, however, the director sees to it that Colleen is given all the necessary latitude to inspire laughter. The star doesn't fail. She is too talented a comedienne to leave you cold.

The piece gves evidence along about the middle of becoming complicated and one sits up and pays attention. But it is all a false alarm. The film is neatly mounted and acted with considerable spirit. It is light, fairly froliesome—and a good tidbit for summer seekers of celluloid.

The Cast: Colleen Moore, Donald Reed, Claude Gillingwater, Kathryne McGuire, Hallam Cooley, Edyth Chapman, Clarissa Selwynne, Burr McIntosh. Director, Millard Webb.

THEME: Romantic comedy of boarding-schoolgirl, who pretends to be married, and who, after cutting up several capers, settles down and weds man of her choice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Escapades in bedroom. By play indulged in by star. Settings. Very competent acting by cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Star has large public. Play up her name and tease title. Tie up with boarding schools, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all theatres. Should draw with feminine patrons.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Ten Modern Commandments

Not Much To It, But Fairly Bright and Amusing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A MOVIEISH little morsel is this new contribution from the Paramount factory—which serves in establishing the charm and talent of Esther Ralston. She doesn't have much opportunity to reveal any characterization, but there's a deal of sincerity about her work which shows that she's determined to make good as a star. The opus is fairly bright in spots, built as it is around a girl of the Bright Lights. In other words Esther plays a daughter of the theatre.

The piece follows her adventures in the chorus of "The Revels," and perks up with real interest when she takes the temperamental prima donna's place and puts a song hit over without benefit of spotlight. The gags are pretty well placed—and all things considered, Dorothy Arzner, Paramount's woman director, does a nice job. She is handicapped by material which fails to click as anything out of the ordinary.

There is some creditable atmosphere of activities back-stage—the chorus skipping about as if they were long acquainted with the footlights. The romance revolves around a youth who comes to New York and writes the song hit for the show. Being penniless he runs out when the song is accepted. There is frenzied action concerted with the search for him. It is light entertainment and perfectly Okay for the summer business.

The Cast: Esther Ralston, Neil Hamilton, Maude Truax, Romaine Fielding, El Brendel, Rose Burdick, Jocelyn Lee, Arthur Hoyt, Roscoe Karns. Director, Dorothy Arzner.

THEME: Romantic comedy of chorus girl who helps penniless youth to put over song hit. She doubles for prima donna and wins success and romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The effort at characterization by star. The gags. The stage atmosphere. The romantic development. The search for the hero. The titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Might tease the title, but it doesn't mean anything here. Play up star's beauty and bill as enjoyable story of the footlights, etc.

DRAWING POWER: The title should attract them. So should advertising it as theatrical story. Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Two Gun of the Tumbleweed

A Good Western No Matter How You View It

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SIZE up this Western from any viewpoint, do your best to find something vitally wrong with it, remember all the faults that you generally associate with Westerns, and you will have to conclude (unless you are blind indeed) that Leo Maloney's latest production is top-notch. Even when placed in the retort of critical analysis it emerges with flying colors ready to grapple with the toughest audience and win their favorable opinion. Excellent construction, fidelity to detail, natural acting, whales of suspense in its several dramatic moments—it has all these qualities and more that are not often grouped together in one picture. Maloney takes pains with his productions and his praiseworthy bent of doing things well has resulted in one of the best Westerns that the writer has seen in a long time.

In the regular run of things the bad man is just a bad man and the hero a superman. This is not the case with "Two Gun of Tumbleweed" for everything is logical and natural, and you are not asked to accept the impossible. The possibilities of a clash between two gunmen are realized in dramatic fashion. Along with Maloney's good work (both as director and star) is the excellent acting of his support. Joe Rickson, as the cold, calculating gunman, gives a real characterization. Peggy Montgomery, as the heroine, is exceptionally good, too. Bud Osborne and Fred Dana know how to make their roles convincing.

The Cast: Leo Maloney, Peggy Montgomery, Josephine Hill, Fred Dana, Joe Rickson, Whitehorse Miles, Bud Osborn, Robert Burns. Directed by Leo Maloney.

THEME: Western drama. Ranch foreman, whose actions are misinterpreted by girl boss, saves her from evil advances of gunman who desires her ranch.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Continual shift of events. Gunplay. Good work of cast, especially Maloney and Rickson. Photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Promise this as a good Western and you will not disappoint them. Mention the gun duels.

DRAWING POWER: The most hard-boiled Western fan will like it.

Produced and Distributed by Pathe.
Length, 5,670 feet. Released, July 17, 1927.

The Callahans and the Murphys

A Few Guffaws In This Slapstick Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TAKE it or leave it lay this picture does not pretend to be anything else than a rough-and-tumble slapstick comedy—the type of comedy which emerges every now and then just to show up the satirists that they're not having things all of their own way. Take note there is no Jewish monicker present to act as a foil. These Irishers here put on a regular Donnybrook Fair of their own. As it establishes Irish contrariness for its motive power you can take it that Mrs. Callahan is continually arguin' with Mrs. Murphy—characters played with much gusto by Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, respectively.

You will look in vain for a story other than that which presents the Callahans and Murphy children carrying on a romance. Your attention, not focused on any plot, will drift to the so-called local color—such as Irish picnics—and Irish blarney, expressed in one form or another. The characters go low Irish most of the way—what with one family having a bottlegger son and the other a hard-working boy—to say nothing of a couple of good-looking colleens.

There are some laughs especially in the rough-house stuff at the picnic, but most of the time it is slam-bang comedy which is too primitive and obvious to invite a chuckle from imaginative customers. Marie and Polly give colorful sketches. As for Ralph Spence he needs a little scolding. The titles are the poorest that have ever decorated one of his jobs.

The Cast: Marie Dressler, Polly Moran, Sally O'Neil, Lawrence Gray, Frank Currier, Gertrude Olmstead, Eddie Gribbon. Director, George Hill.

THEME: Romantic comedy of Irish families who are ever quarreling, but who make up and bless the romance of their children.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The picnic. The local color. The portrayals by Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. The atmosphere. The spirited acting by Sally O'Neil.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title and make a play for those of Irish descent. Play up the Irish spirit, etc.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for neighborhoods. In big houses it needs strong support.

Produced and Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Wedding Bills

Too Much Slapstick, But Fairly Enjoyable

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE were too many cooks at work on this pudding—no less that three authors co-operating toward concocting a palatable picture for Ray Griffith and the public that has taken a fancy to him. Had just one of them been employed his efforts might have carried more compactness and spontaneity. As it is the combined talents are used to mix up a hodge-podge which emerges as old-fashioned slapstick. The star knows his comedy tricks and can put them over in a deft and ingratiating manner. Just why he should be allowed to scamper about in a field of overripe gags is inexplicable in view of his capabilities with light comedy.

It goes Keystone—does this "Wedding Bills." The early preliminaries reveal a slapstick wedding, after which the action carries on the w. k. and oft-repeated chase. A pigeon must be caught—a pigeon which has taken flight with the necklace that has been accepted on approval by the hero. The bird knows his stuff. Undoubtedly he sat in on Harold Lloyd when the begoggled comedian scampered up and down a skyscraper or two.

So one sees a number of scenes which were used in "Safety Last," the finale showing Griffith catching his breath after capturing the bird, the necklace and the girl friend. It is speedy enough, but, alas, it builds on a precarious single track. Griffith needs better material.

The Cast: Raymond Griffith, Ann Sheridan, Hallam Cooley, Iris Stuart, Vivian Oakland, Tom S. Guise, Louis Stern, John Steppling. Director, Erle Kenton.

THEME: Farce-comedy of young man who has necklace (accepted on approval) stolen from him by pigeon. He succeeds in capturing the bird and jewels.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Griffith's comedy. Action. Excitement with dizzy skyscraper scenes. Titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star who is a master of unique comedy tricks. Tease title and bill as rollicking hour of fast-moving action sprinkled with laughter.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for neighborhood houses and first runs where supporting bill is strong.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

Singed

Blanche Sweet's Acting Lifts Up Average Plot

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BLANCHE SWEET has been around a long time as movies go, but she still retains her charm—which, plus her ability to make the most of any assignment given her, enables her to lift up a picture. Take "Singed" for example. It is not a world-beater for originality or novelty of situation, but it carries its dramatic moments. And these are capably emotionalized by Miss Sweet, who makes her characterization ring with conviction.

The actress plays a dance-hall girl in an oil boom town who falls in love with a more-or-less irresponsible fellow and inspires him to get back on his feet. The young man strikes it rich which, of course, makes it easy for the dancer to share some of his wealth. After she has made a man of him he comes to New York and tries to crash the gates of society. The girl is neglected and naturally remains in her own station of life.

With this situation confronting the heroine she becomes tragic—and the plot gets out of hand. The pathos leaves it while one of those tense climaxes is employed. As a result the story loses much of its realistic touch which toned it up in the earlier reels.

The Cast: Blanche Sweet, Warner Baxter, James Wang, Alfred Allen, Clark Comstock, Howard Truesdale, Claude King, of its realistic touch which toned it up in the earlier reels.

THEME: Drama of self-sacrifice with girl inspiring man to make good, after which he neglects her until he realizes what misery he has brought her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The characterization by Miss Sweet. The local color. The development of climax. Scene when heroine becomes tragic. The suspense. The acting by Mary McAllister. The contrast of scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease this title and use catch lines on meaning of expression. Play up Blanche Sweet and her long career on the screen. Feature as a story of a one-man woman who is determined to keep sacred the big romance of her life.

DRAWING POWER: With good advertising film should do business. For all types of houses.

Produced and Distributed by Fox.
Length, six reels. Released, June, 1927.

The Beauty Shoppers

Light and Frothy; for Summer Consumption

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A PRETTY and penniless little Miss arrives in New York from some rural spot and finds that her charm displayed in a beauty shop is of more monetary value to her than her few paintings which she had hoped to sell to a reputable art dealer. So starts this program picture, a pleasant enough entertainment. The girl overestimates the value of her paintings, thinking them worthy to repose in any of the larger galleries. Unknown to her, a jazzy roommate mixes her sketches with those of another and more talented artist, and the trusting heroine is honored as having contributed some of the season's best art work, the product of the other painter.

Of course she is found out and there is the devil to pay. Humiliated, she does not know where to turn, refusing help from an admiring boy friend. So it is back to the old grind in the beauty shop for her. For a time it looks as if the fishy-eyed villain will get her in his power; but this does not come to pass, for before the end of the tale all difficulties are ironed out and she is satisfied to accept her ardent admirer.

Another romance, thrown in for good measure, supplies the comedy. It is pursuit of a wealthy but invalid male by the above-mentioned roommate, a gold digger. Briefer in form than its partner romance, its comic incident holds the attention better than does the story of the trustful little girl and the eager little boy. Doris Hill and Thomas Haines are the juvenile pair, Ward Crane the heavy, and Mae Busch and J. Marcus the matured couple.

The Cast: Mae Busch, Doris Hill, James A. Marcus, Ward Crane, Thomas Haines, Cissy Fitzgerald, Leo White, Dale Fuller. Directed by Louis J. Gasnier from story by Travers Lane.

THEME: Poor little girl in big city gets into several jams, finally accepting rich admirer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scene where heroine visits wrong house. The jazz party. Denouement at art gallery.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Take advantage of tie-ups with beauty shops.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Produced and Distributed by Tiffany.
Length, 5,669 feet. Released, June, 1927.

Regional News from Correspondents

Des Moines

THE Des Moines Film Board of of Trade Picnic and Get-Together has been set for August 22 and 23. Ther will also be a golf tournament in which rivalry will be hot between Iowa and Nebraska players. Last year the champion was an Omaha man. Jimmy Wynn of the Educational office who ably handled the tournament last year will have charge of the contest this year while the general arrangements are in the hands of Les Phillips, executive of the Producers Distributors office who was responsible for the success of the get-together last year. Exhibitors from Iowa and Nebraska are being extended an urgent invitation to come and be in on the fun. There will be more than $750 in prizes distributed and entertainment is being planned for everybody.

Miss Mae Kurt, cashier of the Royal Theatre, who was absent from the cashier's cage for six weeks during illness, returned for the last weeks of the theatres' run. The Royal Theatre, announces B. I. Van Dyke, who has run the Royal Theatre in DesMoines for close to twelve years, the longest consecutive run made by an independent exhibitor in DesMoines, will close. The building which was leased for the theatre will be torn down and a commercial enterprise constructed on the site of the Royal and of the Majestic Theatre, which is across the alley from the Royal. The Majestic Theatre which is one of the houses owned by A. H. Blank has played vaudeville and musical comedy for some time to companies who lease from the Blank management.

Mr. Van Dyke has not made definite plans for his future but states definitely that he is resigning from the theatre game. Several offers have been made him in other lines of work which will be to his greater advantage.

The Princess Theatre which burned at anborn, Iowa, sevral weeks ago is being rebuilt at a cost of about $8,000. The theatre will open next month. A meting of the stock holders of the Opera House at Sanborn brought about the decision to make repairs in the house which will allow for the showing of pictures during the closing of the Princess. Conjecture is made as to whether the Opera House will not be continued as a competitor of the Princess after its opening.

DeFord and Henry are now operating the Star Theatre at Shannon City, Iowa.

C. O. Lacey has purchased the Unique Theatre at Anita, Iowa, says report. Change of ownership was to take effect the first of July. Mr. Lacey sold his house, the Palace Theatre at Exira, Iowa to LeRoi Henry.

A determined effort is being made to put Sunday closing into effct at Grinnell, Iowa. A resolution to prevent the showing of movies on Sunday was presented to the city council which voted to a tie. The vote of the mayor, W. G. Ray, against the rsolution, brought the defeat of the Sunday closing law in this engagement but it is thought that this is not the end of the contest.

The American Theatre at Corning is now under the managemnt of L. A. Kuhl, formerly of Harlan, Iowa. The change of ownership took effect several weeks ago.

The Strand Theatre at Boone, Iowa, has been remodelled and the entire interior redecorated. G. W. Wigman, who has charge of the Strand, spent $5,500 on the new equipment, adding new light fixtures and installing new aisle lights.

The new theatre at Ames, Iowa is the Capitol which is the new name to be given to the old Princess Theatre.

The contractors are now at work on the changes to be made in the theatre building which will be ready for reopening shortly after August 1. The front of the theatre has been made higher with an elevation of ten feet and changes have been made in the arrangement of the stage. The seating capacity has been increased to 600 by the addition of 100 more seats. The new electric sign which will be raised on the front of the house will have a 410 light illumination.

The Ritz Theatre at Chariton, Iowa which Harry Cramer is building, will be ready for opening August 15. Mr. Cramer has secured T. W. Thompson of Albia, Iowa to act as manager for the new house.

Goldfield, Iowa is to have motion pictures on Saturdays and Wednesdays. The Movie Hall there has been purchased by S. E. Cleveland who has the theatre already in operation.

Toledo, Iowa which has not had motion pictures since the closing of the Cozy Theatre by Mr. and Mrs. Regan during contest of the Sunday closing law has another motion picture house in the Weeting Theatre which has been equipped with projection machines for motion pictures. W. Mansfield who has the Idle Hour Theatre at Tama, Iowa is showing the pictures at the Toledo Theatre.

Jewell, Iowa will hold a special election to decide on the question of Sunday shows. Manager J. R. Foresman, who is paying the cost of the election, is hopeful of the results. The vote will be put to the people asking whether they desire the council to adopt an ordinance permitting the Sunday show. The council, it is known, are willing to abide by a majority vote on the question although the agreement is that they shall not be bound by the decision of the vote.

Mrs. Mary Benjamin, secretary and treasurer of the DesMoines Film Board of Trade, resigned her position last week after having served for three years in official capacity on the Board. She turned in her resignation without making any explanation as to what her future plans will be, aside from the fact that she planned to take two or three weeks of vacation before entering on any new work. Miss Audrey Lytell, who will take Mrs. Benjamin's place on the Film Board, comes from Charlotte, N. C.

E. J. Tilton, manager of the First National office, was last week in Rochelle, Ill., to attend the Golden Wedding Anniversary of his parents.

Belle Miller, secretary for Manager Tilton of the First National office, was in Minneapolis last week.

Jake Schwidelson of the Star at Sioux City was a visitor at the film exchanges.

Additions in equipment and enlarging of the theatre are making big changes in the Regent Theatre at Keokuk, Iowa. The theatre will again be ready for operation early this fall. The interior of the house is being done over in a new color scheme and the carpet which brings out the new color scheme is being laid. The theatre is to have a new organ, larger than the one formerly used and the theatre chamber has been enlarged accordingly. A new roof is now practically completed and the ventilating system has been improved. Changes are also made on the stage and in the projection booth. Two new machines have been added.

Canada

HENRY NATHANSON, general manager of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, Canadian distributor of Metro, Pathe, Inc., British and other subjects, has taken unto himself a bride, Miss Lillian Laurie, of Toronto. Previous to the happy event, Henry, who is a brother of N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was accorded a banquet at the Rouge Hills Country Club by representative men of the film business in Canada. Clair Hague, general manager of Canadian Universal, was master of ceremonies and everything was done just right.

Happy speeches were made by N. L. Nathanson, Arthur Cohen, vice-president of Regal Films Limited, and others. A feature was the presentation to Henry Nathanson of a silver tray and water jug, which was filled many times to the brim with the beverage that cheers. Earlier in the day the film men had enjoyed a golf tournament on the club links.

A. W. Perry, Toronto sales representative for Warner Bros., was married a few days ago to Miss Gladys McPhail, of Toronto, the honeymoon being spent at Niagara Falls. Many gifts from business associates and others were received.

The Colonial Theatre at Niagara Falls, Ontario, has felt the result of the great influx of tourists to Ontario with the result that the theatre was closed for several weeks so that it might be remodelled and renovated to take care of increased business. It is now known as the Tivoli Theatre.

Walter Craydon of Toronto has been appointed secretary-treasurer of Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, one of Canada's largest film palaces, in succession to William Tingle, who died in his sleep a few weeks ago. Mr. Tingle had been associated with Jerry Shea in his Toronto theatre enterprises for the past 24 years.

A committee of citizens of Nipawan, Saskatchewan, has secured a site on which to build a moving picture theatre as a community feature.

E. J. Temms and Sons, owners of various theatres in British Columbia, have just built a new house at White Rock, B. C., which has a seating capacity of 400. Other theatres are operated at Langley, Abbotsford and Prairie.

Following the return of N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., to Toronto, from his European trip of almost two months, a number of important pending matters were taken up for the company organization. Mr. Nathanson declared that he was greatly shocked to receive word of the sudden death of N. K. Miller, manager of the Toronto Pantages for the past seven years. The appointment of his successor would be anounced forthwith. Mr. Nathanson was also deeply concerned over the sudden passing of William Tingle, secretary of Shea theatres in Toronto for the past 24 years.

Mr. Nathanson announced that he had viewed a number of British features and that he had bought the Canadian rights for several important releases, to be marketed in Canada by Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, an affiliated organization.

Stirling, Ontario, is to have a community moving picture theatre as the result of the vote of the local rate-payers favoring such an undertaking. The project was favored by 225 taxpayers while 60 were opposed. The site is the property of the village and the structure is to cost $19,000, as noted in the by-law.

William Hansher, of Toronto, representing Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, was the victim of exploitation for one of his own releases while in Regina, Sask., when Manager Pete Egan of the Capitol Theatre had a special delivery letter handed to him in front of the Regina Leader office by William Backus, an employe of the theatre, who was garbed to represent a postal carrier.

This was a stunt for the current presentation of "Special Delivery" at the Capitol and the incident was given considerable space in the Leader newspaper. Al. Ritchie, Famous branch manager at Winnipeg, was accompanying Mr. Hansher at the time.

P. C. Taylor, general manager in Canada for FBO Pictures Corporation, recently announced the following changes in the personnel of that organization: E. H. Wells has succeeded Mr. S. H. Decker as manager of the Montreal branch, Mr. Decker being transferred to take charge at Winnipeg, in succession to Mr. T. Newcomen, who remains with the company in another capacity. Jack Allen, of the Toronto branch, who has been booker ever since the company commenced operations in Canada, has been given a well-deserved promotion to the sales force. Walter Kennedy has rejoined the Toronto sales force, after an absence of about a year Mr. Kennedy was previously with FBO in Toronto for over two years. R. W. Smith, who for some years occupied the position of booker and cashier for First National in Toronto and Vancouver, has succeeded Mr. Jack Allen as booker in the Toronto branch.

New York and New Jersey

HARRY LEWIS, well known manager of the Mayfair Theatre, Avenue U and Coney Island avenue, Brooklyn, has announced his resignation from that house, and his intention of going to Canada for a month's vacation. On his return he will be available to anyone in need of an experienced manager. The Mayfair dropped its vaudeville on July 4 and began a straight picture policy—hence, Mr. Lewis' change.

A small but smoky blaze in the planking of the new subway in front of the Columbus Theatre, a motion picture house at 981 Eighth avenue, New York City, was extinguished by firemen last week while 500 patrons sat inside oblivious to their danger. George Olive, manager of the Columbus, discovered the fire. Shutting the doors of the theatre without attracting attention of the audience he and his head usher, John Altieri, fought the blaze with a hand extinguisher while a still alarm was being sent in. Fire apparatus put out the flames without alarming the audience.

In line with Ned Depinet's policy of promoting First National men from the ranks, Fred Crosbie, who has been in the sales department of the home office for seven years, has been made a salesman under Jules Levy, manager of First National's New York exchange.

Dave Solomon, well known New York City salesman for the National Theatre Supply Company, copped one of the nice prizes offered by a lamp manufacturer for sales proficiency and has left town for a business and pleasure trip in the middle West cities.

The Eden Theatre, 5th avenue between 8th and 8th streets, Brooklyn, has closed for the Summer.

It is reported that E. Thornton Kelly is no longer connected with the Grant Lee Theatre, Fort Lee, N. J., but that instead has taken over the Westbrook Theatre at Westbrook.

Pathe and Producers Distributing Corp.'s sales forces are said to be united under one roof at 1600 Broadway until the close of the season.

Exhibitor McCormick, operator of the Miriam Theatre, Brooklyn, has recently taken over the New Utrecht Avenue Theatre, Brooklyn.

Isidore Katz, formerly of the theatre operating firm of Rosenzsweig and Katz, is said to have purchased an interest in the Stillwell Theatre, Brooklyn, replacing a position occupied in the past by Louis Nelson.

There is a rumor out to the effect that Morris Kutinsky's New Jersey theatre holdings may be added to those of the Stanley-Fabian Corp., in the early Fall of 1927.

Al Moley, booker in the 7th avenue offices of the Prudential Film Delivery Co., has been confined to his home for a couple of days with a cold. If the truth were known, Al is probably suffering from depression on account of the showing made by the Giants thus far this season.

Our correspondent from the southern end of New Jersey reports that Sam Frank's new Hammonton Theatre, Hammonton, N. J., is proceeding at a rapid rate of construction and that it will no doubt be ready for an early Fall opening. It is being built at an estimated cost of $175,000 and will seat about 1,200. Some of the items of equipment will include a new Wurlitzer organ, Powers, Westinghouse and Brenkert booth equipment, American Heating and Ventilating plant and Heywood-Wakefield chairs.

Mr. Frank also operates the Eagle and Community Theatres of Hammonton, and the Victoria at Mays Landing. He is practically rebuilding the latter—new marquees, new sign, seats and a larger stage.

Another new house, owned by I. Mazer of Camden, is also rapidly nearing completion at Maple Shade, N. J. Mr. Mazer will name this 1,200 seat house the Roxy, and it is reported that when finished it will be leased to one of the large Philadelphia theatre circuits. Labor Day will probably mark the Roxy's opening.

Morris Spewak, owner of the Crescent Theatre of Carteret, N. J., was recently caught in the act of showing the rest of the gang how an exhibitor can don overalls and swing a mean pick and shovel. He set a lusty example. Mr. Spewak will probably be ready to open his new Ritz Theatre, seating about 1,200, on July 15. It will be equipped with a stage adequate for vaudeville, an organ and five piece orchestra, Simplex projectors, Brenkert spots, and Heywood-Wakefield chairs.

Judge Henry P. Nelson, well known owner of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., is reported to have recently taken over the Liberty Theatre in Bernardsville, N. J. H. T. Miller was the former owner.

Two more new theatres over in New Jersey, one in Clementon, the other at Westmont, are progressing nicely and will in all probability be ready for Labor Day openings. They are being built, and will also be operated by Handel and Royner, theatre circuit exhibitors of Camden and southern New Jersey. This firm also has the LeRoy Theatre at Millville going through a complete rebuilding process and the LeRoy is expected to reopen in the Fall.

George Cohen's new Cameo Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y., was opened to the public on Saturday, June 25 and a record audience is reported to have been on hand. Mr. Cohen is one of the pioneer exhibitors in the Hudson Valley, also owning theatres at the present time in Poughkeepsie and other points. Back in 1912 when his first theatres were built he called on J. H. Hallberg, also a pioneer in this field, for the booth equipment and since then has always used Hallberg product.

Seattle

HARRY LUSTIG, West Coast sales manager for the Warner Brothers exchanges, paid one of his regular visits to Seattle last week, conferring with Manager Carl Stearn over the summer situation. He was accompanied by Morris Safier, in charge of sales in the Extended Run Production Department of the home office. After a few days here, they left for Portland to meet Manager R. Hill, and then progressed to San Francisco and Southern California.

Bill Steege, representing the West Coast Theatres in Great Falls, Montana, spent a few days here last week with local executives. He announced that he would soon reopen the Alcazar Theatre in Great Falls, now closed for a complete remodeling since its purchase from Walter White.

Ben F. Shearer, head of the interior decorating division of the National Theatre Supply Company in eleven Pacific Northwest states, last week was host to the entire film populace at the opening of his magnificent new quarters at First avenue and Battery street. In the new building Mr. Shearer has all departments under one roof—scenic studio, decorating studio, drape shop, woodworking department, supply store and general offices.

Henry Turner, exhibitor from the key points of Montana, arrived on film row last week for a few days' visit with local exchange men. At the present time Mr Turner is buying for the Bluebird Theatre in Missoula, Montana.

Another well-known visitor on film row was John T. Spickett, veteran exhibitor of the Palace Theatre at Juneau, who returned from San Francisco en route to his northern home. Mr. and Mrs. Spickett made the California trip by automobile.

Gene Searles, representative of the American Seating Company in Seattle, returned to his office last week after an absence of ten days, during which time he was confined to his home by a slight attack of measles.

Leon Bories, a well-known character on film row since the days that he was the manager of the General Film Company's branch offices here and in San Francisco, was found dead at his home last week, apparently a victim of heart failure.

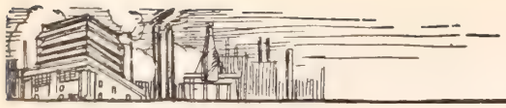
Miss Helen Thorson, cashier at Art H. Aronson's Western Poster Company office, left for San Francisco last week on a vacation trip. Another Western Poster absentee during the week was Don Beckman, assistant manager, who made a flying trip to Eugene, Oregon, on a combined business and pleasure program.

L. O. Lukan, western district manager for First National, was a recent visitor at Jack Bower's local F. N. branch office. "Luke" arrived here from Portland, where he installed L. E. Davis as the new branch manager in the Oregon territory. After a few days here he departed for Southern California.

Abe Wieder was announced last week as the manager of John Danz's Strand Theatre in this city the latest addition to the chain of Danz's second-run downtown houses. Mr. Wieder has had wide experience in the exhibiting field, his most recent connection being as house manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Portland.

"Cap" Kiggings, of Vancouver, Washington, was a visitor on film row last week, attending the many matters pertaining to the erection of a handsome new theatre in his town. Another out-of-town exhibitor was Mrs. George Rissberger, of the Colonial Theatre at Grandview, Washington.

Helen Ogden, for many years head cashier at the former DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, last week transferred her affections to the corner of Third and Virginia, where she will rule hereafter as cashier of B. Wallace Rucker's Educational Film exchange.



Branch Manager Art H. Huot, of the FBO exchange in this city, had as his guest last week Max Weisfeldt, district manager of the Pacific Coast territory. Mr. Weisfeldt spent only a short time here, as he was en route to his headquarters in Los Angeles.

O. J. Klawitter, owner of the Gem Theatre in this city, left last week for the East on a vacation trip that was not expected to reach its conclusion until early in August. During Mr. Klawitter's prolonged absence, his house will be under the management of Alden Bridgham.

Jack Cohn, one of hte "ringleaders" in the Cohn-Brandt-Cohn group of producers who release through Columbia Pictures, spent a short time in Seattle recently.

Walter B. Armstrong, one of the heads of the Armstrong-Powers Studios, spent last week in this city conferring with his northwest representative, William H. Brashear.

D. C. Millward, president of Western Film Corporation, left last week in his new Chandler 8 for a brief trip to Boise, Idaho.

St. Louis

THE Grand Central Theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas ave., St. Louis, Mo., will be closed temporarily on July 16, to be repaired and improved preparatory to its reopening in August as an extended-run special motion picture house.

William Goldman, managing director of the Grand Central, said that the theatre with its seating capacity of 1,750 is ideal for an extended-run house.

Construction of the Grand Central started in 1912 by company composed of William Seivers, Seivers, Theodore Rassieur, Edmond Koeln and Otto Stifel and was opened in March, 1915. At that time it was the finest motion picture house in the Central West and the largest in St. Louis.

Skouras Brothers purchased this theatre in 1920 and have operated it since.

City officials of Cairo, Ill., recently decided to remodel the facade of the old Municipal Opera House, but later found the structure in such poor repair it would be cheaper to construct an entirely new house. It is now planned to include a new Opera House in the budget for the next fiscal year. The new house will have provision for both screen and stage shows.

St. Louis film stocks closed July 9 as follows: Skouras A, $40 asked. One year ago $51.25. St. Louis Amusement A, $44 asked.

The Lincoln Theatre is the new name for the old Opera House at Bunker Hill, Ill. The house has been entirely remodeled into a one-floor picture theatre.

Robbers secured approxamiately $6,000 in a hold up of the Lake Hill Park amusement resort near Valley Park, Mo., the night of July 4. The establishment was recently purchased by Joe Erber, who formerly operated motion picture theatres in East St. Louis and Belleville, Ill. The intruders first cut the telephone wires and then bound the night watchman and Mr. and Mrs. Erber. The money stolen represented the receipts for the three-day Fourth of July holiday season.

A lone bandit on July 4 held up two women in the lobby of the Family Theatre, 1442 South Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., escaping with the box office receipts totaling $27. An hour later the police arrested a suspect and he was later identified by Mrs. Josie Amterhouse, cashier for the theatre, and another woman and a man as the robber. The suspect has denied all knowledge of the hold up.

Victor Meyer, manager of the Palace Theatre, New Orleans, La., has relieved James P. Brennan, manager of the Grand Opera House, St. Louis, so that Jimmy can vacation on Lake Minnetonka in Minnesota.

At the end of July Meyer will return to New Orleans to act as vacation relief for Vannah Taylor, manager of the Orpheum Theatre in the Crescent City.

Another St. Louis jazz leader has blossomed forth as an orchestra director in the person of Paul Sporleder, formerly in charge of the music at the Grand Central Theatre who has been selected by Publix to act as conductor of the orchestra at the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

The Palace has 3,000 seats and one of the largest and most important houses on the Public string in the South.

Harry Greenman has returned to St. Louis to reassume the management of Loew's State Theatre, Washington avenue near Eighth street. He held the same post for two years prior to the early part of this year when he was sent to Pittsburgh, Pa., to open a new house there for the Loew Circuit.

The audience at the St. Louis Municipal Theatre in Forest Park was treated to an extra thrill the night of July 9, when a meteor flamed across the sky, broke in two and ended in a pyrotechnical flare northwest above the stage of the big open air theatre.

The West End Lyric Theatre baseball team defeated the Missouri Theatre outfit, 17 to 12, at Forest Park, St. Louis, Mo., on July 6 and assumed the leadership in the Skouras Brothers Baseball League. The defeated threw the Missouri nine into a tie with the Ambassador Theatre team for second place in the league.

D. E. Boswell, formerly Tiffany salesman in Arkansas and Tennessee with headquarters in Memphis, Tenn., but under direction of the St. Louis, has resigned to become manager of the Columbia exchange in Portland, Oregon.

E. T. Gummersall, general manager of short subjects for Fox Pictures was in St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, Friday and Saturday, departing for Chicago on July 9.

Max Roth, special representative of the home office, was another visitor to the Fox exchange during the week.

The theatres in Portageville, Mo., and Browning, Ill., have been closed.

Shelby Carr, manager of the Accessory Department of the local Paramount exchange on Sunday, July 10, claimed Miss Alma Schulze as his bride. Following their honeymoon the couple will make their home in St. Louis.

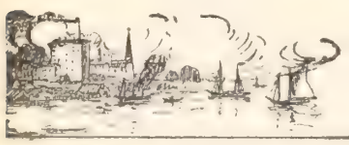
St. Louis friends were not surprised to learn of the marriage in New York City of Miss Genie Wirick, St. Louis girl, and long a favorite of Missouri Theatre audiences, and Artie Lang, a New York singer. The wedding took place soon after Miss Wirick's arrival in New York.

Cleveland

ANNE (Paramount) Trugman and Eva (Educational) Katz were co-starred in a double wedding held last Sunday at the Winton Hotel. The whole film colony turned out to bid them God Speed and see them started on their motor trip through Michigan.

Bert (Shorty) Stern has resigned from the local United Artists sales force to handle distribution in Ohio of the Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures.



George Benner, for eight years head booker and office manager of the Cleveland United Artists exchange, has resigned and is taking a vacation at his Chagrin Valley farm. Morris Dudelson has been boosted from shipper to booker, succeeding Benner. And Bill Park, former assistant shipper for Fox, has been placed in charge of the U. A. shipping department. Estelle Goldberg is now office manager of the exchange.

J. J. Mellert, pioneer Cleveland theatre owner, is now connected with the Ohio Amusement Company as manager of the U-No theatre at 12224 Madison avenue. Mellert has been laid up for the past two weeks. He nearly amputated his foot while chopping down a tree on his summer place. He's hobbling around now, however.

A. J. Amm has resigned as assistant general manager of the Universal Brody circuit in Cleveland. His plans have not been announced. Dr. B. I. Brody, general manager, spent the week in New York.

The sign over the door will be the only familiar landmark about the Jewel theatre, St. Clair avenue, and one of the chain of houses belonging to the Ohio Amusement Company, when the $15,000 worth of improvements now in operation are completed. An entirely new front of white terra cotta is being built. All new chairs are being installed. And the interior is being entirely redecorated. John Kalafat, one of the officials of the Ohio Amusement Company, manages the house personally.

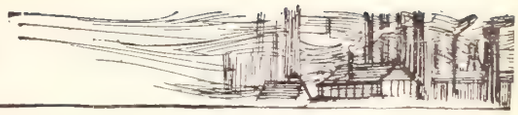
Fred Clary, manager of Loew's Stillman theatre, is in the throes of a vacation. And Fred Coddington, manager of the Cameo, is commuting hourly between the Cameo and the Stillman until Clary re-

San Francisco

THE El Capitan Theatre in Hollywood, one of the largest playhouses in the West, was taken over on July 1st by Henry Duffy, San Francisco producer who operates a string of stock theatres on the coast, it was announced. Duffy has the Alcazar and President in this city and theatres in Seattle and Portland. The deal was consummated between Richard Marshall, manager of the Duffy interests, and B. Toberman, Los Angeles financier. The El Capitan cost $1,250,000 to build and its furnishings cost another quarter of a million.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., have re-seated the orchestra floor of the Warfield, 1465 new seats having been added, gaining 60 additional seats through the removal of the lower floor box seats on either side of the auditorium. The next improvement will be the installation of new loge seats in the front of the balcony.

Edward Barron, who for the past few years has been connected with the local motion picture theatres in the capacity of manager and for the past two and one-half years as manager of the Publix Theatres, here, resigned last week. His many friends were sorry to see him resign. Barron has not given his future plans out and will take a month's vacation before he announces them.



The California Theatre has been repainted and "dolled-up" inside as well, since taken over by the West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Bill Crosby, popular young assistant to Ward Morris, manager of the Union Square, has returned full of health and vigor from his recent trip to the mountains, where he went for his health. He can lick them all today.

Louis R. Lurie, owner of the Geary street theatre which now bears his name, was the principal guest of June 30 at a luncheon of the Down Town Association held in the dining room of the new Women's Building. Many tributes were paid to him. The speakers included Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, J. A. Brehaney and

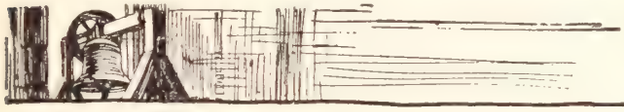
CHARLES E. NEWBAKER, a motion picture theatre owner and exhibitor of Steelton, Pa., has received the endorsement of the Republican organization of Dauphin County, which includes both Steelton and the city of Harrisburg, the capitol of Pennsylvania, as the party candidate for the office of sheriff of the county, to be voted on in the primaries next September. This makes it quite probable that Mr. Newbaker will not only obtain the party nomination in the primaries but that he will probably be elected in November.

Mr. Newbaker is the brother-in-law of Tom Nelley, Republican political leader in Steelton, who also is influential in the party councils of the entire county. Mr. Newbaker is owner of the Strand and Standard Theatres in Steelton, which he also personally manages. It is generally understood that Mr. Nelley is the financial backer of Mr. Newbaker's theatrical projects as well as in his campaign for the office of sheriff.

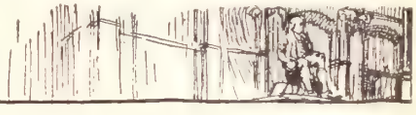
Miss Ada Dickinson, assistant organist at the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, and teacher of voice in the Barrington School in that city, left on July 7 for New York to take a six weeks' course in music.

Through the courtesy of the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls a large chain of picture theatres in Pennsylvania and other States, school children of the vicinity of Wilkes-Barre were treated to an exhibition of motion pictures of the Luzerns county schools' field day, shown in the Capitol Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, on July 7, 8 and 9.



Walter J. Hurley, manager of the State Theatre, Allentown, has just been promoted to be managing director also of the Rialto, both Wilmer & Vincent houses, in that city. Three years ago Mr. Hurley went to Allentown from Harrisburg, where he was publicity representative for the six Wilmer & Vincent Theatres. At that time he took charge of the Orpheum, Allentown, which was then changed from vaudeville to a motion picture house, with many elaborate improvements, and was renamed the State. Two years ago Mr. Hurley married Miss Viola Burd, of Harrisburg, an accomplished musician, who was organist in the Colonial Theatre, in the latter city.

Lee Levy, manager of the Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, spent Sunday, July 10, visiting his family in Wilkes-Barre. Mr. Levy, who came from Harrisburg early in the present year, is planning soon to move his family to Harrisburg.



A new Paige organ, installed at the cost of $15,000 in the Franklin Theatre, Allentown, was formally dedicated on July 4th, with a recital, with Mrs. Nellie Reinbold at the console. Mrs. Reinbold will be the permanent organist at the theatre.

John G. Newkirk, formerly of Harrisburg, but for the last three years manager of the Rialto picture house in Allentown, has just been transferred by the Wilmer & Vincent interests to Reading, where he has been made manager of the State Theatre.

Edward J. Melniker, managing director of Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, left on July 9 for a vacation trip to his former home in New London, Conn.

Philadelphia

THE Paramount Exchange has moved into its new quarters at the northwest corner of 12th & Vine Sts., Philadelphia. The executive offices are on the second floor with the shipping and poster departments on the ground floor. There is excellent elevator service and the structure is considered the most modern exchange quarters on the street. The old Paramount offices are now being occupied by the Pathe forces. Wm. G. Humphreys, manager of the former P. D. C. organization, is now known as sales manager of features while Henry Lewis is short subject scales manager, with Charles U. Martin serving as his assistant. The former P.D.C. employees are occupying the second floor of the building with Pathe on the ground floor. The old Pathe and P.D.C. exchanges are at the present time unoccupied.

Percy A. Bloch, Philadelphia branch manager for Paramount, who spent several weeks in the Jefferson Hospital and was later removed to his home on account of a serious stomach ailment, is expected to return to the office within the next week or two for a portion of each day.

Harry T. Jordan, who was formerly Philadelphia representative for the B. F. Keith interests and who has spent the past year in Hollywood as the personal representative of E. F. Albee, has returned to his home in Philadelphia. Mr. Jordan, it is understood, will be attached to the B. F. Keith Theatres Corporation executive offices in New York. A large number of the motion picture fraternity in Philadelphia and New York attended the wedding of Mr. Jordan's daughter, Annette, at the Jordan home in Lansdowne on July 7th.

The Globe Theatre, Atlantic City, a Stanley and Keith venture, which has been run under a policy of feature pictures, resumes its mid season vaudeville on July 15th. Straight vaudeville will be the policy until the end of the season on Labor Day.

Although no definite date has been set for the opening, it is expected that the new Erlanger Theatre, the Stanley $5,000,000 house at 21st & Market Sts., will have an opening some time during Christmas Week. The Stanley Theatre, a 5,000 seat house at 20th & Market St., has now reached a point where the girders are some hundred feet in the air.

Minneapolis

A NEW auditorium will be erected this year at St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., according to an announcement by Father Mark, dean of the school. The building, which will cost $250,000, will be a four-story structure and will seat about 700 in the auditorium.

The Princess theatre, at Aberdeen, S. D., has been purchased by Robert Mass from the Walker Amusement Company. The interior of the theatre, the lobby and the front have been redecorated and new curtains and tapestries have been added.

Mr. and Mrs. John Konz have leased the Crystal theatre, Crystal Lake, Minn. They formerly operated the Opera House at Osseo, Wis.

Max Torador is reported to have completed a deal by which he has closed his Old Mill theatre and bought from William Weisman a one-half interest in the Crystal, which is across the street from the Old Mill.

C. C. Ezell, hom office representative for Warner Brothers, visited George Levine, Minneapolis branch manager, last week.

Two of the Minneapolis Gateway theatres have recently had changes made in the management. G. I. Terry assumed complete control of the Bijou on the first of the month. This is one of the oldest theatres in the city and has been operated for the past five years by Terry and W. A. Rothberg, who has just sold his interests to his former partner. Redecorating and other alterations will be made during the summer, but no interruption will be made in business.

Detroit

THE Film Baseball Club evened up an old score with the Lasky Theatre nine last Saturday when the two teams engaged in a slugging fest which closed with the result 10 to 4 in favor of the F.B.C. Earlier in the season the Lasky boys won.

All of the Kunsky first-run houses opened at 10 a.m. and tickets sell for 35 cents until 1 p.m., when the fare is increased to the regular rate.

Graphic Films, Inc., have established an exchange in the Film Bldg., under the management of J. O'Donnell.

Jack Saxe, of the Favorite Film Co., and Lew Wisper, of the Royal Theatre, left Saturday for Minneapolis via the motor route. They expect to remain there several weeks.

Ollie Brooks has returned to the Butterfield offices after a two-weeks' vacation in Canada. He brought back all his fishing tackle and some evidence, too.

Maurice J. Caplan, of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Co., who is sojourning in Europe, intends to return early in August.

H. M. Richey and James Ritter left Wednesday to spend a few days with Al Steffes in Minneapolis.

Otto Boll, Paramount manager in Detroit, motored to Chicago over the Fourth, with Mrs. Bolle and Mrs. Harlan Starr, to spend a few days at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ross.

The Metropolitan Co., it is understood, will make exclusive pictures of the Mandell-McGraw fight at the Fair Grounds, July 15.

William A. Haynes, for many years at the Harmony theatre, and a former film salesman, is now managing the Allen theatre in Cleveland.

News' Prediction Justified

1927 Well On Way Toward Exceeding Theatre Construction Record of Previous Year

REPORTS for the first six months of 1927 justify Motion Picture News' prediction that this year' construction of theatres will exceed the total number of houses built during 1926. This is particularly interesting in view of the fact that others had made forecasts to the contrary.

Following are some recently announced theatre projects:

Theatre Equipment Association Meet in N. Y. July 18-19

THE annual meeting of the Theatre Equipment Association will be held Monday and Tuesday, July 18 and 19, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City.

In addition to the usual registration and "get-to-gether" activities, Monday's program will include several interesting talks pertaining to matters of the industry, luncheon, dinner and a theatre party.

Among Monday's speakers will be Charles Pettijohn, of the Hays office, and Harry C Yerg, of the Yerg Printing Co. The latter will talk on "Direct by Mail Advertising."

S. L. ("Roxy") Rothafel is also expected to be present.

On Tuesday, Lester B. Isaacs of Loew, Inc., will lecture on "The Dealer and Manufacturer in the Industry;" J. H. Butler, of the American Railway and Express Co., on "Dependable Express Service;" J. H. Dickerson, associate editor of Motion Picture News, on "Some Statistics of the Motion Picture Field." Fred J. Beecroft, advertising manager of Motion Picture News, will talk on "National Trade Paper Advertising." Luncheon will be held on Tuesday between 1 and 2 p.m. and will be followed by Association business, New business, Election, adjournment, etc.

The membership of the Theatre Equipment Association now numbers about 200.

New Theatre Projected at Minneapolis

Minneapolis is to have a new $100,000 picture theatre, located on Hennepin avenue near Lake street, it was announced this week by William Berg, contractor and theatre builder. Construction will start as soon as the city council approves the application for a license. Mr. Berg has practically completed negotiations for a site in this district, which is one of the best of Minneapolis' many fine residential sections. The theatre will provide competition for the Lagoon, also on Hennepin near Lake, and operated by Finkelstein & Ruben. The new theatre will seat 800 and will be of brick and stone construction.

The city council also had under consideration this week an application for permission to erect a picture house at Fremont and Thirty-ninth avenues north. The application was accompanied by a written protest signed by residents of the neighborhood.

Vallen Elec. Co. Issues New "Quiet Book"

The Vallen Electrical Company, Akron, Ohio, manufacturers of remote electric curtain control equipment, have recently published a "Quiet Book," which carries a full description of their product and gives detail of installation. The booklet has been made up in most attractive form and will undoubtedly prove of interest to exhibitors. The Vallen Electrical Company will mail these upon request.

Plans Finished on Theatre at Mansfield, Mass.

Plans for the new theatre in Mansfield, Mass. for E. L. & H. L. White have been finished by Architect John E. Kelley of Boston and contracts for the construction have been let to William H. Barker of Taunton, Mass. There will be stores along the street front of the building in addition to the lobby. The theatre will be ready for occupancy about the first of the new year.

Tells How Film Cost is Kept Down

Laboratories Have Kept Pace With Other Branches, Says Yates

Commenting upon the perfection of the several different branches of the motion picture industry during recent years, Herbert J. Yates, president and managing director of The Consolidated Film Industries, says:

"Steady progress has marked the history of the motion picture industry—America's fourth largest. This is noticeable in every branch. Production, photography and the exhibition of pictures have been greatly perfected. Theatres have been enlarged and beautified. The financial structure of the industry is rapidly being placed on a sound commercial basis."

"Similarly, in the developing and printing of film, new processes have been evolved, new machines invented and scientific operations in every department have raised the quality standards in this important branch. Consolidated has spent millions to improve the quality of printing and to lower costs, and will spend more in the same directions.

"And yet all these improvements have been made without increasing the cost to the producer. Consolidated has continuously reduced its charge to its customers and has directly effected a saving in their print bills of upwards of $3,000,000 per annum, and indirectly many millions more.

"How has this extraordinary result been accomplished? First, a smaller margin of profit; and, second, the enormous waste in overheads, and inefficient management have been eliminated. Operating costs have been very substantially reduced by the use of larger units and the specialization of plants for large scale production.

Architect Chosen for New Virginia Theatre

George H. Derringer, architect of Wheeling, West Va., has been selected by the building committee to prepare plans and specifications for the new $1,000,000 theatre, arcade and hotel building to be erected in Wheeling. Mr. Derringer will also supervise the building operations.

"The First Auto" — Warner Brothers, Colony Theatre, New York City

Times: "This production is to automobile what 'The Covered Wagon' was to plains and 'The Iron Horse' to continental Railway. Comedy, strain of pathos, thrill. Vastly imaginative piece of work."

Telegraph: "Contains sufficient medley of laughs and tears to assure it warm reception."

Evening World: "Well worked out idea."

Morning World: "Amusing and interesting movie."

Herald-Tribune: "Picture well directed by Roy Del Ruth. One should be amused. Russell Simpson excellent, Patsy Ruth Miller charming."

Post: "Very wholesome and most enjoyable picture. No one who sees 'The First Auto' will regret it."

Telegram: "Sure-fire. Goes out for action and laughs."

Graphic: "Plenty of interest in this several-reeler."

Journal: "Brought chuckles from audience."

Fast and Furious"—Universal, Paramount Theatre, New York City

Evening Post: "One of best and cleanest comedies ushering in summer movie season. Interesting, exciting and very well photographed. . . . Denny plays with delightful comedy touch. . . . Hilariously amusing both in action and titles all way through."

Journal: "Miss Worth decorative, Denny his usual breezy self, Gillingwater amusing and race-track scenes have all expected thrills."

American: "'Fast and Furious' good entertainment, packed with action and love interest, pretty girl and handsome hero."

Evening Graphic: "Melville Brown directed picture and achieved exciting suspense for automobile race."

Daily News: "Paramount's pictorial offering for this week will go down on already lengthy list as another Denny auto thriller."

Morning Telegraph: "Laugh-clocker at Paramount would have sore thumbs from clicking off chuckles. . . . Action really is 'Fast and Furious.' Laughs come fast. Racing furious. . . . Denny seems to me at his best. His business not forced, and despite farcical nature of story, he manages to imbue every situation with plausibility. In 'Fast and Furious' fun comes just that way."

"Captain Salvation" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "Excellent picture, gem of throbbing melodrama. Acting honors go to Pauline Starke and Lars Hanson."

Evening Journal: "Another example of outstanding picture production. Dramatic story that holds one tensely absorbed. Hanson gives sincere and moving interpretation to his role."

Evening Graphic: "Thrilling sea tale. . . . Exceptionally good picture, clever filming, excellent work by cast."

Sun: "Beautiful in extreme. . . . Photography, compositions and general camera placement of highest order. Hanson given every opportunity for heavy emotional acting, and is excellent."

American: "As salty as sea, invigorating as breezes and entertaining as yarns that fishermen spin. Hanson gives one of finest bits of acting we've ever seen on screen. . . . Story thrilling to nth degree and will hold you in powerful grasp."

Herald-Tribune: "New picture delights us. Or course . . . Every one in cast does splendid work and it really should be called all-star picture."

World: "Excellent screen entertainment. Sequences aboard ship excellent, direction by Robertson rising to real heights."

Telegram: "Rousing yarn of salty deep. Director John S. Robertson has fashioned fine dramatic tale which holds interest of spectator avidly from first to last. . . . 'Captain Salvation' one of most noteworthy pictures to have been sheltered by Capitol."

News: "Stimulating piece of filmery, excellent cast and delicately directed by Robertson. Hanson gives splendid show of histrionic ability. Pauline Starke does remarkable work. . . . Photography beautiful as any that has been turned out in recent seasons."

Mirror: "Intensity of emotion conflict and action. . . . Sea tale distinctive in plot, execution and acting, with Hanson dynamiting through emotional fires and physical battles."

Post: "Those of us who enjoyed Frederick William Wallace's novel, 'Captain Salvation,' and enjoyed nor-easters that sweep through story, can relive salty atmosphere in film of same name. . . . Hanson plays leading role and never overacts—rare trait—while Pauline Starke does some of best work in her varied career."

"Naughtly But Nice" — First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York

American: "Affords star opportunity to present clever characterization and she rises beautifully to occasion. . . . Gem of performance. . . . Situations most amusing and take decidedly novel twists. Many laughs."

Herald Tribune: "Miss Moore comedienne of about calibre of Charlie Chaplin. . . . Watch Miss Moore's comedy. . . . You will enjoy 'Naughty But Nice.'"

Telegraph: "If you haven't seen Colleen Moore in 'Naughty But Nice' you ain't seen nothing yet! Both picture and player deserve superlatives. . . . Not only is story basically good, but it has been gagged up to high nines with mirth-provoking combination of sure-fire touches and original twists. . . . Colleen exceeds any characterization she has yet contributed in whimsicality, elfin springhtliness, charm and true comic sense. A knockout."

Journal: "In 'Naughty But Nice' Colleen Moore proves why she is First National's biggest box-office bet. Colleen amusing and cute."

bull is passé

¶ Superlatives have gone the way of all flesh. Wild claims and wise cracks won't sell motion pictures today. It's a new, discriminating world. Thinking minds are buying pictures. Exhibitors are business men. They want facts. ¶ Fine! Here are facts:

¶ "Chang" played to 301,000 people in 9 weeks at the Rivoli Theatre, New York. Doing more business the 3rd week at the Roosevelt, Chicago, than it did the first. And the first was nearly a record. Equally big in Boston, Detroit and Los Angeles. A picture keyed to these changing times—"Chang"—and proving it!

¶ "Way of All Flesh" (according to Variety) "Only picture on Broadway doing capacity under its own horsepower and will run till fall." Harold Franklin, President of West Coast Theatres wires: "'Way of All Flesh' opened long run at Criterion, Los Angeles, to very enthusiastic audience. A triumph for Paramount and Jannings. Audiences thunder approval."

more facts, more signs of the times:

Variety conducts nation-wide survey of the box office drawing power of stars and proves Harold Lloyd way in the lead.

Clara Bow gets 16,000 fan letters a month, world's record. Wins popularity contest after contest.

Fan magazines report more letters received from readers lauding Richard Dix than any other male star.

Fred Thomson on Paramount program, after careful check-up of country shows him leading Western ace. And so on down the list of Paramount stars. No synthetic luminaries. Stars because the exacting box office demands of today make them stars.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" sells 600,000 copies as a book. A Paramount Picture. "Beau Geste" no freak hit as a road show but its value known in advance because a half million Americans bought the book. "Beau Sabreur", its sequel and an equally big seller, also in Paramount's 100% Program for that reason. 11 solid pages in the New York Times on aviation the other day—Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Byrd—and Paramount first and exclusive with "Wings", a big road show of the air, opening August 1st on Broadway. Underworld stories in enormous public favor—and Paramount first with "Underworld" and "The City Gone Wild." And how adult, how different from anything you've ever seen! No, you can't make them or advertise them with bull any more. It takes the resources of a mighty organization, showmanship and keen knowledge of the tastes of these breathless, changing times to click in 1927-8. Each picture built skillfully around a big idea. Each picture pregnant with box office reasons for making it. Each picture attuned to the times. You must have this kind of picture the coming season or give way to the man who has. You get them in the 60 star hits, the 20 specials and the short features in Paramount's 100% Program. And, frankly, nowhere else!

Again they command the screen—this magnificent pair from "What Price Glory"—McLaglen, creator of the undying Captain Flagg and Del Rio, the unforgettable Charmaine.

Here we have them in another triumphant creation of a screen couple—McLaglen as the masterful Toreador, and Del Rio as the passionate, all-conquering Carmen—a pair you will warm and thrill to!

"CARMEN PLUS"—describes this elaborate production—"Carmen plus the sheer genius of Del Rio and McLaglen." More dramatic, more eye-filling than any of the great Carmens of the operatic stage—this picture also packs more punch and more joy than any former creation of Merimee's world-renowned story.

There are scenes of primitive passion in this "Carmen".

Pushing Pictures on the Public

Production Should Follow Demand, Not Precede It

By William A. Johnston

THE Woolworth—or any chain stores—present a significant contrast with picture theatres, these days.

The chain stores of the country are highly prosperous. They are stock market leaders. Their earnings statements show steady, often remarkable, advances.

Evidently there's something pretty solid under the chain store principle and operation.

We can imagine the exhibitor everywhere looking with considerable envy upon his chain store neighbor as he compares this substantial trade with his own hazardous one.

* * * *

JUST what is the difference between a chain store and a chain theatre?

Offhand, you will say that one deals in a tangible commodity, and the other in an illusory thing called entertainment. One handles necessities; the other—but right here the argument breaks down. We are told that in the poverty pinch of the Mississippi flood the business of the picture houses fell off less than that of the merchants in general. People count their movie fare a necessity, apparently. And, while it is true that you cannot manufacture movies after a model and by standardized methods, nevertheless we are all pretty well agreed that we do make their manufacture altogether too costly and mysterious and haphazard a thing.

But there's one difference between chain stores and chain theatres which, in itself, is wide enough to define the success or failure of any retail business.

And that difference is: the chain store buys for the public and the picture theatre doesn't.

* * * *

THE Woolworth store is based upon a simple principle of vast public appeal—popular goods at popular prices.

With facilities for a huge turnover they are able to go to the maker of what was held to be a twenty-five cent article and get him to produce it so that it can be profitably sold for ten cents.

The point is that the producer of the goods is subservient to the store. He produces for the store.

The store knows its public, multiplies itself so that it can buy and sell in million gross lots and then invites the producer to make the goods a vast public will buy.

Production, in other words, follows and is based upon demand.

* * * *

IN the picture business, this good, sensible order is completely reversed.

Production precedes demand.

The public doesn't pull the pictures from the producer: the producer pushes his pictures on to the public.

He starts off by announcing that he will make a block of so many pictures; and each year there is overproduction.

Owning, then, his own distribution, he pushes this product out to the theatres.

And, now, owning theatres, he pushes his pictures out to the public.

Which, as I say, is a complete reversal of the regular process of filling a public demand.

Pushing Pictures on the Public

And right there is the difference between chain stores and chain theatres.

One buys for the public; the other buys for the producer.

One is able to get a manufacturer to supply the public with a twenty-five cent article for ten cents.

If a chain of theatres today could get a producer to supply a fifty cent movie for twenty-five cents—well, we wouldn't be in an industrial panic as we are today.

* * * *

IF it is true that our economic structure is geared up backward we are not going to make any progress. That's certain.

The groaning of the industry right now is simply the creaking of a bad industrial machine.

The simple fact is that we don't make pictures for the public at a popular price.

So we temporize with producer-owned theatres, key city show windows, brass-band presentations—and what not.

And we have mounting costs in the studios and theatres, higher, higher, higher—till the top blows off in the wind of a panic.

* * * *

SINCE this publication was started we have insisted right along that this was an industry and, like any other industry, would be healthy or sick as it observed economic laws.

To which others have replied that we were mistaken, that it was a game. It is still so regarded.

And that is the trouble today. Just so long as we proceed as gamesters, and not as economists, this large industry will continue to be a game.

* * * *

GERMANY does not regard motion pictures as a game. Nor does Great Britain. In the reorganized Ufa of Berlin appear the names of the leading industrialists, bankers and agricultrists of Germany.

In Great Britain, for the past several years the motion picture has been a subject of gravest thought and discussion by the chiefs of government.

* * * *

THIS isn't a game, gentlemen, and it can't be continued as a game.

For one thing, it is a large manufacturing—distributing—retailing industry, with a huge investment in which the public and the commercial banks now hold a large participation in the way of stocks, bonds and mortgages.

For another thing the motion picture is a piece of international merchandise.

These business facts are important enough.

But still more important is the fact that the motion picture is, by all admissions, today a maker of world commerce and a promoter of world ideas.

To quote a banker, Dr. A. H. Gianinni, such an industry "is entitled to the attention and support of those who are seated in high places in the councils of our country."

That is the future of this remarkable business, as I see it. It will have the attention and support of such men and such forces.

More Echoes of "The Bull in the Picture Shop"

William A. Johnston's Recent Editorial Brings Comment From Several Quarters, Including a Sales Manager, a Big Chain Executive and an Independent Exhibitor

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S recent editorial, "The Bull in the Picture Shop", continues to stir up a lot of comment throughout the industry. Selection has been made of three representative opinions for publication this week.

James R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox, does not like our remarks about sales conventions. He writes:

"Where in hell did you get the information that conventions consisted of bands, songs, special trains, white flannel pants. stunts, parades, photographers, food, drink and handshaking? Of course, you could not have had the Fox Film Corporation's convention in mind when you wrote this article.

"First of all, I do not own any white flannel pants, and not having the time to play golf like a lot of other fellows, I cannot even have a pair of the white knickers, of which I am willing to bet you own several pair.

"The only parade I know of at the Fox Convention was the parade to the dinner table three times a day; and, of course, you would expect us, Bill, to feed our employees".

So much for that.

Then Mr. Grainger has this to say: "As to your statement that pictures are not selling, insofar as this Corporation is concerned, I am now advising you that you are making a terrible mistake. Our business so far this season on the sale of next year's product is far in advance of any previous year, and I think you should retract that statement.

"I am certain that we are good friends enough to believe that you will accept this letter in the spirit in which it is written, but I think you owe it to yourself to correct the statement I mention, insofar as you are all wet on it so far as many companies are concerned".

In reply to which we have this to say: Everybody recognizes Mr. Grainger's ability as a sales executive. We must disagree with him, however, on the value of sales conventions, and also on the point as to the present booking slump.

In doing so, we are not referring to the specific product of any specific company. We are discussing a general situation which we believe to be widely prevalent, as shown in our own first-hand survey printed in The News last week.

News—So We Printed It

Much of the material gathered in this survey we published; some of it remains unpublished because it is of a confidential nature. But all of it tends to support the conclusion that new season bookings, in general, are far behind the normal at this time of the year.

That is news of prime importance; so we printed it.

We now give the floor to E. V. Richards, of New Orleans, who sends a clipping about a convention, and says:

"Note attached. Another 'Convention Expense Started'. More bunk on 'how great the Boss is', no getting down to real 'service or facts', and cost plus turnover of help after training them. Where is this headed? Have we a natural born 'Bureaucratic Business'?

"Your article this week on Service is very good. Engineering companies of every description only send out salesmen that are engineers and especially service engineers. When a customer gets an adjustment under one of their contracts, it is because that 'service fell down in addition to the product defects', hence the better enforcing of contracts in the engineering field.

"If every distributor and salesman were a trained theatre manager and the conditions of the way the film is to be sold or presented was a part of the contract, what a blessing the salesman engineer would be even to chain theatres and circuits and the entire industry!

"We have hundreds of able, trained men as salesmen in our business. How easy it would be to give them an intense course on publicity to the patron to fit local conditions and how to help the average exhibitor to become part of the important units of his community! It cannot be done with the 'Scotch and corn bottle portfolio policy'.

"At least your shot has caused a few chins to rise—it is constructive, so keep it up".

What Happens in the Field

And here is a letter from F. C. Shugert, manager of the Palace Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, who tells just what happens when the salesman, under the hurrah convention policy and the absence of service information, gets into action:

"Have just completed reading your editorial in the current issue of The News. It is, as usual, splendid and should be of great help to thoughtful members of the industry. Congratulations on putting the problem so clearly and concisely.

"You touched on the point that exhibitors need more service in buying product. Absolutely correct. .Have been interviewed by six or eight salesmen so far. Not one of them knew what any one of the pictures they were selling was about. They could only give bare (very) skeleton of plot as outlined on their working sheets—such as 'drama', 'comedy drama', etc. That was all they knew and they didn't seem interested in finding out any more. These men represented the biggest distributors in the business, too.

"I read your magazine and one other trade paper from cover to cover every week and find that I know more about a salesman's product than he can tell me. Not one of them reads a trade magazine, according to the statement made by each.

"How do they expect to get the exhibitor's confidence when all they can tell him of their product that they want him to stake his local reputation on is: 'It's a whiz-bang!' or 'Here's one that I think will go over big at your box-office' (but he can't say why). Box-office, by the way, is being sadly run down as a magnet by all advertisers".

There is a Booking Slump

Finally, on the question of the booking slump we quote from one of the most important exhibitors in the country who will not permit his name to be used. He says:

"The distributors and producers expected to close contracts on enthusiasm engendered at sales conventions; they have not worked the exhibitor up to a buying frame of mind by the steady barrage of advertising to which exhibitors have become accustomed.

"Almost without exception the companies are asking big increases in film rentals. I will not only not pay an increase, but in some cases I will not pay as much for product as I paid last year—meaning for the current season. I'm trading—and trading hard.

"The theatres are hard hit. They are having a struggle to survive. Producers threw a scare with their 'general economy' program, their curtailing of advertising, their talk about reduction in overhead—and the result is that some of this feeling of insecurity and uneasiness has communicated itself to the theatre men. They are biding their time and they make no bones of saying that they are in no hurry to buy pictures. There'll be plenty on the market—and they expect to buy for less than they are now being quoted".

In Ten Years---No Progress

FROM an editorial by William A. Johnston in Motion Picture News, issue of December 15, 1917:

Something of a bomb was thrown into the midst of the film industry last week!

It came in the form of an eight hundred-word telegram from Stanley Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, to the heads of fifteen film companies and to the trade press.

Mr. Mastbaum calls attention to a stupendous waste now being borne by the industry—of a half-million dollars a week—this waste being the result of overproduction plus unnecessary distribution costs.

"The exhibitor," says Mr. Mastbaum," must pay. How long can he continue to pay?"

"The manufacturer cannot help the exhibitor because the manufacturers have made no effort to help themselves."

The conditions Mr. Mastbaum cites have been more or less well known to a number of people in the business for some time.

No one, however, has thus far put them in concrete figures—such as the waste of eleven features a week, and the fact that one exchange will do the work of twelve.

The figures are startling. They give us a pretty clear idea of what the industry has been undergoing. Twenty-six million dollars a year pure waste! For a long time the industry has been writhing under this tremendous load. . . . The industry has had to struggle along to make a profit against almost overwhelming odds.

Stanley Mastbaum is gone. But the need for real economic stability remains as pressing as when he pointed it out ten years ago.

Captains of Industry

THE new board of directors of Ufa, the German film concern, is an amazing list of names of some of the foremost business leaders in Germany.

Amazing, because it is so unlike the make-up of directorates and governing bodies of American picture companies, or they are unlike it, whichever way you please.

The amount of business ability, wide experience, diversified interests and leadership on the Ufa directorate is without precedent in film annals. To understand precisely what this would mean in this country, suppose we imagine the directing personnel of a single American concern as including:

E. H. Gary, Charles M. Schwab, Gerard Swope or Owen D. Young; George Eastman, Herbert Hoover, Adolph S. Ochs or some other great newspaper publisher; Kent Cooper of the Associated Press and Karl Bickel of the United Press; bankers like Charles H. Sabin or Charles E. Mitchell or Dwight W. Morrow or J. P. Morgan; lawyers of the rank of Charles Evans Hughes; representatives of all the political parties; in general, first-rank leaders in their fields.

The personnel of the Ufa group we printed in full last week. Some of the parallels suggested above are not as close as they might be; but the general idea is the same.

There are, of course, bankers, and able ones, on the directorates of some American companies. But no such representation of first-class ability has ever been gathered together by a single film concern. The Ufa organization has hitherto been considered in some quarters here as meaning a Nationalistic propaganda scheme on the part of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg. This view is set aside by a mere glance at the names, which represent many shades of political belief.

The point we make is that the motion picture in Germany has now come into the full recognition of the leaders of business. They have become active on the Ufa board. They bring to the motion picture proved records of success in other fields; business wisdom, position and stability to the film industry.

We have remarked many times that the real problem of this industry is man-power. In all the commotion over economy—and thus far it is only commotion—man-power is, and will remain, the vital thing.

It will be immediately objected, of course, that because a man has been a leader in one great industrial field it does not follow that he will be in another.

Neither does it follow that he will not be. But business wisdom, judgment and just ordinary common sense, plus vision, are standard qualities in all lines of activity.

The plain truth is that genuine leadership in all branches of this industry—man-power is the word—is needed now as never before.

A Bumper Year

THE B. M. P. A., the British organization corresponding to the Wampas and the A. M. P. A. here, and affiliated with those organizations, has just started off its third brilliant year. H. A. Walliss, publicity manager of Pathe Freres, is the new chairman; W. Arthur Northam becomes vice-chairman; W. F. Husband, of Tiffany, is secretary, to be assisted by W. L. Streeton, of Fox; Horace Williams, of First National, is treasurer; and Horace Judge, also of F. N., will continue to edit The Bumper, the publication of the association. Robb Lawson, of United Artists, retiring chairman, becomes lay press representative; Frederick J. Allen of F. N. is now trade press representative. Guy Austin, F. N.; H. Burgess, Ideal, and Frank Marr, Western Import, form the committee. The past year has been even more successful than the first, and splendid work has been done in promoting cooperation between the film industry and the press.

Chief Comerford

IN recognition of his efforts on behalf of the firemen in working for old age pensions and compensation plans for them, M. E. Comerford, well known head of the Comerford circuit and other interests and a national director of the M. P. T. O. A., has been made honorary chief of the Scranton, Pa., Fire department. He is the first man to receive this important honor. He also becomes a member of the Firemen's Advisory board, where he will press enactment of the pension system.

The movie stars have to keep an eagle eye on their weight. Rin-Tin-Tin wears a worried look when the scale at the Warner studio hits the 63 pound mark

Universal has a number of young players of more than the usual talent and beauty who bid fair to rise rapidly. Here is one: Barbara Worth, leading lady in "Fast and Furious"

An unusually lovely camera study of an unusually lovely lady: Marion Nixon, who has a prominent role in Universal's film, "The Chinese Parrot"

Fay Wray, chosen as leading lady for Jannings in "Hitting for Heaven" (Paramount), has advanced rapidly since her work in "The Wedding March"

The very newest thing in juvenile stars is Buzz Barton, whose first for F B O, "The Boy Rider," has been completed. Buzz is just 13 years old

Gotham selected its cast for "Sinews of Steel" with unusual care, picking the most suitable player available for each role. In the upper row are Gaston Glass, Lolita Lee, Greta Von Rue, Bobby Gordon and Paul Von Weigel; below: Norah Hayden, Charles Wellesley, Anders Randolf and John Gardner

Denny Off For England

REGINALD DENNY, accompanied by his wife, arrived in New York Tuesday on board the Twentieth Century, on the first lap of his journey to visit his home in England. He sailed at midnight on the Berengaria and plans a two weeks' vacation there before returning on the Leviathan to resume his picture scheduled at Universal City

This is Denny's first visit to his home since the war. He left England in 1919 following his release from the Royal Air Force and resumed his stage career in New York. Several years later he was sent to the Coast by Universal to make "The Leather Pushers" series, which were destined to make him famous in motion pictures.

Since making his current picture "Fast and Furious," an automobile racing story in which he suffered several injuries which culminated in an operation for appendicitis, he has felt in need of an extended rest.

Before his departure from the Coast he purchased a lodge in the San Bernardino Mountains.

First National's Outing

EMPLOYEES of First National Pictures, Inc., will hold their second annual outing at Indian Point on the Hudson on Saturday, July 23rd. The steamer Chauncey M. Depew has been chartered to take the picnickers up the river and to bring them back. The steamer will leave West 42nd St. at 9:30 a.m., and West 125th St. at 9:50, returning about 10 p.m.

Various amusement events have been arranged for the entertainment of the First Nationalites, such as races of different kinds for men and for girls, a baseball game between the married men and the bachelors, tennis, swimming and dancing. William P. Mullen, office personnel manager, is in charge of arrangements.

Hollywood's New Queen

HOLLYWOOD has a new queen of beauty! Of course, everyone knows that Ruth Hiatt, featured player in Mack Sennett's "Jimmy Smith" domestic comedies, has more than a fair share of comeliness and charm, but now she has been officially enthroned as a beauty by the Association of Studio Electricians, who chose her as queen to reign over their Fourth Annual Benefit Frolic and Ball, held recently in the fiesta ballroom of the Hotel Ambassador. More than that, they presented Miss Hiatt with a mammoth loving cup of silver, bearing an engraved inscription which proclaims her triumph.

No honor in Hollywood is more eagerly sought in the screen world than that of being chosen the official beauty of the studio electricians. It is a title that carries real significance. The studio electricians are not easily pleased. They are glutted with beauty from morning until night with girls at the left hand and at the right, before them and behind them, powdering and prinking and looking their best for the camera's eye. No studio electrician is easily impressionable.

Coastward, Ho!

LOU MARANGELLA, who was publicist for "Ben Hur" when the company was in Italy, last week resigned as editor of "Brass Tacks," the Warner house organ, and departed for the Coast with Mrs. Marangella. He left behind him a number of plays and stories with a leading broker, and if things break right he will shortly abandon the publicity pen for the fiction field.

Exhibitor's Daughter Weds

MRS. EARL RATHBUN, daughter of Col. W. S. Butterfield, prominent Michigan circuit head, was married last week to Charles S. Mott, vice-president of General Motors.

Starless Week

NO asterisks were conferred by the National Board of Review for last week. One feature and three short subjects were reviewed.

Welcome, Eloise!

ONE of the famous taxicabs that saved Paris during the first battle of the Marne, "Eloise," was, as this was being written, expected to arrive in New York on Thursday of this week, where she was to receive a fitting reception after her long trip across country from California. She will be the guest of the S. Rankin Drew post of the American Legion. Suitable welcoming ceremonies will be participated in by the French War Veterans' society, the British legion, the Belgian War Veterans' society, the Polish Veterans' club, and the Drew post.

Ralph Ince Here

ALTHOUGH production has shut down in the East almost entirely, scarcely a week goes by without the arrival of some unit or another to film exteriors in New York City. This week's incoming company was that accompanying Ralph Ince, who is directing "Coney Island" for F B O. Included in the party are Lucilla Mendez, his wife, and Jola Mendez, her sister. He plans to spend three weeks at the famous resort. Ince will himself portray a sideshow barker, while his wife will play the leading feminine role, that of cashier at one of the parks. Peter Milne, former News man, is responsible for the continuity.

Oh, Min!

SAMUEL VAN RONKEL, producer of the Andy Gump comedies for Universal, became a proud father last week when an eight-pound baby girl arrived at the California Lutheran hospital in Los Angeles.

With both mother and daughter feeling fine, Van Ronkel announced a holiday on the set where Joe Murphy, Fay Tincher and Billy Butts were busily engaged in portraying the antics of Andy, Min and Little Chester, and an impromptu celebration was held.

Major Bowes Returns

MAJOR EDWARD BOWES, managing director of the Capitol theatre and a vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived home last week on the S. S. Paris from a month's vacation in Europe—the first he has taken in several years. He will resume his business duties immediately.

In addition to his work as a film executive and as the manager of the big Broadway theatre, Major Bowes edits and titles the Ufa short films which are a feature of the Capitol's programs, and is known to millions of radio fans as the head of the "Capitol family," broadcasting a popular program from the theatre each Sunday evening.

"P. D." on Vacation

P. D. COCHRANE, secretary of Universal and supervisor of advertising, publicity and exploitation activities, has left New York on his first extended vacation in several years. He is en route with Mrs. Cochrane and their young son, Philip, Jr., for a four weeks' stay in the Canadian Rockies.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal and a brother of P. D., is now in Europe with his family. This is the first time on record that both brothers have been absent from the Universal home office at the same time.

Einfeld Back at Desk

CHARLES EINFELD, assistant manager of advertising for First National Pictures, is back at his desk after a honeymoon trip to Bermuda. He was absent a month and finds his hands full with the accumulated office matters waiting his attention and the business of getting settled in his apartment. Charlie reports that Bermuda is full of honeymooners.

The Cruise of the Cojo

COLLEEN MOORE, First National star and John McCormick, her husband, who will supervise her forthcoming productions, will sail this week for Florida for a several weeks' rest.

Miss Moore has purchased a 70-foot cruising yacht named Maya the Fourth, which has been re-named Cojo, Co standing for Colleen and Jo for John, on which the trip to Florida will be made. The yacht will be manned by a captain and crew of four. On their arrival in Florida waters, Miss Moore and Mr. McCormick will spend a few weeks resting and deep sea fishing. They plan to return to the Coast by August 15th where production will be started immediately on Miss Moore's next picture, "Synthetic Sin," an adaptation of the stage play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton. Following "Synthetic Sin," Miss Moore will appear in "Lilac Time" from the play by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin.

Paging Mr. Turnbull

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president in charge of production of Paramount, who is in Hollywood speeding up production activities at the Paramount west coast plant, on Tuesday wired Hector Turnbull, a supervisor of the production staff, to return to Hollywood immediately. Turnbull has been in Paris conferring with Anita Loos regarding the film production of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Lasky's message urged Turnbull to return with all possible haste as a situation had developed in Hollywood that only the latter could handle. Paramount, it seems, is in a perilous position.

Turnbull must be in Hollywood by Sunday or Paramount's reputation on the golf course will suffer. The Paramount and Fox golf teams engaged in a tournament are now tied. Tuesday at the Rancho Club in Hollywood, Lasky and his son, Jesse L. Lasky, Jr., were defeated by Sol Wurtzel and Jack Ford. Charles and Jules Furthman of Paramount defeated James Ryan and Phil Klein of Fox, while Ford Sterling and Edward Sutherland, a Paramount team, were winning from Edmund Carewe and Al Ray. The defeat of Lynn Buell and Ed Merritt of Paramount by George Marshall and Dave Butler of Fox tied the tournament and unless Turnbull gets back to Hollywood by Sunday to join his team-mate in the final round against the Fox team, there is danger of Paramount losing by default.

Byrd's Pictorial Log

COMMANDER RICHARD E. BYRD and his America crew, Chamberlin, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Grover A. Whalen and the official reception committee of New York City on Monday night saw the film record of the welcome home reception tendered the latest trans-Atlantic flight heroes at the 44th Street theatre, New York City. This feat of newsreel enterprise was performed by the staff of Paramount news under the supervision of Emanuel Cohen, director of Paramount News and Short Feature department, as a tribute to the airman, who is a close personal friend of Mr. Cohen.

The reel includes shots of the take-off of the America, Byrd's ship, and the Columbia, flown by Chamberlin, their respective arrivals in Europe climaxed by the pictures of Byrd on his arrival in New York Monday morning. It was projected during the intermission of the legitimate production "A Night In Spain," a Shubert musical comedy to which the producers had invited the flyer and his party. The audience roundly applauded at the conclusion of the picture and Mr. Byrd personally thanked Mr. Cohen on behalf of the flyers.

A stirring movietone presentation of Commander Byrd's homecoming has been added to the magazine at the Roxy theatre. The famous aviator is seen on his return from abroad and a recording has been made of one of his speeches.

Three First Run St. Louis Houses Negotiating for Pool

A DEAL is said to be in the making that will bring about a pool of three important first run houses in St. Louis. The houses involved are Loew's State, the new Ambassador and the Missouri. The two latter are operated by Skouras Bros., and the former by Loew's Inc.

If the deal is finally consummated it is said to be part of the agreement that the Grand Central will be closed permanently. This provision is insisted upon by Nicholas M. Schenck who is conducting the negotiations for Loew's Inc. Reports vary as to who will control the three houses if the deal is completed.

Charles Skouras insists that no deal is pending looking to a pool of this sort, but on the other hand Nicholas Schenck admits that negotiations have been proposed. According to the persistent rumor which for weeks has prophesied the pool, it is now near consummation and an announcement of it will be made in the near future.

Labor Cuts Demanded

Exhibitors Contend They Cannot Exist Under Present Scale of Wages

WAGE reductions and wage increases for musicians, operators and stage hands are bringing about the usual controversies in different parts of the country, with the situation acute in some quarters. St. Louis and Denver exhibitors are pleading for lower salaries that they may continue to exist. At Memphis an amicable settlement has been reached and a threatened walkout averted.

Musicless movies loom as an almost certainty for the patrons of the neighborhood and outlying theatres of St. Louis and its suburbs unless the powers that be in the Musicians' Union come to the assistance of the theatre owners by granting some concessions in the way of either reduced wages or fewer members for orchestras.

The present wage contract with the Musicians' Union expires in August and recently in preliminary negotiations the representatives of the smaller theatres of St. Louis requested that they be permitted to drop one man from their orchestras as a means of holding down the overhead. This suggestion was promptly rejected by the union officials, it is said.

The situation is so acute the theatre owners have practically decided that it is a question of either one man or the entire orchestra going. That is, unless the musicians are willing to reduce their wage scale so that the total reduction for an orchestra will equal the present wage of a musician. The latter course seems very improbable.

Whether the big down-town and Grand boulevard first-run houses will assist their smaller brethren in their arguments with the musicians is not yet apparent.

The controversy between the Motion Picture Machine Operators and Loew's theatres in Memphis reached an amicable settlement Monday.

A new two-year contract was signed by Loew representatives and officers of the union under the provisions of which two projectionists will be retained at Loew's Palace at a salary of $53.50 a week, each, to September 1st, 1927; then, $55.00 for the next two years. The third operator, retained under the Publix policy for the Publix stage presentations which were discontinued June 18, will be dispensed with.

The men had asked for two men at a weekly salary of $75.00, or three men at $65.000; and at the outset they demanded, also, the retention of the third operator. Loew, on the other hand, offered two men $60.00 a week.

The Denver Theatre Managers Association is seeking a 25 per cent reduction of salaries of musicians and has notified the state industrial commission of its intention to make such salary reductions. The Denver Musical Protective Association has also been given the same notice. The managers declare they are ready to open negotiations on a new contract. No change in working conditions is asked. No mention has been made of any intended reduction for other theatre employees.

Equipment Dealers Meet

Membership and Open Market Are Questions Discussed at Two-Day Session

THE Theatre Equipment Association held its two-day convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania Monday and Tuesday of this week with an enthusiastic attendance that discussed the many problems before the association. The members also heard many interesting speeches on various angles of the theatrical and motion picture industries.

The membership question was widely discussed and the suggestion made that membership be confined to manufacturers solely, and that dealers be dropped from the membership lists. I. Samuels of Allentown, Pa., was the proponent of this suggestion. In the course of his talk he said:

"The interests of the manufacturers and dealers are widening and if the association is to grow in strength and membership, a change must be made. I have interviewed several prospective manufacturer members and they refuse to join unless the organization is limited to manfacturers."

Charles C. Pettijohn of the Hays organization was among the principal speakers. He urged the association to engage a leader, preferably an organizer not now in the equipment field. He also pledged the cooperation to the association of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Sam Kaplan, New York manufacturer, stirred the meeting by urging that the association go on record as to whether or not they favor the open market. Kaplan declared many manufacturers are selling to one national company and refusing to sell to independent dealers. He said he represented more than fifty independent dealers and that he favored a separate organization for dealers.

H. G. Yerg of Yerg, Incorporated, talked to the association members on direct by mail advertising in an interesting and instructive manner. Lester B. Isaacs of Loew's, Inc., discussed the Dealer and Manufacturer in the Industry and J. T. Daniels of the American Railway Express Company talked on Dependable Express Service. Fred J. Beecroft, Advertising Manager of Motion Picture News, took for his subject National Trade Paper Advertising, while J. S. Dickerson, Research Engineer of Motion Picture News, related some statistics of the motion picture industry. Other speakers were P. A. McGuire, J. E. McCauley of Chicago, and Randall M. White of the Exhibitors Daily Review.

J. E. McAuley, Chicago, was elected president; J. H. Hertner, Cleveland, vice-president, and S. S. Behrend, re-elected treasurer. Hertner, the retiring president, is to be presented with a gift to be selected by a committee consisting of Herbert Griffin, S. A. Louis and J. C. Kroesen. The dealer representatives on the new board of directors are S. S. Behrend, Chicago; S. A. Louis, Minneapolis; W. E. Green, New York; Walter Preddy, San Francisco. Manufacturer representatives chosen as directors are J. H. Hertner, Irving Samuels, I. L. Nixon, J. C. Kroesen and J. E. McAuley. President McAuley created an advisory board consisting of Hertner, Kroesen, Nixon and Louis. This board is expected to consider the question of whether the organization should be limited to manufacturers and dealers excluded.

A dinner for the attending delegates was served Monday evening and a theatre party was held the same night.

"What Holds Men" Next Leatrice Joy Vehicle

Leatrice Joy's next starring picture under her Pathe-De Mille contract will be "What Holds Men," an original story by Margaretta Ruttle, Saturday Evening Post writer. No supporting cast been selected as yet and no assignment of a director has been made.

T.O.C.C. Makes Formal Demand

In Letters to Hays, Seeks Action on Allocation of Product and Arbitration of Disputed Clauses in Contract

THE Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, representing about five hundred theatres in Greater New York, this week presented formal demands to Will H. Hays, seeking allocation of product and arbitration of disputed clauses in the uniform contract.

The demands, incorporated in letters to Mr. Hays, were voted at the mass-meeting of exhibitors of the metropolitan district held at the Hotel Astor on July 14.

The T. O. C. C. expresses entire faith in Mr. Hay's integrity and honesty of purpose and asks him "to assist in righting the wrongs that have now crept into the dealings between producer and exhibitor."

The first demand is that independent exhibitors in the metropolitan area be given fair opportunity to play first runs on equal terms with producer-owned circuits.

To this end, a conference has been sought with Mr. Hays and members of the M. P. P. D. A. If the negotiations fail, the T. O. C. C. will take legal steps, according to the terms of the resolution adopted at the July 14 meeting.

The second demand calls for submitting disputed clauses of the uniform contract to arbitration by a conference to be called by the Arbitration Society of America.

In the event the Hays organization refuses this plan, the T. O. C. C. will withdraw from arbitration proceedings in the New York area, it was voted at the meeting.

The July 14 Astor session was the largest exhibitor gathering in New York in a long time. The producer economy moves; the decision of the Federal Trade Commission; the Hollywood salary slash plan; and the present booking slump all came in for attention from the speakers.

An interesting highlight was the observation made by several to the effect that the producers were finding out it was not so easy to run theatres. Leo Brecher declared that the insistence by producers on economies could be traced to their activities as exhibitors, because they now find themselves in a position where it is vitally necessary to cut overhead costs.

"Producers' extravagances are the result of the idea that it didn't matter about costs," he continued. "'The exhibitor will pay.' That was the belief. Rentals have gone up year after year. But it's different now."

He pointed out that producers might increase their revenues if they quit the "favored few" policy in New York and sold pictures in an open, competitive market. He charged that independent exhibitors were unable to get first runs because of the "plan of one group to monopolize the industry."

Charles L. O'Reilly declared that cutting star salaries would not solve the industry's economic ills. "But opening the market in fair competition to exhibitors who build beautiful theatres will," he added.

Mr. O'Reilly attacked the New York product situation, and charged that distributors were not giving the public the break. With particular reference to Paramount he said: "Paramount has $143,000,000 of the public's money. It should give the public the break by allowing day and date showings for neighborhood theatres along with the circuit houses. And if the trade doesn't do this, take my word for it the Government will."

Mr. O'Reilly also charged that members of the Hays organization were not permitting Mr. Hays to exercise his full duty.

"I believe in Mr. Hays' integrity," he said. "But his organization won't allow him to function fully. Many things are wrong. We have a crazy quilt for a contract. Even the distributors don't know what it's all about."

Joseph M. Seider, President of the Jersey M. P. T. O., declared that theatre business was off and said present conditions could be ascribed to two causes: the kind of pictures now being released and overseating.

The only opposition to the resolutions came from William Brandt and Samuel I. Berman, who advocated direct action instead of resolutions.

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., made a strong plea for organization and urged the T. O. C. C. not to pass resolutions unless they intended to go through with them.

Harry Suchman, chairman of the T. O. C. C. arbitration committee, outlined exhibitor grievances against the contract. A product analysis was given by P. S. Harrison, editor of "Harrison's Reports." He made recommendations as to what he thought exhibitors should pay for the new season product.

Mich. Starts Block Booking War

Richey Statement Urges Association Members to Assist Government Against "Illegal" Practice

H. M. RICHEY, business manager of Michigan's Exhibitor Association, has come out with a statement that the Michigan body is ready to treat block booking as illegal and to treat it as such where exhibitors are forced to book in block. This is in view of the Federal Trade Commission's decision against Paramount, and Mr. Richey reminds the Michigan members that it is their duty to help the government. He has asked the exhibitor members to keep the organization advised of selling methods employed.

"While the case in question was decided against Famous Players," said Mr. Richey, "it affects every producer in the business. The fact that the commission has ordered one company to cease the practice, to cease threatening to acquire theatres to force exhibitors to buy, etc., is interesting, of course, but the added part of their decision is the most interesting.

"It reads: 'The respondents are required to file a report within 60 days as to the manner in which they have complied with the order, and further proceedings will depend on the character of that report.'

"Yes, it is true that some exhibitors prefer to buy in blocks, but where there are ten that do there are a hundred that don't.

"Wise men in the business are out with the statement that the order of the commission won't actually mean anything to the exhibitor, for the producers will put the price of a block at a certain figure, but if the exhibitor wants to leave out the no good ones the price of the balance will be prohibitive. No doubt that may be tried. But what, we are wondering is, will the commission stand for that kind of deal?

"The decision of the commission is certainly an encouraging one to exhibitors. The shame of it is that reforms of the business must come from outside of the business and not within our ranks. It is probable that it will not be long before the attention of the commission will be called to iniquities in the contracts, or the practice of some producers to sell exhibitors pictures from announcements only, pictures that many times don't measure up to the standard of prices the exhibitor paid for them, or even are not made at all or, if made, are substitutions entirely different in story, stars and directors. The commission might decide that this was taking money under false pretences.

"It shouldn't be so difficult for producers to determine the legitimate exhibition value they must get for a picture, taking into consideration the fact that a part of their pictures may not meet with ready sale. And to offer these pictures to the exhibitor at prices that he can pay and come out on.

"Of course, under that plan some of the terrible flops would not be made and possibly a little more care would be exercised in production, but even the motion picture business can stand that.

"It might mean that the exhibitor might pay a little more for his pictures, but isn't it true that it isn't the price that you pay so much as it is the gross business that you

"The Blood Ship"

IN these days of too many applause sauce, hokum pictures, with little point but costing a whole lot of money, "The Blood Ship" comes along like a breath of fresh air.

It's a natural, box-office wise if there ever was one. A ripsnorting, blood-curdling melodrama, packed witth action, paced in a fine tempo, and altogether one of the best sea picturs ever made.

The production values are excellent, but we are willing to bet it did not cost half as much as some of the over-rated films—over-rated everywhere, that is, except at the box-office.

A while ago, writing from Hollywood, we ventured the opinion that all the studios out there are nowadays about on an even keel so far as facilities for picture-making go. "The Blood Ship," made by Harry Cohn for Columbia, proves it.

The way to make fine pictures is to cut out the bunk and go ahead and make them. Columbia has done it in "The Blood Ship." W. A. J.

Distributors Refuse to Sell to Combines

Definite Policy Adopted Prohibits Selling to Grouped Exhibitors

NATIONAL distributors who are members of the Hays organization have adopted a definite policy against booking combines and declare they will no longer sell films to exhibitors banded together in buying combinations. This move was made following a number of meetings held at the Hays office because of the rapidly increasing number of buying pools throughout the country, and especially in the east.

For a number of years individual distributors operating nationally have strenuously opposed the booking combines, but this is probably the first time there has been concerted action on the part of the leading distributors to place the ban on selling to these combines.

Among the leaders in these buying combines, and those now causing the most uneasiness to the distributors, are the Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corp., which represents 139 theatres in upper New York State, Western New York, and Western Pennsylvania, and the Associated Theatres of Ohio, of which Charles L. Casanave is president. The latter organization is identified with Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corp., but operates only in Ohio. Nikitas Dipson and Fred Zimmerman are the prime movers of Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corp.

For several weeks past distributors have declined service to Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corp. It is said that the distributors regard as a booking combine any organization attempting to book films for any theatre in which it has not a 50 per cent interest.

It is claimed that several exhibitors who signed with Associated Theatres of Ohio, through which to secure their film, have broken away from that organization and that three towns in Ohio have signed contracts for a year's service over the authority of the buying combine to which they belong.

Thirty theatres in the Ohio group, however, are at loggerheads with exchanges, which following instructions from their home offices, are declining to recognize the booking combine. The theatres declare they are banded in their buying, not to secure cheaper prices, but for protection against various elements which threaten their independence.

Mrs. F. E. Maustbaum Dead After Illness

General regret was felt throughout the photoplay industry in Central Pennsylvania over the news of the death, on July 8, of Mrs. Fanny E. Maustbaum, mother of the late Jules E. Maustbaum, who was head of the Stanley Company of America, at her home in Philadelphia, at the age of 77. She had been ill for several weeks and is survived by two daughters and a son.

Michigan Starts War on Block Booking

"This office has always insisted that it was possible for a producer to know what he was going to make definitely before he sells, and to know how much he was going to spend on those productions, and, therefore, the price they would be worth. It seems, according to some of those who have studied the business, that too long we have followed the course of least resistance.

"Nevertheless, block booking is illegal. An order has been made to report what is going to be done to remedy the situation. This office will be very much interested in hearing from any exhibitor in the state of Michigan who wanted to buy less than a block and was refused or quoted positively prohibitive prices. For it's our legal duty to help the government."

Marcus Resigns Param'nt Division Managership

Louis Marcus, District Manager for Paramount in the Intermountain territory, has tendered his resignation, in order to devote all of his time to The Louis Marcus Enterprises of which he is president and George E. Carpenter, secretary.

Marcus is to operate a string of theatres, which includes the Paramount Empress and Victory theatres as well as the recently acquired Orpheum Theatre, of Salt Lake; the Paramount at Ogden, the Paramount at Provo and the Idaho Theatre at Twin Falls. It is Marcus' plan to develop and expand this present circuit.

Herman Wobber, who has been District Manager for Paramount on the Pacific Coast for several years, will have charge of the Intermountain section, adding to his present territory the territory formerly presided over by Marcus.

Grand, Northfield, Minn., Added to F. and R. Chain

Another house has been added to the F. and R. chain through the acquisition of the Grand Theatre, at Northfield, Minn. Everett Dilley, former owner, has given a ten-year lease on the building and is to be retained as resident manager. The house will be completely remodelled and will have to be closed for a period of six weeks to allow for repairs. There has been a deal of this kind pending for a long time as Northfield is a college town, and with only one theatre the danger of competition in the form of a new theatre has become more acute.

First National St. Louis Exchange Is Fireproof

The new St. Louis exchange of First National, located at 3212 Olive Street, is a most up-to-date and modern building and strictly fireproof. The brick structure, one story in height, is shared with the Warner Bros.' St. Louis branch office. All of the back room equipment is of steel. All the latest contrivances that make for speed, convenience and service are utilized throughout the building.

Economy Mass Meeting July 30

Producers Will Meet All Branches of Industry to Act in Curtailing of Production Costs

FOLLOWING a series of conferences between producers in Hollywood and various branches of the motion picture industry a general conference between the producers and all groups is set for July 27th and a mass meeting for July 30th. At the termination of the forthcoming meetings it is the hope of all concerned that the announcement of salary reductions tentatively set by some producers for August 1st will be forestalled.

Every angle of the motion picture industry has been discussed by the producers with the various groups individually, and as a result many valuable suggestions have been made and some plans outlined that may bring about a curtailment of production costs without affecting salaries of stars, players, directors, writers and technicians. The sentiment of all of these meetings has been that what is best for the industry is best for all individuals concerned.

The Hollywood conferences are being sponsored by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, of which Douglas Fairbanks is president. Meetings have been held between the producers and players, the producers and directors, and the producers and writers. These will be followed by a second round of conferences between the same groups and between the producers and technicians. Then will come the general conference of all groups and the mass meeting.

All conferences have been conducted on the most amicable bases and they have been entirely devoid of friction. In a statement on the conferences Douglas Fairbanks said:

"The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been organized primarily to unify the various branches of the motion picture industry, so that if at any time any particular branch should be confronted with difficulties we shall be able to confer among ourselves with the idea of solving the problems in question. As is the case now, producers feel that the cost of production has reached its highest peak and, being an actor and writer as well as a producer, I am in a position to know this, but our first and most important obligation is to try to improve the quality of pictures at all times. This we owe to the public.

"I feel sure that the result of this series of meetings and conferences will be the development of the real architects and engineers of our business, who will be able to systematize and regulate the amount of time consumed in the preparing of a picture, the 'shooting' of a picture, and the editing of a picture so that a maximum result will be obtained with minimum effort.

"In the entire history of my experience I have never been so optimistic about an organization as I am about the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences. I have never seen a finer co-operative spirit nor a more sincere and honest effort, not with a few, but with all, to establish our industry among the great institutions of the world. We are now, all of us, in the same boat—actor, technician, producer, writer, and director—and whoever rocks the boat affects all in it; we are members of a group where the good of one concerns the good of all and the good of all concerns the good of one. Thus we have a unity that represents loyalty, strength and progress."

Following the conference with the writers Samuel Goldwyn said:

"It has been both beneficial and educational to hear the author's point of view expressed fearlessly and in man-to-man fashion. The spirit of the meeting has been that we are all here to help the industry as a whole and thereby help ourselves individually. There has been a full recognition of the fact that individual success is wholly dependent on the success of the industry in all of its branches. There has been no feeling of employer and employee, an absence which is gratifying to the employer."

Rupert Hughes, speaking as both writer and director, said:

"The moving picture business has been gravely hurt by certain autocratic persons who will listen to nobody and who make radical decisions that destroy promising pictures. Some of these persons are executives. Some of them are directors, writers or actors. Owing to the peculiar combination of enormous outlay, emotional material and a horse-race gamble on success, mistakes are expensive and quarrels inevitable. The wonder is that they are not more numerous and destructive."

Equity continues to be unusually active about Hollywood and is rapidly recruiting new members among the players. Frank Gilmore, executive secretary of Equity, is in charge of the work. With the salary question not yet settled, the players are seeking the protection Equity affords. The initial meeting with Equity brought out about 700 players and a second meeting was scheduled for this week. The players at the first meeting voted to join Equity in a body.

Warren Lewis New Member Warner Ad. Staff

Warren Lewis, a well-known personality in motion picture and theatrical circles, has joined the advertising force of Warner Bros. Under the supervision of A. P. Waxman, Mr. Lewis will have charge of trade paper advertising, posters and the Warner house organ, Brass Tacks.

"U" to Acquire Four More Houses, Seattle Reports

Reports received on Seattle's Film Row this week indicate that negotiations are practically concluded for Universal to purchase the Auditorium, Vogue and Liberty Theatres in Kelso, Washington, and the Blue Mouse Theatre in Kalama, from W. S. Strange's Kelso Amusement Company.

Stanley Company Expects Box-Office Receipts of $35,000,000 for Year

AT the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Stanley Company of America, which now controls 245 theatres, John J. McGuirk, president of the corporation, made some announcements of unusual interest. In addition to increasing the capital stock from 1,000,000 (no par value) to 2,500,000 similar shares, President McGuirk announced the anticipation of consolidated box office receipts of all theatres of the corporation for 1927 as $35,000,000. Receipts for the year ended December 25, 1926 were $20,529,836.

In announcing the increase in capital stock President McGuirk said it was not made with a view toward a new issue at this time but merely to provide sufficient stock in the treasury so that, should any additional be needed in the future it would not be necessary to call special meetings of the stockholders.

During the past year the Stanley Company has added to its holdings 149 theatres in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia. In addition a building program was launched which includes such theatres as the Stanley in Pittsburgh, the Stanley in Baltimore, the new theatre in Philadelphia to be called the Jules, in memory of Jule Mastbaum, late President of the Stanley Company; theatres in East Liberty, Pa., Jersey City, Utica and Frederick, Md. These involve a capital expenditure of $16,000,000.

The following directors were elected: Mr. McGuirk, A. R. Boyd, A. Sablosky, Irving D. Rossheim, Morris Wolf, Lewis Sablosky, Frank W. Buhler, Albert L. Smith, John A. McCarthy, George H. Earle, Jr., Clifford B. Hawley, Alfred W. Fleisher, H. M. Crandall, Moe Mark, Jacob Fabian and James B. Clark.

Westerns and Comedies Real Leaders With Public, Says Hays

WILL H. HAYS declares the public prefers the Western and comedies in feature pictures and the news reel in short subjects. These are the undoubted choices of a majority of the motion picture theatre goers, according to the head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

By the Westerns, Mr. Hays explained, he did not mean the slapstick rough and tumble type. The day of the crude Westerns with the cattle rustlers and dance halls has passed, he declared. The class of pictures referred to are such as "The Covered Wagon," "The Vanishing American," "North of Thirty-Six," "The Iron Horse," "The Last Frontier" and "The Flaming Frontier."

Among the popular stars named by Mr. Hays for bringing popularity to the Westerns were: Broncho Billy, Bill Hart, Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard, Fred Thomson, Jack Holt, Tim McCoy and others.

That people like these stories, according to Mr. Hays, is proven by surveys made over a period of the past two years. Studio sets, he said, seldom equal the grandeur and glory of real Western canyons, deserts, forests and mountains.

Building Theatres in Philly

$5,000,000 Will Be Spent on Five New Houses During Six Months' Period; Injunction Granted Against Stanley

THEATRE-BUILDING programs for Philadelphia and the immediate vicinity to get under way during the remaining months of the year provide for a total expenditure of $5,000,000. Buildings have been demolished at the corner of Walnut and Quince Streets for a new theatre for the Shubert's. Green and Altman have awarded a general contract to the George Kessler Construction Company for the erection of a 2,500-seat house at 69th St. and Elmwood Ave., which will be known as the General. The Roxy Amusement Company has had plans prepared for a 2,500-seat theatre on the North side of South Street, between Eighth and Darien Streets. It is being designed by Hodgens & Hill. This theatre will be so equipped as to provide for theatrical as well as picture entertainment.

I. W. Levin is preparing plans for a motion picture theatre to be built at Baltimore Ave. and 47th St. for Brown & Sons. William Freihofer is also having plans prepared for a new 3,000-seat theatre to be erected in the Oak Lane section of Broad Street, south of 67th Avenue.

Common Pleas Court No. 2 has granted an injunction restraining the Stanley Company of America from excavating any closer to the building now occupied by Bateman Brothers at 2015 Market Street, Philadelphia, the site of the new Erlanger Theatre. It is claimed that further excavation there for the Erlanger Theatre would imperil the foundation of the building occupied by Bateman Brothers, on which they hold a lease expiring November 1, 1927.

Names New Executives

Hatrick Announces Editorial Appointments to International Staff

LEO A. POLLOCK has been named by Edgar B. Hatrick as editor of International Newsreel. Hatrick is the head of all of the film interests of William Randolph Hearst. Others of the recent appointments to the editorial staff of International Newsreel include G. E. Elliott, Associate Editor; Samuel T. Moore, News Editor; Walter Bredin, Associate News Editor, and Joseph H. Rinehart, Film Editor.

Developments in the newsreel field, according to Hatrick, have made necessary certain changes in the editorial staff of International, which gives it one of the strongest staffs in the field.

Mr. Pollock, the new editor, has long been engaged in motion picture and newspaper work. For some time past he has been associate editor of International Newsreel. Previously he was dramatic editor of the New York Evening Journal, and later picture editor of that paper. He joined the Hearst organization in 1916, serving in an editorial capacity on the New York American.

Mr. Elliott, the new associate editor, also a former newspaper man, entered the motion picture field in 1914. For many years he engaged in the production of travel, scenic and single and two-reel novelty pictures.

Mr. Moore was a newspaper war correspondent, magazine writer and Washington correspondent. Prior to joining International Newsreel he was associate editor of Fox News.

Walter Bredin, associate news editor, has been with the Hearst organization for six teen years, and with International Newsreel throughout its entire existence. Mr. Rinehard, film editor, has been with International Newsreel for ten years. Prior to that he was associated with D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett and Thomas Ince.

Many Firms Obtain N. Y. Charters of Incorporation

Newly incorporated motion picture companies incorporating at Albany in New York State during the past week included the following, according to records filed with the Department of State: Forty-first Street Theatre Co., Inc., Julius Kahn, Jerome Weinstein, Sidney H. Posner, New York City; Wakefield Theatres, Inc., $25,000, Milton Hart, Mitchel Fruitstone, Lillian Knott, New York City; Elias Titling Co., Inc., Flushing, $5,000, Herman Meisner, Robert C. Roy, Gustave M. Berknoff, New York City; Prince Film Producing Co., Inc., $250,000, Domenico Nicassio, Vincenzo Ruta, New York City; Joseph O. Laine, Brooklyn; Mayfair Associates, Inc., $20,000, Celia and Isaac Schwartz, Rose Kleinfeld, New York City; Productions Syndicate Corporation, capitalization not stated, Harry C. Hand, Vincent Westrup, Samuel C. Wood, New York City; Hiller, Fisk & Co., Inc., capitalization not stated, Louis L. Hiller, Frank G. Hall, Joseph F. Fiske, New York City; Paterson Operating Corporation, $20,000, Henry Lederman, A. John Eder, I. M. Lichtigan, New York City; Orpheum Paterson Corp., capitalization not specified, A. John Eder, Charles Franklyn, I. N. Herk, New York City.

Building Starts Soon on New $500,000 Majestic

Construction will be started within the next week or ten days on Harry Redmon's new $500,000 Majestic Theatre in East St. Louis, Ill.

Wreckers are now demolishing the old buildings on the site of the theatre.

The new house was designed by Boller Brothers, of Kansas City, Mo., and will have a seating capacity of 2,000 persons. It will cover a site 90 by 189 feet. The general contract was awarded recently to Harry Bancroft, of East St. Louis. Seats will occupy the mezzanine as well as the parquet. The house will also be equipped with a 40-foot stage with complete facilities.

Seven Pathe Shorts on List for July 31

Pathe's short feature program for the week of July 31 prominently lists the latest "Our Gang" comedy, "The Glorious Fourth," personally directed by Robert McGowan. Other releases of the week include "The Shadow of the Menace," the seventh chapter of the Pathe serial; "The Crimson Flash," "The Bully," an Aesop Film Fable; Topics of the Day No. 31, Pathe Review No. 31, and two issues of Pathe News, the pioneer news reel. Pathe Review No. 31 presents: "The Log of a Log," "An Epic of Faith," and "The Shepherd of Manhattan."

Film Economy As Press Sees It

Newspapers Pointed in Their Comments on Proposed Salary Slash; Attitude of Public Reflected in Editorials

NEWSPAPERS throughout the country continue to comment on the recent announcement in Hollywood of a ten per cent slash in salaries. These comments vary, some being directed at the effect on quality in pictures, while others declare that the stars have been receiving entirely too much money and the economical move is justifiable. The comments are highly significant, however, and should be read by the entire industry, as they are a reflection from the people themselves.

Following are the latest comments:

Wilmington Every Evening.—If the portrayer of 'Don Q' ever leads the embattled forces of moviedom against the managerial ramparts he ought to arrange in advance to have the scene filmed.

Nashville Banner.—Does this declaration of a slash in the pay of the movie stars mean that the era of almost hysterical enthusiasm over individuals is about ready to pass? Has the motion picture public been somehow or other educated up to the place where it is ready for something more worthwhile than has been afforded by the ruthless insistence of some star to be the whole show whether or not? Such questions are suggested at least.

Tulsa World.—One stern necessity is that the patronizing public be given more for its money than it has hitherto been given. A scandal of the age is the profligacy of the moving picture industry.

See Hand of Bankers

St. Paul Dispatch.—The producers, it appears, have been put wise to themselves by bankers with whom they have had dealings in a number of recent motion picture mergers. It will be tragic, indeed, if instead of being able to sport half a dozen luxurious motor cars they must worry along with only three or four each.

Clarksburgh (W. Va.) Telegram.—Even allowing for the exuberance of publicity, many of the leading motion picture stars have been drawing salaries beyond reason, and doubtless much beyond their real worth.

Sioux City Journal.—The average star, man or woman, has grown accustomed to the pampering much money has made possible and has no desire to accept anything that will mean lessened opportunity for the ease and comfort and luxury that go with opulence.

Ironwood (Mich.) Globe.—Less money would make for better moral conditions among the inhabitants. Motion picture stars of long standing are reported fabulously wealthy.

Kansas City Times.—The movie producers who now announce that pictures are costing too much heretofore have boasted of their cost; the salaries they now say are ruining them were pushed up by themselves for the purpose of impressing the public with the immense artistic abilities of the stars who received them.

Manchester (N. H.) Union.—The high price of Hollywood is something the general public is likely enough to admit without much question. The antics of that capital of filmdom have been of a sort to persuade most people that the piper out there makes sure of being pretty well paid by those who dance so queerly to his tunes.

Publicity Is Blamed

Poughkeepsie Eagle and News.—The news will be something of a surprise to a public wheih always has put the industry in the bonanza class, and has assumed that the producers made so much money that salaries didn't make much difference, an assumption for which the producers themselves have been chiefly to blame by the publicity which they have given to reputedly tremendous amounts paid to the stars of screendom.

Utica Observer Dispatch.—Great extravagance has been used in making films. Millions of dollars have been wasted to meet the whim of some actor, producer, camera man, film editor or anybody else. Cases are said to be almost without number where thousands have been expended upon picturing some episode, only to be thrown away the next day.

Asheville (N. C.) Citizen.—Outsiders perceive how tragic this thing is when they realize that, as a result of it, Adolphe Menjou will lose $400 of his $4,000 a week, Pola Negri $500 of her $5,000, Colleen Moore $850 of her $8,500 and Jack Barrymore $1,000 of his $10,000 a week.

Wilmington (N. C.) News-Dispatch.—Fabulous salaries, either real or paper figures, for a time proved good publicity stunts but they have not always resulted in producing good pictures.

Cincinnati Times-Star.—The reduction of salaries and expense of scenic effects that has been inaugurated in the moving picture industry was bound to come with greater organization. Many of the absurd salaries paid mediocre actors were entirely due to wild competition for the services of performers who had built up what may be called "trade names."

Nashville Tennessean.—The public has been a party to the very greatly magnified idea of the worth of the individual star. They have placed a good deal more emphasis on the actors than they have on the production . . . fabulous and unearned salaries have been largely responsible for the scandals that have involved and besmirched the private lives of so many of the favorites of the screen.

Dallas Times Herald.—This salary reduction may indicate that the day of the star is over. The movie audiences are becoming more sophisticated. They are demanding pictures with an appeal that transcends the work of any particular star.

Bernhard, Tiffany Manager, Leaves for London

Fred Bernhard, managing director of Tiffany Productions in England, has left New York for London, after a visit for several weeks with M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of the company, during which plans were discussed for the sale and distribution of the twenty gems from Tiffany for 1927-1928 in the British Isles.

Mr. Hoffman also announces that during Bernhard's visit plans were formulated for the production of several Tiffany pictures in England, to be handled under the personal supervision of Mr. Bernhard. Before leaving, Mr. Bernhard discussed many well-known stories, novels and plays, several of which have been selected for production in England.

Pa. County Will Enforce Dance Hall Regulations

Motion picture theatre owners in Bradford County, Pa., received with satisfaction an announcement made by District Attorney Fanning and Deputy County Treasurer Landon, that, after a conference, they had decided to enforce strictly the new laws regulating public dance halls, which are a source of keen competition to the picture theatres in the summertime. The authorities threatened to close a number of the dance places unless several of them radically change their policy.

Trade Commission Receiving Acceptances for Block-Booking Conference

SEVERAL acceptances have been received from producers and distributors for the conference called by the Federal Trade Commission on block-booking. It is understood these include Will H. Hays and Paramount.

It is expected official announcement of the time and place of meeting will be made shortly, and it seems probable that one of the Commissioners will be chosen to preside.

The scope of the conference will be largely up to the industry, it is indicated, the plan being to make it cover as many trade abuses as possible.

The Commission sent out the call for the conference last week, following its decision against block-booking in the Paramount case.

"Ash Policy" to Replace Publix Unit Shows

Band Acts to Be Stage Features on Programs of Presentations Houses of Circuit

AFTER a year and a half of experimentation with the unit show type of presentation, Publix is apparently abandoning that policy in favor of the so-called band act. To a lesser degree the circuiting idea will be maintained, with an occasional production traveling as a unit and individual performers and name attractions such as Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, recently signed to a 44 weeks contract, booked for a tour of the circuit.

Flash acts, produced in New York by Frank Cambria, John Murray Anderson and Paul Oscard, which up to recently were sent out one a week to the presentation houses, will be replaced by less costly acts featuring a band leader and an organization of local musicians. This style of performance is built along the lines which Paul Ash has offered with such success in Chicago B. & K. houses.

Several of the theatres which formerly featured the unit shows already have substituted a resident band with a weekly change of program and specialty numbers introduced in the course of the act. The numbers are staged in atmospheric settings to give a visual twist to the performance and elaborated with specialties, the band leader acting as "master of ceremonies."

Among the Publix theatres which have been dropped from the list where unit shows are offered and in which band acts are now the stage feature, are the Ambassador, St. Louis, where Herbert Rawlinson, former screen star, is presiding as master of ceremonies with a resident band; the Olympia, New Haven, at which Alex Hyde is band leader; the Capitol, Des Moines, now offering Jimmy Ellard and his Jazz Jesters; the Howard, Atlanta, which has Al Short and His Melody Boys in place of unit presentations; the Riviera, Omaha, at which stage offerings are made by Boyd Senter and his orchestra.

Publix started to experiment with band acts last fall, when the "new idea orchestras" were introduced at several houses to cater to local tastes which the unit shows, produced in New York, evidently were unsuccessful in doing. Alexander Keese, for several years a popular figure with patrons of the Palace theatre in Dallas, was sent to the Newman in Kansas City, and Jacques Beaucaire, formerly at the Newman, replaced Keese in Dallas. This "new idea" stage show proved successful. Keese is still with Publix; at present he is at the Tivoli theatre in Chattanooga.

The idea was then extended to other houses. Gene Rodemich, formerly featured orchestra leader at Loew's State in St. Louis, was sent to the Metropolitan in Boston, where he has continued to figure as a popular attraction. The Unit Shows are still offered at the Metropolitan. Several other Publix houses followed the Newman and the Palace on the list of theatres featuring the new idea orchestras.

Paul Whiteman is currently playing his last week at the Paramount in New York. He has had a different setting and a new act each week. The costumes, settings, and specialties used by Whiteman at the Paramount probably will be sent out over the circuit. The Paramount next week will offer the first of four special acts which Publix has engaged Andre Charlot, famous English producer, to stage for circulating as unit shows. Gertrude Lawrence, who made her first appearance on the American stage as a star of a Charlot Revue, will be the featured performer in the act at the Paramount.

The acts circulated as a unit, which will include Charlot's miniature revues, probably will be reorganized in Chicago, where there are three houses operating under the Publix presentation policy, and travel from that point in a revised form, with reduced expenses.

The elaborate unit shows which were circuited under the policy now being dropped cost thousands of dollars to produce and the weekly operating expense ranged from $3,500 to $6,000. At many of the theatres the shows did not draw anything like the amount of money charged up against the house offering them on a pro rata basis. After the first flurry of novelty attendant upon their introduction, the presentations were found incapable of bolstering up a weak screen attraction, and the box office figures again reverted to normal, with the house offering the strongest picture invariably taking rank as the box office leader of the week, irrespective of the strength or weakness, or even absence, of presentations.

"Prince of Adventurers" Shown in London

By ELIZABETH LONERGAN

Staff Correspondent of Motion Picture News and Kinematograph Weekly

LONDON, July 15. (By Cable).—"The Prince of Adventurers," originally called "Casanova" and starring Mosjoukine, was given its British trade show today and was well received. It is wonderfully done, and the writer considers it will be a success in America. Detailed review follows.

Warners Schedule Product

Announce Release Dates for Eighteen Films: Fourteen Features and Four Extended Run Productions

MORE than half of the Warner Bros. pictures for the season of 1927-28 have had definite release dates assigned to them. Release dates have been set for the first 14 of the 26 Warner films for the new season and four of the Warner Bros. extended runs.

The new schedule opens on August 20 with "The Bush Leaguer," starring Monte Blue. On August 29 will come "The Outpost" (tentative title), an Irene Rich vehicle. September 3 will be the release date for "Slightly Used," starring May McAvoy with Conrad Nagel. George Jessel's "The Broadway Kid" comes to the exhibitor on September 10. "Jaws of Steel," with Rin-Tin-Tin, is set for September 17. Following on September 24 comes "A Sailor's Sweetheart," featuring Louise Fazenda. "One Round Hogan," presenting Monte Blue in the stellar role, is to be issued on October 1. October 8 will mark the release of a de luxe production the title and details of which will be announced later.

"Beware of Married Men," featuring Irene Rich, is an October 22 release. "Finnegan's Ball" (temporary title), will be released on November 5, and "A Dog of the Regiment," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, on November 19. A May McAvoy vehicle, "Rebecca O'Brien, will reach the first run houses on December 3. "Five and Ten Cent Annie," with Louise Fazenda, is dated for December 17 and "Good Time Charley," featuring Warner Oland, will come on December 31.

The four extended run productions which have definitely been assigned release dates follow: "The Missing Link," Syd Chaplin's feature-length comedy, August 7; "When a Man Loves," starring John Barrymore with Dolores Costello, August 21; "Old San Francisco," featuring Dolores Costello, September 4, and "The First Auto," with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller, September 18.

Constructing 1,800-Seat House in Grace, Montreal

A large, new moving picture theatre is under construction in Notre Dame de Grace, Montreal, by a new organization, Confederation Amusements, Limited, of Montreal. The new house will seat 1,800 people and will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000. The location is at Old Orchard and Sherbrooke Streets. The president of the new company is E. Tabah, head of the dry goods firm of Tabah, Cousins, Limited, Montreal. The theatre is scheduled to be opened early in 1928.

Four M-G-M Releases to Be Issued in August

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will inaugurate its list of new season releases with four films for August. These include Lon Chaney's "Mockery," "After Midnight," starring vehicle for Norma Shearer; "The Bugle Call," with Jackie Coogan, and the co-starring combination of Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in "Adam and Evil."

F B O Has Completed 15 Features, 16 Shorts

ARRIVING this week in New York from Hollywood, where he effected a complete reorganization in the production department, William Le Baron, vice-president of F B O in charge of production, is conferring with Joseph P. Kennedy, F B O president, and other home office eecutives on next year's production plans. The 1927-28 program is in excellent shape, according to Mr. Le Baron, who feels "that we have set a record on advance production of pictures on our new season's schedule." A dozen features and 16 short subjects have been completed and three more features will have been finished before the present week elapses, Mr. Le Baron stated. F B O has therefore decided to begin selecting the production program for 1928-29.

The productions already finished include: "The Gingham Girl," "The Great Mail Robbery," "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," "Not for Publication," "Shanghaied," "Judgment of the Hills," "The Coward," "Hook and Ladder, No. 9," "The Flying U Ranch," "The Mojave Kid," "The Boy Rider" and "Breed of Courage." The other three completed this week were: "The Harvester," "South Sea Love" and "In a Moment of Temptation."

Eleven Paramount Features in Process of Filming

Paramount this week reached the peak of summer production activities with 11 pictures in various stages of production. Several companies are out on location or are working on the studio stages. In addition to those already in work, nine new pictures will go into work during August and seven more in September. Prints of several feature productions are now in the Paramount cutting and titling rooms.

In work are "Hula," starring Clara Bow; "Swim, Girl, Swim," in which Bebe Daniels and Gertrude Ederle are appearing together; "Hitting for Heaven," Emil Jannings' second production for Paramount; "Heaven Help the Working Girl," with Esther Ralston, and "Tell It to Sweeney," co-featuring Chester Conklin and George Bancroft.

Florence Vidor is acting in "One Woman to Another"; John Waters is directing a large cast in "Beau Sabreur;" Richard Dix is back from location with his "Shanghai Bound" unit; Jack Luden is working in his first Western, "Shootin' Irons," and Adolphe Menjou is working in "A Gentleman of Paris."

Horwitz Begins Building New Astor in Cleveland

The first shovelful of dirt for the new 1600-seat Astor theatre, being built by M. B. Horowitz, in Cleveland, O., was turned last Thursday. The building is located at Hough Ave. and East 84th St., and when completed will belong to the Washington circuit, of which Horowitz is general manager. Horowitz says it's to be done in record time, and is ready to take up a bet with anyone who says it won't be open on Christmas Eve.

Tiffany Productions Are Named for Season

Twenty Features, Several Specials and Short Subjects Are Included

COMPLETE announcement has now been made by Tiffany Productions through M. H. Hoffman, vice-president, of the company's product for the 1927-28 season. The program comprises twenty feature productions and twenty-four short reelers in color. In addition there will be several special productions. The first of the latter will be produced under the Third Dimension Photography process, owned by Tiffany.

The titles of the feature productions are announced as follows:

"The Grain of Dust," "Bachelor Apartments," "Streets of Shanghai," "Lingerie," "Their Hour," "Women's Wares," "The Albany Night Boat," "The Tragedy of Youth," "Tia Juana Rose," "Ladies of the Night Club," "The House of Scandal," "Beautiful But Dumb," "The Scarlet Dove," "The Girl From Gay Paree," "Domestic Relations," "Night Life," "A Woman of the World," "Grass Widows," "Once and Forever" and "Clothes Make the Woman."

Among the players mentioned by Tiffany to appear in these productions are:

Pauline Frederick, Edmund Lowe, Claire Windsor, Lowell Sherman, Agnes Ayres, William Collier, Jr., Marceline Day, Jack Mulhall, Anita Stewart, Robert Agnew, Dorothy Phillips, Edmund Burns, Rod La Rocque, Henry B. Walthall, Hedda Hopper, Jane Novak, Helen Ferguson, Ward Crane, Doris Hill, Huntly Gordon, Alberta Vaughn, Eugene O'Brien, Jacqueline Logan, Conway Tearle, Bert Lytell, Shirley Mason, Raymond Hitchcock, Mae Busch, Montague Love, Jocelyn Lee, James Harrison, Lillian Rich, Gayne Whitman, Natalie Kingston, Betty Blythe, Pat O'Malley, Eileen Percy, Dorothy Devore, Lou Tellegen and Barbara Bedford.

The Third Dimension Photography to be applied to the special productions is said to add depth to the picture. The entire process is applied on the negative and no accessories of any kind are needed. The patents and processes employed to bring out depth upon the screen are done with the camera, the development of the negative and the printing of the positive film.

Pathe-De Mille Releases

Dates Scheduled for Nineteen De Mille Features to be Distributed by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

NINETEEN features on the Pathe-DeMille program of releases for 1927-28 will be distributed by Pathe Exchange, Inc., before January 1, 1928. Of these, eight pictures are listed as specials and the first release of the season will come on August 22. Besides the nineteen DeMille features there will be interspersed by Pathe other pictures of the Western, serial and comedy type. In addition, the Pathe News, the Pathe Review series and other Pathe short subjects will be released as usual.

The DeMille features and their release dates are as follows:

"The Country Doctor," starring Rudolph Schildkraut, August 27; "The Fighting Eagle" (a special), with Rod La Rocque, August 29; "The Rush Hour," starring Marie Prevost, September 5; "Beautiful But Dumb," starring Vera Reynolds, September 12; "Turkish Delight," with Rudolph Schildkraut and Julia Faye, September 19; 'The Angel of Broadway," a Leatrice Joy vehicle, September 26; 'The West Pointer" (a special), starring William Boyd, October 3; "The Wreck of the Hesperus (a special), with an all-star cast, October 10; "The Forbidden Woman" (a special), featuring Jetta Goudal, October 17; "The Wise Wife," with Phyllis Haver, October 24; "Hold 'Em, Yale" (a special), starring Rod La Rocque, October 31.

"The Girl in the Pullman," starring Marie Prevost, November 7; "The Main Event," a Vera Reynolds vehicle, November 14; "Let 'Er Go, Gallagher," with Junior Coghlan, November 21; "In Bad with Sinbad," with Franklin Pangborn featured, November 28; "Power" (a special), starring William Boyd, December 5; "The Blue Danube" (a special), featuring Leatrice Joy, December 12; "He's My Man," featuring Phyllis Haver, December 19, and "Rip Van Winkle" (a special), with Rudolph Schildkraut," December 26.

Ten Films Under Way at M-G-M Studio

With the launching of "Tea For Three," co-starring Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, and "Buttons," Jackie Coogan's new starring picture, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now has ten pictures under way.

King Vidor is completing the twelve-reel special, "The Crowd," in which Eleanor Boardman and James Murray are featured. Clarence Brown is directing "The Trail of '98," and Benjamin Christensen is directing Lon Chaney's "Mockery." Edmund Goulding is directing John Gilbert and Greta Garbo in "Love," and Victor Seastrom is directing Lillian Gish's "The Wind."

Monta Bell is nearing the completion of Norma Shearer's "After Midnight," and John S. Robertson is directing Ramon Novarro's new starring picture.

Within the succeeding four weeks at least six more pictures will be launched, three of them specials.

"Parade" Wins Germans

Nation's Newspapermen Vote 179 to 30 in Favor of Showing M-G-M's War Film Throughout Germany

AT a pre-review of "The Big Parade," held at the Gloria Palast in Berlin for German newspapermen to determine whether the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film was anti-German, 197 newspapermen voted "Yes" and 30 voted "No" in reply to the question as to whether the film should be shown in Germany.

The criticism published in the Der Montag Morgen declared that the picture is demonstrative of war, the real war, and said in part: "'The Big Parade' is a great human story, more effective than thousands of newspaper articles, lectures or books on war. It would be stealing from the German public a great spectacle not to show this film." The Berliner Tageblatt also concurred with this opinion, while the Licht-Bild-Buehne estimated the photoplay as offering convincing accusation against mass murder, stating that "the melody that is voiced here knows no national boundaries. It is the force of war in general, common to the people of all nations who are drawn into it."

The Film Kurier (a trade paper) reiterated its opinion that "The Big Parade" contains no anti-German tendency. In line with the above criticisms, Uhr Abendblatt voiced the opinion that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is "a picture without hatred, a picture without any political tendency, a very human picture—and, therefore, a picture against war."

In Germany films are generally criticised from a newspaper's political viewpoint, and as there are about 20 different political parties, the general favorable reception accorded the film tend to make M-G-M officials in the Berlin office look forward to a long run. The 30 papers that did protest against the move of releasing the film in Germany represent the old junker class.

Educat'l Studio Rushing Work; Seven for Aug.

THE several units working at the Educational studio are rushing things to complete the first comedies of their six respective series. Except for the first Dorothy Devore comedy all of the initial product for the new season will be ready for release in August and September.

The first batch of pictures to be released will be "Live News," a Tuxedo, starring Johnny Arthur, and "At Ease," a Lloyd Hamilton comedy. "A Half-Pint Hero," featuring Lupino Lane, Larry Semon in "Dummies," his own production, and George Davis in an untitled Mermaid comedy will next arrive. Dorothy Devore is completing her first comedy, as yet untitled, and "Big Boy," fully recovered from his sickness, will probably have his first comedy ready for early September release.

Educational's seven August releases are: "Jack From All Trades," a Sullivan cartoon; "Bubbles of Geography," a Hodge-Podge reel; "Poor Fish—The Ebbing Tide," one af the Bruce Outdoor Sketches; "The Non-Stop Fright," Sullivan cartoon; "Plumb Dumb," starring Poodles Hanneford; "Holly-Nuts," with "Big Boy," and "Fully Equipped," co-featuring Jack Lloyd and Henry Murdock.

First National to Star Barthelmess in "Noose"

Al Rockett, production head at the First National studio, and Ray Rockett, producer of the Barthelmess vehicles, announce that, following the completion of "The Drop Kick," Barthelmess will make "The Noose," instead of "The Shepherd of Kingdom Come." In accordance with the change in Barthelmess' plans, Bess Meredyth is now busy on the continuity of "The Noose" and production is scheduled to begin early in August. The "Shepherd" story will follow "The Noose" into production in the fall.

Casting Progressing on Paramount's "Jesse James"

A strong cast will surround Fred Thomson in his first picture for Paramount, "Jesse James." Latest additions to the list of actors and actresses are Mary Carr, who will play the part of Mrs. Zerelda Samuels, the mother of Frank and Jesse James, and Montague Love, who will impersonate Frederick Kimms, father of the girl who later became the bride of the famous outlaw. Harry Wood will be Bob Ford, the man who slew Jesse James for the sake of the rewards outstanding in 1882. The role of Frank James will be portrayed by Frank Pierce while the character of Parson Bill will be interpreted by William Courtright.

Paramount Offers Free Mats to Exhibitors

Paramount is offering to bookers of its 100 percent program for 1927-28 a free "mat" for newspapers, at the top of which will be printed in 42-point type a two-line head containing the theatre name and address.

The mat's text matter is in large-size, readable type; heads of the stars, their names and the titles of the productions in which they appear this season comprise the subject matter of this "broadside."

Clive Brook in Gilda Gray's "Devil Dancer"

Clive Brook is appearing opposite Gilda Gray in her first United Artists picture, "The Devil Dancer," which Samuel Goldwyn is producing. Mr. Brook is playing in test scenes but it is practically a certainty that his selection as leading man will ultimately be announced. This will be the actor's first appearance under the Goldwyn banner; he has played in a number of Florence Vidor starring vehicles and with Pola Negri.

Vocafilm Premiere Set for July 25

THE world premiere of Vocafilm productions will be staged at the Longacre Theatre in New York City on Monday evening, July 25, according to David R. Hochreich, president of Vocafilm Corporation of America. The opening program will consist of eight numbers.

Included in the program will be Val and Ernie Stanton, English vaudevillians; Moss and Frye, colored entertainers; Ciccolini, Chicago Opera tenor; George Lyons, Harpist and humorist; Yasha Bunchik, Russian 'cellist; Wilson Sisters and Washburn, with a vaudeville act; the original Radio Franks and the Vocafilm Symphony.

"Babes Come Home" will be the feature picture, and it has been scored with a Vocafilm introduction by Ruth himself. The recording was made by Dr. Edward Kilenyi and Mr. Essig, with a 35-piece orchestra. A summer price basis will prevail at the Longacre box-office. Opening night tickets will cost $10.00 for orchestra and mezzanin and $5.00 for balcony.

Supporting Players Signed for "Alias the Lone Wolf"

With the selection of William V. Mong, Ned Sparks, James Mason and Paulette Duval for rôles in "Alias the Lone Wolf," shooting will start immediately on this Louis Joseph Vance novel, starring Bert Lytell and featuring Lois Wilson in the leading feminine rôle.

"Alias the Lone Wolf" will be the second special of Columbia's "Perfect Thirty," and marks William V. Mong's third appearance for the company this year.

Newsreel Resume

By L. C. Moen

AFTER the excitement of recent months, this week's crop of newsreels seems rather tame. There is an almost total lack of anything strikingly big, with the result that the reels feature a quantity of human interest stories, animal stuff, hot weather subjects and the like.

Byrd's welcome in Paris, and his arrival in New York with his crew and with Chamberlin, are featured in all the reels.

International No. 58 shows views of the Palestine earthquake; the Lake George swimming event; and the royal air circus at Hendon, England.

International No. 59 has one of the best subjects of the week, American marines in Pekin, China, rushing defense preparations; a story of unusual pictorial beauty and interest.

Pathe News No. 60 has some good shots of the international track meet in England, with British and American university teams competing.

Otherwise, the reels contain the usual assortment of events; Helen Wills returning; canoe maneuvers; Thea Rasche flying; and the like. Not much choice among them this week, with International having perhaps a shade the advantage in general interest.

Rogers to Start "Texas Steer" as Scheduled

BACK home in Beverly Hills convalescing after this operation in the California Hospital, Will Rogers expects to place "The Texas Steer" into work about August 1, as originally scheduled. An announcement was made this week to that effect from the offices of Sam E. Rork, producer for First National. Richard Wallace, who will handle the megaphone, will start production on the photoplay in Washington, D. C., and will then shift to a Texas ranch and then back to Burbank for interior scenes.

"Fortune Hunter" Title of New Syd Chaplin Film

Syd Chaplin's new starring picture for Warner Bros., an extended run production, will be released under the title of "The Fortune Hunter." It is adapted from the Broadway play by Winchell Smith, which achieved a year's run in both New York and Chicago.

"The Fortune Hunter" was directed by Charles F. Reisner. The cast includes Clara Horton, Helene Costello, Louise Carver, Thomas Jefferson, Duke Martin, Robert Perry and Paul Kruger.

Schenck Publicity Man Becomes Production Head

Harry Brand, formerly publicity director for Joseph M. Schenck's publicity units and for a time exploitation director for the New York office of United Artists, has been elevated by Mr. Schenck to a state where Mr. Brand has full supervision of production for the Buster Keaton comedy unit.

Mr. Brand has been in charge for nearly a year of Keaton's studio work and he will receive full screen credit for the comedian's latest effort, "College."

Trade Boards Announce Returns from Benefits

THE Minneapolis Film Board of Trade reports that theatres in the Minneapolis territory raised for the flood sufferers $5,897.78. Distributors contributed film with a rental value of $1,214.50. The Detroit Film Board of Trade reports that receipts from motion picture theatres for the flood sufferers total $8,191.63. The total value of film contributed by distributors was $476.

Fifty-two theatres in Denver territory raised $3,440.47. The value of gratis film and advertising material donated by exchanges was $1,285.50.

The Seattle Film Board of Trade, in a partial report, shows that sixteen theatres raised $2,424.11.

The Butte, Mont., Film Board of Trade reports that thirteen theatres around Butte raised $1,216.51 for the flood sufferers. The rental value of free film contributed by the film exchanges for these performances was $206.50.

In and Out of Town

CHARLES M. STEELE, supervisor of exchanges, and Stanley W. Hatch, Western Sales Manager, for First National Pictures, are in the Mid-West on a ten days' trip. Mr. Steele will visit the exchanges in St. Louis, Des Moines, Minneapolis and other cities, while Mr. Hatch's tour will embrace Des Moines, Minneapolis and other exchanges.

IRVING BRISKIN, head of the foreign department of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, leaves Monday for a week's sojourn in Canada. Briskin is headed for an important conference with Sterling officials in Montreal.

A. W. SMITH, JR., Eastern sales manager for First National, is back at his desk after a trip to Toronto, where he and R. S. Bell, Canadian manager for the company, conferred with N. L. Nathanson regarding First National product for the new season.

HARRY COHN, vice-president in charge of production for Columbia Pictures, arrived in New York early this week, to be present at "The Blood Ship" world premiere at the Roxy Theater on July 16.

W. E. CALLAWAY, Southern sales manager for First National, is off on a ten-day trip during which he will visit a number of his Southern exchanges. His first stop was Indianapolis, with Memphis to follow.

NED E. DEPINET, general sales manager of First National, and Stanley W. Hatch, Western sales manager, are back at their desks after a trip to Chicago and other Mid-West exchanges.

FOLLOWING several business conferences with Cranfield and Clarke, who are now releasing a series of two-reel comedies in which he is being starred by the Lange-Joy Films, Inc., Al Joy, comedian, returned to the Coast last week.

Territories Sold for Two Levine Mascot Serials

Nat Levine, producer of motion pictures serials, announces the territories already sold on his two Mascot serials for 1927-28. The first of these, "The Isle of Sunken Gold," has already been completed and the second is to go into work shortly. The Levine serials will be handled by Hollywood Pictures Corporation in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey; First Graphic Exchanges, Inc., in Upper New York State and Michigan; Fischer Film Exchange in Ohio and Kentucky; Celebrated Film Exchange in Minnesota, North and South Dakota; Midwest Distributing Corp. in Wisconsin; Liberty Film Corp. in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, and Western Pictures Corp. in Washington, Oregon, Montana and Northern Idaho.

British & Continental Trading Corp. controls the entire foreign rights. Deals now pending in other United States territories are to be closed shortly.

Leishman Gets Post as "U" Branch Chief

E. D. LEISHMAN, for the past year auditor of exchanges for Universal, has been promoted to a newly-created post, that of supervisor of exchanges. Leishman's new work, as announced by Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager, who made the appointment, will be the supervision of all exchange personnel, maintenance and matters pertaining to physical distribution, and office operation.

Leishman has been with Universal since 1922.

Claire Windsor, Cortez and Tearle Columbia Stars

Three important names were added this week to the roster of box office players that Columbia is signing for this year's product, when Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production, signed Ricardo Cortez, Claire Windsor and Conway Tearle to appear in some of the company's forthcoming productions.

Cortez will appear in an early Columbia release; an announcement of the title will be made in the near future. Claire Windsor's first appearance as a free-lance artist will be in two Columbia productions. The acquisition by Columbia of the services of Cortez, Miss Windsor and Tearle follows close upon that of Lois Wilson, Hobart Bosworth, Jacqueline Logan and Richard Arlen.

"U" Comedy Awarded Texas M. P. T. O. Ribbon

"Painting the Town," the Universal "surprise" picture starring Glenn Tryon, has been selected by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas as the outstanding picture of July, possessing the "strongest audience entertainment value" of the mid-summer releases.

This selection is known as the Blue Ribbon Award of the Texas exhibitor body and is official.

"Painting the Town" proved such an exceptional picture that its principals were immediately signed up by Universal for more pictures on the same working basis.

Welcome Week for M-G-M News Planned

PLANS for a National Welcome Week to greet M-G-M's new twice-weekly newsreel service, which will make its bow on August 15, were announced this week. It will be known as "the world's spotlight." Strong newspaper tie-ups have been made for the occasion. Special screenings are now being arranged for prominent national and state governmental executives, and for newspapermen.

A special campaign book for the use of theatres in tying-up with the National Welcome Week has been prepared by the home office of M-G-M. The staff of news cameramen already covers practically every important spot on the globe.

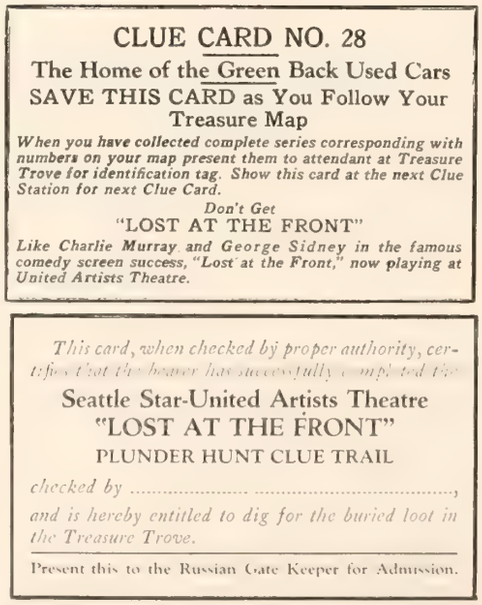
"Lost at Front" Treasure Hunt in Seattle



Newspaper and 55 Merchants Participate in Exploitation Drive for Show at United Artists Theatre

EXPLOITATION that "blanketed the town like a snowstorm" was the result of an extensive application of the treasure hunt stunt recently staged in Seattle in connection with the presentation of "Lost at the Front" at the United Artists Theatre in that city. The campaign was developed on such a huge scale that there were fifty-five of the leading merchants of Seattle interested in the drive, in addition to the Seattle Star, the newspaper which sponsired the hunt in conjunction with the United Artists Theatre management.

The campaign which built up to the "Lost at the Front Treasure Hunt" was carried on vigorously for eight days by the newspaper. The treasure, supplied by the merchants from articles of merchandise in which they deal, had a total value estimated at $1,000.

The mechanics of the arrangement were that maps were printed in sections giving the route to be taken by those who wished to dig for the treasure. These sections pieced together gave the entire route, covering five miles, to be followed by treasure seekers. Clue cards were printed and supplied each merchant participating in the stunt. Each participating merchant was given a number, shown on the card, and these were distributed at the points indicated on the map. The hunters receiving a full set of cards upon arrival at the last point on the route were given an identification card, which admitted them to the "no man's land" where the articles were buried.

Running simultaneously with the hunt, the theatre also had an effective tie-up with the Post-Intelligencer, which conducted a piano contest, which had for its object the selection of the six best amateur pianists in town, with valuable prizes for the winners selected by the music jury chosen to judge the contest. The capital prize in the piano contest was an Andrew-Kohler piano valued at $450.

Skouras Circuit Furnishes Newspaper Comic Strip

J. Reeves Espy, head of the advertising department of the Skouras Brothers Circuit in St. Louis, is obtaining much publicity for the stars whose pictures are shown over the circuit through a newspaper comic strip prepared by his department and published in the St. Louis Daily Times, in which it appears every day along with the cartoon strips by famous artists.

This publicity comic strip is called "Mazie of the Movies." Mr. Espy and his assistants prepare the material and engage an artist to draw the strip. The artist's salary is the only expense attached to the stunt.

Mazie is a movie-struck girl. She becomes ill and her ailment is diagnosed by the specialists as movie-mania. She imagines her boy friend is Dick Barthelmess and that she is Mary Astor and puts her family through many trying experiences. The doctors say she is to be humored and taken to see a motion picture every day. The name of some star and featured player in the pictures playing the Skouras Circuit is brought into each instalment of the comic strip.

Antique Bike Ballyhoo for "Somewhere in Sonora"

An old-fashioned bicycle—one of those implements of torture with a big wheel in front and one about the size of a soup plate behind—was used by George J. Schade, of the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, to attract attention to "Somewhere in Sonora."

No, Schade didn't ride the "bike." But there was a rider—a fellow who makes a business of "ballyhooing" when a "ballyhoo" is desired.

The rider, garbed as a ruralist from the tall grass, wore a banner on his back calling attention to the fact that "Somewhere in Sonora" was the attraction at the Schade.

Mary Pickford Hostess to Girls in "My Best Girl" Exploitation

THROUGH a tie-up with daily newspapers in thirteen key cities, with front-page publicity as a daily feature to build up and maintain public interest, Mary Pickford's forthcoming picture "My Best Girl" is the subject of an exploitation drive of national scope and widespread interest.

Exploitation for the picture and the star is stimulated through the selection of thirteen "Best Girls" from thirteen key cities as guests of Mary Pickford on a thirteen day vacation trip to Hollywood with the star as hostess.

The Mary Pickford company has an extensive organization handling the project, which is being featured by the following newspapers: Chicago Herald and Examiner, New York Mirror, Cincinnati Post, Cleveland Press, Pittsburgh Press, Philadelphia News, Minneapolis Tribune, Denver Post, Dallas Dispatch, The Atlanta Georgian, Seattle Times, San Francisco Bulletin and the Boston Advertiser.

The only conditions attached to the "Best Girls" vacation election, is that the girls are not to be movie aspirants and that they are to return to their home cities at the close of the thirteen day holiday in Hollywood.

It is expected that a speecial Pullman will leave Chicago, Saturday July 23, via the Santa Fe, with the majority of the successful nominees aboard. The Dallas and Minneapolis girls are to join the train at Kansas City, Sunday July 24. The Denver girl will be picked up at La Junta on the same day. The Seattle and San Francisco girls, in the meantime, will reach Los Angeles by the Coast route and will arrive at Los Angeles in time with the arrival of the train from the East.

The elections are being handled in various manners in the different cities. In some cases, newspapers sponsoring the stunt require ten best reasons, to be written by the girls, thus making it an essay contest. Others make a direct circulation idea of the project by basing the election upon the largest number of new subscriptions obtained by candidates.

The Minneapolis Tribune, which is sponsoring the election in the northwest, will have the cooperation of Finkelstein & Ruben, whose theatres will be used as polling places in the election. Two girls—one from Minneapolis and one from the northwest—will be elected through ballots printed in the Tribune.

In practically all cases the competition is restricted to self-supporting girls whose circumstances may be more or less like Mary Pickford as the five and ten cent store girl, in the photoplay.

Awkward Squad Feature of Stunt for "Rookies"

Instead of employing one or two men to ballyhoo a picture, Manager Tom Holliday made excellent use of eight men to exploit "Rookies" when that film played at the Imperial Theatre, Columbia, S. C.

The eight men were of various proportions—fat ones, lean ones, short ones, tall ones, etc.—and were dressed as typical rookies in the olive drab uniform of the U. S. Army.

Boston Judge Fines Flag Pole Sitter

WIDESPREAD interest in New England is taken in the finding of Judge Michael J. Murray of the Suffolk Municipal court, Boston, of a verdict of guilty against Frank Holl, "Sparrow Holl," who was ordered down from the top of the flag pole on the Metropolitan Theatre building after he had remained on that lofty perch 55 hours. Judge Murray imposed a fine of $25. Holl, through counsel, appealed.

In making his finding of guilty of a common law nuisance, Judge Murray stated that "a nuisance is anything that works harm, inconvenience or damage. The defendant, seated at the top of the pole, was plainly visible for a long distance on Tremont street reaching far up the Mall. The presence of the crowds so collected rendered Tremont street in the vicinity of the Metropolitan Theatre unsafe for travel. The police department wisely interfered before serious accident occurred."

Plans to Repeat Harmonica Contest in Industry

The Gaiety Theatre, Industry, Ill., recently completed such a successful Juvenile Comedies-Harmonica Playing contest that the Gaiety manager already has requested new accessories so that he may stage another campaign in the immediate future.

One drug store, handling the Hohner harmonica, arranged a window display as a tie-up with the contest. This store reported splendid business during the contest, being as well pleased as the theatre manager.

A newspaper publicity and advertising campaign featured the contest. Four prizes were given the winners, while twenty-four "Big Boy" harmonicas were given away to the kiddies who were too young to enter the contest. The owner of a "Big Boy" harmonica who blew the instrument the longest was given a special prize.

Suburban Managers Forming Boys' Baseball League

A new idea in getting summer business has been adopted by several Kansas City suburban houses and the Kansas City Journal-Post, a daily newspaper. The newspaper is organizing several boys' baseball teams, which will be named after and which will represent various suburban theatres. Each week each theatre will use a slide announcing the schedule of the "movie league" and each theatre will use brief "shots" in a news reel of its team in action each week. By such a plan it is hoped to stimulate summer business among the younger generation, which, in turn, will "drag in" the parents to the theatres.

Boys and Dogs Wear "Long Pants" to Exploit Show

Small boys wearing long pants with dogs with their front legs similarly encased were used to attract attention and excite interest when "Long Pants" was the attraction at the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, George J. Schade, owner and manager.

Schade is one of those ingenious fellows with an idea that fits into every situation and, as a result, the folks of his locality are always aware of the fact that he has a theatre, that the theatre is awaiting them and that patrons may be assured of real entertainment at all time and under all circumstances.

Key City Reports

New York City

THE weather was the principal topic of conversation last week, and for the first time this summer the cooling and refrigerating systems were of material box-office value. The slump was remarkably light, taking the street as a whole and considering the sudden intensity of the heat spell.

"The Big Parade" dropped way off; "Seventh Heaven" slipped somewhat; while "King of Kings" topped both of them.

The Roxy had one of its poorest weeks with "Singed," representing a heavy drop from the previous week.

The Capitol, on the other hand, was up for the week with "The Callahans and the Murphys."

The Strand had an unsatisfactory week with "The Prince of Headwaiters."

The Paramount had a good week, although off somewhat from the previous seven days, with "Ten Modern Commandments" and Paul Whiteman. "The Way of All Flesh" continues a strong draw at the Rialto, as does "Camille" at the Rivoli. "The First Auto" and "Old San Francisco" are reported satisfactory.

Boston

BUSINESS continues decidedly spotty at both the downtown and suburban theatres this week. Box office receipts have fallen off considerably during the week with the possible exception of Loew's State theatre, which has apparently built up such a strong "neighborhood" atmosphere for its house that it maintains good grosses in spite of the weather.

Weather conditions have been decidedly unfavorable, with the year's hottest and most humid week, intermingled with severe electrical storms.

"The King of Kings," Boston's only road show, is now playing its seventh and final week at the Tremont Theatre. No other road shows are booked at present in any Boston theatres although several of the legitimate theatres are available for a good road show.

Loew's State, as previously noted, continues to enjoy good business. A Lon Chaney film, "The Unknown," is the feature, while Phil Spitalny and his band, as the stage number, are this week assisted by Nina Olivette, dancing star of the recent "Queen High" comedy.

The Metropolitan showed some falling off in its grosses during the week, although it can be said that returns are far from being poor. Through the recent arrangement of programs the theatre is better than ever able to handle large numbers of patrons from the time its doors open until they clase on the final show. "Ten Modern Commandments" is the feature film, while "Kid Days," staged by Paul Oscard, is the presentation number and Gene Rodemich and his Merry Makers have the assistance of Peggy English and Tim Marks this week in the musical feature. Sonya Rozann, soprano, assists the orchestra.

At the Twin houses, the Modern and Beacon, "The Brute" and "Back Stage" are the double features, with Elsie Janis, Martinelli and others in the Vitaphone numbers.

"Beau Geste" succeeds the extended run of "Chang" at the Fenway and the Fenway Symphony Orchestra has an entirely new program, playing to average houses during the week.

"Tillie The Toiler" has shown a good gross at Loew's Orpheum, taking the week in general. The Scollay Square Olympia, in the Boston premiere of "Naughty, But Nice," and a seven-act vaudeville bill, did a fair week's business. The same feature film is given at the Washington Street Olympia. "The Claw" is playing to fair houses at the Keith-Albee Boston. Other films now showing are "One Increasing Purpose" at the Bowdoin Square, "The World at Her Feet" at the Capitol and the Exeter, "The Dark Angel" at the Lancaster and "Senorita" at the University.

Albany

WITH the mercury ranging in the nineties day after day and with the humidity equally high, the motion picture theatres of this section of New York state played to small audiences last week with one or two exceptions. In these exceptions, the type of picture appeared to be able to draw crowds against the excessive heat.

Probably the best bet of the week, in so far as box receipts were concerned, was "The Callahans and the Murphys," playing at the Lincoln in Troy, and which duplicated the previous week's record of the Leland in Albany. In fact the attendance at the Lincoln last week was one of the largest during any summer week in the history of the house.

At the Troy Theatre, "The Unknown" ran heavy for the first four days and then dropped off a bit, although the receipts for the week were satisfactory. At the Leland in Albany, "Lost at the Front" proved a very good business getter despite the heat, although the attendance did not run as high as that of "The Callahans and the Murphys."

Poor business characterized the week's run of "The World at Her Feet" at the Mark Strand, while the Mark Ritz played to small crowds with "Parisian Love" for the first half and "Ritzy" the last half.

Neighborhood houses in Troy and Schenectady also reported poor business.

Philadelphia

DESPITE the excessively hot weather Stanley and the Fox reported good patronage, probably largely due to the excellent refrigeration systems at these two houses. Patronage of other downtown houses fell off somewhat.

Richard Dix in "Man Power" was the film attraction at the Stanley, while B. A. Rolfe and his Palais D'Or Orchestra, and Charlotte Woodruff, prima donna, helped as drawing cards.

The Stanton Theatre had a fair week with the production "The Night of Love," while the Fox Theatre with "The Secret Studio" and a Midsummer Syncopation Frolic got its share of business.

Ed Wynn, a Philadelphian, drew well at the Arcadia in his first production "Rubber Heels." "Ten Modern Commandments," at the Karlton, pulled just fair receipts for the week.

Billie Dove and Ben Lyon in "The Tender Hour," at the Palace, did not hold up so well, nor did Gary Cooper in the "Last Outlaw" at the Victoria.

Tom Mix in "The Circus Ace" at the Globe had just a fair week, while the Capitol with Louise Dresser in "White Flannels" and Harry Langdon in "The First One Hundred Years" did somewhat better.

Central Pennsylvania

WITH the mercury reaching a daily maximum above ninety on five of the six days of the week, there was a marked slump in attendance at the leading picture theatres of Harrisburg, notwithstanding attractions possessed of more than ordinary merit were booked. Manager Charles Jones, of the Colonial, who keeps tabs on the attendance at attractions that rival the movies, reported a big increase in the crowds at the out-of-door parks and dance pavilions and the municipal bathing beach, making it evident that in the abnormally hot weather they were getting the bulk of the patronage away from the movies.

The Colonial's feature attraction was "The Tender Heart," with Billie Dove and Ben Lyon, and those who saw it were well pleased with the show. The same may be said of the main attraction at the Victoria where the Florence Vidor film play, "The World at Her Feet," proved very entertaining to the relatively few persons who braved the heat.

At Loew's Regent the Lon Chaney play, "The Unknown," was declared by critics to be well up to Chaney's standard. The audiences there also were depleted because most folks appeared to prefer to pass the very hot nights at out-of-door entertainments.

The new $60,000 cooling system just installed at the State theatre had its first thorough try-out during the extremely hot week and everyone said it came up fully to expectations. The State plays programs of combined vaudeville and pictures and the picture offering the last half of the week was "The Block Signal," which had an especial appeal to Harrisburg which has a very large railroading population.

The Russell theatre continued its policy of two film features at once, showing Jack Perrin in "Hi-Jacking Rustlers," and Jetta Goudal and Lionel Barrymore in "Paris at Midnight." The Grand put on "Clothes Make the Pirate," featuring Leon Errol and Dorothy Gish.

Detroit

A DECIDED slump was noticed at nearly all of the downtown houses this week. Hot and rainy weather together with bad business conditions in general offered a cause for sadness among the owners and managers.

The Michigan drew nice business on "Man Power," with Richard Dix and Mary Brian, and a Publix presentation.

Another feature, "Twelve Miles Out," also proved an exception drawing fairly well in the Madison. It will be held for one more week, at least.

Receipts were very low at the Adams where "Moon of Israel" was presented.

Pola Negri failed to bring even an average attendance to the Capitol. "Barbed Wire" was the attraction presented in this house.

At the State, business with "Ritzy" and a stage show was far below normal and "Beauty Shoppers" went over poorly on the Colonial screen.

Tampa

"MAN POWER" opened the week for the Tampa, and the Sunday's business was a wow. Richard Dix is one of the favorites, in male stars, with Tampa fans and his pictures always pull well. The four days' run registered very good. "Ten Modern Commandments" was the feature attraction for the last half of the week. Along with some excellent short subjects, and the symphony orchestra, it furnished excellent entertainment and kept the business right up to the very good mark.

Harry Langdon, in "Long Pants," was the opening attraction at the Strand. The Sunday business was excellent and the following day went over very good. Reginald Denny, in "Fast and Furious," followed for the next three days and grossed a little better than the week days' showing of the other picture. "On Ze Boulevard" closed the week and kept the crowds coming. Very good week.

The Franklin had their usual good business, giving the customers "The Whispering Sage," "Spangles," and "Twisted Triggers." All three went over well.

Chicago

BETTER weather conditions reacted favorably on theatre attendance last week and business, while not up to the usual standard at this season, was somewhat better than two weeks ago. However, large de luxe houses in the loop and some neighborhood houses, both on the south and north sides, did good business.

The Chicago offered a strong bill, featuring Ted Lewis and his musical clowns on the stage, and "The Callahans and Murphys" on the screen, the combination drawing well. At the Oriental, "Running Wild" was the feature picture and Paul Ash and his gang in "Dangerous Dan's Revue" played to average business. "The Covered Wagon" was revived at the Roosevelt and proved once more that its drawing power is still excellent. At McVickers, "Beau Geste" continued to show to fair business.

On the south side the Tivoli with a strong bill including Benny Kreuger's bunch in "Jazz Jungles" and "Man Power" as the feature picture, together with a Publix presentation, accounted for an average box office report. The Capitol offered "The Secret Studio," Vitaphone and Del Delbridge and his Capitol merrymakers, business holding up to normal.

The Marbro did well with its first Vitaphone program, Benny Meroff and his band and "Colleen" as its feature.

The popularity of the bathing beaches cut into business somewhat on the north side, and Waring's Pennsylvanians, Roy Cropper and "Man Power" on the screen proved strong attractions at the Uptown, but did not equal the business done by this combination on the south side. "A Million Bid" and Verne Buck and his orchestra in "Garden Follies" brought fair attendance to the Sheridan.

St. Louis

BUSINESS in the St. Louis territory continues decidedly off and the outlook for the immediate future is none too promising. The weather is adverse for most shows and thousands of men and women are out of employment.

"For Ladies Only" was shown on the screen of the St. Louis Theatre during the week, and in conjunction with some Orpheum circuit vaudeville did very well, everything considered.

The Missouri Theatre had a fair week with "The Yankee Clipper" as the chief screen offering. Brooke Johns had another good stage show for the week. 'Tis said that the current receipts of the Missouri Theatre since Johns arrived have shown an increase of 30 per cent over comparative periods.

The Ambassador showed "The Prince of Headwaiters" with Lewis Stone as the star. A Publix show was on the stage. Average receipts were enjoyed.

Loew's State got its share of the first-run patron age with "Captain Salvation" as its main picture offering.

The Grand Central showed "Simple Sis."

Ottawa

OTTAWA picture fans treated local theatres rather coolly because of the heat during the week of July 11. The Canadian Capital was recuperating from the strenuous days of the Diamond Jubilee of Canadian Confederation and gave only passing thought to shows.

Lon Chaney in "The Unknown" at the Regent Theatre was regarded as gruesome but this picture attracted a fair share of the crowd. "The Monkey Talks" at B. F. Keith's heatre was another circus picture and it was more pleasing to the lady patrons. Keith crowds were the average for hot weather. "Cradle Snatchers" at the Imperial was a light feature, appropriate to the weather, and drew patronage that was steady but not startling.

At the Centre Theatre there was little box-office choice between "The Wreck" which played the first half and "The Sunset Derby," the last half of the week. Only fair crowds saw the three pictures in a row at the Francais, namely "White Black Sheep," "The Country Beyond" and "His Master's Voice."

The best business of the summer was recorded during the previous week at the Regent with a revival run of "Monte Cristo" but this was helped considerably by the Canadian Diamond Jubilee news pictures which Manager Ray Tubman presented as an added attraction.

In Hull, Quebec, the Eden Theatre had its best summer patronage with "Breed of the Sea" but it was only fair at that.

Baltimore

TORRID weather which struck Baltimore during the week beginning Monday, July 11, put a decided crimp in the motion picture business of the Monumental City in all the first run theatres with the exception of Loew's Century and Valencia which are cooled by a modern refrigerating plant.

"The Understanding Heart," was the attraction at the Century with Isham Jones and his orchestra and the week's business was considered one of the biggest in the history of the house. Helping this theatre also was the enormous publicity and advertising campaign put over for the picture in Hearst's News and American here.

Business for the second week of "Resurrection" at the Valencia was considered very, very good. At the four other first run houses business was poor. "Good As Gold," was shown at the Garden with five vaudeville acts and "Stage Madness" was the attraction at Keith's Hippodrome with five vaudeville acts also.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" was shown at the New Theatre while "Fast and Furious," was presented at Warner's Metropolitan. The poor business can be considered due to the hot spell rather than due to the pictures.

Milwaukee

SUMMER season business continues at its usual slow pace in Milwaukee and theatre managers are becoming reconciled to slim houses.

The new orchestral policy was inaugurated at the Wisconsin this week with Dave Schooler as master of ceremony. This together with the picture, "Senorita," bolstered up patronage to a noticeable extent. The Merrill did fairly well with "On Ze Boulevard." "The Claw" at the Alhambra drew business that was considered average for this time of year. Patronage was slim at the Strand, where "The World at Her Feet" was the feature. The Garden, showing "Rich But Honest," was well attended.

Business was extremely good all week at the new Oriental. The picture was "The Tender Hour." "Special Delivery at the Tower and Modjeska theatres drew fair houses. "Don Juan was a popular attraction and played this week at the Milwaukee, Savoy, Tivoli, Colonial and Mirth. The Venetian theatre drew fair houses with "The Music Master." The new Shorewood theatre continues to do most gratifying business and this week brought in good patronage with "The Understanding Heart."

Kansas City

ATTENDANCE as a whole was above the average at Kansas City motion picture theatres this week.

With a change from Publix stage shows to the new Publix policy the Newman, with Richard Dix in "Man Power," played to good houses all week. The same can be said for the German film, "Metropolis," at the Royal.

At the Liberty theatre, "The Red Kimono" enjoyed a good second week, while "Rich Men's Sons" at the Pantages held up much better than normal attendance. Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole" virtualy packed them in all week with the Vitaphone program.

At the Mainstreet theatre, Reginald Denny in "Fast and Furious" also kept well above the average mark in the weekly attendance. Only the ordinary newspaper advertising and lobby displays were resorted to.

Cleveland

THE hottest week in fifty-five years was not conducive to good business in any of the local theatres. However, those theatres which have installed cooling plants and, in addition, offered special entertainment values, managed to pull through the week less disastrously than those which trusted to the weatherman and the good dispositions of its patrons.

The Carrier-cooled Stillman did fairly well during its second week of "Annie Laurie." And what is catalogued "fair" with the thermometer between 95 and 100 would be "good" under normal conditions. "The Callahans and the Murphys" closed its third and last week at the Cameo with a good record, considering the heat. The air-cooled Allen, plus "The Poor Nut," unusually funny and wholesome comedy, plus an invitingly cool presentation called "In Alaska," did pretty well on the week's business. Even Vincent Lopez and his famous orchestra could not bring the State average far above normal last week, although the photoplay feature "Dance Magic" was better than average entertainment. Keith's Palace did fairly well with "Rolled Stockings." "All Aboard," failed to register at the box office at the Park. "The Night Bride," good, light summer entertainment, but not enough inducement to drag people into the theatre. Keith's East 105th St. didn't do much with it all week. Neither did Reade's Hippodrome the last half of the week. Buck Jones in "Hills of Peril" did pretty well during its engagement half of the week at the Hippodrome. The neighborhood houses are reported to have died during the hot spell.

Indianapolis

BUSINESS continued "off" in Indianapolis movie houses the past week. The season, generally bad, has brought uncertain box office receipts here. Weather conditions have been bad and considerable unemployment has been partially responsible.

Berkell and Stuart Walker stock companies have had splendid runs this summer and clipped box office receipts for picture theatres.

"Faust" was a "flop" from box office standpoint the past week at Apollo. "The World War," sponsored by the American Legion and Indianapolis News in special drive, drew fairly heavy the past two weeks at the Colonial.

Circle audiences have slightly fallen since opening of the Indiana, new Publix house, operated by the same company. Indiana crowds are rather light during hot days.

The Ohio crowds have dropped recently since Circle bought controlling interest. Neighborhood houses have reported light business the last few weeks.

Minneapolis

BUSINESS was generally good in the Minneapolis picture houses this week.

The Vitaphone picture, "The Better 'Ole," proved an excellent attraction at the State, where big crowds were the rule. Lars Hanson, in "Captain Salvation," was well received at the Strand. At the Lyric, Ben Lyon and Pauline Starke in "Dance Magic" succeeded in pulling in the patrons in good fashion. The Pantages featured Olive Borden in "The Secret Studio," a picture which lent itself to a little sensational exploiting, and was well rewarded at the box office. The Hennepin-Orpheum found May Robson in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" to be a good drawing card. The Loring attempted a revival week, and showed such films as "Male and Female," "His Hour," and "The Dark Angel" with good results. At the neighborhood houses, business continued strong, with such pictures as "Rookies," "Don Juan," and "Tracked by the Police." The weather, for the most part, was cool and pleasant, and conducive to theatre-going.

Oklahoma City

THE weather here was warm the first part of the week but cooled off to a remarkable degree the last part, and the theatre business seemed to be influenced by this fact. This, and also the fact that the Orpheum Theatre—generally conceded the coolest spot in the city—had an unusually good bill of vaudeville on.

At the Empress Theatre, "Lonesome Ladies" kept the screen all week and played to rather good business. The star, Lewis Stone, was the main attraction. The Criterion picture, "Manpower" was only fair according to business done. This theatre has been having the best pictures for the last few weeks. "Cradle Snatchers," at the Liberty, was well received, but was not held over—and we understand that was the arrangement in case it went over big. "The Monkey Talks," an unusually good picture, kept them interested at the Liberty the last part of the week. "Heaven on Earth" did fair business at the Capitol the first half of the week, and although the plot was light, the drawing power of the stars perhaps deserved better than it received. "Ten Modern Commandments" finished the week at this theatre and was pronounced very entertaining. Business rather good for this season of the year.

Salt Lake City

DOWNTOWN theatre business as a whole has averaged fairly good in Salt Lake for the past week, considering the fact that a real summer out-of-doors week has been had.

Richard Dix and Mary Brian in "Man Power" had a very good week at the Paramount Empress; this attraction having been offered in connection with a special stage attraction which was billed as "Paul Cazins' Syncopators," and which was also very well received.

"On Ze Boulevard," with Lew Cody and Renee Adoree, proved to be rather disappointing at the Victory as far as box office receipts are concerned, but was not entirely at fault, considering the hot weather.

The double feature program at the American consisted of Milton Sills in "Framed," which was probably the main attraction, and Anna Q. Nilsson in "The Masked Woman," with the average summer crowds in attendance.

Bert Lytell in "Obey the Law" received favorable comments and was held over for an extra day, but the crowds were not up to par here either. A special exploitation campaign was carried on in connection with this picture.

The screen comedy, "The Callahans and the Murphys," was greatly enjoyed at the Pantages in addition to the vaudeville program.

"Resurrection," as a second run, went over exceptionally well at the Rialto Theatre, this picture starring Rod LaRocque and Dolores del Rio.

Business has been slightly off for the second run houses and suburban theatres also during the mid-summer period.

Los Angeles

"TWELVE MILES OUT," starring John Gilbert at Loew's State, is attracting large crowds, especially being popular with the men.

The report from Grauman's Egyptian Theatre is that "Topsy and Eva" has broken all house records in its run of five weeks.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in "Seventh Heaven" at Carthay Circle are still acquiring hundreds of new fans at each performance. The splendid picture is proving very popular.

Judging from comment, one picture each week semes to be more popular than other runs and this week "The Way of All Flesh" at the Criterion is doing great business. The box office receipts show better attendance in its second week.

Rube Wolf and Nell Kelly who have a great following in Los Angeles are helping with their stage presentation to put "Service for Ladies" across at the Metropolitan. The management reports only fair attendance.

For the past two months "The King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese has attracted unusual atendance and to all appearances will continue to do so for many weeks.

"Chang" at the Million Dollar and "Framed" at the Uptown are both doing average business.

San Francisco

THE past week at both downtown and residential motion picture theatres, generally, was considered a good one, as the pictures and the presentation acts, where shown, were good.

At the Granada Theatre, "Manpower" drew fairly well and the specialty act was popular. "The Poor Nut" at Loew's Warfield Theatre, drew very well all week and the stage offering called "Tassels Idea" was especially popular with the tassels being girls and dancing.

At the St. Francis Theatre, "The Better 'Ole," continued to draw crowds for a third week and "The Rough Riders" drew crowds to the California Theatre, for Roosevelt was always popular here.

"Old Ironsides," shown at advanced prices at the Columbia Theatre, has not been drawing so well the third, nor even second weeks, as was contemplated.

"Quarantined Rivals," a farce comedy, took very well at the Golden Gate Theatre, many liking it much better than the vaudeville acts. "The Lure of The Night Club" and "The Yokel," two pictures shown together at the Union Square Theatre, were very popular, as were some of the vaudeville acts. At the Cameo Theatre, were very popular, as were some of first part of the week was popular, but the picture, a comedy, "Beware of Widows," shown the second half, drew many more people to this house. "Is Zat So?" drew crowds to the Pantages Theatre.

In the residential houses, "The Sea Tiger" shown at the Coliseum drew good crowds and "Her Father Said No," together with the musical comedy at the Wigwam Theatre, also drew big crowds.

"The Glorious Fourth"

(Pathe-Our Gang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MIX up a gang of youthful patriots and the Fourth of July and you are bound to have fireworks. When in the mixing you inject "Our Gang" there is bound to be more than fireworks. In fact there is likely to be disaster, not only to the gang, but to all of those in the immediate vicinity.

All of the blame for what happened is placed on the innocent and none too stalwart shoulders of Farina, who earned a quarter and with it purchased the biggest thing in the fireworks shop, a skyrocket. Said shop had been left in the keeping of Joe in the absence of his mother, who conducted the shop. Joe was responsible for the lighting of the skyrocket, which ascended majestically but did not burst until it descended within the fireworks shop. And then the racket started. And it continued until it had cleaned out everything and everybody in the vicinity.

There is really more racket and confusion than there is comedy, but with it all, there are a few good gags and some little humor. The action, however, is fast enough to satisfy the most exciting. Added to the consternation caused by the bursting fireworks is that injected by the dub who eats the "Bahama Oil Capsules," made of a stronger explosive than TNT, and makes himself completely obnoxious to all with whom he comes into contact. Yes, there is plenty of action.

"Night Owls"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

A PEACE-LOVING American tourist arrives in a French village in quest of a quiet inn and lands by mistake in a regular hornet's nest of Apaches. Delicately constituted and not possessing the physical brawn that marks his ferocious fellow guests this bold fellow nevertheless woos the pretty daughter of the inn's proprietor and so has to put up with the menacing advances of a particularly unhandsome Apache, who wants the girl himself. Throughout nearly the whole of the footage, the gentle American (Phil Dunham) is kept busy dodging his adversary, using a nimble mind to combat strength and an intense dislike. By all manner of maneuvers,, he manages to elude a mauling, but not for good as both he and the unfriendly Frenchman disappear down a well as the comedy comes to an end. Average slapstick stuff that will get by in the second run and neighborhood houses. Along with Dunham are Estelle Bradley, Al Thompson, Wallace Lupino and Robert Burns. It was directed by Mark Sandrich and was released on June 19.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Kid Tricks"

(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

"BIG BOY," Educational's winsome youngster, is sure to please in his latest two-reel comedy. The kid actor is in fine form. His many little mannerisms and shinning personality are emphasized all the more. For inherent ability to act before the camera you would have to go a long way to beat the natural spontaneity of this child. He has a wealth of varied expressions, has even taken on new ones in fact. His appeal captures both the mind and heart. After seeing him look cross, happy, inquisitive, trustful, woe-begone, and all the other multifold changes of countenance, you have to agree with the press sheet that the little fellow is an actor of "rare ability."

In "Kid Tricks" he is instrumental in bringing his separated parents together. The time has arrived for the father to get possession of the boy and the mother is sorry to give him up. He goes off in the custody of the rural mail carrier and after an exciting ride arrives at his father's house, where everything would be fine if it were not for the rascally son of the housekeeper. A ride on a pony, a trip up in the air onto the tail of a kite and "Big Boy" falls unhurt to establish between his mother and dad warm feelings. An acceptable number for any type of house. The grown-ups in the cast are Lila Leslie, Robert Graves, Elfie Fay, Jack McHugh, Ford West. Ford West directed. Released on July 3, 1927.

"The Bully"

(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

"EGOTISM is the glue that enables a man to get stuck on himself." That is the fable in this one and it is the best part of the picture, which seems hardly up to the standard of these past fables. The cartoonists have failed to crowd in the usual amount of humor.

The bully, an xylophone player, sends Milton Mouse to do his collecting and he becomes entangled with the cuckoo in the cuckoo clock. They battle fiercely until cuckoo calls upon grandfather clock to come to the rescue. Grandfather responds, with the resultant annihilation of the bully. The action develops little in the way of humor.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Movie Hound"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

IT is probably so that often the events that daily happen in the average motion picture studio can be utilized as appropriate comedy ideas. This release of the Cameo brand employs the troubles of the poor property man. An irate director orders him to get a dog with spirit when the sleepy canine that he is using in a dramatic scene fails to respond adequately to his furious megaphone bellowings. Dogs prove mighty hard to get so the property man, portrayed by Wallace Lupino, obtains the services of a dwarf encased in a dog's regalia advertising dog biscuits. The dog is anxious to work-under the Kleigs but seems to be out of place in the studio for he does everything to wreck the progress of various productions in the making. Phil Dunham, Kathryn McGuire and Lucille Hutton are members of the cast. Mark Sandrich was the director. It is fair entertainment. —RAYMOND GANLY.

"Tales of a Traveler"

(Educational—One Reel)

Though these Hodge-Podge collections of Lyman H. Howe are labelled Some Sense and Some Nonsense they are often full of "different" shots of natural masterpieces, novel views of unusual events and occasional humdrum scenes that are practically found in all the various reels essaying to show something out of the ordinary run of things. One cannot charge this Educational reel with presenting tiresome matter. On the contrary, it has several excellent "tales" to offer and its general excellence is indicated to some extent in the care with which the "nonsense" offsets its more serious side; it is evenly balanced. There are scenes of an Hawaiian throwing his net into the ocean, the Buttermilk Falls in Pennsylvania, the marvelous Victoria Falls in Africa. The picturesque boats of China are shown and an interesting trip taken down a mountain of Tennessee. Robert E. Gillman's editing and conception of the continuity is okay and the animated embellishments of Archie N. Griffiths amusing.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Screen Snapshots"

(Columbia—One Reel)

ANYTHING or almost anything relating to the screen folk is engaging—so thinks the the average movie fan. In this current "Screen Snapshots" release are several interesting items about retaking scenes and numerous glimpses are had of the coaching that the stellar luminaries receive before the actual scene is taken. There is a ball room sequence of a Constance Talmadge picture which Sid Franklin is directing; an intimate view of a location party and a large cake that May Robson cuts for the delectation of Director Erle Kenton, Phyllis Haver, Harrison Ford and Franklin Pangborn; a rehearsal of a highlight from a Monty Banks comedy; the original piano used by Chopin and to which Marie Prevost struts some of her dance steps. Francis X. Bushman and Jacqueline Logan interpreting a tense moment in a costume picture; Ben Lyon vigorously boxing with a willing opponent and Johnny Hines taking direction as to the proper method of kissing Edna Murphy, his leading lady. It is an interesting reel.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Felix the Cat in 'Loco' Motive"

(Educational Cartoon—One Reel)

THE news prints are full these days of recountals of the various American flying expeditions over long stretches of ocean to some spot thousands of miles away from our own shores. Now, when most everyone, talks and thinks of aviation, the wide awake Pat Sullivan and staff send Felix to Europe in an airship of his own devising. As is nine times out of ten the case with Felix his thoughts and ambitions were sent winging Germany way because of hunger. When he beholds a well nourished Teuton the cat concludes that Germany must be a land overflowing with milk and honey. And so it is not long after that he faces Eastward and sets out to conquer the air. Though he meets many obstacles and conquers them one by one your sympathies are with the lone cat flying over a waste of water. A really good cartoon storm, pelting rain, dark threatening clouds, a veritable downpour with thunder and lightning, hits the intelligent feline but he manages to stay up in the air and continue his trip, arriving in Germany where a great multitude awaits him. Presenting Felix in a new role, up-to-date, it is good stuff.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Three's a Crowd" New Title of Langdon Film

"Three's a Crowd," is the title selected for Harry Langdon's new comedy for First National, on which photography was completed a week or so ago. Arthur Ripley prepared the adaptation from a story that the comedian had in his possession for some time. Gladys McConnell is Langdon's leading lady. The picture, now being cut and edited, is scheduled for release on Aug. 28.

Rolled Stockings

Light But Fairly Entertaining College Yarn

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

YOUTH with all of its snappy ways is well symbolized in this picture from the title to the final fade-out. It should please the younger generation and the seats of any man's theatre should be well filled when that title draws them to the box-office. The patrons will see a moderately bright story which affords very little plot and originality. Indeed, it is the typical movie yarn of college doings. The story boasts two heroes—one who would die for dear old Colfax, while the other doesn't care much what happens just so long as he can sport Kampus-Kut Klothes—and tease the girls.

These boys are brothers and both fall in love with the pretty co-ed, played with becoming pep and sparkle by Louise Brooks. When the gay deceiver discovers that he is spoiling the romance of the pride of Colfax he gracefully steps aside—and everything ends rosy-posy.

You can see that it is a brittle strip of celluloid—which runs its even course without dropping any daisies by the wayside. The climax of the crew race is not so good. But the campus atmosphere is fairly authentic—and the piece does register youth.

The Cast: Richard Arlen, James Hall, Louise Brooks, Nancy Phillips, El Brendel, David Torrence, Chance Ward. Director, Richard Rosson.

THEME: Romance of college life—with two brothers in love with same girl. The more honorable boy wins her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The campus atmosphere. The conflict of the brothers. The spirited acting by Louise Brooks. Richard Arlen's convincing performance. The crew race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease that title to the limit. Play up spirit of youth which marks the picture. Feature Louise Brooks and Nancy Phillips. Bill as enjoyable story of college days.

DRAWING POWER: The title and players should attract them. Suitable for all types of houses. Should attract the younger set.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, July, 1927.

The Poor Nut

Clever College Story Packed with Humor and Pathos

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S very seldom that a story of college life is transferred to the screen with any approach to fidelity. The average director's conception of campus activities is to stuff a room full of pillows, pennants and ukuleles—and then instruct the far-from-lifelike collegiates to go to it. They usually climax it all with a football game which is taken from some actual contest. "The Poor Nut" takes a bow as being the most authentic college yarn since Lloyd's "Freshman." The collegians look genuine, the atmosphere is highly creditable and the conduct of the characters is never out of place. Consequently it should be highly welcome in all higher seats of learning.

It's an adaptation of the play—and is highly seasoned with comedy and pathos. The central figure is a boobish book-worm with a "yen" for botany. Yearning for romance he writes letters to a co-ed from a neighboring college—a co-ed whom he has never seen. Of course, he wins her love with the poetry of his five-dollar words, but when she sees him she hurriedly checks him out. Jack Mulhall never did finer acting than when he sees his romance tumbling to pieces.

The comedy runs apace with the pathos—the elements being neatly balanced. It is very entertaining all the way, the captions being well-written—the acting thoroughly capable—and the staging all to the atmosphere.

The Cast: Jack Mulhall, Jean Arthur, Jane Winton, Glenn Tryon, Charles Murray. Director, Richard Wallace.

THEME: Comedy-drama of college youth with an inferiority complex. Through sympathy of girl and discovering his athletic talents he conquers himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS.—Mulhall training for track. Sequence of visit by co-ed. Comedy by Murray. The antics of Glenn Tryon. Acting by Mulhall. The track meet. The romance. The gags and titles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up theme and capitalize how timid people can conquer themselves. Feature star in his best role. Use college prologue.

DRAWING POWER: The title and good advertising should put it over.

Produced by Jess Smith. Distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, July, 1927.

The Gingham Girl

Bright and Breezy—Sure-Fire for Hot Weather

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE biggest obstacle to hurdle in bringing a musical comedy to the screen is that of retaining the humor. Spilled upon the stage with plenty of "business" and wise-cracks—these are difficult to translate into terms of celluloid. In the case of "The Gingham Girl" the boys behind it have done a good job. The piece is faithfully followed insofar as its theme and love interest are concerned—and its gags don't lag behind the high jinks which featured the spoken version.

George K. Arthur is the white-haired boy here and he demonstrates he has a real flair for comedy in his role of a hick town hero who goes in for success by reading about it—and who, incidentally, sports the type of clothes associated with race tracks. He comes to New York along with the girl, the latter to make and sell cookies, the former to show the town how to be successful by using his wits. It abounds in funny situations—especially in the Greenwich Village scene. The romance is neatly developed and the piece sparkles all the way.

If there is a dull moment it is hurdled with ease. As a result the piece has the high mark of spontaneity. The players carry on their assignments with enthusiasm—George Arthur showing real characterization without stepping out of bounds. And Lois Wilson makes a charming girl friend. Perfectly Okay for hot weather days.

The Cast: George K. Arthur, Louis Wilson, Maude Fulton, Myrta Bonillas, Betty Francisco. Director, David Kirkland.

THEME: Comedy-romance of small-town romancers who come to New York and make good.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The gags. The comedy by Arthur. The settings. The development of theme. The Greenwich Village sequence. The captions. The satire and romance. The night club sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as hot weather entertainment. Play up title and invite patrons to become cool in witnessing film. Feature Arthur and Wilson. Tie up with modiste shops on gingham displays, etc.

Produced and Distributed by F B O.
Length, six reels. Released, July, 1927.

Back to God's Country

A Northwestern Thriller

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE'S a familiar strain running through this Northwestern, which has Renee Adoree for its star. The story is quite a stereotyped one, but nevertheless it is entertaining despite the fact that the ultimate outcome is quite evident before the first reel is completed.

It is melodrama of the thrilling type, well directed and fairly well acted with a deal of forced comedy relief that is literally hurled into the picture in spots and that adds nothing to its effectiveness. However, it has an appeal to all classes and it will hold interest throughout.

Renee Adoree is quite a charming little heroine who fits perfectly into the role and retains the sympathy of her audience throughout. She is the daughter of a trapper who is forced to commit murder in self defense and to protect her father she offers to marry the villainous sea captain. She is saved this fate, however, by the efforts of the young American engineer, Robert Frazer, and by the savage dog with which she has made friends.

The Cast: Renee Adoree, Robert Frazer, Walter Long, Mitchell Lewis, Adolph Milar, James Mason, Flying Eagle.

THEME: Northwest trapper is forced to commit murder in self defense. His deed is known only to villainous sea captain and his daughter agrees to marry sea captain to protect her father. The story is revealed to the Young American engineer, who plans their escape. This is effected with the assistance of the vicious dog whom the heroine has befriended.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fight between the heroine's father and the half-breed. The battle in the blizzard between the sea captain and the vicious dog. The exceptional shots of the northwest country and the succession of thrill scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Renee Adoree, who really has one of her best roles. Emphasize the fight scenes between the heroine's father and the half-breed, and the sea captain and the dog.

DRAWING POWER: Should go very well where they like their melodrama replete with thrills.

Produced and distributed by Universal.
Length, 6,751 feet. Released Sept. 4, 1927.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan, of Schuylerville, are now operating their house but two days a week, but will reopen on a longer schedule in September.

Richard Bolton, of The Hague, who operates the theatre in that place, was deeply interested last week in the Marathon swimming race at Lake George.

The third annual outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade has again been changed and it is now scheduled to be held at White Sulphur Springs on Saratoga Lake, on August 8. There will be a baseball game between the exchange managers and the film salesmen.

A broken film coming in contact with an electric light bulb resulted in a fire in the projection room of the Hippodrome theatre in Ogdensburg, N. Y., one day last week. The blaze also spread to a box of film on the floor of the room. Policemen entered the theatre and ordered the audience to leave at once, and there was little or no confusion. The fire department extinguished the blaze with chemicals. James S. Burnham, who recently opened the theatre, had his eyebrows and hair singed.

Pete Dana, who was connected with the Schine outfit in Gloversville for several years, but who has been making his home of late in Buffalo, dropped in at several of the Albany exchanges one day last week.

While exhibitors in Albany and elsewhere have been cussing at the heat, and declaring they have been unable to sleep nights, Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal theatre, has been sleeping under blankets (at least he says so) at his camp on Crooked Lake.

Claude Allen, who recently sold his Casino, in Antwerp, was in town the other day, saying hello to a number of the exchange boys. Mr. Allen is continuing in the cheese business.

Frank Rogers, of New York city, a special representative for Warner Brothers, spent a day or so in Albany last week.

Grover A. Woodard is no longer manager of the local Bond exchange, having tendered his resignation last week. Miss Rena Craven is in charge of the exchange.

James Sper, one time manager of the Bond exchange in Albany, and who later spent several months with Harry Randall, in Florida, paid Albany a visit last week, and announced he was not connected with the film business any longer.

Judging from the young lady in the box office at the Colonial in Albany, Julius Berinstein is indulging in a rather extensive vacation trip. When Mr. Berinstein's whereabouts were sought, she replied that he was out of town, and in fact "driving all over the country."

Sidney Sampson, of Buffalo, in Albany last week, announced he was no longer connected with the Bond Photoplay company, and would probably enter the film business for himself.

The Capitol theatre in Albany, closed last week, to remain so until September.

H. C. Bissell, local film salesman, was present a week or so ago at the opening of Father Blais's theatre in Schroon Lake, and made a speech from the stage.

Lee Langdon, of Warner Brothers exchange, carried off the honors last week at Lake Cossayuna, when he landed some of the best bass and pickerel caught there during the summer. Mr. Langdon brought back ten of the fish with him as proof of his ability. He spent four days at the resort and fished from four in the morning until nine at night.

Fred Maussert, of Glens Falls, is improving the lobby of his theatre by laying a cork floor. All stores in the block which Mr. Maussert built in front of the theatre have been leased.

Jerry LaRock, of Warrenburgh, who is now running his theatre two days a week, was among those present at the recent Lake George swim.

A blaze caused by a short circuit in one of the fans in the Olympic theatre in Watertown, caused considerable disturbance one night last week. Wires became crossed with the result that sparks from the fan sprayed the audience.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, was one of the few exhibitors who braved the heat last week and visited Albany's Film Row.

Charles Rose, general manager of the Smalley chain, has recovered from his recent illness.

Canada

CAPT. FRANK C. BADGLEY, acting director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio, Ottawa, has issued a supplementary list of 13 new official government film releases which have been made available for screening. These are included in the Seeing Canada Series, in which there are hundreds of subjects, all produced in the Government laboratory at Ottawa.

When the Ottawa Journal published a large souvenir number for the Diamond Jubilee of Canadian Confederation, one of those who was included in the edition as prominent in Canadian life was Joseph M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa. The outline of his record showed that he was born in Montreal and that his first theatre venture was in Port Arthur, Ontario. Later he had theatres in Halifax, N. S., and St. John, N. B., until he moved to Ottawa in 1923 to open the Family Theatre under the name of the Franklin Theatre. A year later Keith-Albee secured the Ottawa Loew house and Mr. Franklin became the managing director of the Ottawa enterprise.

Mr. Franklin is a member of the Canadian Club, a director of the Rotary Club, and is identified with the Ottawa Humane Society, Central Canada Exhibition Association and the Chaudiere Golf Club. Mr. Franklin is married and has two children who are attending the Ottawa Collegiate.

Ray Tubman, manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, secured added publicity for the theatre through the Screen Opportunity Contest of Famous Players in Ontario when "Miss Ottawa," the local district winner, headed the automobile parade which was held in Ottawa as a feature of the Canadian Jubilee celebration.

Exhibitors of Ottawa made careful preparations for their presentations during the holding of the World's Poultry Congress in the Canadian Capital, July 27 to August 4, when 15,000 delegates from all parts of the world were scheduled to be in attendance at Ottawa along with many other visitors. In addition to booking special attractions, despite the prospect of warm days, the managers of various leading theatres, including Keith's, Regent, Imperial and others, have been redecorated for the occasion.

P. C. Taylor, Toronto, Canadian general manager of F B O of Canada, has announced that F B O business in the Dominion has increased 300 per cent during the past year and a half. He looks forward to exceptional business during the coming year at the six F B O branches in Canada.

The crack softball team of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, struck a snag in the Toronto softball league when they stacked up against the Langley team before a large crowd. The film boys were off color and were beaten to the tune of 9 to 5. This is practically only the second time in two seasons that the Famous Players team has suffered a loss.

The Dominion Theatre Equipment Company, of Vancouver, B. C., has secured an Ontario Charter and has opened offices and display rooms in the Variety Theatre Bldg., 10 Queen Street East, Toronto 2, Ontario in order to give better service to its patrons in the East.

The annual convention of theatre managers of Western Canada of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, was held at Vancouver, B. C., during the three days of July 21, 22 and 23 under the direction of H. M. Thomas of Vancouver, Western Division manager of the corporation. Just previous to the convention Mr. Thomas visited Toronto headquarters to secure full information regarding the company's plans for the coming year and also to secure prints of outstanding films which are scheduled to be presented in the Famous Players houses in the fall.

The Eastern Division managers of Famous Players Canadian Corp., will gather at Toronto for their annual convention on August 22, 23 and 24, when they will be addressed by N. L. WALTER J. HURLEY, manager of the State and Rialto theatres, Wilmer & Vincent picture houses in Allentown, has announced the new personnel of the executive staff of the Rialto which recently came under his charge. Guy M. Eckenrode was made house superintendent; Mrs. Addison Leaser, Jr., treasurer; Miss Jennie Feiertag, assistant treasurer; James H. Shepherd, organist; John W. Oberly, assistant organist; Clinton Moyer, electrician, and James H. McElroy and Milton Amey, doormen.

In the early part of July the Capitol theatre, Altoona, was closed for several weeks to undergo extensive remodeling.

Quick action by attendants employed in the Strand Theatre, Gettysburg, was responsible for prompt medical attention being given to C. A. McCarthy, of Corna, N. Y., when he became unconscious through a sudden attack of illness when standing in the lobby of the theatre on the evening of July 13.

Improvements that will more than double the seating capacity of the Lyric theatre, Oil City, Pa., including the addition of a large brick addition to the present structure, and the modernization of the entire house, are being rapidly advanced and it is expected the work will be completed by mid-September. While the daily performances in the old part of the theatre are now being held without interruption, it is probable that about the first of September the house will be closed for a period of two weeks to complete the improvements.

Mr. Stahl, manager of the theatre, has obtained a lease for seventeen years on an adjoining plot of ground upon which the addition is being built. The new portion of the structure will be 97 by 37 feet and of steel and concrete fireproof construction, with walls of brick.

The seating capacity will be increased to 900 by the addition of 575 new seats.

A company is being incorporated now by Hal H. Laurence, of Paris, Tenn., to build a theatre building in that city to cost about $100,000.

An arcade theatre and hotel building is being designed now by George H. Dieringer, architect, to cost about $1,000,000, for Wheeling, W. Va.

St. Louis

THE St. Louis First National exchange is celebrating a double event this week. It has moved into its new exchange on Olive street and is also observing Harry Weiss Anniversary Month, marking the fifth year of Mr. Weiss as St. Louis manager and ten years of his connection with First National.

The new home of First National ranks among the finest in the country. Everything is new from the front to the back door. Among the facilities of the exchange is a projertion room and also a first aid department. The building is fireproof throughout.

Howard Price Kingsmore, who has been replaced by Harry Greenman as manager of Loew's State theatre in St. Louis, Mo., has been transferred to Memphis, Tenn., to operate the five theatres there that are under the Loew control.

St. Louis film stocks closed July 16 as follows: Sr. Louis Amusement A, $43 asked; Skouras A, $39 asked. One year ago Skouras A was held at $51 and St. Louis Amusement at practically the same price.

St. Louis Amusement Company has declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1.12½ on its A stock, payable to stockholders of record July 12 on July 15. The books will be closed on July 12.

The mother of B. J. Derby, First National salesman, died during the past week.

We Apologize

TO THE hundreds of Motion Picture Exhibitors who are interested in our proposition. We regret that we were delayed in giving complete details of how you can increase your profits by operating your own Merchants Advertising Service.

BUT we were swamped! We received so many letters that we were unable to give them all our immediate attention.

NOW, we are glad to announce that we are prepared to handle promptly inquiries from an unlimited number of Exhibitors. Our full equipment is all ready and all of you will be immediately supplied with the proper information and material.

LET'S GO!

OUR proposition involves showing on your screen, clever, attractive, popular, short-length motion picture advertising films from the biggest and best library in the United States. It will enable you to handle your own service under your own Theatre name.

IF there are other Exhibitors interested in learning how they can increase their profits, we invite their inquiries.

Cleveland

THE announcement that Publix presentation acts will be shown next season over the Loew circuit is followed by the further announcement that the Allen theatre of Cleveland will present its first Publix show on Saturday, August 20th. This means that hereafter the Allen will offer a complete new show on Saturday instead of on Sunday, as has always been the policy heretofore.

The Pastime theatre at Lyons, Ohio, last week changed hands when W. E. Evers sold the house to Elmer E. Finney.

Gradwell Sears, local First National exchange manager, had a ten-minute conference with S. W. Hatch and Ned Depinet in the Union station last Wednesday when the Century stopped in Cleveland on its way to New York.

The old Lyric theatre at Fairport Harbor is being torn down and will be used for a lobby to a new theatre to be built by the owner, E. J. Lawrence. When completed, the house will have about 700 seats.

Robert Cotton, Central Division manager for P. D. C., has been appointed division manager under the recent P. D. C.-Pathe combination, with jurisdiction over the Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo offices. Cleveland will continue to be his headquarters. The local P. D. C. outfit is now all installed in the Pathe exchange and is operating under the Pathe name.

Hank Simmons is enjoying the rising temperature of Georgia this month, where he went to put over some special exploitation stunts. Simmons is a P. D. C.-Pathe publicity hound.

E. J. Smith, sales manager for Tiffany, combined business with pleasure last week when he entertained Allen Moritz, Detroit Tiffany exchange manager, Charles Wiener, special representative and Mark Goldman, Cleveland Tiffany exchange manager, at dinner at Blossom Heath Inn in Detroit. The boys can't decide whether E. J. excels more as host or as executive as he fills both posts about 100 per cent.

Spidell Brothers have purchased the Pike theatre, Strassburg, O., from Edward Allman. Allman has retired, and is spending the summer in France.

"McFadden's Flats" will be the initial screen offering.

A reception was tendered "Our Gang" Kiddies when they arrived in San Francisco recently, where they played on the stage for a week. Each section of this city was represented by a few "kiddie groups" from, for instance, the South of Market gang, North Beach, Chinatown, the Petrero, Ocean View, Sunset, Richmond and Fillmore districts. The reception was held on the stage of the Orpheum after each matinee.

Ben Black, who for a time played at the residential house of Levin, The Coliseum Theatre, and later at the downtown house, The Granada Theatre, under the able management of Charlie Kurtzman, has left for New York where he will play at the new Paramount Theatre. Five years ago, Ben played at the California Theatre. Before he plays at the Paramount Theatre, New York, he will play at the Metropolitan Theatre in Boston.

"Rolled Stockings"—Paramount, Paramount Theatre, New York City

Times: "Picture about boys and girls in college, their capers, cavortings . . . apparently is merely meant to be enjoyed by those looking for entertainment . . . yesterday afternoon's audiences applauded at hilarious scenes and responded with applause to stirring fight between brothers."

Telegram: "'Rolled Stockings' has amusing moments . . . generous sprinkling of gags and skilled slapstick makes amusing enough picture."

American: "'Rolled Stockings' . . . another college story and is realistic enough to be entertaining. . . . Louise Brooks has unusual personality which camera catches and magnifies. . . . Richard Arlen gives convincing characterization of college boy . . . has youth to recommend it."

"The Gingham Girl"—F B O, Capitol Theatre, New York City

American: "Good warm weather entertainment. As light as Blue Bird cookies its heroine sells and as funny as checked suit its hero wears . . . too funny to divulge to you in advance. Artists' colony at work is screamingly funny, and fade-in to string of nuts shows that either continuity writer or director has real sense of humor. Most of gags original and not of 'dragged in' variety. Most amusing. . . . 'The Gingham Girl' has done George K. Arthur a favor, for although we have long suspected that the young gentleman is singularly marked with comedy talent, it is not until this picture that we feel that there is as definite place in film comedy field for Arthur as there is for Harold Lloyd, Charlie Chaplin and Harry Langdon."

Mirror: "Merry little movie."

Morning Telegraph: "Good show at the Capitol."

Daily News: "Light, cheery stuff, and what you want for hot summer's day. Excellent performance by George K. Arthur."

Telegram: "'The Gingham Girl' probably more interesting than would be case with most musical shows. Film version faithful to stage tale throughout."

Evening Journal: "George K. Arthur, as small town clown, who tries to panic 'em on Broadway, is great. So are Betty Francisco as gold digger and Maud Fulton as Millionaire authoress. Director David Kirkland gave story several amusing touches. Best bit is futuristic Greenwich Village studio, where art is long but lines are longer."

"The Prince of Headwaiters"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Times: "Audience pleased with story. Stone is equipped with perfectly natural emotions, despite his authority and professional demeanor."

News: "Story will arouse sympathy. Of course, you're going to like Stone. One always does. Lilyan Tashman marvelous as gold-digger."

World: "Stone a good actor. Audience appeal in each of his pictures."

Mirror: "Stone convincing. Does not overlook a trick. Second honors to Lilyan Tashman as gold digger. Girl was made for part."

Telegraph: "Agreeable entertainment. Stone very excellent. Palatable movie meal."

Journal: "Stone has rôle well suited to him. Lilyan Tashman excellent.

Evening World: "Acting good all through picture. Lewis Stone a finished actor."

Graphic: "Stone scores. Seasoned actor, always restrained, but never giving inferior performance. One of lucky few. Puts on extra coat of velvety finish he assumes with such ease and grace."

"Saturday Afternoon" — Pathe, Rialto Theatre, Atlanta

Georgian: "Saturday Afternoon," as fine a comedy as one would care to see. It is clean, spirited, satirical, incongrouous and splendidly acted."

"Babe Comes Home"—First National, Scollay Square Olympia Theatre, Boston

Advertiser: "Best of baseball films made to date. . . . Big Yankee slugger does well as comedian. It was a happy thought to get Babe on screen. Mere fact that he is starring in baseball picture should make 'Babe Comes Home' one of big winners of season."

Globe: "One of most amusing stories which has been shown in films this year. . . . Babe does surprisingly well."

American: "Gay comedy of sport, love and laundry. Is bound to be popular."

Post: "Entirely natural performance by star. . . . Unaffected actor; he certainly fits the part."

"Barbed Wire" — Paramount, Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles

Daily News: "Vibrant, gorgeous fiery Pola—Pola heralded some years ago as great star of 'Passion.' . . . 'Barbed Wire' best thing she has done since she joined Paramount."

Times: "'Barbed Wire' justifies adjective meritorious as to its purpose. . . . Represents one of best recent performances that Pola has offered."

Los Angeles: "Pola Negri given best role of her career in latest pic ture."

Examiner: "'Barbed Wire' best picture from standpoint of consistent, sustained entertainment La Belle Pola has had in long time, and one of best Famous has turned out this year."

"The Callahans and the Murphys" —Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York City

Herald Tribune: "Should run for six weeks at Capitol. If everyone is going to enjoy picture way spectators did yesterday, by all means see 'The Callahans and the Murphys.'"

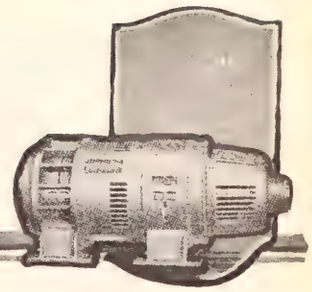
Brooklyn Eagle: "Some of situations are so compellingly funny that even very proper ushers at back of the theatre broke their rigid military discipline long enough to chuckle aloud at hilarious antics of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran."

Graphic: "One of season's best examples of slapstick elevated to first-class comedy through exceptional work of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. Have audiences rocking with merriment at every performance. This isn't farce, it's riot."

Evening Post: "Listening to roars of mirth echoing and re-echoing through Capitol, it was impossible to say which division of picture caused louder noise—the Dressler, Moran section or the written comments of Mr. Spence. Surely both outdid themselves."

Telegraph: "Hit the high spots of low comedy. I don't doubt for instant that it will be a 'wow.'"

Telegram: "Audience roared and chuckled."



World: "Less laughter probably being heard in any other picture house on Broadway this week than inside Capitol. Heights of handclapping, gurgling, stamping feet and floor rolling reached."

Daily News: "Eighty minutes' worth of Irish. Marie Dressler plays Mrs. Callahan to Polly Moran's Mrs. Murphy. Both girls deserve great, big hand."

Projection

Optics, Electricity, Practical Ideas & Advice

Inquiries and Comments

A Problem for the Union

EVERY now and then some gratifying signs are visible, which point to the fact that real progress is being made by progressive locals in their efforts to raise the standards of projection.

An interesting case recently was revealed when a large and powerful local in an eastern state took a progressive step forward and arbitrarily called upon every one of its members, apprentices and permit men, to take a general examination to determine the fitness of each man engaged in the projection of motion pictures. The results were astounding, to say the least.

In a few cases it was found, for instance that the men who were ordinarily rated as A-1 projectionists (from the talking they had been doing) failed miserably to reach a mark of 75 per cent, which was considered the minimum passing grade for a skilled projectionist. On the other hand, there were a number of apprentices and permit men who passed the examination with flying colors, which was a clear indication that they were more worthy of full membership than were some of the older and, presumably, more skilled projectionists.

There were no exceptions to the examinations and every man coming under the jurisdiction of that local had to take the examination so that the officers of the local obtained a clear index to every man's ability to project pictures.

A careful record of all marks made in this test was kept for future reference, in order that complaints involving the ability of any man could be better analyzed and proper means taken to remedy the fault.

In a number of cases, where men had received extremely low marks (such as the absurd grades of 15-25) they were "temporarily" removed from their jobs and their names placed on the trestle board for future consideration.

This was the first step in their eventual elimination from the field of motion picture projection—at least, as concerns that particular local.

At the time of this writing several men in this group have already adopted a new line of work, for which, no doubt, they are far better qualified than that of motion picture projection.

Other men, including those not yet admitted to full membership, who had obtained exceptionally good marks, were slated for better jobs and, naturally, better pay, which, after all is said and done, is the logical way to reward exceptional skill in one's chosen work.

During the examination, it was found that there were a number of men on the list who clearly had no business to be there, and a very brief examination showed that they were not even moderately qualified to project pictures.

These men were cross-examined and it was learned that they carried union cards but that they had obtained them simply by paying the sum of twenty-five dollars to the president of a local in a small town located in a neighboring state. Further questioning revealed that no examination of any kind had been made of these men, but that while "passing through" this small town they had stopped off long enough to purchase regular M. P. M. O. cards from the obliging president.

Other cases of the same kind were checked up and it was found that the cards, in each instance, had come from the same source. The only stipulation in the granting of these cards(for the sum of twenty-five dollars) was that the "brother" was not to seek employment in the home town, but to continue traveling until the next state, at least, was reached.

Since the worthy "brethren" were anxious to recoup the price of the nice new M. P. M. O. cards, they stopped traveling once the neighboring state was reached and this accounted for the large gathering of such "members" in one city—until the examination came along.

Purpose of the Examination

What action, if any, the large city local ultimately will take with respect to its weaker small town sister local, the writer was unable to ascertain, and it may even be that nothing will be done—since the officers feel confident that the plan, now adopted, of examining each new man whether or not he carries a card, will quickly reveal lack of real ability and thus automotically bar such incompetents from obtaining work in that city.

It might be asked, by those inclined to argue, what lasting good can result from the examination of each man within the local, since the presumption is, when a man carries a union card, that he has been properly examined and found qualified to do the work required of him.

Where the member has been truly examined, and found to have the necessary ability, it might seem presumptuous on the part of a sister local to again examine him in order to find out what was already learned at the time of the original application for membership. In other words, there are many who believe that one honest examination is sufficient to determine a man's fitness, and if he is once accepted by the union and granted a card, he should be qualified to hold his position forever after without being annoyed by further examinations.

In one way this seems like a logical argument, but it's weakness lies in the fact that when once a card has been issued, the card holder is too likely to rest on his laurels, and float along blissfully without troubling himself by taking up more advanced phases of projection. It is up to the union, then, to keep him supplied with work and see to it that proper wages are paid him in return for his services.

But it is not always easy for his union officers to convince the theatre owners that their projectionists, as a body, are worth the extra money asked for, and in such bargaining, nothing carries quite the weight as some cold figures showing exactly where and how the service rendered by the men, or rather, the quality of the work which the union agrees to provide, has been improved to such an extent that a higher wage scale is required in order to have it continue at a high grade.

Certainly, with the results of a strict and thorough examination of every member at hand, and with every man showing a good mark to prove his ability, any group of union officials should be better qualified to argue the merits of their claims and thus bring the negotiations with the theatre owners to a satisfactory conclusion.

And the theatre owner who would turn down such evidence of ability on the part of the projectionists without recognizing its merits, would be better qualified to engage himself in another line of endeavor.

Most Emergency Supply Calls Due to Fires

REGARDLESS of scientific precautions generally practiced in picture theatres against film fires, a majority of trouble calls for emergency equipment and service at supply branches of the company are due to fires in the projection booth, the National Theatre Supply Company reports.

The company recently installed a 24-hour service in all branches, furnishing theatre owners in the various localities with night or emergency telephone numbers. The company officials report the receipt from branch offices of scores of reports of prevention of shut-downs as a result of this 24-hour service.

Giant Screen Installed in Mexico City Auditorium

A screen measuring 21 by 27 feet, the second largest ever produced by the Minusa company, at whose factory in this country it was manufactured, has been shipped to Mexico City for installation there. It is a Minusa De Luxe Special. What is claimed to be the world's largest screen was installed in the Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

Receiving Bids for House at Weymouth, Mass.

Charles S. Dobson of Whitman street, Weymouth, Mass., is receiving bids for a new theatre which he is to build in that town from plans by Wesley L. Miner of Boston.

Several New Building Projects Launched in St. Louis Zone

WORK has begun and plans are completed for the rebuilding and redecorating of the Odeon Theatre and Office Building at 1042 North Grand Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., which was badly damaged by fire on March 2, last. Henri Chouteau, owner of the building, has estmiated the reconstruction program will cost upwards of $100,000.

The office building portion of the structure will be entirely rebuilt of fireproof materials, the exterior finish being of brick and terra cotta. The theatre will also be fireproofed on the western end where it joins the office structure, and fire escapes will be quadrupled.

Entrance to the theatre instead of being through the center of the office building as formerly will be via a lobby 100 feet long and 20 fete wide extending along the southern side of the building. The box office will be located in the lobby at the southwestern section.

The remodeling of the theatre will include doubling the size of the foyer and cutting emergency exits to the sidewalks to the north and south. The retiring rooms will be taken from the foyer and placed in the office building.

The Odeon has very frequently been used for extended runs of big motion pictures and it is rumored that when the present improvements are completed motion pictures will find a permanent home in this theatre.

C. E. Stevens, architect, 5423 South Grand Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., has prepared sketches for a new theatre to be erected on South Grand Boulevard. The structure will cover a lot 120 by 120 feet and will be 2-stories high. It will include two stores and fourteen offices in addition to the theatre. There will also be provision for an airdome in the summer. The building will cost about $100,000.

Dr. John O'Connell, of Overland Park, Mo., is taking bids on the new theatre, store and office building he plans to erect at the Woodson road and Creve Coeur Lake street car tracks in Overland Park. Plans for the new house have been prepared by Stevens & Moellenhoff, 5423 South Grand Boulevard, St. Louis, Mo.

The building will be two story with basement, 50 by 120 feet and 43 by 70 feet, and of L-shape construction. The theatre will seat about 850 persons. There will be three stores and several offices in addition to the theatre.

Boller Brothers, 114 West Tenth street, Kansas City, Mo., nationally known architects, have been retained to prepare the plans for the thaetre and office building J. Dozier Stone and asociates plan to erect at Ninth and Locust streets, Columbia, at Ninth and Locust streets, Columbia, Mo.

Hands Unreliable Thermometers for Testing Transverters

A LETTER pointing out that "hands are not reliable thermometers" and explaining the cause for the seemingly excessive temperature rise of Transverters during hot weather, is being circulated by the Hertner Electric Company, of Cleveland. The letter is in reply to the usual seasonal complaint that Transverters "get so hot you cannot put your hand on it," a condition produced by weather conditions at this time of the year and which, owing to a lack of knowledge of the temperature guarantees, is "viewed with alarm" by some operators.

The letter explains that:

The Transverters are 40° C. machines. This means that the temperature rise above the room temperature of any part of the machine shall not exceed 40° C. except the commutator, the temperature of which may rise 50° C. above the room temperature.

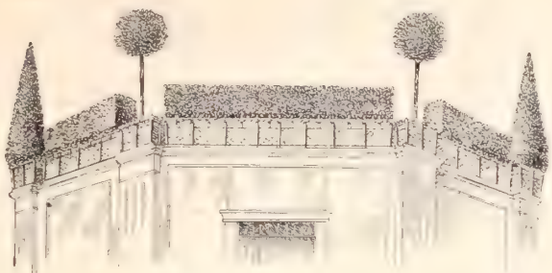
Forty degrees Centigrade is 72° Fahrenheit and the temperature of a generator room or kinobooth may be 90° or 100° at times. The actual temperature of the machine under this condition may by 172° F. without exceeding the temperature guarantee.

It is decidedly uncomfortable to hold your hand on an object having a temperature of 130° when the skin is dry. In hot humid weather when hands are moist, this discomfort is considerably increased. You can imagine, therefore, how hot an object at 170° would feel when touched.

Hands are not very reliable thermometers. In case of an argument, use one thermometer to give generator room temperature and one to give generator temperature. Subtract the room temperature from the generator temperature, the result being the temperature rise of the machine.

P. A. McGuire Honorary Member of Society

P. A. McGUIRE, advertising manager of the International Projector Corporation, has been made Honorary Member of the American Projection Society, in recognition of his work to improve projection conditins in this country. Presentation of the certificate of Honorary Membership was made this week by a committee headed by Otto Kafka, president of the Society.



Mr. McGuire is the ninth to receive this distinction. Other Honorary Members are Wm. D. Burroughs, Thos. A. Edison, J. H. Hallberg, Major Roger M. Hill, C. Francis Jenkins, Edwin S. Porter, Frank H. Richardson and Samuel L. Rothafel.

Nearly a score of years' experience as a star reporter on New York City newspapers is proving a valuable aid to Albert Shelby LeVino, who is writing the screen adaptation of "Gallagher," which is to serve as a starring vehicle for Junior Coghlin. It is a newspaper story.

In preparation for the distribution of the "Quality Eight" projected by Sterling Pictures for the ensuing year, an ingenious arrangement of calendar and production chart will be carried by all Sterling exchanges throughout the country. The calendar is a striking affair in colors, and is made with metal top-and-bottom supports for wall hanging.

Alfred Hustwick, who edited and titled "Aftermath" for the American screen, is to perform similarly on other imported pictures, according to W. W. Kofeldt, who is bringing to this country several foreign made productions.

Buck Jones has finished production on "Chain Lightning," his new Fox Films starring vehicle. Buck is supported by William Welch, Jack Baston, Buck Moulton and Gene Cameron. Lambert Hillyer directed the production.

Ewart Adamson, author and scenarist, has finished the continuity of "Deadman's Curve," for F B O. Only ten days were required by him to complete his latest scenario, according to studio announcement. Adamson recently completed "Shanghaied," and "South Sea Love."

Announcement is made at the F B O studios that Charlotte Stevens has been chosen to play the part of "Marie," a little French-Canadian girl, in "The Coward," now in production under the direction of Alfred Raboch.

First National has cast Charlie Murray for a leading role in its picturization of Ralph Spence's "The Gorilla," just going into work at the Burbank studio. Alfred Santell is the director and Edward Small the producer.

Sterling Productions starts the 1927-28 ball rolling on July fifth. On this date "Stranded," which heads the Sterling "Quality Eight" for the coming production year, will be begun at the Sterling studio. Frances Guihan did the continuity, with adaptation and revision supervised by I. L. Walenstein. Its successor on the schedule is "Outcast Souls," a John Peter Toohey story.

H. D'Abbadie D'Arrast, who directed "Service for Ladies," starring Adolphe Menjou, as his maiden effort for Paramount, will not only direct the star's next production but has renewed his contract. D'Arrast was Charlie Chaplin's assistant director when the cemedian made "A Woman of Paris."

Hal Roach has signed Virginia Sales, sister of "Chick," to portray the rôle of an "old maid" in an all-star comedy now in production under the direction of Fred Guiol. Miss Sales has already achieved fame in vaudeville. The cast which this character actress joins will feature. Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy and James Finlayson, with Edna Marian as leading lady.

William Demarest will work with Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook in "A Sailor's Sweetheart." According to schedule, "The Outpost" (temporary title), starring Irene Rich, should have been finished this week but owing to a severe cold Miss Rich was confined to her home for several days and work was temporarily suspended. "The Jazz Singer" is progressing satisfactorily with several Vitaphone sequences now in the making. A number of new productions are in the preliminary stages of preparation and will be ready for casting in a short time. These include "A Dog of the Regiment," "The Silver Slave," "Rebecca O'Brien," and "Te College Wdiow."

Charles R. Condon has completed the scenario for "One Round Hogan," which will be the second starring picture on Warner Bros.' new program for Monte Blue. The actor will begin work on this story of the boxing arena as soon as he completes his current vehicle, "The Bush Leaguer," now being made with Howard Bretherton at the megaphone. The selection of a director for "One Round Hogan" will be made shortly.

Shirley O'Hara, practically new to the screen, has been signed as Adolphe Menjou's leading woman in his next Paramount picture, as yet untitled. She has been seen briefly in some two-reel Westerns. Others in Menjou's supporting cast are Ivy Harris, Lawrence Grant, Arlette Marchal and Nicholas Soussanin.

Sally Blane has been given the leading feminine rôle opposite Jack Luden in the Paramount production, "Shootin' Irons." Productionis under way.

Director Alfred E. Green of "Two Girls Wanted," Janet Gaynor's first starring production for Fox, has selected Alyce Mills and William Tooker to enact important parts in the picture. Miss Mills was formerly seen in Fox Films' "Daughters of the Night."

Another college girl has graduated into the movies. The girl is Helen Weatherford, of the University of California in Los Angeles, who joined the mob as an extra in the campus sequence of Bebe Daniels' "Swim, Girl, Swim." Director Clarence Badger, struck by her attractiveness, persuaded her to sign a contract. The "Swim, Girl, Swim" company is shooting the swimming race sequence at Catalina Island.

Flobelle Fairbanks has been cast by Herbert Brenon for the rôle of "Fluffy," typical English flapper, in "Sorrell & Son." Brenon is making it as his first United Artists Picture.

Theodore Von Eltz is to play the lead in Florence Vidor's forthcoming Paramount production, "A Celebrated Woman." In the same picture Don Marion and Joyce Marie Coad have been cast for important rôles. Hedda Hopper has also been assigned an important part in this production. The picture got under way this week under the direction of Frank Tuttle.

Ranul Paoli, French athlete, who made his American motion picture debut as a heavy in "Senorita," will play the part of a secret service agent in "Beau Sabreur," which Paramount will produce.

Joseph Cawthorn, popular musical comedy star comedian, who made his film bow in "The Secret Studio," has been selected to play the part of old Philip Hancock in "Two Girls Wanted," Janet Gaynor's first starring vehicle for Fox Films. Alfred E. Green is directing the production, which is based on the Broadway success of the same name.

Larry Semon is rapidly nearing the completion of his first star comedy for Educational in the series of eight which he will make during the coming twelve months. Semon has been quietly at work on this initial starring vehicle at the Chadwick Studios on Gower Street, Hollywood, for several weeks. The comedian-director promises something different in the line of two-reel comedies in his first effort, which has been titled "Dummies." Included in the cast with Semon will be Marie Astair and Jim Donnelly.

"The Coward" company with Warner Baxter and Sharon Lynn returned to the F B O studio from the Big Bear region, where the exteriors were made, and Al Raboch is putting the players through their paces in some rich interiors, which depict fashionable New York society.

Marie Shotwell, last seen in "Running Wild" starring W. C. Fields, and Roy Stewart, free lance leading man, have been added to the cast of "A Celebrated Woman," Florence Vidor's current starring production for Paramount.

Warner Bros. have announced the signing of Henry Lehrman as director of George Jessel's second starring picture, "Sailor Izzy Murphy," which is planned for early production. Jessel is now at work on a story temporarily titled, "The Broadway Kid," and will start "Sailor Izzy Murphy" as soon as the former is completed.

With the production of "Galloping Fury" well under way, Hoot Gibson is looking forward to the early production of another Kyne story. It will be called "The Rawhide Kid" and is being adapted by Isidore Bernstein from the story "The Lion and the Lamb." Del Andrews will direct it under the supervision of Charles Logue. Arthur Statter is doing the continuity. Gibson and a company of fifty, headed by Reaves Eason as director, are now on location at Atascadero, Cal., filming "Galloping Fury."

"Framed"—First National, Scollay Square Olympia Theatre, Boston

Boston Herald: "Sills owes his large following to heroic and manly roles that he appears in and in 'Framed' he has succeeded in satisfying his many fans. . . Picture that fairly teams with thrills and romance."

Boston Globe: "Sills and Natalie Kingston both admirable in their personations. . . Replete with thrills. Scenic part of story quite novel. Excellent cast.

Boston Travelers "Real thrill in mud rush. New hair-raiser very effectively presented. Sills convincing."

Boston Advertiser: "Sills does not disappoint fans. New thrills in store in 'mud rush.' Thrills and romance."

Boston Post: "Original thrill in 'mud rush.' Sills has another he-man role."

"The Way of All Flesh"—Paramount, Criterion Theatre, Los Angeles

Examiner: "'The Way of All Flesh' so realistic it hurts. One of most remarkable transitions of character I have ever seen. A picture, this, don't miss it."

Express: "Emil Jannings greatest actor cinema has produced. 'The Way of All Flesh' eclipses 'The Last Laugh' and 'Variety.'"

Daily News: "One of greatest dramas of film history. Jannings as Schilling will be remembered.

Times: "'The Way of All Flesh' triumphantly discloses acting art of which Jannings is superlative star."

"The Callahans and the Murphys"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Cleveland, Ohio

Plain Dealer: "Marie Dressler again offers one of her rare low-comedy treats. Freedom of her work, careless abandon which few comedy players possess. She has power to spread fun thickly. . . Another excellent zany, Polly Moran, also has that rare quality of being able to 'let go' and plays with unrestricted wildness. . . When pair of them meet as they do constantly throughout tale, sky is limit with laughs. . . This is one time when story may not even be briefly outlined. It is too good to spoil. . . Titles unusually good. . . Action furious. . . Here is picture for laughs. . . Highly recommended."

Plain Dealer: "If 'The Callahans and the Murphys' does not make money for M-G-M, then I will take my large fortune and turn it over to that company. . . Everyone who sees Dressler and Moran doubles up with laughter . . . There is picture that is not supposed to be a super, but I enjoyed it more than any big picture I have seen this year. . ."

News: "Of course this could not be other than comedy in which Marie Dressler is woman head of one family and Polly Moran boss of other. . . Lively doings, fun for most part with some drama toward end."

"No Man's Law"—Pathe, Rialto Theatre, Atlanta

Georgian: "To my mind, picking best picture in Atlanta this week becomes easiest thing in world, and that despite fact that practically all houses were provided with better-than-average cinemat entertainment.

"But I don't know when I've seen a film that had so many qualities of entertainment as 'No Man's Law.' There was novelty of Rex, horse actor. There was nothing in picture but action. It boasted of one of prettiest girls of screen in Barbara Kent, and checker game of Jim Finlayson will always be model of comedy."

"Captain Salvation"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew's State Theatre, Boston

Boston Traveler: "Proves to be one of best pictures we have seen for some time. . . . Splendidly photographed. . . . We guarantee lumps in even most hard-hearted throats. . . . Robertson should be justly proud of splendid achievement. . . . Lars Hanson as nearly perfect as possible. . . . Pauline Starke distinguishes herself by finest performance she has ever given. . . . Ernest Torrence most cold-blooded villian we have ever seen."

Boston Advertiser: "Stirring fiilm. . . . Fine direction. . . . Brilliant acting. . . . Thrills crowd so that one hour and a half slips away as quickly as few minutes. . . . Artistically equal to any attraction of current year. . . . Spirit has entered into the players themselves. . . . Lars Hanson is as superb as Barrymore when Barrymore was striking fire with 'Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde.' . . . Hanson's performance best of his career and deserves to rank with successes of season. . . . Ernest Torrence like a character out of Joseph Conrad, and is must unusual and sinister individual screen has seen for many a day.

"Dearie" — Warner Brothers, Roxy Theatre, New York City

Evening World: "One of most natural and logical depictions of mother's scrifice for son that we have had pleasure of seeing in some time. Good picture and should be seen certainly by all those, and there are millions, who are sympathetic with this type of film but more especially by those who scoff it—and there are almost as many in this group."

Morning Telegraph: "I would rate picture above usual attractions. Straight melodrama well done. Worthy of Roxy."

Telegram: "Picture should go with large number of film patrons. Sidelights on cabaret life interesting."

Evening Journal: "A bright little comedy, neatly directed."

Sun: "'Dearie' good, honest sentiment. Well directed, bright and pleasing. Irene Rich admirable as mother. Her best role in many a day."

Graphic: "Entertaining and well directed."

American: "Good box-office picture. Has ingredients that make entertaining picture pudding."

Mirror: "Good entertainment destined to please. Miss Rich well cast."

Post: "One sure thing about Miss Irene Rich is that she never disappoints."

DON'T GAMBLE WITH PARTS

THE first essential to good projection is a good machine—the second is the proper care of it. Every part must be kept in true alignment, cleaned and lubricated continually in order to defeat the ravages of friction and assure correct functioning of the projector.

Very often a good projector is permanently impaired through the incorrect fitting of a non-genuine replacement part. This unreasonable abuse is serious and costly.

* * * * *

To be sure that worn parts of your Simplex projector are replaced with new ones, exactly the same in quality of material, dimensions, etc., as the originals, buy only parts made by the manufacturers of Simplex Projectors. This precaution will give you full protection against premature wearing out of your projectors and will make substantial savings for you in your general maintenance bills.

Robert Morton UNIT ORGAN

in the New SAENGER New Orleans

Conceded by architectural critics to be one of the world's most palatial theatres, the New SAENGER theatre at New Orleans is an artistic triumph.

The progress of the great SAENGER organization has been nothing less than marvelous. Building constructively and permanently, they have shared in the general prosperity of the industry, without departing from the highest possible standard of buisness ethics.

The same resourceful showmanship and discerning judgment that created this wonderful organization, is responsible for the choice of the Robert Morton Super-Unit now installed in the world's most beautiful theatre, the— GREATER SAENGER New Orleans.

eyes of a new world

¶This new, fast moving world of ours craves better mediums through which to chronicle its happenings. More speed, more efficiency. So air mail supplants rail mail. Telephones cross oceans. Photographs rush over wires from city to city. Radio brings to 100,000,000 ears the words of kings and presidents instantaneously as spoken. Television is coming. Everywhere old methods of news-gathering and news-spreading give way to new. ¶The demand extends to motion pictures, to the news reel. And so, in answer to this demand, comes Paramount News. Eyes of a new world. ¶First issue out July 31st. With the best, most experienced brain at its head. Emanuel Cohen, 13 years editor of Pathe News. Now, with Paramount News, realizing his dream and vision of years. Not an experiment, but for months past a wonderful reality. For months the staff, largest in the universe, have been at work throughout the world. Already over 650 stories have been covered. Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin, Maitland, everything. Tried and true veterans these Paramount News cameramen, but now fired with new enthusiasm. Perfect organization. ¶Paramount News. The only news reel in existence with an exclusive home of its own. Visit the magnificently equipped special building a stone's throw from the crossroads of the world, Times Square, New York. Meaning greater speed, better service. Heart of the chain of 150 headquarters covering the globe. ¶Exhibitors knew these changing times demanded a new and better news reel. No wonder the contracts on Paramount News have flooded in. Big circuits, small circuits, small towns. From everywhere. By the end of 1927 the most widely circulated news reel in existence. No question about that! ¶ Just as Paramount Pictures like "Chang" and "Way of All Flesh" herald the new day in features, so Paramount News meets the demand for a new and greater news reel. ¶ Paramount News. Eyes of a new world. 2 issues weekly. Starting July 31st. ¶ Keystone of Paramount's Short Features line-up. 36 Paramount-Christie Comedies. With these sure-fire laugh producers—Bobby Vernon, Jimmie Adams, Billy Dooley, Jack Duffy, Neal Burns, Anne Cornwall and more. 6 comedies starring Edward Everett Horton, master of light comedy. 10 Paramount Novelties. The first already hailed by Variety as heralding "a new era in short features." 26 Krazy Kat Cartoons. 26 Inkwell Imps Cartoons. Keyed to these changing times. As live and up-to-the-minute as Paramount feature pictures. Variety, quality, service. You get them all in Paramount News and Paramount Short Features. The Whole Show in the modern manner!

PETE HARRISON,

helping with his dynamic pen to blaze the way to an era of sanity in the motion picture industry!

Mr. Harrison said

concerning F B O:

Before the 1926-27 season, F B O made a poor quality of program pictures. During 1926-27 they surprised the exhibitors by delivering a very good line of goods. And the exhibitors paid for them the small prices they paid for the other years. This year the line-up looks good. I have seen two or three of their pictures so far and they are very good. I have an idea that they are going to maintain the same quality through the 1927-28 season. For this reason it should be fair for exhibitors, except those in small towns, to offer a slight increase for this company's product. They are the only national distributor that do not own theatres, and deserve the support of the independent exhibitor.

PHYLLIS HAVER

A new big box-office personality on the motion picture horizon

Featured in "Chicago," "The Wise Wife," "He's My Man" and "The Fighting Eagle" starring Rod La Rocque

PATHÉ-DEMILLE
PROGRAM, 1927-1928

HAVER HAILED AS SENSATION

This girl Phyllis Haver is doing things. For on top of an excellent performance supporting Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh" comes a portrayal which stands out above all in "The Fighting Eagle." This was previewed locally last week.

"The Fighting Eagle" stars Rod La Rocque. It is Phyllis Haver's picture—without detracting from Rod. For it won't harm Rod in the least—in fact it will do him lots of good—but it is Phyllis Haver's picture.

Phyllis is Comtesse de Launay in supporting Rod as Brigadier Gerard. Rod gets a Fairbanksesque touch into his portrayal of the braggart but lovable Etienne. And, withal, no imitation. He is still Rod La Rocque, with a touch of romantic dash which the film-going public will love on the heels of his marriage to Vilma Banky. As Etienne he seems to be the one a fan of Vilma's would have her marry.

And Phyllis? Where has this girl, who has been relegated to comedy roles, supporting parts, bits—secured this subtlety—this finesse—which has thus far been credited only to artists of the old legitimate school? A new star is on the horizon. (N.Y. TELEGRAPH)

Pulling the punch—

Bookings are slow, not yours, of course, but the other fellows.

And the owner of a big chain of theatres tells you the reason.

"Distributors have not worked the exhibitor up to a buying frame of mind by the steady barrage of advertising to which he has become accustomed."

You've taken the punch out of the advertising which does sell pictures.

Are Pictures Serving the Public?

Forget Mass Appeal and You Are Destroying the Movie Itself

By William A. Johnston

A SIGNIFICANT letter comes in from R. B. Wilby, another exhibitor from the South, who, like E. V. Richards, knows what it's all about.

I give the letter here:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:

"A new Branch Manager came in last week merely to introduce himself. At the time I had not read your 'Bull in the Picture Business' editorial, but I had spent some twelve days with Richards at the Saenger school conducted by Jack Barry. So in the general talk I expressed the opinion that selling as now practiced in the picture business meant nothing; that we got nothing but foolish talk from most of them; that the salesmen who came into this office seldom knew as much about their own product as we knew before they came; that salesmen in other lines were a help in moving their products on to the public, but in this did nothing toward that end.

"Then the big idea came out. He said that he believed he knew more about theatre operation and advertising than 90 per cent of the exhibitors but 'why in hell should I waste my time trying to teach an exhibitor anything?'

"I don't believe he knows as much as he says. But that doesn't matter. His viewpoint does. And that's it—why the hell should he waste his time?"

If this particular branch manager feels this way about exhibitors, we take it that his salesmen feel likewise. And, since he recently returned from his firm's sales convention, we take it that his ideas reflect the keynote of the convention.

And if this sales policy is common to all distributors it is not to be wondered at that the industry-old warfare between distributor and exhibitor is breaking forth right now in clashes louder than before.

Cooperation has become a meaningless, bromidic word, only worthy of a contemptuous smile.

There isn't any such thing.

* * * * *

ALL the editorials we have recently published can, it would seem, be boiled down to two words:

The public.

Like any industry we are in the business of serving the public.

And our business success will be measured in just one way and by just one yardstick, namely the service we give the public.

Very well. Just what service do we give?

Are we serving the public; or are we just struggling to serve ourselves?

If every man in the business answers that one question, honestly and intelligently, we will then have cooperation—to the common end of business success. And not until then.

* * * * *

APPLYING the yardstick of public service, let's start with theatres.

Unless a theatre is free to buy what the public wants it to buy it cannot very well give public service.

So, immediately, up pops the matter of producer-owned theatres.

Do producers own theatres in order to better serve the public, or better to serve their production interests?

Is The Movie Itself Being Destroyed?

Well, we'll leave the question up in the air. Let the companies who do own theatres answer for themselves; it's their business. But certain facts in this connection are obvious. If a producer owns a theatre to shove his pictures on the public by holding out pictures they would prefer—he certainly is not serving the public. And we all know that there is no one program, and never has been, strong enough to supply even a weekly run theatre with even one-half of the pictures it needs to make the box-office pay, or pay as it might.

* * * * *

BUT let us say that the theatre is free to buy the best pictures for its public.

Very well; how may the theatre know what pictures are best unless the theatre gets complete information about them?

In other words, complete service from the distributor.

Without such service how can an exhibitor buy intelligently and then sell his wares successfully?

In a recent editorial we asserted that salesmen were not giving this service to the exhibitor—not selling with service but selling with bull.

We hear constantly about sales quotas, sales drives, flying squadrons, sales weeks, etc., etc. And we read constantly that every program of pictures has every other program licked and lashed to the mast.

But we see very little definite information given forth by the distributor,—facts as to why pictures were made, what elements of box-office attractions they have and how the exhibitor can get these selling points successfully to his public.

And again we say that the object of this industry is not the frenzied unloading of product by each branch upon the other but a united effort to serve the public.

* * * * *

WHICH brings us to the producer.

Is the producer serving the public?

Certainly he is making a strenuous effort. He combs the market high and dry for books, plays, talent—at any price. He has erected studios that look like world fairs. He has built up producing staffs, the executive salaries of which makes pikers out of the heads of great railroads, steel companies and other big activities. And two weeks ago, with a common voice, he announced that he was licked. His pictures cost so much that he simply cannot get his money back, despite the fact that he owns big distributing machines and even large fleets of theatres.

The question of production cost is serious enough.

But still more serious is the other question: are pictures serving the public?

The very same week in which the newspapers broadcast a threatened cut in production salaries another announcement appeared. This one stated that a cabaret band had been hired, at a cost of over half a million dollars, to travel a chain of theatres and perform "where it was needed."

This announcement strikes me as the more significant of the two. If we need famous bands to put over picture entertainment it would appear that pictures are not serving the public.

* * * * *

LET me now give a concrete instance to illustrate the thought that will conclude this editorial:

When I was in Hollywood this spring I happened in at the Columbia Studio.

The man who took me about seemed anxious to have me believe that the Studio was as large as any other. As a matter of fact, I was hoping to find it different from the others; and I did so.

There was a simplicity of operation that seemed, by comparison, quite remarkable. I noted for one thing that no conferences were being held. One man seemed to be doing things, with no others to distract him. He had a good sized schedule in his hand and was shoving it through with the smiling confidence a man has when he sees clearly and the ground is solid under his fet. I refer to the production head, Harry Cohn.

An Editorial By William A. Johnston

"It's all perfectly simple," said he; "why make a mystery of it? Give the public what they want."

"Here's a good story," said he, holding up a book—" 'The Blood Ship;' and I'm going to make a good picture of it."

And he went ahead—and did just that. Because he knows his business, doesn't pose or bluff, let's no one interfere, and, altogether, makes it a direct and simple operation.

Last week I happened in the Roxy Theatre, the mid-afternoon of a hot day. The big theatre was packed and a few hundred were standing. "The Blood Ship" was playing, and I heard several hearty rounds of applause.

The same week, by a coincidence, a mystery ship was towed in the New York harbor. Some darkly human deeds had been done upon its decks out somewhere in the ever mysterious ocean. And the news got first pages, day after day, in the New York newspapers. It was story material.

People like those tales. Of course they do. The formula is simple enough. I know of one magazine with a million circulation that has had the same fiction formula for fifty years—and doesn't dare change. Another with two and a half million circulation carries, every month, a cover of a yellow-haired, blue-eyed girl. One month the publisher's advisors—a conference probably—prevailed upon him to use an "art" cover. The magazine sales slumped three hundred thousand.

"That settles that," said the publisher; "bring back the blonde."

* * * * *

I SPEAK of "The Blood Ship" not to make a hero of anyone, but to point out two important, because basic, facts.

The first is this: had "The Blood Ship" been made in some of the larger studios of Hollywood the picture would, by all means, have cost several times more.

Why? Answer that one question in all its counts,—beginning with New York overhead and then Hollywood studio and executive overhead, and then studio supervision and subsupervision and conferences and remade story and retakes—and you will have in the plain figures of time and money spent, the bare and true reason for the super-cost of pictures.

So much for that.

For another thing I doubt if these other expansive studios would have turned out so good a picture.

A picture is just a story in pictures. And a story is a matter of creative and constructive unity. And unity is simplicity.

Put any story into a labored conference, give it the handlng of several hands and you'll get out of it a bloodless thing at best but also and often so dislocated a thing as to baffle most any audience mind.

* * * * *

THE well-known movie business has been Florida-ized.

I know of no better parallel with which to express its insane inflation.

It has pyramided itself into the heights of extravaganza. Extravagant production, extravagant theatre presentation, extravagant effort all along the line!

And the colossal cost is bad enough, in itself.

But more fatal still is the basic error; we are destroying the movie itself.

We are doing this by lifting it bodily out of its mass appeal.

While the American home is longing for a good twenty-five cent movie we are trying to supply class entertainment, or at least entertainment at class prices.

There are just three things that make big retail sales: popular goods, popular prices and accessibility.

These three things made the movie business a great one: the movies themselves, low prices, and accessible theatres.

The movie had to advance. True, but it should advance in and of itself, not at the cost of itself.

"The Prince of Adventurers"

Reviewed by Elizabeth Lonergan

Staff Correspondent of Motion Picture News and Kinematograph Weekly

LONDON, July 12.—Today at the Hippodrome took place the first showing of a new Continental film which promises to be a big American success. It was "The Prince of Adventurers", which presents Ivan Mosjoukine in a John Barrymore sort of role, showing for the first time the resemblance between the two about which so many foreign picturegoers have commented.

The story is that of Cazenova, with a few changes from the original, which tend for the main to make the celebrated character a bit more likable. The settings of old Venice are said to be identical with the period and are some of the finest that have been shown in films. Color photography is used in several of these reproductions with enough of present day settings to make one remember pleasant days in Venice, where, fortunately, buildings are identical with those of centuries back.

The love affairs of this romantic hero are shown successively in Venice, Paris, Russia and then back to Venice,—all colorful and typical of this great lover. Some scenes will be reminiscent of "Don Juan" and "When A Man Loves" and there is a scene of the Winter Palace which will make one think of the similar one in "Michael Strogoff". Into this is introduced the coronation of the Empress Catherine and she sweeps into the ballroom in regal robes with her train borne by thirty small negroes. The long procession is reproduced shot by shot and adds much to the grandeur of the scene.

Into the Venetian scenes of the Carnival are introduced colored ones which are unusually beautiful. In fact it is a most artistic film with an entertaining story running through it. To Americans I believe it will appeal because Venice and its surroundings are familiar, because the type of hero which Mosjoukine depicts is popular and, again, because it is not only artistic but extremely well done.

Mosjoukine screens better than he did in "Michael Strogoff", though there are occasional poor shots of him. Alexander Volkoff directed both pictures but the cast is practically a new one in the latter film. A word must be said for the musical score, especially arranged for the occasion. It is not the score which was used in the Paris premiere a few weeks ago, though it contains a number of the same themes.

Zukor Denies Rumor of Soviet-Paramount Deal

The story incorporated in an Associated Press despatch from Moscow purporting to give the details of an affiliation between Paramount and Soviet Cinema Trust for the production of films and the operation of theatres in Russia, was denied this week by Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, who said that he knew no one of the name of Jasper P. Mayer, who is supposed to be a Paramount representative and responsible for the report.

The Moscow report was based on an article from the Paris correspondent of "Izvestiya," quoting the purported Paramount representative, as stating that the affiliation was contemplated. This, it was stated, was based on the successful production of 34 Russian films with Paramount prepared to finance production in Russia for American consumption and to establish a chain of theatres in the Soviet country.

Denies Application to Reopen Sunday Showing Case

A further development in the legal battle to determine whether Sunday baseball, and incidentally Sunday motion pictures and other forms of commercialized amusements, may be permitted in Pennsylvania in spite of the Sunday blue laws of 1794, came on July 19, when Chief Justice Robert Von Moschziser, of the State Supreme Court, advised John R. Geyer and Paul G. Smith, of Harrisburg, counsel to the Philadelphia Athletics baseball club, which is making the fight, that the court had denied the application of these lawyers for a re-argument of the case which the State Supreme court recently decided against the Athletics.

The denial of a re-argument had been pretty generally expected and, the fact is, the petition for re-argument was filed merely to pave the way for an appeal of the case to the Supreme Court of the United States.

$250,000 Theatre Corp. Formed in Texas

Organization of a $250,000 theatre corporation, to be known as the Victor Theatres, Inc., will operate in Central and West Texas, was announced last Monday by John Victor, Abilene theatre operator. The concern will absorb all holdings of the Texas Theatre Company, which owns seven theatres in West Texas. Locations for ten community theatres have been purchased in San Antonio, and construction will start immediately.

Embattled Hollywood

Film Colony Trying to Find Cures for Production Extravagances ---Getting More Broad-Minded as Result of the Economy Crisis--- Salary Cut as a Theatrical Attempt to Impress Wall Street--- The Lesson of "The Blood Ship" vs. Louis B. Mayer's Ideas on Class Pictures---Talking a Picture to Death in Conferences

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

Editor of the Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—Studio contract reforms—tighter shooting schedules—more adequate preparation of scenarios—more co-operation among all film-making forces—better pictures. These are the items around which Hollywood's battle against charges of extravagance centers. One can undoubtedly look for some radical improvements along these lines in picture production. In any event, the mental attitude with which the colony is facing its future is sounder.

At the series of conferences sponsored by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, there has undoubtedly been plenty of talk that wandered off into the air, but then those present had the chance to get something off their chests that has been irking them for a long time.

It is hard to understand all this unless one understands Hollywood. The recent articles by William A. Johnston in MOTION PICTURE NEWS have been sufficiently sound and explanatory on this point, and I am going on the premise that they have been thoroughly read by all Motion Picture News readers.

Working in Hollywood has come to be such an effort for some people that they simply cannot get down to solid ground any more. Everything that they do looks like such a huge job that they are almost afraid to tackle it. They stall for days before getting at it, or else ask for advice on every tiny point, neglecting altogether to trust their own intuition and talent. If they had to make pictures or starve, sink or swim, most of these people would turn out something in a jiffy.

Rupert Hughes flashed another and different view on this situation during the Academy meetings:

"Millions on millions of dollars would be saved annually if the authorities would wake up to one bit of common sense," he said. "First impressions should be final and a thing once liked should be nailed down and let alone.

Instead, there have been innumerable conferences, wrangles, debates and expensive time of important people is hideously wasted on tearing to pieces and compromising. Compromise is good in business but death in art and story-telling."

The Conference Obsession

Hughes takes perhaps an extreme view of the situation from a commercial angle, but there is a more than a modicum of truth in what he says, that would bear the attention of everybody in the industry. The conference idea has become such a habit in certain Hollywood circles, and also the producing executives province of supervision such an obsession, that almost nothing can be settled without consideration of both.

Many onlookers are of the opinion that much could be gained by following the methods employed at some of the smaller studios. Columbia and others are pointed to as having done splendid things with very little excess of personnel and expense. It happens that Columbia's picture, "The Blood Ship," came out at this particular juncture, and attracted a great deal of attention, in part because of the economic situation.

Mayer on Class Pictures

Louis B. Mayer answers the contention of those who believe that the bigger companies could do the same thing very vigorously:

"I have no criticism to make of the accomplishment of any particular company in producing a picture that happens to attract wide public attention, and which does this cheaply and economically, but I do say that the same standards do not prevail for an organization like ours that do for the smaller companies.

"We are in the position of having to put out a class product on all occasions to meet the approval of a class audience. We cannot step down. Some of our pictures are made very economically, and are very successful—tremendously successful in proportion to their cost.

"In the expense sheets on others we are sometimes less fortunate, but we cannot lessen our endeavor towards making a quality product because of this. It is better for us to spend more money on a picture and maintain the standards of production that we have established, even though the theme or the story of our picture, or something else about it, should not please the public in the long run, than to fall below the general demands of the trade to which we cater. I can draw a comparison in the world of style and fashion. A Beau Brummel has to have everything right on every occasion in the matter of dress, or the public will notice the deficiency; a person who is not a style-setter can afford to take more chances."

In any proposed move toward economy, it is thoroughly agreed that there must be no lessening of expense that will disturb the quality of pictures. "We are going to maintain the quality of pictures in any case," Mr. Goldwyn told me in speaking of the academy. "That is an established part of the policy of this organization."

Attempts to Impress Wall St.

This attitude differs from three or four years ago when the studios were shut down, and the industry seemed to have reached the decision after a period of extravagance that it was better to go back to cheap pictures. Present theatre requirements have naturally made this impossible, and it is doubtful whether, all things considered, the situation justifies any resort to methods that went out of date half a dozen years ago.

Many believe that there should be some cutting down of personnel, and there undoubtedly will be. One can anticipate a reduction in the present size of stock companies of actors, directors, etc. There appears a definite indication that many players of doubtful box office value will be eliminated. Normal weeding out processes! Younger players will be treated in a more conservative way financially. This will extend to directors and other talent. It will be well, though, if the eliminating practices are carried on with penetration and not haphazardly.

No salary is too high, it is conceded by all, for any player who is a great public attraction. Whether this attitude is absolutely correct might be called into question,

How Money Is Wasted at Hollywood

HOW much longer is the huge waste in production going to continue? Two recent examples have come to our attention, which show that the economy movements at Hollywood are still in the talk era.

We print below two instances, without names either of the studios or the personnel involved; because if we did print the names we would be accused of discriminating against certain companies and individuals. The truth is not popular in this industry.

INSTANCE NO. 1

At one of the biggest studios, the star decided that a certain picture could not be made for $125,000 because he didn't think that would be money enough to produce the lavish scenes called for in the script.

More than half of the picture has been made but it is to be junked and another story written; and a new leading woman substituted for the one originally engaged.

This is the second time the picture has been started and junked. The first time, a star and complete cast had been engaged. They, too, were discharged when the story was changed.

INSTANCE NO. 2

A well-known star is having a lot of trouble getting started on a picture. So far, $173,000 has been spent and not a foot of film to show for it. An eminent scenario writer got $20,000 for an adaptation from a novel. A relative of the star was hired as a director, worked two weeks, and then his results were not liked.

A new director was employed, but he didn't like the first screen story, written by the eminent scenarist who got $20,000, so that version has been scrapped. Another eminent scenarist is at work on a new version, for which Eminent Scenarist No. 2 will get $15,000. While the second version is being written, overhead cost continues to pile up. Net result: not a single foot of film so far.

but it is characteristic of Hollywood's impetuosity.

Economy gestures don't pay unless they are based on real principles of economy. Nothing can be gained by a theatrical attempt to impress Wall Street. The proposal of a salary cut had something of that aspect, and it has gone by the board.

There is hardly a producer who is not innately cognizant of the faults which exist in the studios generally. A director who attended the meetings of the academy dwelt on this fact, when he was talking to me:

"We, in the directorial and acting end, are not telling them anything that they do not already know, and they are very courteous to listen to it all under the circumstances. It is the industry's mistakes that stand out most glaringly. It is the case where a company throws away $500,000 on a picture, and then has not a foot of film that it can use, and then has to go on shooting, throwing more money away trying to redeem the error, and all the while charging up the overhead, that causes the major trouble. We simply can't take a licking and forget about it. We have to go back and fight some more. Consider "Ben Hur" as an example; consider "Old Ironsides" and various other pictures that have required many months in the making; consider any number of films on which production has been stopped and stalled, and which have run into bad weather, both real and metaphorical, and you will have the major cause of our troubles. Big pictures all, but were they worth the money that went into them? Maybe they were. Only the future can tell that definitely.

"The best we can hope for is to use our past experience to guide us in the future in dealing with the obstacles we encounter. We are getting down to cases in dealing with wilful extravagance, but we can only hope to do our best in combating that which is unforeseen and accidental. That is, after all, the show business."

Inflation of various kinds is perhaps the worst thing from which the film colony has suffered—that plus a share of provincialism which inhabits any locale dedicated to a certain line of progress. This same provincialism is typical of the stage in New York; it probably is also typical of the automobile industry in Detroit, and of the packing industry in Chicago. The rest of the world simply doesn't exist as far as the manufacture of stage shows goes in Manhattan, of automobiles in Detroit, and the distribution of livestock products from the Windy city. Hollywood is the center of motion picture production, and is primarily conscious only of those things that pertain to production, and not so keenly conscious of distribution and exhibition, except in so far as these have a local effect. At the same time, the spirit just now is (even as it can be) much more broad-minded.

The Academy cannot be a cure-all because as at present conceived its activities center in the field of production. It is an organization designed primarily—one might say solely—to help along that line. But the bigger minds in the academy know distribution and exhibition, and later on its destiny will unquestionably go farther.

Frank Badgley Director Canadian Studio

Frank Badgley, assistant director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio, Ottawa, has been appointed director of the branch, in succession to Raymond S. Peck who died early in June. The new director, who holds the rank of Captain in the Canadian Artillery, served with distinction in the Great War, winning the Military Cross at the Battle of the Somme in 1916. Later Capt. Badgley was a member of the British War Museum which was sent to the United States.

After the Armistice, Capt. Badgley became identified with the Metro Pictures Corp. in New York and later spent about one year with the D. W. Griffith organization. For some time he also appeared in varied roles in pictures, returning to Ottawa in 1921 when he became assistant director and film editor of the Government studio, a post which he occupied until his present appointment.

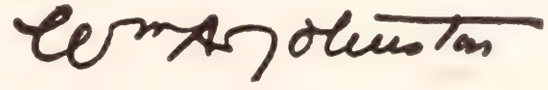
THE heat wave which descended upon New York and other Eastern cities two weeks ago provided the perfect setting for a spectacular performance in which artificial cooling demonstrated its value as a theatre attraction.



On Broadway the houses equipped with cooling systems not only held up to their recent averages but some of them showed an increase. On the other hand the plays, and even picture attractions of proved popularity with the New York public, offered in theatres not having facilities for "manufacturing weather" felt the effects of the hot spell in greatly diminished box office receipts.

Of course, no such sensational demonstration as the records of two weeks ago on Broadway was required to establish the cooling plant as a box office factor. The majority of theatres, small and large, now being built are including this equipment in their original designs.

The smaller houses, in this regard as well as in others, are stepping up to scratch, toe-to-toe with the big theatres in the race for patronage. The artificially cooled theatre not long since was exclusively a "downtown" attraction. Not so today.

Engineering concerns which have developed efficient cooling systems are installing their equipment in the small neighborhood houses as well as the big theatres. Recently installations have been made in many houses with seating capacities of less than 2,000 and several in theatres having less than 1,000 seats.

The dream of a few years ago is a reality today. The theatre has become a summer resort, a pleasant retreat for refreshment and healthful relief from the discomforts of heat and humidity as well as a place of entertainment.

inspire Harry Lachman's new idea "Travelaughs"

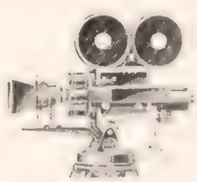
The above scene is from one of Lachman's "Travelaughs." It shows his new star, Micky Powell, doing a "sand-ski" stunt with both a Bell & Howell Pioneer Standard Camera and Eyemo catching the action.

We will let Mr. Lachman, General Production Manager of Rex Ingram Productions, Inc., say it in his own way:



"Inspired by our success with Eyemo in the Metro-Goldwyn picture 'The Garden of Allah', I decided to use it in filming a wholly new idea of my own in comic travelogues to be known as 'Travelaughs.' The scenario may be said to be written with one hand, with an Eyemo dangling from a strap attached to the other waiting to film it."

If you don't already know it, Eyemo is the "hand-held" standard professional automatic camera with which you can "follow focus" or "dial iris" with camera in operation. A selection of 14 interchangeable lenses, each with accurately matched viewfinders, make Eyemo a camera of professional accuracy and adaptability. With Eyemo you can vary the speed, either 16 exposures per second or 8—or with Double-Speed Eyemo, 16 exposures per second, or 32. Also 3-speed available, 12, 16 and 24. The price, without case, is only $264 with Taylor-Hobson-Cooke F 2.5 lens, 47 mm. focal length.

DESIGN ACHIEVES ELEGANCE WITH SIMPLICITY

Luxurious Playhouse in Canton Built from Plans by Thomas W. Lamb

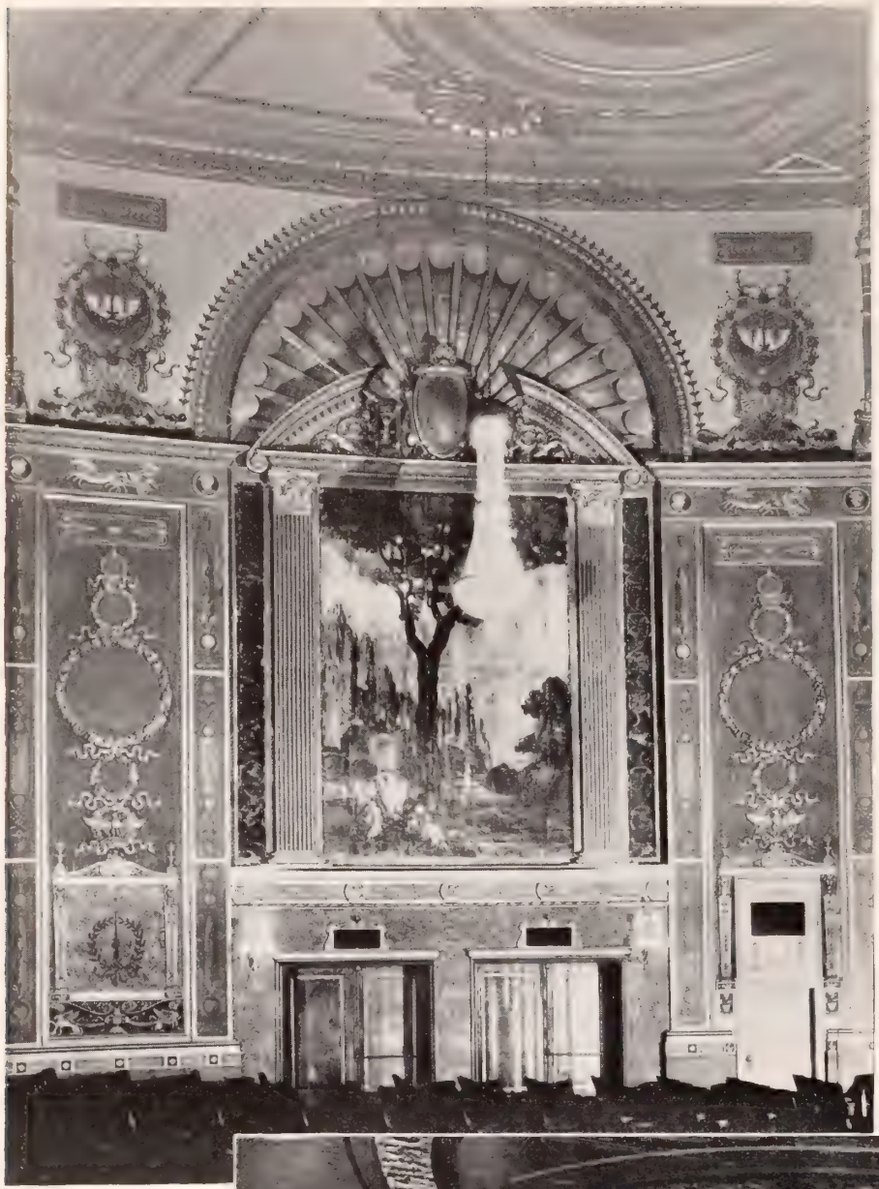
ELEGANT simplicity has been achieved at the cost of $1,000,000 in the construction of the beautiful new 2,750-seat Loew presentation type theatre in Canton, said to be the first Loew house built in Ohio outside of Cleveland and the forerunner of others to follow.

Its severe exterior, showing the Egyptian influence on architecture, is of cream brick with a trimming of dark brick used in the cornice and at the corners. The building rises a little above the average three-story structure. The solid plainness of the front wall is broken by three decorative panels surmounted by windows with overhanging iron balconies. This austerity of exterior is relieved by the brilliantly-lighted marquise and signs and the equally brilliantly-lighted 100-foot frontage on Market Ave., the main business thoroughfare of Canton.

The Empire period, as done in the time of Napoleon, furnished the inspiration for the interior decorations, which were done by Miss Anne Dornin, who is associated with Thomas W. Lamb, architect of the theatre. Luxury and dignity are the keynotes of the style of this period. The atmosphere of the period is felt immediately upon entering the outer lobby. Three sets of doors separate the lobby from the street. And again, a series of glass doors separates the foyer and auditorium. This feature of construction was designed to eliminate noise and draft from the auditorium as well as to give ample accommodations to patrons waiting for seats.

The auditorium of the theatre follows the stadium plan of architecture. All the seats are on one floor but on varying grades. A tier of loges, about one-third of the way back, divides the lower section from the upper section.

Right, Russell Bovim, for seven years connected with the Loew Theatres, is manager of the Loew's Canton.



Beautiful wrought iron railings in Empire design separate the loges from the seats.

One of the outstanding features of the auditorium is the beautiful dome effect done on what is claimed to be the largest flat ceiling ever designed for a Loew playhouse. The dome effect has been created by the decorators through the use of green and rose colors, much of which has been put on the plaster grillwork which serves an important part in heating and ventilating the building.

Green panels and high, wide arches colorful with rich, rose DuBarry draperies alternate along the side walls. Rose DuBarry draperies also form the proscenium curtain and valance. Rose and green were selected as the fundamental decorative scheme of the theatre as being most expressive of warmth for the winter and coolness for the summer. The star, emblem of Napoleon, is used extensively as a decorative feature, as well as warlike insignia and laurel wreaths, all expressions of art in harmony with the period.

Crystal lighting fixtures of elaborate Empire design are suspended from the ceiling. Three separate systems of illumination have been installed, thereby providing against any emergency.

Sixteen sets of beautiful silk hangings and draperies have been provided to make possible changes for the big presentation acts. Among these draperies is a rhinestone drop—a black velvet curtain studded in design with thousands of brilliants. The front valance is old rose velour. Next comes a gold silk curtain which opens directly upon the screen. Green silk hangings cover the entire stage, with alternating curtains of silver and gold cloth.

Heating and cooling systems have been installed, providing an even heat in winter and guaranteeing to be from 10 to 20 degrees lower than street temperature in summer. A large ice manufacturing plant has been installed in the basement of the building to coat with ice the huge coils through which the summer air is furnished.

Dressing rooms are beneath the stage. Also make-up rooms and a comfortably furnished lounge for the performers.

Complete fire prevention has been secured in the projection booth, which is equipped with two projection machines, three spot lights, as well as other equipment necessary in a modern booth. Fire extinguishers, fire apparatus, fire alarms and an asbestos curtain are also provided against fire exigencies.

UNIVERSAL THEATRES OPEN TWO NEW HOUSES IN ATLANTA

THE Universal company opened two new houses in the same city, Atlanta, during the same week, that of July 3. Both represent the finest kind of modern picture theatre of their type. They are the Capitol, built at a cost estimated at $1,500,000 and with a seating capacity of 2300, in Atlanta proper, and a beautiful suburban theatre in East Atlanta, the Madison, with a seating capacity of 800.

The Capitol, occupying a site on the most highly developed city block in Atlanta, was designed by Starrett and Van Vleck, New York architects.

The theatre immediately adjoins Keith's Georgia. The maintenance from Peachtree street leads through a wide lobby, paneled in glazed tile and scagliola.

In the auditorium and foyer the architecture and interior decoration are after the Adam style. Particularly effective is the treatment of the panels where the plaster ornamentation is picked out in ivory, glazed and polished by hand.

Carrying out the color scheme chosen for the walls, the silk damask paneling shows a background of apple-green with design in purple.

The prime feature of decorative art in the auditorium proper is the dome, executed fom designs copied from the famous Adam. With apple-green and old ivory for the background, the plaster ornamentation of ivory, highly glazed and polished, is accentuated by cleverly contrived lighting.

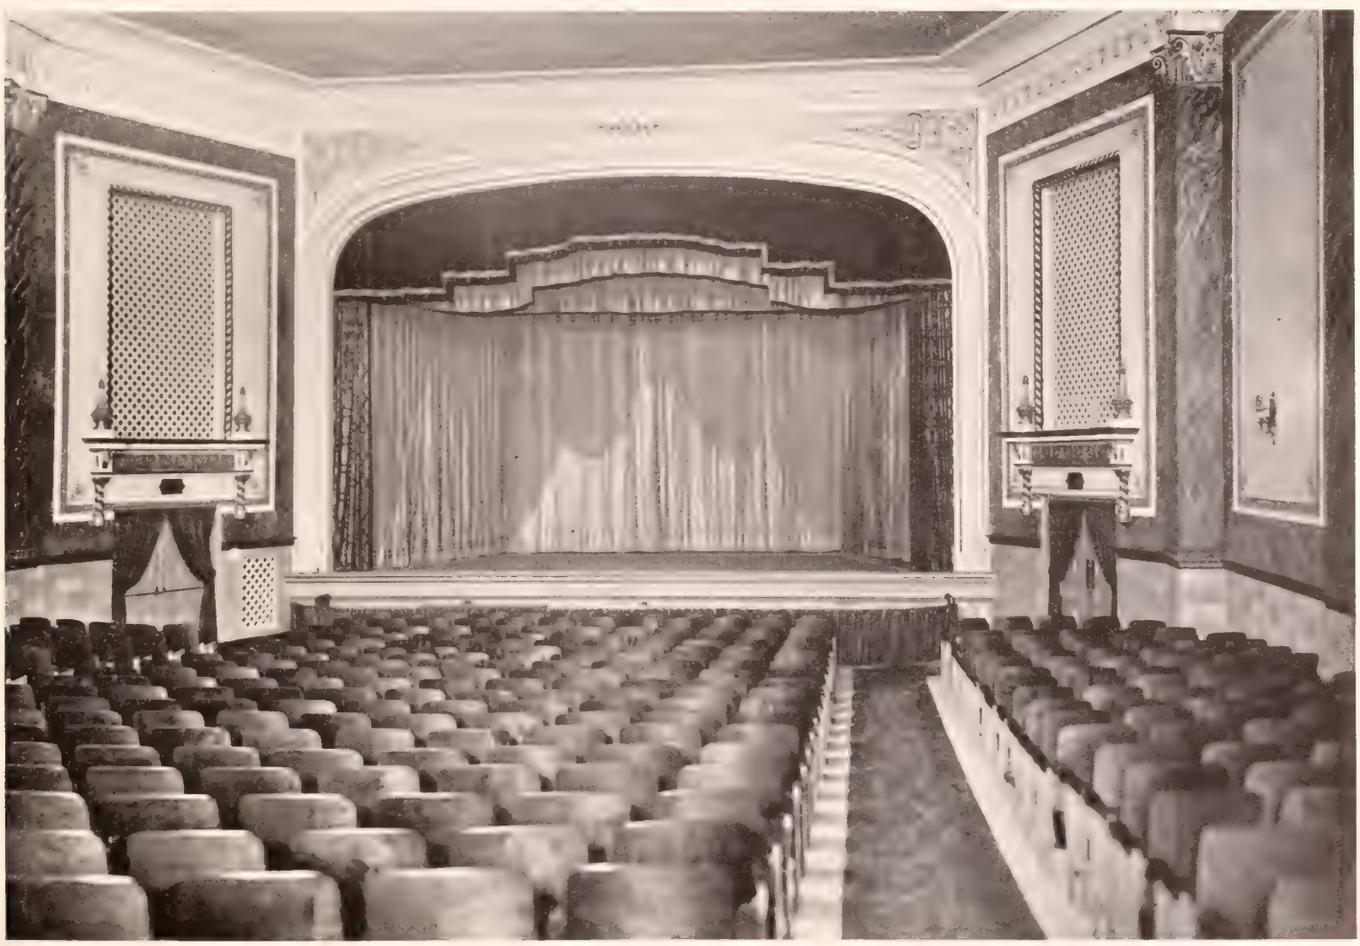
The color scheme prevailing in the decoration is expressed again in the upholstering of the seats where tapestry designed in old ivory, green and coral is combined with leather.

Throughout the foyer, auditorium, mezzanine and on the stairways the luxurious carpet carries out the general color scheme.

The suburban house is located at 496 Flat Shoals Avenue in East Atlanta. Built in Spanish style with stucco finish, it is a combination office and theatre building with stores flanking the entrance.

The foyer, which is finished in stucco, is adorned with two handsome triple wall frames, finished in bronze with decorations of polychrome. The central panels are fitted with handsome mirrors topped with special lighting fixtures.

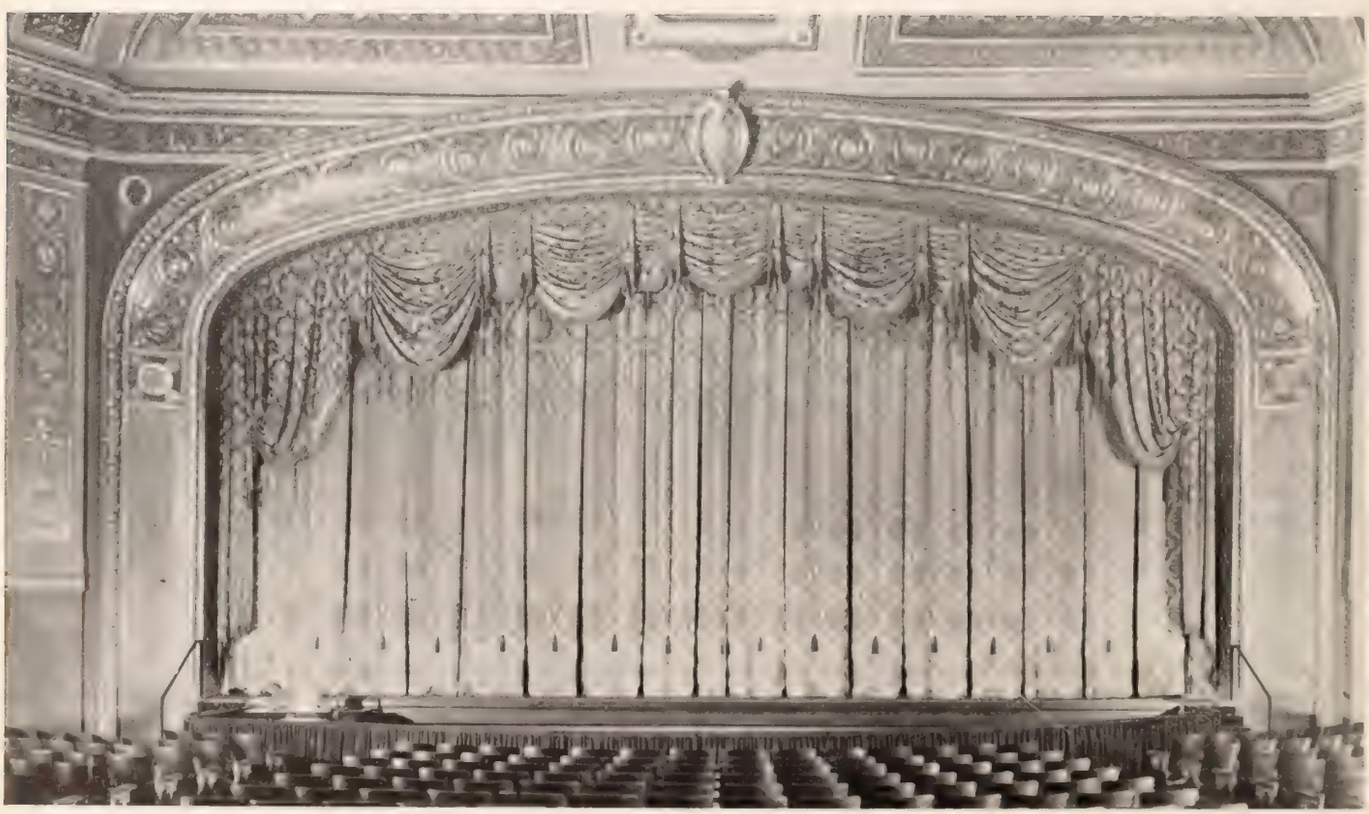


The auditorium is spacious in proportions with high ceilings that add greatly to the beauty and comfort of the theatre. In designing the house, the architect adopted the style now so popular in many better suburban houses and eliminated both balcony and mezzanine. The seats, 800 in number, are all on one floor.

The theatre was designed by Daniel and Beautell, architects.

Left, a view of the exterior of the Madison, done in the Spanish style and executed in stucco. The building is a combination office and theatre building with stores flanking the entrance.

View of the auditorium of the Madison theatre, East Atlanta, is shown below. The ceiling panels are in Spanish stucco set off by marbelized pilasters. The curtain is of crimson and bold brocade.



Above is an artist's sketch of the exterior of the Million-Dollar theatre on which construction has been started in Seattle. The theatre was designed by Sherwood D. Ford, architect. The structure will have a frontage of 120 feet on Olive Way and 208 feet on Seventh Avenue. It is being built by the Washington Theatre Enterprises, an organization composed of prominent local business men.

PEOPLE are learning that air conditioning in the theatre means cool non-humid comfort in the Summer, temperate, healthfully humidified air in the Winter, a copious supply of cleansed fresh air always without draughts. ¶ These B. S. Moss neighborhood houses have greeted the present Summer with Manufactured Weather* for the comfort of their patrons. The time has come when air conditioning is a profitable investment for the fine neighborhood houses and small theatres. ¶ Carrier acceptance of complete responsibility has made air conditioning an indispensable asset to the theatre and a boon to the public.

THEATRE IN SPANISH STYLE FOR PHILADELPHIA SUBURB

Ballinger Company and W. Ellis Groben Associate Architects for Oxford Theatre

WORK has been commenced on the new Oxford Theatre, on Rising Sun and Oxford Avenues, Burholme, Philadelphia, for Oxford Theatre Company, Inc., in accordance with drawings and specifications prepared by The Ballinger Company, Philadelphia and New York, and W. Ellis Groben, Associate Architects. This Theatre is ideally located in the central business section, in a community where there is now under way very extensive activity in new development.

The theatre is designed to be operated on the so-called combination policy, consisting of high grade feature pictures in conjunction with headline vaudeville acts similar to those in the "down-town" theatres. This sort of program always attracts patrons from much greater distances than merely picture shows alone, so that this theatre will not depend exclusively upon the immediate vicinity for its patronage, but will draw from surrounding communities.

In order to accommodate those who come by automobile and auto-bus, a large plot has been reserved for park-the side and entered from Oxford Pike. The theatre, seating 2,050 persons, is of fire-proof construction, modern in every respect and includes all conveniences, such as mechanical heating and ventilation in winter and artificial cooling in summer, for the comfort of its patrons.

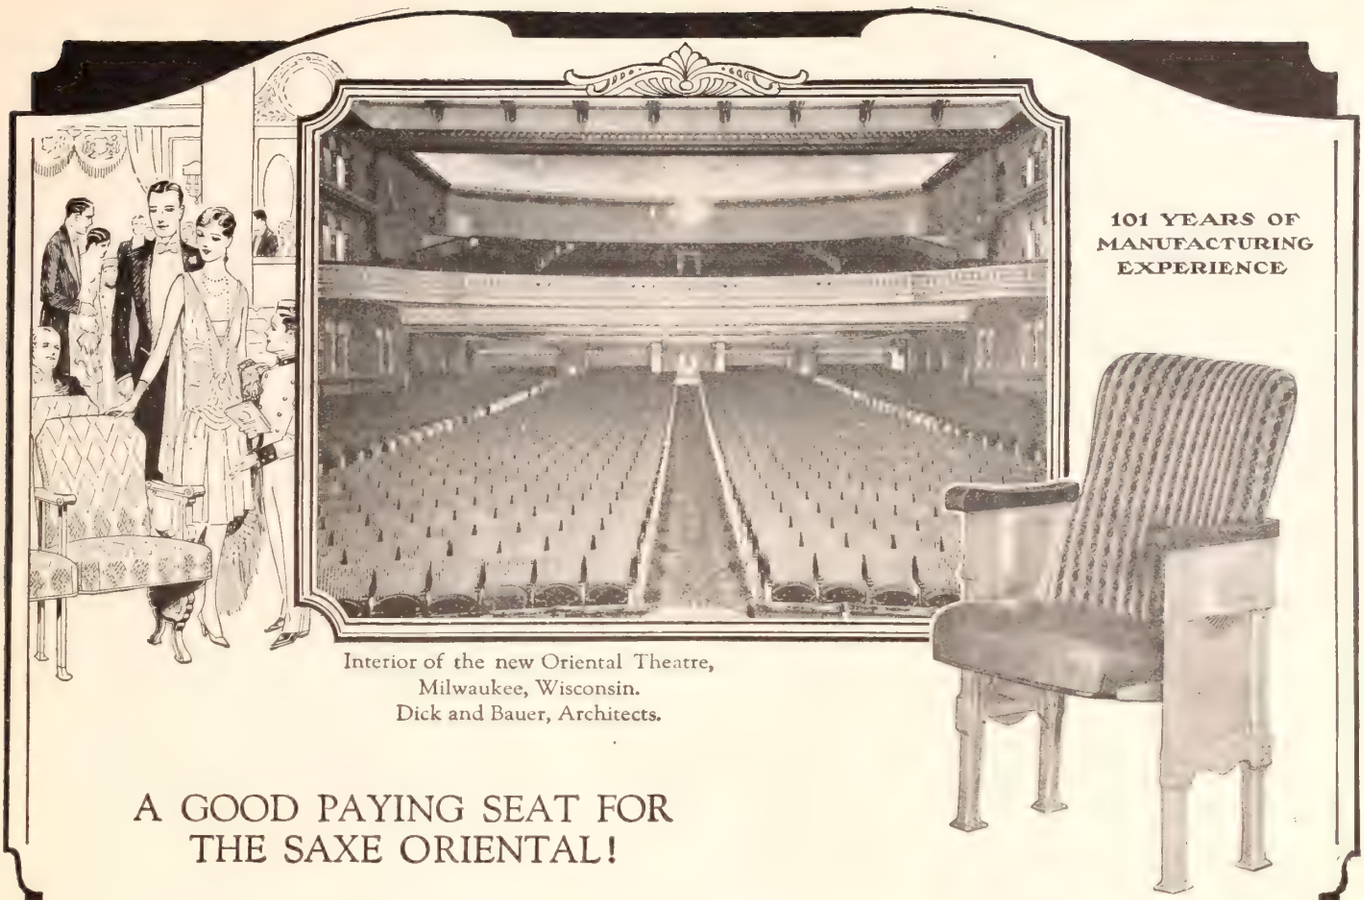
The building has a frontage of 180 feet on Rising Sun Avenue and extends through to Oxford Pike. In addition to the entrance to the theatre, there are, on Rising Sun Avenue, seven modern stores, approximately 20 feet wide by 45 feet deep, over each of which, on the second floor, is an apartment consisting of four rooms and a bath.

With its ornamental marquee, the main entrance gives access to a spacious two-story vestibule on Rising Sun Avenue, having plaster decorations and stenciled beam ceilings, all in color and typically Spanish in character, which is the theme used throughout the interior generally. From this vestibule, a wide lobby or promenade leads to the foyer of the theatre proper.

From the main floor of the theatre, two spacious marble stairways lead to the completely appointed mezzanine above, having a lounge, retiring rooms and toilets for the women and, in addition, a smoking room for men, all in the same style of decoration. On this floor is located also the administration offices, etc.

The stage, with a 50-foot wide proscenium opening, is fully equipped in every respect to accommodate both the best type of vaudeville acts and special attractions. The decorative effects of the interior are worthy of special attention because of the pleasing Spanish impression they create, enriched by the introduction of rich color notes, all upon a tinted, surfaced plaster background. These wall surfaces, otherwise plain in treatment, depend entirely upon their color and surface treatment for effectiveness. Spanish drinking fountains in polychrome terra cotta and faience tile and the balcony effects with wrought iron grills, are features of unusual attractiveness.

Special electrical equipment for lighting effects will be installed, also apparatus for cooling and ventilating the air. Seating, carpets, draperies, finishings and organ of special construction will be provided.



Contract for the building has been awarded to Theodore Kirmse, general contractor.

John Eberson Architect for New Theatre for Spokane

John Eberson has been selected as Architect for the new theatre being built by L. N. Rosenbaum, financier of New York and Spokane, for the West Coast Theatres, Incorporated.

The theatre is to be built at one of the principal corners of Spokane, the corner of Sprage Avenue and Monroe Street. It will seat 3,000 people and will be designed in Italian Renaissance Style.

Plans are in progress and building construction is to start in the month of September.

A GOOD PAYING SEAT FOR THE SAXE ORIENTAL!

THE Saxe Amusement Enterprises sought a comfortable seat for their new Oriental Theatre in Milwaukee. They wanted a chair that would provide the kind of comfort that would build steady, profitable patronage. They found it in OC431, the beautiful Heywood-Wakefield chair shown above. This practically designed seat is paying good box office dividends at the new, magnificent Oriental Theatre, one of the finest in the entire Saxe chain.

We will be glad to tell you more about this and other Heywood-Wakefield chairs which have been installed in Saxe, Publix, Orpheum and other circuit houses all over the country.

Send for your copy of our new booklet "Heywood-Wakefield Seats the Roxy." This interesting pamphlet illustrates and describes in detail the Heywood-Wakefield seating in the Roxy Theatre, New York City.

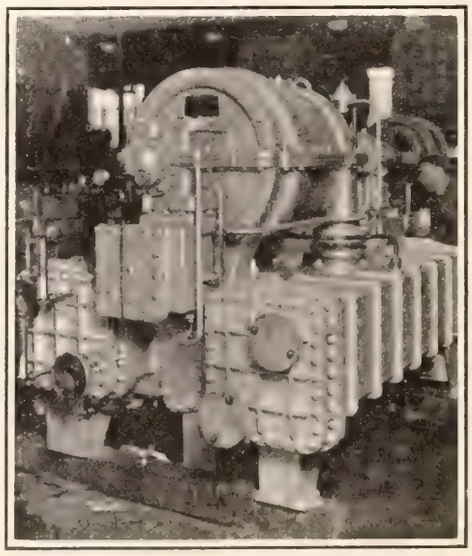
Air Conditioning in the Small Theatre

THE development of air conditioning machinery to the uses of the smaller theatres is discussed in an article by D. C. Lindsay, publicity director of the Carrier Engineering Corporation, which will appear in the 1927 Paramount Pep Club Year Book, to be published in August.



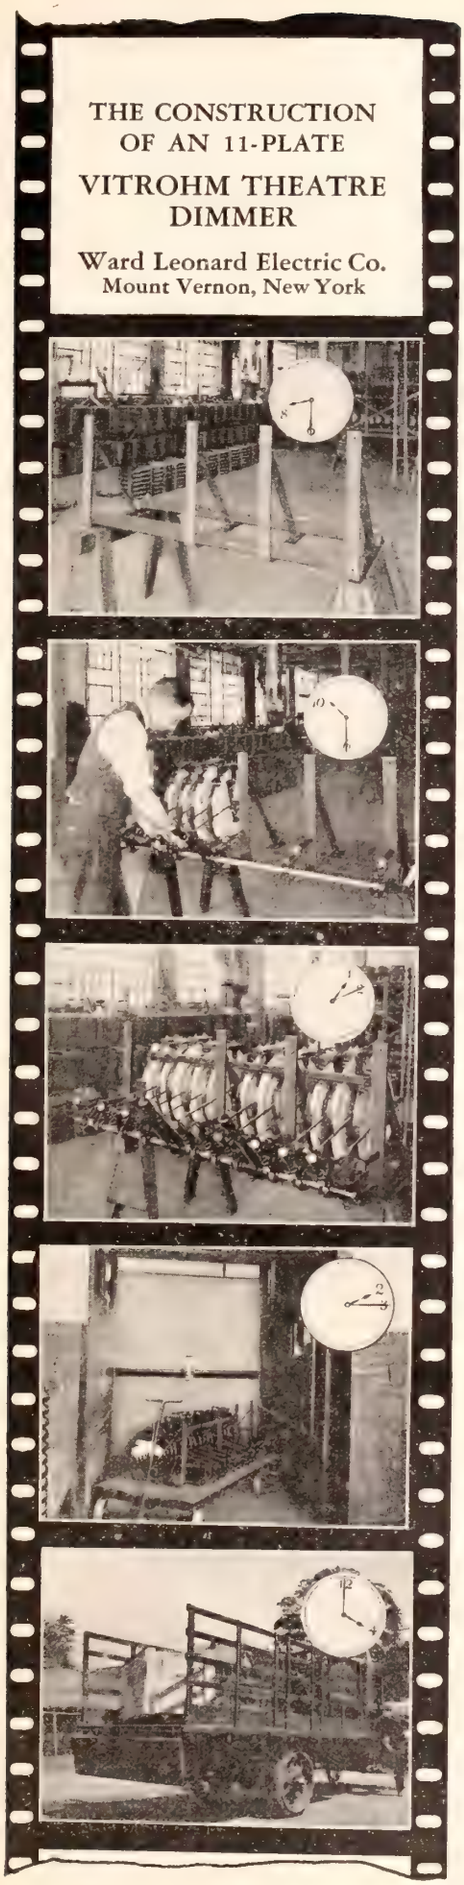
The article points out that during the past six years approximately two hundred theatres in cities throughout the United States have invested in air conditioning systems. This equipment is distinguished from the fan ventilation and heating equipment by the fact that it provides for cooling the air during summer and offers means of controlling the condition of humidity in the theatre.

The primary factor which has persuaded theatre owners that air conditioning will prove profitable because of the spectacular cooling of the theatre during the extremely hot weather of summer. This too, has been the primary appeal to the public. Though this is sufficient justification for the investment, the writer declares, air conditioning has more to offer than the mere cooling of a theatre during these three or four sultry months. The article continues.

Air conditioning as provided in the theatre is not simply a refrigeration system. The refrigeration machine is not used to make ice according to the popular conception. The refrigeration machine has little more to do with the system as a whole than the bolier by which the theatre is supplied with the heat in the winter. Nor is it more important than the indispensable fan which is used to distribute conditioned air.

It is important, therefore, that the theatre owner should know that a complete and properly installed air conditioning system provides his theatre with the means of maintaining ideally comfortable and healthful conditions every day in the year. Furthermore, he has something to offer his patrons which cannot be approached by a theatre not so equipped.

People are learning by feeling for themselves, the comfort which is offered in an air conditioned theatre in contrast to many of our old theatres, particularly the legitimate houses, which are almost invariably stuffy and over-heated even on the coldest winter day. We believe that from this point of view the theatre owners who have invested in air conditioning systems are overlooking a field of exploitation. The average person is conscious of comfort principally by contrast. That is why it has been easy to attract the public from the hot streets to the pleasant atmosphere of a properly cooled theatre. At times when outdoor conditions do not bring this contrast boldly to the attention of the patron the only comparison we have is to bring to his mind the fact that he is comfortable in comparison to some experience which he has had in a stuffy overheated audience.



The new Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration Unit, developed for use in the smaller theatres. The unit is of sufficient capacity to cool and dehumidify the air of a 1,000-seat theatre. It may be located at any point in the building and will occupy a room approximately 12 feet square allowing ample room for control boards and access to all parts of the machine.

IT was quite natural that the application of air conditioning in the theatre should have had its beginning in the large elaborate Metropolitan houses which represent large investments and which have far greater prospective incomes than the theatres in smaller cities or the neighborhood houses in any city. It is to be expected, however, that a feature which has proven to be such a great asset to the central theatres is worth a careful economic investigation on the part of the theatre owner operating first-class small theatres and neighborhood houses.

Theatre owners have foreseen this and so have the architects and air conditioning engineers. The result has been a concerted effort to devise and standardize equipment that shall be within the economical reach of, and a profitable in-

Service Is One Phase of Ward Leonard engineering

THEATRE owners, architects, and electricians are interested in the mechanical and electrical excellence of the dimmer equipment to be chosen for a job.

They are vitally interested, also, in the service given by the manufacturer.

Emergencies are the rule rather than the exception in the theatre business. A new show booked for next week needs more dimming equipment than is available, house lighting alterations must be made within two weeks—a dozen and one reasons why speed is imperative.

When these emergencies occur, it is natural to turn to Ward Leonard engineering and service facilities with the knowledge that the job will be turned out within scheduled time.

This is the record of more than a quarter of a century. The world's great stages and many thousands of smaller theatres are equipped with Vitrohm Dimmers and backed by Ward Leonard service.

On June 6th, 1927, the owner of a New York State Theatre entered an order for a dimmer bank to add to his present equipment. Speed was essential and he requested our co-operation in getting the job out quickly. The record is given below.

June 6—order entered.
June 7—Design and constructional details approved by engineering department.
June 8—8:30 A.M. Dimmer construction started.
2:15 P.M. Dimmer completed.
4:00 P.M. Dimmer boxed and on truck for delivery to long distance trucking concern.
June 9—9:30 A.M. Dimmer delivered to theatre.

The progress of this dimmer bank through the Ward Leonard plant is shown pictorially in the illustrations at the left.

The new Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmer Catalogue, Bulletin 68, is ready for distribution. It contains material of interest to everyone connected in any way with theatre lighting control. A copy will be sent without charge upon request.

What Various Types of Cooling Systems Will Do for You and Your Theatre

By J. F. Dailey

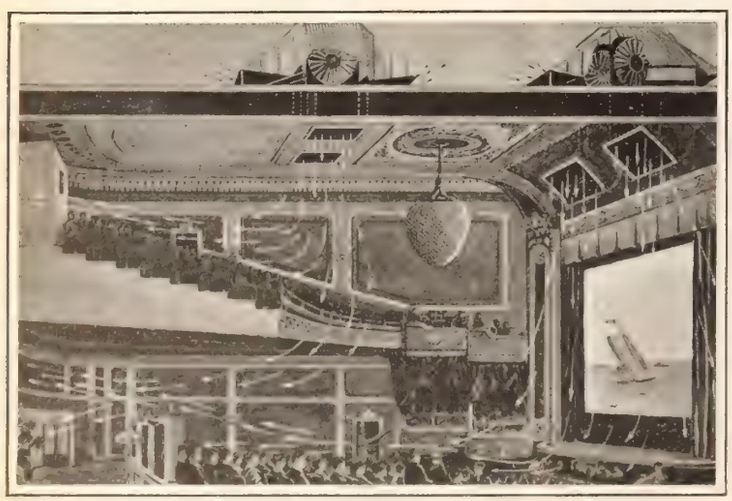
Vice President Typhoon Fan Company

AMONG the many characteristics of the human race, one is demanding and receiving greater attention and respect than ever before—that is, the desire for comfort. To be comfortable is to be free from irritation or any bothersome distraction. Men are wearing more soft collars. Women have dispensed with the straight-jacket corsets. Buildings are constructed with every up-to-the-minute convenience. People want to be warm in winter and cool in summer. It is all a matter of comfort.

Comfort is the outstanding argument used by exhibitors in selling summer entertainment to the public. And the biggest factor in summer comfort for the theatre is the cooling system. People just do not care to go into a hot, stuffy theatre, no matter what picture is showing. On the other hand, a great many people gladly slip into a cool show-place to relax and escape the stifling heat of the street even though the entertainment does not happen to be par excellence.

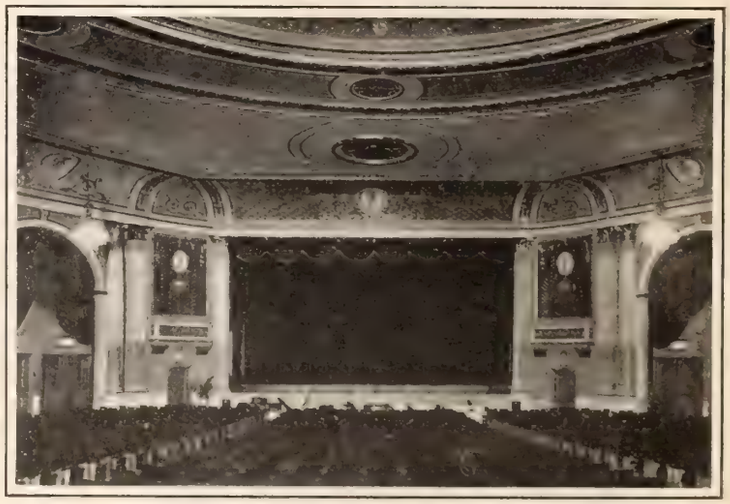
A substantial number of exhibitors have already installed cooling equipment and secured gratifying results. A considerable portion of theatre owners, however, while they are fully cognizant of the benefits derived from cooling apparatus, are hesitant in placing their orders because of the difficulty and confusion which they experience in differentiating between the various cooling systems on the market and in selecting one suitable for their particular requirements.

It is the purpose of this article to explain as plainly as possible what the exhibitor may expect from the different types of cooling systems.



Comfort is the outstanding argument used by exhibitors in selling summer entertainment to the public, says Mr. Dailey in this article describing the different types of cooling systems now offered the showman.

A cooling system for the theatre is generally regarded as a means of making people feel comfortable in hot weather. The effectiveness of a cooling system is measured by how comfortable the audience feels. Thus, wall fans may be classified as cooling equipment but they could not be designated as effective cooling systems, particularly in a theatre where the best they can do is to stir up the foul, warm air. If the fan is pointed directly at you, you feel a little relief the first few moments when the rush of air dissipates the film of heat covering your skin. But the heat is not removed from the theatre. It is merely churned up and presently enough heat and foul odors accumulate from the audience to make the atmosphere unbearable. Furthermore, there is danger of contracting colds because of the local draughts projected from the wall fans.



Another type of equipment that may come within the realm of cooling apparatus for theatres is the roof ventilator. This system depends on the principle that hot air rises, and if the outside air is moving quite rapidly there is exerted on the ventilator a sucking force which often pulls considerable heat and air from the house. This type, therefore, depends for its effectiveness upon outside wind conditions, so that it could not be relied upon when needed most. As an adjunct to a more positive cooling system it has a distinct value in providing heat outlets in sections of the theatre where the effect of the regular cooling system is not readily available.

A more positive and effective cooling system is the one employing breeze-making equipment. Conjure up a sweltering day in the city and imagine yourself on a fast going yacht. The actual temperature may be about the same in both places, but the fresh air breezes on the boat make you feel delightfully cool. The breeze-making machines blow fresh air into the theatre at the stage end, through the entire length and height of the house, and out through the available exits in the rear, taking with it heat, moisture,

How the "Show Me" Method Was Used to Sell the Organ at Loew's Cleveland House

Ernest H. Hunt, organist at Loew's State, Cleveland, who used movies to show his fans where "the music comes from."

VARIETY is the acknowledged keynote of success in the presentation of theatrical production, no matter what its medium, and while the fundamental attributes of presentation in a theatre are limited, there is absolutely no limit to the variety that can be obtained through new uses of these fundamental attributes and through new combinations.

Ernest H. Hunt, organist at Loew's State theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, demonstrated recently to what extent the house organ can be employed to attract attention on a well balanced bill of motion pictures and vaudeville, how it can get special newspaper notices and how it can excite prolonged interest among the patrons of the theatre.

Everyone knows how much more interesting is a thing with which one is thoroughly conversant. That's a basic psychological axiom. Now everyone who attends a motion picture theatre is familiar with the strains of the organ, as the organ is used in practically all picture houses either as an accompaniment to the picture or as a special number by itself. But how many people understand any of the working arrangements of the big organs which have become standard equipment in the representative movie houses of the country? When a theatre installs one of these organs the public is informed in copious newspaper articles that three freight cars were used in hauling the parts from the factory to the final destination; that fifteen trucks were required to transport it from the railroad depot to the theatre; that ten thousand pipes, ranging in size from 2 feet to 32 feet, are used in its composition; that the console has 180 stops and that its possibilities for reproduction of sound, both human and instrumental, are limitless. But what does all this mean to the reading public? Nothing! —unless, of course, the reader takes some previous knowledge with him to the better understanding of the instrument.

And so, in order to explain how an organ is made, what it can be made to do, and how it can be made to do it, Ernest Hunt wrote a short scenario called, "WHERE DOES THE MUSIC COME FROM?", which he personally directed and put on most successfully at Loew's State theatre. The reel is 800 feet long and was run off in about ten minutes. It was made by the Alpha Motion Picture Company of Cleveland, specialists in industrial motion pictures, at an approximate cost of twelve cents a foot. It took an entire morning to make the picture.

The scenario opens with a picture of Clips from the negative of Hunt's organ picture "Where the Music Comes From."

Mr. Hunt at the console, while Hunt himself, not a motion picture, is playing the instrument in the pit. Subtitles follow, explaining the reason for making the film, Hunt playing the while. Then Hunt is shown on the screen holding a stick and ready to start on his tour of the organ. First he points out a close-up of the swell pedals, at the same time explaining their mission—that is to increase or decrease the volume of sound. He simultaneously demonstrates on the organ the effect of using the swell pedals as shown on the screen. The swell shutters are next shown in operation, and from there the audience is taken on a trip by the organ tuner or mechanic to the relay, where he explains alternately in flashes and subtitles the brains of the organ—that is, the working of the electrical switches, demonstrating the similarity of their action to a telephone exchange, with which everyone is familiar. From there on the film shows the entire organ, with Hunt indicating the various points of interest. The smallest pipe, which is the size of a common lead pencil, is shown first. Then the audience is led through a maze of pipes until it is shown the largest pipe, the 32 foot diaphone, all the time comparing the pipes with the size of a man, and all the time demonstrating the stops from the console. The next demonstration consists of showing the tuner at work. He takes apart one of the large reeds and exhibits the tongue, that is the interior of the reed which creates the sound. He goes through all the motions of tuning the instrument, while subtitles explain just what he is doing and how delicate the work is. This combines action with demonstration in a clever manner so as to keep the interest of the audience sustained. As the tuner replaces the various reeds, organist Hunt plays different stops, thus giving the audience the difference in tone color, at the same time showing how these changes are produced. The mechanical workings of the attachments are now shown; the xylophone, harp, viola, and so forth. All the traps are shown in action on the screen with the music demonstrating these stops played by Hunt at the console, and titles on the screen, make it all as clear to the audience as it is to the organist. Particularly interesting is the demonstration of the vox humana. The machanic stops longer at this point than at any other, this pipe being interesting to see.

The trip continues to the blower room. Here is shown the 15 horse power motor and blower as well as the air filter. This filter is taken apart in the scenario to

ARE YOU GOING TO BUILD, REMODEL OR RE-EQUIP?

Whichever it may be, the following five good business reasons why you should use the NATIONAL ONE-CONTRACT EQUIPMENT PLAN are submitted for your thoughtful consideration:

1 NATIONAL ENGINEERING SERVICE insures a correct start. A thorough scientific survey of your mechanical requirements; eliminating the possibility of error in both selection and installation, through a pre-arranged plan of procedure.

2 NATIONAL OFFERS YOU the services of theatre experts. Each department is headed by a specialist in his particular line, whose business it is to work for your ultimate satisfaction—giving you utmost value in both service and merchandise best suited to your individual needs.

3 BY GROUPING YOUR REQUIREMENTS you not only insure "on time" deliveries, but establish in ONE FIRM a definite responsibility that would otherwise be divided among many and recognized by few in the final analysis.

4 THE ONE-CONTRACT PLAN saves you MONEY—because it gives you the benefit of volume purchases; TIME—because all details are worked out in advance and you are spared the necessity of searching here and there for the equipment you need; WORRY—because it places men at your service who will relieve you of all details and the anxiety incident to scattered buying and uncertain delivery.

5 SIMPLIFIES YOUR FINANCING PROBLEM; enables you to do business with one firm and on one extension of credit (if such is desired) and at one negotiation. The National Deferred Payment Plan, the most liberal in existence, applies to your entire contract and saves you the expense and inconvenience of many obligations.

The Standard Theatre, What Is It?

By Geo. E. Eichenlaub

Theatre Architect & Engineer, Erie, Pa.

THE SHOWMAN has now appeared many times and each time has given us a fine treat on the greatest, and best, and also the quite most expensive in the world of "Moving Picture Theatres"—the kind that excite our wonder and respect but arouse small hope in our breasts.

By WE, I mean the rank and file of the average Exhibitor, who constitutes about 75 per cent of the field and is 'getting by' in the small town or the neighborhood in the large city, with an old plant seating some 300 to 1200 and keeps a-wondering how much longer he is going to last, against the big boys who seem every day to grow still bigger.

The message here is for those (the 75 per cent) who are more or less isolated not in touch with Architects nor Engineers who really know "Theatres" and who have no idea where such Architects can be found, who would be willing to waste time on their comparatively small problem, which, however, is a big thing to themselves and their community as well.

These so-called "Standard Theatres" have now been developed all the way from the 500 seat up to the 2,500 seat Houses; the latter, for financing reasons mainly, with a big tail appended in the shape of a twelve or more story office building or Hotel or a combination of both.

Ease of financing—economy in the first cost—and a low operating personnel are the chief factors in any investment proposition, particularly in the smaller community theatre, where they are absolutely essential, as there is no great drawing population to work on and first-class management may be called in to save an otherwise poor plant and location, which is possible and has been done in some of the larger cities.

Predicating all thought and effort on these fundamentals, therefore we, some years back, spent upwards of twelve months in an intensive study of the whole problem, in all its various aspects of use and misuse, equipment and control and evolved the 500 seat "Girard Theatre," the first of the new line.

THIS was later improved in detail and perfected in "The Angola Theatre" pictured herewith. The plainer design was made as an alternate, for use where even $200,000 more money could not be possibly found to manage the livelier effect with the curved parapet.

It will be noted that the Theatre Entrance is broad, impressive and inviting. The glass of doors is carefully proportioned to take a standard one-sheet poster. This bank of doors is set back four feet from the front so the effect of a Marquise is gained, without the expense of one. This gives us room on each side for a panel, designed to take a standard three-sheet. The resulting floor-space in front of doors can be used for easels to handle more paper, photographs, etc., when a show is not in progress—but which we think more and more is not an essential to good showmanship.

In practice, good results are achieved with the space provided. When the financial stringency is somewhat in hand, at a later date then a Marquise can be added and suspended from the great steel to steel anchors as provided in the original construction. Two stores are provided, which pay well on the cost of construction. Often, one of the stores is held for the owner's use, and made into a general lounge or sub-lobby in which a popcorn machine is used; when trimmed up with some good furniture, a telephone and a few magazines, etc., this works out as a meeting-place and rest-room which pays dividends.

In some cases, both stores are used by the owner, in preference to leasing them out.

While the store-entrances are shown on front, they more frequently are placed around, in the place of the three-sheet panel, thus grouping all of the main doors together, which has its own advantages in use.

THE front is entirely of cut-stone, especially in the smaller towns where it usually happens that this will be the only stone building in the village, which is as it should be. The theatre to-day, we argue, is the most important building in the community and, as such, should carry the most important architectural expression.

A church is used by only a portion; the bank, not by all the people; the school is used by the children—but the theatre is used by all the people and we feel that it should be sold to the public on the basis of being the "Community Centre" and belonging to the community—therefor it should stand out as the most important building in town and be as fine as money available will permit. In other words, it must be good enough so that the people will take personal pride in it and be glad to boast a little about "Their" theatre, when afield.

Next to the front, comes the lobby. In small towns, this is usually a cramped, repellent affair, dressed up with cheap and tawdry junk that the exhibitor, as often as not, thinks artistic. The bathroom tile often used on the floor is frequently slippery and needs only a few first patrons to make it repulsively dirty —and the mirrors used on the walls might usually better be left off—in fact some states prohibit their use in a theatre lobby. To improve this condition, in fact to make it impossible, we have standardized on a lobby that is 18 feet wide and twenty-six feet long in the clear, with a deep coffered ornamental plaster ceiling and the floor of the finest handmade tiles worked up into artistic designs.

The ticket-booth is in the centre of the right-wall if the theatre faces South or East and is made up of the same tiles and a marble base, with simple plate-glass set in broad-face lead cames. The walls are panelled to suit standard display-frames; the electric fixtures are special double-bowl prismatic glass of high efficiency, which permit of easy and quick change-over to various colors and designs and are always artistic.

All this combines to give a lobby at once, spacious, inviting, attractive and suited to the purpose of "The Showman" and in which he can work and display such ability as he may possess. Its best feature is that the proportions and lines are fixed, and even a poor showman without taste cannot quite ruin the good effect as built-in according to plans and specifications. The lobby gives off through another bank of three large double doors into a foyer that again is large and inviting. This foyer is some sixteen feet from doors to back of seats or "foyer rail" and extends all the way across the house if an alley or court is had on either side. If a blind side is imposed by the size of property, then a cry-room or special rest-room is worked into that space. The auditorium proper is twenty-five feet high, with the ceiling paneled off in heavily molded beams, so designed that a variety of effects are possible, according to the personal wishes or leanings of the owner; or such wishes that may change with a change in ownership at a future date.

The walls are trimmed with pilasters and a low-relief cornice and a very sparing use of ornamental plaster relief work. The colorings are quite uniformly held to the buffs and reds, with deeper shades near the floor and lighter shades toward top and across the ceiling which is held quite light, for the efficiency values from the illuminants used.

In the smaller towns, the exhibitor always wants a "real stage" until he finds out what a real stage is,—and what it costs. We then come to what we term our "temporary stage" which is a cross between a real one and a high-school stage. It enables us to build and equip at small cost,—it will handle and play any average act working up to eight people,—it complies with the state laws anywhere and the Underwriters' requirements,—and it lends itself at any future time to expansion into a real, live, full-time stage, when it is definitely known that such a stage will pay out and not break a chap "who guessed wrong."

SANITARY conveniences are always provided for the women and for the men where the owner wishes it. The plumbing fixtures are the very best, as it is poor economy to save money by using the ordinary commercial fixtures.

The heating and ventilating systems are built in and, againn, are the very best. It is often difficult for an exhibitor to see where a thousand dollars more in cash spent in this department will come back with good interest, and too often it happens, that in ordinary practice it is only an added expense. But where the theatre has actually been built, is in operation, the costs are known and the results checked up carefully,—the factor of guess and ignorance are replaced by the known factors of fact and the results therefore are a matter of positive knowledge, and can be forecast with a close degree of certainty.

Only on that basis can money be raised and spent for a projected new theatre, with assurance that the project will be a success. The construction of the building is a modern steel-frame with masonry curtain-walls, concrete foundations and floor, and the highest rating "Underwriters' Approved" roof. Steel sash and T. C. or kalamein doors are used throughout, which all combines to give a fire-proof bulding, flexible in practice and of long life. The cost is always a variable matter, depending on so many items of location, site and price of local labor available.

These buildings have been built in the last five years as low as $25,000.00 as outlined above, with the owner usually furnishing his equipment from his old house to get started.

Where the owner can afford it, we think it wiser to purchase all new seats, projectors, drapes and illuminants, etc., which starts the house off right and enables the exhibitor to concentrate on his showmanship and an early reduction of the debt, to the point where his worries do not make life too hard.

THE site required for this 500-seat standard theatre is 40 x 125 for the building proper, with allowance for alley or 6-foot court on each side and rear as the local laws may dictate. In the absence of such laws as, say, in Oklahoma, it is well to provide a court on each side just the same, because it is only in accord with good safety practice, and we never can tell when the next chap we elect is going to make himself famous with passing laws of some kind and they may hit this item.

With 65,000 new laws pending at this time in this good old U. S. A. it is safe to assume that theatres in some parts are not being overlooked, and if you escape to-day it is no assurance that you will escape later on. The only answer is to build in accord with the best practice and be guided by experts of long experience who truly understand this specialty.

To the village or borough exhibitor, such expert's fees may seem high,—but that money always comes back later and often carries several hundred percent with it as a profit, on the costs of construction alone, to say nothing of the later profits in operation, due to intelligent design, layout and co-relation of equipment.

The sound business principle of observing in the original design of the theatre such features as wide experience has shown are of definite value to the permanence of the structure and the efficient operation of the house as a public resort should be self evident, and the so-called small, independent theatre man does well when he not only applies his own experience but that of others whose operations may be on a far more extensive scale when he comes to the point of planning a new theatre building.

The Standard Theatre represents an effort to supply a demand which has long existed.

Applying the Movie Season Idea to a Group of Six or More Attractions

By Roy L. Smart

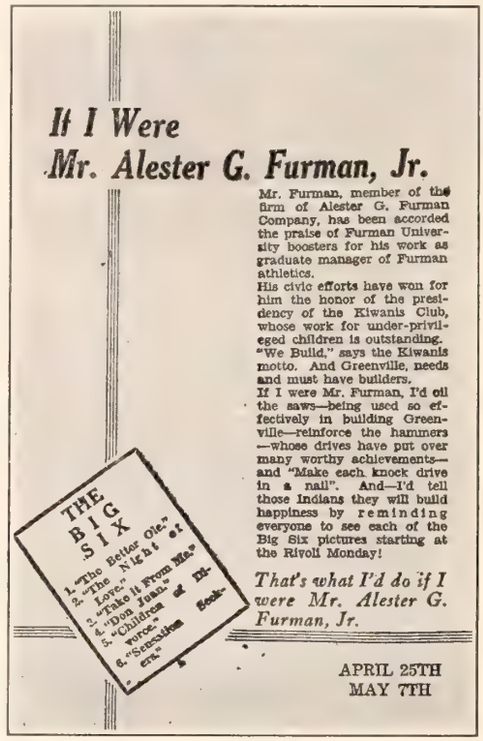
Manager Carolina Theatre, Greenville, S. C.

I AM glad to comply with the request of THE SHOWMAN that I describe in detail the complete working plan of the so-called "Big Six Campaign" which recently was executed with gratifying success at the Carolina Theatre in Greenville, S. C.

In principle the idea of a campaign of this type differs little or not at all from the "week" or "season" drive which has become so popular, because of obvious advantages in the way of making it a community or civic event. It applies the "group idea" to exploitation which ordinarily the showman conducts for a single picture booked for an engagement of from one day to one week, under the average circumstances. There is still another advantage, and this is that the interest and reaction of the public stirred up by such campaigns have something of the institutional angle, and the theatre is benefited directly by figuring as the sponsor of not one but a group of pictures advertised as having especial merit.

Incidentally the recent campaign in Greenville was modeled after one I used in Anniston, Alabama, some years ago. At the Carolina we believe that the recent one was an improvement on the first.

The campaign was started by arranging bookings so as to have a special program for the Drive, which lasted two weeks. The attractions were:



"The Better 'Ole," "The Night of Love," "Take It from Me," "Don Juan," "Children of Divorce" and "Sensation Seekers."

Well in advance we used a special trailer briefly stating the main points of the "Big Six." We also used De Iuxe trailers on each subject.

We used a series of newspaper stories starting two weeks in advance. These told of the plan to give our patrons six big pictures consecutively—a carnival of rich entertainment—little features about the pictures coming and stories of special preparation at the theatre.

We ran a series of seven "If" ads using consecutively the president of the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Civitan Clubs, the publisher of the leading newspaper, the Mayor and a prominent club woman; these ran up to the day before the first picture opened.

We draped the front of the theatre in green and gold. Across the entire width of the building we used double drapes about seven feet deep hanging from the cornice. At each end of this we used vertical drapes coming down almost to the sidewalks, where they were gathered in rosettes. On each side of the entrance we used similar drapes with fan-shaped top and rosettes at the bottom. Under the marquee we strung a row of pennants alternating in gold and green. On each side of the marquee we used two festoons of the pennants, one running from the corner of the marquee to the top corner of the building and the other from the corner of the marquee to the end of the big drapes.

WE made letters five feet high, from wall board which we illumined. One set for each end of the marquee reading "BIG SIX." In the foyer we constructed a minature stage on which we made a display for each of the "Big Six," each display being animated. For example, the first one was Syd Chaplin in "The Better 'Ole." A small motor made him salute constantly. Background was painted to represent a battlefield, with barbed wire, bursting shells, etc. We used cut out tanks and toy cannons on each side.

We used cards on all street cars carrying out the gold and green effect.

We made up from compo board frames about 14 x 22. At the top of each were Important features of Mr. Smart's "Bix Six" campaign. Above, the special frontal display at the Carolina during the drive. On the left, reproduction of one of the "If I Were" newspaper ads used to promote interest in the "Big Six."

cut out letters "Bix Six," and in front of this "One Of The" underneath was a place for a still and another for a title card with dates, at the bottom the theatre name. We had special snipes made for all outdoor paper reading "One of the Big Six."

On the opening day we had a "Two for One" matinee sponsored by the News, by which we admitted two children for the price of one until three oclock.

THE News also used a series of stories for us endeavoring to find persons who had not seen a motion picture. These stories make good reading matter, and were given prominence. The paper even used pictures of some of the seven people found who had never seen a photoplay. The Piedmont wrote a humorous editorial about these seven people, to which we replied, they publishing our response.

The Piedmont used a series of stories the gist of which was that the Piedmont and the theatre were given to six careful drivers one pass on each day the "Big Six" was under way. The passes were in the form of a summons, and the charge was that traffic officers had observed the driver in some careful or thoughtful observance of traffic regulation. The Piedmont carried a series of stories on "Which of the Big Six I Like Best, and Why?" and also published the prize-winning letter, the prizes being passes.

The cost of the campaign, while higher than usual, did not figure high when consideration is given to the fact that it covered six attractions and that each of the six did exceptionally large gross.

Getting Down to the Bottom of Courtesy Service

The Square Deal Attitude Basis of Personnel Training in the Theatre

THERE are as many methods of "putting a theatre over" as there are different types of theatres and types of patronage to be appealed to, but in every showman's summation of the qualities a theatre must possess to be successful there is the inevitable admonition, "a spotlessly clean house and courteous service."

Keeping the theatre properly cleaned is a more or less mechanical job, dependent upon the janitor and his staff and the eternal vigilance of the manager in making daily inspections to be sure that every nook and corner of the house has received the proper attention from the men who work with brooms and brushes, mops and dusters.

But a courteous service is something involving more difficult factors, since the efficiency of a cashier in making change and keeping accounts straight and those of a door man in collecting tickets has to do with a skill resulting from practice and certain natural adaptability to the work—talent if you will. Doing these things efficiently and courteously at the same time is more difficult, for it brings into play the human question—personality—the mental attitude of the employee respecting his or her job and its relation to the patrons of the theatre. Various methods are practiced to build up courteous house staffs. The large theatre organizations, with resources that are practically unlimited, are in a position to pick and choose, train and educate under a system of personnel management.

The experience of the personnel departments of the large theatre circuits and the manager working with limited resources agree on the basic point serving as the foundation for all successful methods of handling employees.

"The square deal attitude, a prime requisite in all worth-while occupations and the backbone of all successful employer-employee relations in every line of industry, is 'sure-fire' in developing the right attitude on the part of theatre employees," said Art Smith, now manager of the Granada theatre in Corona, N. Y., and for many years a showman connected with legitimate theatres, combination vaudeville and picture theatres and picture houses, in explaining his method of dealing with employees.

"When I engage a new usher or cashier I start him or her off with a little talk, friendly conversation about the work that is to be done in fulfilling the job. I tell them that they will get a square deal from me, that good work will receive the fullest appreciation from me, and that I expect in return only what I am giving—a square deal, fair, conscientious work in the performance of their important duties for the theatre," he added.

"I impress upon them all that they are important members of the theatre organization, that the success of the house in a measure depends upon them, and that everything that may be done in the way of effective advertising and a good show might go for naught if their actions and attitude toward patrons fail to observe the rules of courtesy."

Smith has operated every type of theatre, he has managed large city houses for circuits, neighborhood theatres in high-class sections and poor districts of cities in the east and the middle west. He recently assumed the management of the Granada in Corona. It is a residence section made up of a largely foreign population. The theatre is of recent construction and is built according to the modern idea of beauty, luxurious surroundings and a rich setting for the motion picture presentations. The Granada is operated by the S & S circuit.

Policy Applies Everywhere

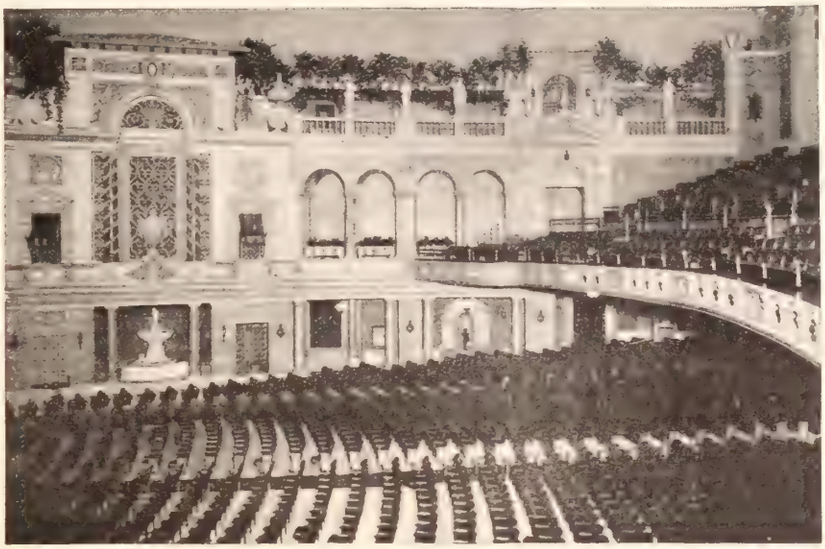
In operating practically all type of theatres over a period of many years. Smith has acquired a wide experience in dealing with employees. His attitude as a result of this experience is similar to that of men in other lines of business: that the best results are obtained by giving the worker incentive, a square deal and doing everything to impress him with the fact that the work, no matter how small the job may be, is vitally important to the success of the business.

"Encourage the worker who shows the right spirit, and develop the right spirit by the attitude that everybody in the theatre is part of the organization, all working together, and each and every employee is performing a task that is vitally important to the success of the business," he says.

"I impress upon all employees, from porters up, that they are in show business, and show business is first, last and always a business of pleasing the public, of catering to the people when they are in the frame of mind to be pleased—when they are seeking recreation. Above all things this is a time when courtesy must be shown, cordiality must mark the appearance and conduct and speech of the people in the theatre. And cleanliness is as important as a good show as a means of satisfying the amusement seeker.

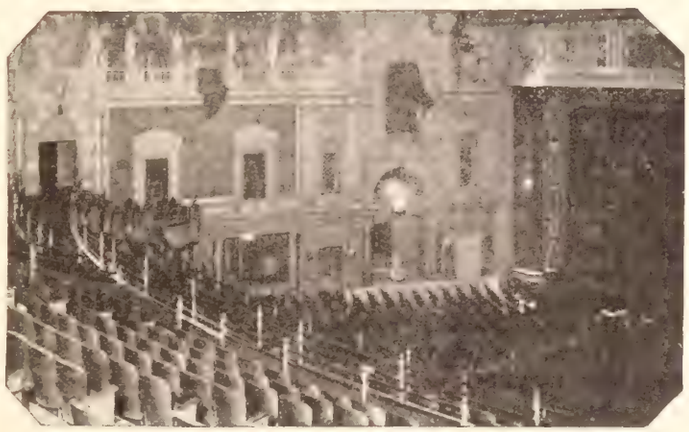
"Close observation of a new employee soon shows the manager whether that employee is either too aloof or too friendly—for one extreme is as bad as another and courtesy of the kind that a theatre manager or employee should show toward a patron lies midway between the two. Any failings noted should be immediately called to the attention of the employee, but in the manner of making a suggestion, helpful and valuable as a professional asset to the worker.

"In a theatre of the community type cashiers, doormen and ushers should be encouraged to recognize regular patrons, but to express their greeting in a manner befitting the occasion, which does not call for the familiar attitude we naturally assume with friends and acquaintances in our own social contacts. It is a business contact into which the element of friendliness and cordiality has been injected, and the proper attitude of courtesy on the part of a theatre or employee toward a patron takes cognizance of that fact.



"There are certain stock tricks which in the majority of cases are helpful in dealing with employees. Unobtrusive ways of keeping the workers aware of the fact that the manager is on the job and is observant of all things going on in his theatre are productive of good results. Any infractions of rules—unless of a serious nature—can be noted and borne in mind until the opportune time, the psychological moment, as it were, arrives and the admonition will therefore have its greatest effect. Promoting friendly rivalry between workers performing similar duties is a help.

An example recently occurred at my theatre. I noticed that the top of a tapestry hanging over a stairway landing had not been dusted in the general clean-up that morning. I knew very well the porter responsible, but I purposely called the other one and asked him if he was not supposed to dust that part of the theatre. He promptly said no, and mentioned the name of the porter who had been assigned that job. Now that was simply taking advantage of an incident to let the other porter know that these things are watched and that neglect of duty will bring its reprimand. It also stimulates a certain feeling of personal pride, the eternal vanity to which humanity is heir, of superiority in his work over his colleague in the porter business. He'll remember that and try to keep that edge of superiority over the other man, or I miss my guess."



These methods have proved successful in the large theatre and the small; they produce the results, Smith says, whether the staff consists of two ushers, two cashiers, two porters and a doorman, or a whole corps of them. The manager's problem is largely the same under all conditions affected by the size of the house.

Campaign Variety Via Accessories

By Dave Bader

Accessory Sales Manager
Universal Pictures Corporation

FUNNY how the little things, which ofttimes prove their importance, are overlooked! How often the proverb of "from an acorn comes an oak" comes to me—as I see how an exhibitor adds many dollars weekly to his receipts by getting behind his pictures with additional advertising! I personally am a great believer in newspaper and magazine advertising—but not every exhibitor is in the position to expend a great deal of money for this kind of advertising. In other instances, where an exhibitor can afford this expenditure he is up against it if he happens to be situated in a town where the periodicals are only issued once a week or bi-weekly.

But I am also a great believer in another kind of advertising, a kind that is as economical as it is effective. I am referring to the accessories handled by Universal and other producers. This kind of advertising happens to be important—vitally important—no matter what the local conditions are. Where newspaper or magazine advertising is resorted to, a good accessory campaign should also be layed out.

Don't stint on the final item on your program! Because it may be this last item that might make the S. R. O. sign change its meaning from "Sitting Room Only" to "STANDING ROOM ONLY!" You see, speaking from the "little things" even that one letter can be changed from "sitting" to "standing!"

Don't think that I am trying to tell you something you yourself are not aware of. The pity of it is, you realize that advertising has enriched great American and Canadian institutions to the tune of many millions. Yet, when it comes to laying out your own campaign, you—I'm not talking to a small minority, but a greater majority—sincerely believe that a few posters and a set of photos will "do the trick." How sadly mistaken you are, is only emphasized by the fact that your theatre seats sometimes aren't earning what they could, if you'd give them a little encouragement. That encouragement comes in the form of printer's ink, art work and good paper!

EVER hear that "variety was the spice of life!" Well, it's the spice of trade, too. Using variety in your advertising campaigns will make those campaigns run 100 per cent smoother. There is nothing truer than that ballyhooing every picture will make none stand out. But that shouldn't have anything to do with your "letting down" on using plenty of accessories. Here is an idea that will bring results of the highest order:

For instance, practically every picture leased these days is backed with numerous advertising accessories—all of which are prepared with the thought in mind that not everyone will be acceptable to your particular needs and requirements. But among these many styles of posters, these numerous lobby photos, slides, window cards, heralds, novelties, etc., are some that are just the thing to "work" for you—and work twenty-four hours, at that!

IT is for your own good to use one or two of these accessories on every picture. "Don't "herald" your patrons to death—don't "window card" them to death—don't "poster" them to death! Instead of using the very same accessories on every picture, why not do something like this:

Use posters one day, along with your regular lobby displays, of course—and slides of forthcoming productions. Don't be afraid to have many kinds of material around your theatre—advertising your forthcoming productions. Keep the "fans" waiting for your programs, not your competitors'.

Another day use 14 x 36 insert cards and heralds. On another, make use of many 22 x 28 colored photos for window displaying. Another day use plenty of window cards. These are great attention-getters. You can tack them to telegraph poles and also stand them in windows within a mile or two of your house. 11 x 14 colored photos are mighty fine eye-attractors in your merchant-friends' windows.

Then, on days when you don't get behind your program with a great deal of this regular type of accessories—and there should never be any of these days, but since there are, I'm mentioning it—a little thought should be given to splen-

Methods and Equipment for Lighting Stage Presentation Numbers

Combining Illumination and Painted Effects to Produce Spectacles

By A. L. Powell

Manager, Engineering Department
Edison Lamp Works of G. E. Co.

TO attempt to cover this subject in detail in the space or time available is indeed a task; one that is almost analogous to writing a paper on how to make women's clothes. Not only is there a wide variety of problems encountered, a great diversity in materials to work with, but also a constant change in style or fashion. It would require almost an encyclopedia to treat either subject.

In accomplishing the desired results in lighting, a great deal depends on what equipment is available, the size of the stage, and the possibility of mounting or hanging lighting equipment, but in addition to these physical limitations there is the great factor of the man behind the gun, or the man who designs and operates the lighting. There may be the best stage in the world, the most complete equipment, but without a knowledge of how to manipulate this to the best advantage, the effect will fall short of what is desired. On the other hand, the skilled or clever individual can take some makeshift pieces of apparatus and use these to such excellent advantage that the finished thing is a work of art. In no other field of lighting does the factor of experience play such a vital part.

It is to be assumed that the stage, wherever it may be, will have on it equipment for general lighting, as shown in the accompanying illustration, that is, border and foot lights. These, as pointed out before, should be such that several colors of general illumination are at one's disposal, and there should be a suitable means of controlling the intensity to any desired value; in other words, proper dimmers. For the finest effects it is even preferable that the general illumination be sub-divided; in other words, the border and foot lights separate into two separate sections, right stage and left stage, so that, if the action demands, one area can be appreciably brighter than the other.

This general lighting equipment is the groundwork or the canvas on which one should build or paint his other effects. There should be available in the electrical store-room devices as listed below, to be plugged in or brought into use whenever needed. The greater the number of these, the greater the variety of effects one can secure. The exact quantity of each item will depend on the size of the stage and the magnitude of the productions likely to be given. For the average size motion picture theatre, giving reasonably elaborate productions, it would be well to have the following:

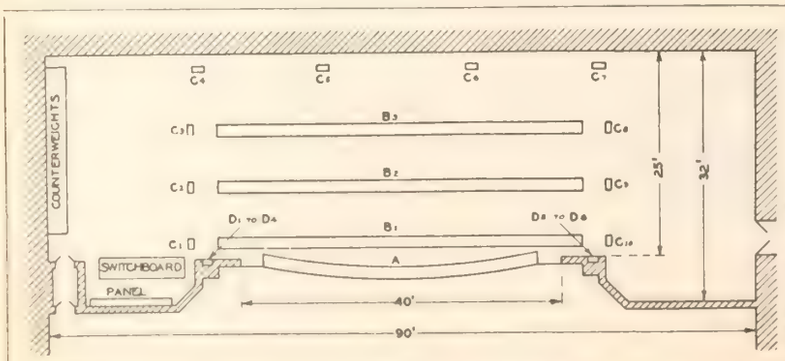
Strip lights, varying in length from four to eight feet, which can be equipped with any size lamp up to 150 watts, depending on the intensity desired	6
*Open box olivettes, equipped with 1000- or 1500-watt lamps	8
30-ampere direct-current hand-fed arc spotlights, with rheostats, for high intensity work from front-of-house	2†
*Standard large spotlights, equipped with 1000-, 1500- or 2000-watt lamps	4†
*Standard small spotlights, equipped with 500- or 1000-watt lamps	4
*Baby spotlights, equipped with 100-, 250- or 400-watt lamps	12
Footlight baby spotlights, equipped with 100-, 250- or 400-watt lamps	2
Suspension spotlights, equipped with 500- or 1000-watt lamps	4

* Should each be provided with extension stand with slide wire dimmer attached, and also with special pipe clamp, for batten mounting.

† Two extra condenser lenses, two slide carrier heads, and two sets of objective lenses, including 12-in., 10-in., and 6-in. focus, should be equipped with these spotlights for obtaining various effects. The following effect heads should be kept on hand: rain, snow, water ripple, moving fleecy clouds, and moving storm clouds.

In addition one must have a suitable quantity of gelatin color frames for the flood, lens lamps and baby spots.

With equipment of this general nature available, the proposition then becomes one of adapting it to individual settings. Each one will be different, each will require study and experimentation. The effect of colored light on the scene must be noted and the intensity and direction of each kind of lighting given attention.



As mentioned before, to tell the whole story of the application of light to the stage for all types of settings is an endless task. It might be approached by describing definite scenes and then outlining the method of lighting each of these, or, as the writer proposes, a description of how each type of special apparatus can be used, and then it is a relatively simple matter to pick out the right piece of apparatus for just the effect desired.

Strip lights equipped with clear lamps are often hung at an entrance doorway to give the effect of higher intensity out or doors or in the next room. Equipped with blue lamps and lying flat they may be used to heighten the effect of blue water, or to illuminate the lower portion of a sky background. Equipped with red and amber lamps and lying flat they can be manipulated on the dimmer to produce the effect of sunset on the back drop.

Open box flood lamps suspended close to the backdrop, equipped with blue color screens, are useful for the sky illumination; fitted with yellow or straw color screens placed outside of a window give the effect of high intensity sunlight out of doors. In fact this type of device with suitable color screens is particularly of service in providing higher intensities of partly localized, partly general illumination of just the tint required on certain parts of the scene.

Lens spot lamps suspended overhead are used to give splashes of high intensity color over a restricted area. Their uses are legion. For example, if there are several large ornamental vases or features of this character scattered about the scene, each should be prominently brought to the attention by a properly directed color spot. If there is a fountain in the scene, one or more shafts of light should be directed on this. They are the best means that the stage artist has of producing the effect that the audience thinks should exist on the stage and yet from physical limitations do not exist.

For instance, if there is a kerosene lamp burning on the table the audience visual-izes this rather weak light source as creating fairly good illumination in the area immediately surrounding it. The audience does not stop to think that there would only be a small circle of dim light directly beneath the lamp and practically no illumination on the faces of the characters surrounding the table, but if at the time the lamp is lighted or turned up a properly placed overhead spotlamp, equipped with a reddish amber color medium, is turned on or brought up on a dimmer, casting its restricted circle of illumination over the table and group, the effect is just as if the lamp did the lighting. Similarly if a character walks on the scene with a hand lantern and he is followed with a spot from overhead, you get the impression that this hand lantern is giving the effect.

IF there happens to be a center fixture in the setting and this equipped with powerful enough lamps to give some appreciable illumination to the scene, it would be glaring and annoying to the audience, whereas small lamps can actually be used in the fixture and a spot, with a straw or light yellow screen fairly well spread, used to direct the light beneath the fixture.

The baby spots can be used to give special illumination for the actors' faces and effects of the character just described.

The ordinary lens lamp equipped with a single condenser gives a circular spot of light with not very well defined edges. If in addition to this condenser an extra condenser is installed and an objective lens, a spot of very definite shape is produced, for you have virtually the combination of the stereopticon or magic lantern. In front of the second condenser is inserted a lantern slide carrier and this will hold a cut-out of some particular shape. Such definitely shaped spots have a field of application that has never been taken advantage of.

As an example of a simple, effective use of such a device, suppose a solo dancer is representing the "Spirit of St. Valentine's Day." Instead of painting the drop or cyclorama in color, this might well be of a white or some light, neutral tint, the entire stage flooded with pink light and a clear spot in the shape of a heart used to follow the dancer. The clear light will be of a sufficiently higher intensity to overcome, as one might say, the colored light and the dancer would constantly appear in a white spot. As soon as the spot moved, that position would again appear pink. This is obviously more attractive than if the drop were painted pink and a spot lamp merely gave a greater brilliancy in the area of the spot. By working with uncolored drapes, applying the color in light rather than in pigment, effects far in advance of past practices can be readily obtained.

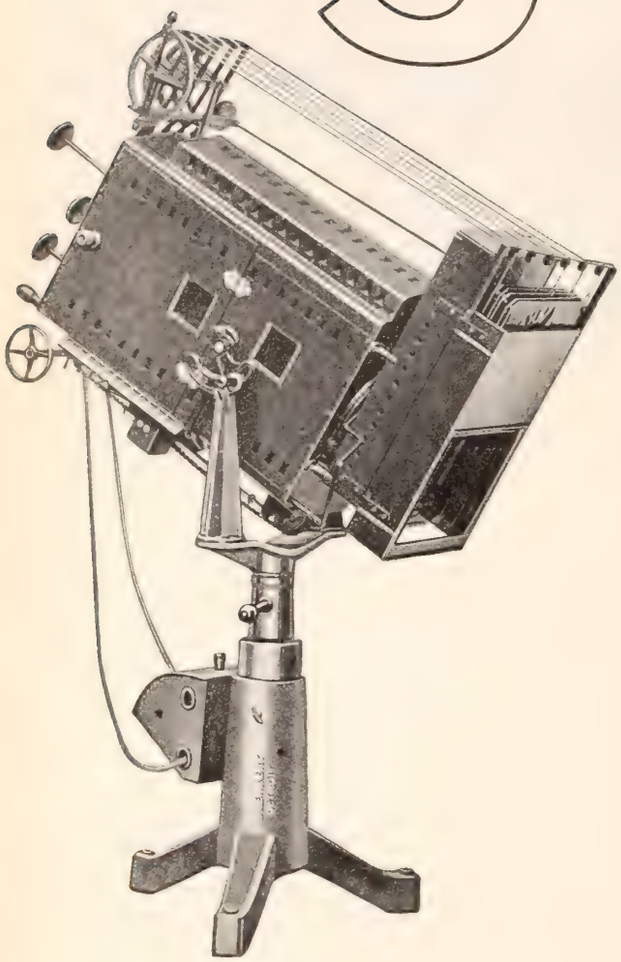
There are a number of effects that can be produced by having the above mentioned combination available, and making the auxiliary apparatus "on the job." For example, if it is desired to have a number of stars appear on the blue flooded backdrop, a sciopticon with a short focus objective lens giving a wide spread of light is used. In the lantern slide carrier is inserted a piece of metal foil with small pin pricks at desired locations. The light shines through these minute holes and gives the effect of clear, white stars in the sky. The holes can be so arranged as to reproduce the various constellations, such as the Great Dipper, the Bear, and so forth.

View of a typical stage with equipment which incorporates most of latest developments of artistic stage lighting devices. No standard type borderlights are used. The footlights merely supply illumination to the front curtain when down. All the stage lighting is done from equipment which is designed to control the distribution of light or confine it to desired areas. Behind the tormentors, supported by pipe mountings, are 18 large and 5 small "tormentor hoods" and 12 standard small spotlights. On the front bridge is provision for mounting any spotlight equipment desired. The cyclorama is specially lighted. For "front of the house" lights 6 "soft edge" spotlights are recessed in a ceiling beam above the auditorium proper.

EVEN a home-made water ripple can be reproduced by using the sciopticon. A piece of ripple glass is placed in the slide carrier, together with a cardboard mask in which a jagged wedge-shaped cut has been made. On a piece of clear window glass is painted, with ordinary lamp dip, a series of irregular, parallel, blue and green stripes of different densities, interspersed with stripes of clear glass. Moving this slowly up and down in front of the objective lens gives the ripple.

All sorts of lightning can be obtained by having in the lantern slide holder a cardboard mask in which is very carefully cut a representation of bolt or forked lightning, then focussing this at the part where the lightning is supposed to strike. With a piece of cardboard or with the hand, the objective lens is covered and uncovered, giving the lightning flash.

If the electrician or man in charge of the lighting is clever with the brush or camera, he can make many types of slides for use in the sciopticon projector. If a rainbow is to be produced he can paint a piece of glass, of lantern slide size (3¼ by 4 in.), jet black, save that portion to be occupied by the arc of the rainbow, and then stripe in the concentric circles of the spectrum. A piece of frosted gelatin close to the glass will give sufficient diffusion to overcome any appearance of too great a regularity in the painting, and cause the colors to blend together. This is focused on the part of the scene where the rainbow is supposed to fall. The black on the glass prevents the light from striking the remainder of the scene, the colors only being projected.



Stationary clouds can be obtained by using in the lantern slide carrier a positive, on transparent celluloid film, of a picture of an actual photograph of the clouds in the sky, which has been intensified so that the white of the cloud is as clear as possible and the blue of the sky as dark as possible. A color filter should be used on the camera when making this exposure, to heighten the contrast.

MOVING effects may be obtained with an apparatus similar to the sciopticon, with the single exception that in place of the stationary lantern slide carrier is substituted a revolving disk. This disk is painted in the appropriate manner and is driven by an adjustable speed motor or clock-work mechanism. This is used to produce the effect of running water, falling rain or snow, moving clouds, flames, fireworks, sand storms, and innumerable special illusions.

A number of effect machines placed in various positions and operated at different speeds are used for some of the realistic cloud effects often seen with the spectacular productions. Abroad, a rather intricate and somewhat cumbersome piece of apparatus is used for cloud effects, as mentioned in a previous article. The

5 Vital Features of the New Brenkert C-14

These five vital features of the New Brenkert C-14 gives to the theatre a type of projection service that has never before been possible. The machines are designed and manufactured according to Brenkert standards of quality which have always represented the highest attainable. For complete information regarding Brenkert products just write

1. Specially designed arc burner allows perfect control of the light source. The special rack and pinion assure steady precise feeding. A perfect clear cut spot is maintained for the entire length of the carbon turn.

2. Counter balanced lamp house allows perfect control of the light beam. This counterbalancing mechanism makes it unnecessary to clamp the lamp house which is always free to be moved in any position but never moves itself.

3. Double lens equipment gives spot or flood instantly. Each lens is selected to give finest results. A brilliant flood or a clean cut spot may be had at the twist of your wrist.

4. Flame shield eliminates false images giving a perfectly round, sharply defined disc of light. No tail flame, no double image effect.

5. Quick, sure color control. Each color is indicated on a chart directly below the control handle. A press of the trigger on the handle puts the desired color in position instantly.

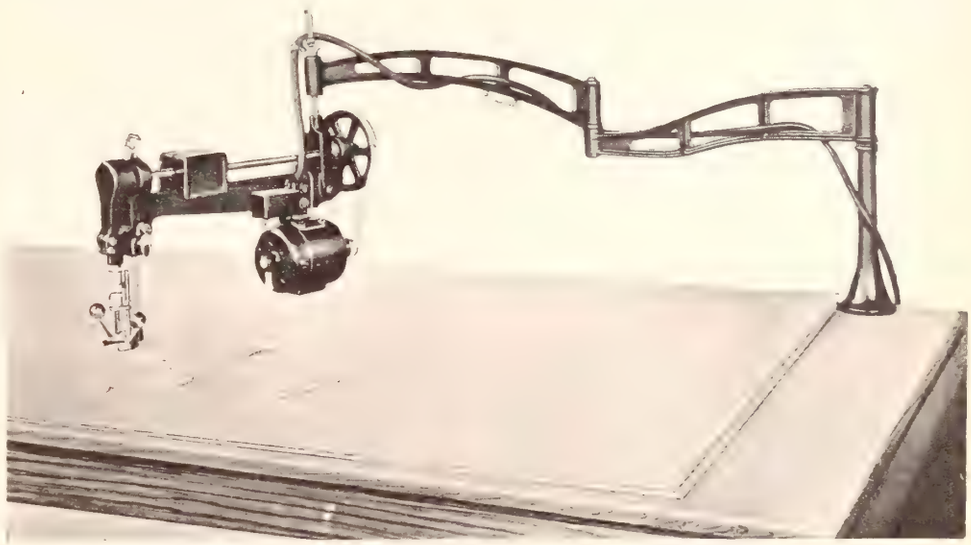
Power Machine for Cutting Out Lobby Displays

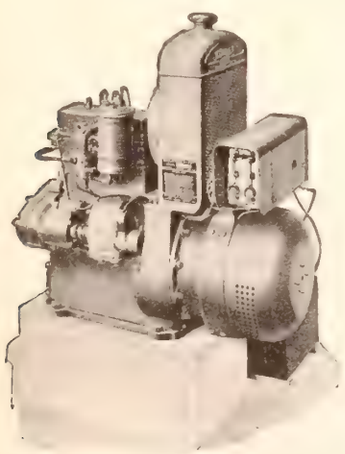


AN apparatus that many exhibitors are finding of exceptional use in the operation of theatres is the International Cutawl. This mechanism enables the theatre man to cut out the most intricate designs for display purposes in lobbies, etc.

This machine permits of broad sweep effects and delicate applique work. It is quickly and inexpensively done whether heavy cardboard, wall board, paper or tissue is used.

The cutawl is a motor driven machine and it is claimed to be exceptionally easy to operate. It does not use an ordinary jig saw principle, but does the cutting with a sort of cutting blade, which acts similar to the needle action of a sewing machine.

The operator guides the tiny chisel around the outline of the desired design, traced out upon the wall board surface, and the chisel cuts away those portions of the surface not wanted. The hand method of making cutouts is to use a jig saw to cut the board along the outline of the profile to be made.



The device has been used by window display and commercial sign and poster studios for a long time, but its introduction to the uses of the theatre man is fairly recent and is the result of the widespread use of marquee and frontal display of an elaborate nature made by the theatre's own staff, and frequently the manager himself.

The International Cutawl, equipped with a 1/20 horse power motor, and designed for making cutouts from paper, fabrics and light wood.

As will be noted in the accompanying illustration, the extension arm of the cutawl permits of the cutting out of large designs. It has a cutting radius of forty-four inches.

The cutawl is driven with a 1/20 horsepower motor, operating on either direct or alternating 110 volt circuit.

Kohler Automatic Electric Plant

Insures Against Stolen and Counterfeit Tickets

A GREAT deal of interest has been aroused by the new Cancellograph which has been put on the market by the Automatc Ticket Register Corporation.

This machine, without mutilating or defacing the ticket, puts a secret mark on each ticket issued through the register. This secret mark is a ribbed line of raised dots on the back of the ticket—a mark which the patron does not see, but which the doorman can instantly detect with his finger tips.

This method of marking, it is claimed, provides complete protection against stolen and counterfeit ticket supplies.

This particular protecting device is obtainable as an attachment, when specified, to the Model 28, Gold Seal Automatic Ticket Register.

A Light and Power Plant for Emergency Service

EACH year considerable money is lost by exhibitors through failure of the power supply, particularly in rural communities. The only means of preventing this loss is through an auxiliary power supply.

One of the systems that is proving successful as an electrical supply in theatres is the Kohler Automatic Power and Lighting Plant. This plant consists of a generator which is driven by a small four cylinder gasoline engine, the throttling of which is mechanically governed by the demand for current when the emergency system is used.

This auxiliary lighting is automatically started upon the failure of the regular current supply to operate, and automatically stops when the regular source of supply is again available.

These plants are manufactured in 800, 1500 and 2000 and 5000 Watt capacities and are furnished with storage batteries for starting and gasoline storage tanks. No main storage battery installations are required.

New Electric Sign Offered for Theatre Use

A NEW departure in theatre sign lighting is claimed for the Longsign, the invention of John E. Long, of Multnomah, Ore., and now being manufactured in 3 sizes (4 to 6 foot lengths for interior display, and 10 foot length for use on marquee display).

The leading advantage claimed for the Longsign is that it places no limit on the message to be displayed. It is possible to display by means of the sign advertising for the entire program and as well include announcements of coming attractions.

The operating principle of the sign is this: A narrow tape, on which the wording is stenciled, travels through the mechanism of the sign and the perforations in the type form electrical contacts which transmit to a bank of electric lights any message desired, and which moves at right angles.

"Aim at a Star . . ."

AN old saying goes, "Better aim at a star than shoot down a well; you'll hit higher." When selecting a pipe organ for your theatre, don't shoot down a well.

The remarkable performance of Page Unit Orchestral Organs is the finest recommendation they can have. Wonderful tonal qualities and instantaneous response make them supreme for the theatre. The picture-going public has fallen in love with Page Organs wherever they have been installed.

PAGE ORGANS

and Page Organ Players

THE same fine materials and design that distinguish Page Unit Organs, are features of Page Organ Players. Page Players solve the problem of attractive music for small-town and suburban theatre owners. From ordinary 88-note piano rolls, purchaseable anywhere, they provide the best orchestral pipe organ music with extraordinary naturalness. The Page patented solo device enables the operator to select the solo or obligato at will. Page Players can be installed anywhere or attached to any modern organ now in use. Getting Down to the Bottom of Courtesy Service

For courtesy is as important to the prosperity of the little community house as it is to that of the de luxe theatre in the downtown section of a large city.

One of the most important things which a well drilled house staff contributes to the attractions of a theatre is the air of poise and dignity which is maintained at all times and under all circumstances. In this connection a factor of first consideration is the ability of ushers to deal effectively with instances of fainting, sudden illness or fits with which patrons sometimes are stricken.

Art Smith provides against this emergency by conducting a course in first aid and instructions as to the correct method for removing patrons so stricken to a part of the theatre where they can be properly treated without disturbing other members of the audience.

"In a Broadway theatre which I attended recently there was a case which illustrated the importance of this factor. A man seated in the orchestra was stricken with a fit. The ushers, apparently uninstructed as to how to act in the emergency, became flustered, and before the man was removed to a lounge at the rear of the house a great commotion was set up. It interrupted the performance, and no doubt had the effect of upsetting many of the patrons as depressing and an untimely incident to occur when they were at the theatre.

"If the ushers have been properly drilled in dealing with situations of that sort, no such commotion and disturbance could develop to mar the performance and deprive the stricken person of proper emergency treatment."

Methods for Lighting Stage Presentation Numbers

same general effects can be obtained through the use of two or more standard sciopticons.

Home-made log fires are easy to execute. The logs themselves can be made by shapping papier-maché over a form constructed of half-inch mesh wire. To the back of the logs is attached a series of silk streamers of varying lengths and shapes. Beneath the group of logs is placed a small electric fan blowing upward. A small section of strip light, equipped with red lamps, is also beneath the logs, and is brought up on a dimmer simultaneously with the fan. The light strikes the silk moving in the breeze, giving the effect of flames.

One might go on and describe little tricks of the trade at considerable length, but these few examples indicate the simplicity with which certain effects can be obtained.

Many of the types of prologues are of what might be termed a purely decorative character, where no especial attempt is made to imitate nature, and the effect is dependent on striking contrasts of color in mass. The color of the scenery can be appreciably intensified or made more vivid by throwing on it light of the same color; for, as explained in other papers, the reflection will be at its maximum value.

In closing it might be well to describe the lighting of a particular scene of this nature. Let us suppose a fairyland setting with a plain back backdrop of a vivid orange color with distant castles, towers and minarets outlined in strong black. The stage floor is covered with bright green artificial grass. Right and left are two huge vases. Back stage center is the fairy princess, asleep on a couch, clothed in a white robe.

The backdrop is flooded from overhead open box lights and at the base a series of strip lights, all with orange color screens. The entire area covered by grass is flooded by bright green light from overhead spots. On each of the two vases is a spot of purple or magenta light covering the entire vase. The flower beds are picked out by baby spots with red or pink screens, while the couch of the princess is illuminated by a high intensity clear or white spot. The color contrasts with this combination are of the highest order, yet delicately blended together.

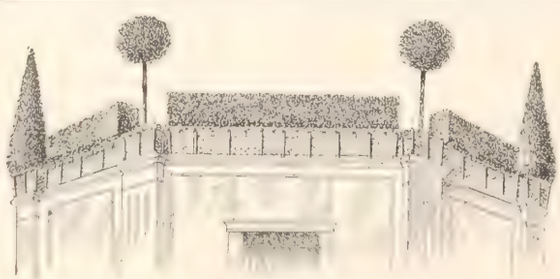
FROM the very inception of the motion picture theatre in its present form, Peter Clark equipment has been recognized as standard.

From the last quarter century, during each step forward in the progress of theatre design, Peter Clark equipment has more than kept pace with the requirements of the better theatre.

Furthermore, straight through this march of progress, Peter Clark stage rigging, counterweight system and equipment, and, more recently, organ console and orchestra lifts, have been practically the unanimous choice for the country's best houses.



Only sincerity of product, backed by engineering genius, can earn for a manufacturer a record such as Peter Clark, Inc., holds in the motion picture equipment field.

show how it takes the dirt out of the air as it is being drawn into the blower. The motor operating the blower is shown in operation making 1750 revolutions per minute.

The last journey shows the console at rest. Then it shows the console being raised to the level of the audience by an elevator. In order to make this part of the film clear, the electric control handle which works this elevator is also demonstrated. And as a finale, the picture shows a close-up of Ernest Hunt at the console playing a march which is synchronized on the screen with a flash of the change of stops as he makes them. The end of the march played on the organ and a bow from the organist on the screen occur simultaneously. This brings to an end this interesting, instructive and highly original reel.

Explaining the picture, Mr. Hunt states that he was led to make it because the popular opinion prevails that the entire organ is contained in the console, the only visible part of the instrument. This is an error easy to understand as the rest of the instrument is concealed. He made the reel in the State theatre with a great deal of difficulty, however, for only with great patience was it possible for the cameraman to set his camera in the small places between the pipes. Double arc lights were used for taking the picture. The photographer managed to climb into the extreme corner of the swell shadows and took successfully a panorama of the organ, balancing the camera all the while on his knee. The result is somewhat jerky and resembles pictures taken from an airplane, but it gives a splendid demonstration of the organ as a whole.

Hunt estimates that the reel, including subtitles and art work, cost in the neighborhood of $150. It was a hard job, but he now has the satisfaction of playing daily to people who understand what he is playing, and how he is getting certain effects, for now his audience knows "Where the Music Comes From."

and odors emanating from the assembled audience. As the moisture evaporating from the skin is carried away by the breeze, evaporation is quickened. When any liquid evaporates it absorbs heat and this heat comes from the nearest available source, which in this case is the skin. Thus it is that gentle breezes of fresh air make us feel comfortably cool in hot weather.

A very effective method of cooling the theatre is by atmospheric conditioning.

The Syncrovertor Guarantees Economy and Dependability in Picture Projection

THE trend today in motion picture equipment is in the direction of greater efficiency at less cost. The development of the Liberty Syncrovertor for current rectification is therefore a matter of chief interest to every theatre owner and projectionist.

The Syncrovertor has, quiet convincingly, proven its ability to save 25% in costs of current rectification over other types of installations. In addition to its normal function of rectification, its transformer also acts as an emergency unit if anything happens to the motor element. Where the Syncrovertor is used the "change-over" is effected without any flicker whatever on the screen.

The Syncrovertor is made in four types, complete with ballasts, controls, meters, etc.

Air Conditioning for the Smaller Theatre

vestment for, the neighborhood house or the fine, small theatre.

An important element of the expense involved in the installation of air conditioning equipment in an old theatre and to a somewhat lesser degree in a theatre which includes air conditioning in its original design, has been the alteration of the old house to accommodate the equipment or the adaptation of the original plans to include the equipment. This has been so obvious that the greater efforts of the architects and engineers in bringing a complete system of air conditioning within the reach of the smaller theatre, have been toward the minimizing of these necessary alterations or adaptations toward standardizing the spaces and locations provided for equipment and toward compactness in the equipment.

In this work of simplification and from these efforts to reduce the installation expense, has come the ejector system of air distribution and circulation which has been ideally adapted to the small theatre and, in many cases, is adaptable to the very large houses. The new method has all of the advantages of the downward diffusion of conditioned air but reduces to a very large extent, the cost of makng openings in the ceilings and the construction of extensive metal duct systems. It likewise eliminates the extensive exhaust air chambers beneath the floors.

Following the original object of making air conditioning available to the small theatres, attention has been directed to the development of centrifugal refrigeration units in smaller capacities than those which have been generally used in the larger theatres. This work has been successful and is another step toward making complete and automatic air conditioning equipment an economic possibility for the smaller theatre.

It is advisable here, to say that air conditioning will always be a special engineering problem for each theatre and that the extent of further standardization will in general apply only to the units of equipment that go to make up the system. The ultimate success of any system depends on the engineering and upon the complete responsibility of the air conditioning engineers in the design, selection, installation and adjustment of the complete system.

Though undoubtedly further advances will be made in the direction of price reduction and standardization, which is the history of every development, the time has come when air conditioning equipment is available for, and will prove a profitable investment to, a large circle of theatres which a few years ago could not have given consideration to the proposition.

We are not without examples of the profitable application of air conditioning in the smaller theatre. In fact, one of the very first completely air conditioned theatres of the country was the Texan, a 1500-seat house operated by Will Horwitz, Jr., in Houston, Texas, on a ticket charge of 25c. The air conditioning engineers never understood how he made it pay on this basis but he has done so and he is a most enthusiastic advocate of air conditioning. He has since extended the system to include an older theatre, the Iris, a 1200-seat house in the same city.

The Capitol, a 1150-seat combined vaudeville and motion picture theatre n Shamokin, Pa., is another good example. This house increased its top admission from 50c to 65c upon the introduction of the cooling and air conditioning system, but had no difficulty in maintaining an increased attendance through all seasons.

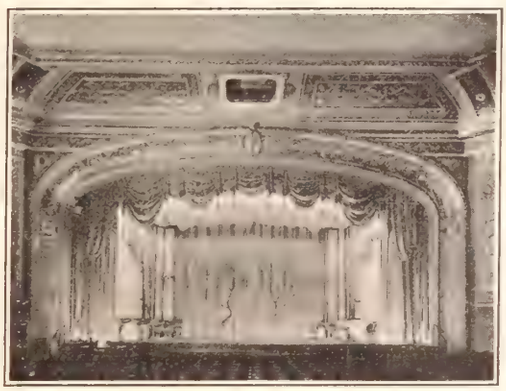
The 1000-seat houses, the Eastern and Clinton, operated by James Enterprises, in Columbus, Ohio, have greeted the present summer season with complete air conditioning systems. Likewise, the Grand operated by Biggo Brothers, a 1070-seat house in Steubenville, Ohio.

The B. S. Moss Theatres Corporation has in operaton or under construction air conditioning systems in seven neighborhood theatres distributed on Manhattan Island, in Brooklyn and on Long Island.

The new Franklin Theatre, in Tampa, a 900-seat house operated by Publix Theatre Corporation has complete air conditioning equipment.

The Gumbiner Theatre now under construction in Los Angeles, a 900-seat house, is being completely equipped for cooling and air conditioning.

It is very difficult to arrive at figures on the possible cost of air conditioning in the small theatre which would apply in all cases or would even be a fair average. However, we suggest the following, leaning toward the maximum cost, if we vary at all from the average. Figures are available which show an average cost, for air conditioning throughout the year, of 3c per seat per day. This includes deprecation, the engneer's salary, power, steam, water, interest on the investment, and all possible incidental charges. Naturally, the cost of operation during the winter is much less than in the summer, due to the fact that refrigeration is not required. On the assumption that each seat in the theatre is occupied at least twice a day, and this is below the reasonable expectation of the first-class theatre, the cost per ticket to make a patron comfortable is 1½c.



While considering this cost the theatre owner should also consider that many items which are included therein are those which would have to be borne under any circumstance. The system replaces the ordinary heating, air washing or air filtration and fan systems which might be installed in the theatre and this is also true in the employment of an attendant or attendants.

What Cooling Systems Will Do for Your Theatre

The heat is actually removed from the air by refrigerating machines. Perhaps a few words in description of the atmospheric conditioning system will not be amiss here and will give the exhibitor a clearer conception of cooling by refrigeration. Water evaporates more quickly if the water vapor is constantly withdrawn from the surface, and even more rapidly if the atmospheric pressure is reduced. In this process of evaporation, heat is being absorbed just as heat is necessary for the transformation of water into steam.

Now, if the water is placed in a thermos bottle and connection is made with a vacuum pump, evaporation will proceed so rapidly that the water will boil. Since there is no outside source of heat, the heat must come from the water itself, which means that while boiling, the water is also being cooled. This actually takes place until finally the water congeals and freezes.

In modern refrigeration the same principle is used except that special materials, other than water, are refrigerative mediums. These materials, in the form of gas, are highly compressed and then allowed to expand. The expansion corresponds to the evaporation of water with the attendant absorption of heat. If the coils in which the expansion goes on are submerged in water, the heat necessary for the expansion will be extracted from the water. The now cold water is sprayed into a chamber through which the air to cool the theatre is blown. In passing through this chamber the air is washed and cooled. In fact, the air becomes so cold that much of the humidity is condensed and precipitated. Then after warming the air to the desired temperature, it is distributed to every part of the theatre through a network of sheet metal ducts.

By this method the temperature and humidity of the theatre may be controlled quite accurately regardless of outside weather conditions.

The Breeze-making System blows fresh air, no matter what the temperature is, into the theatre in continuous, gentle breezes, and affects the person as if he were at the beach. The Breeze-making System is a natural method of cooling. Therefore, it is effective, as has been proved in thousands of theatres all over the world.

However, as with everything else, the Breeze System must be efficient to be of any value. It takes experience in theatre cooling and competent engineers to design and install an efficient system. It does not mean sticking a fan or a blower wherever convenient.

CHICAGO INDORSES
the
SILVERSHEET

When the Buckingham Theatre, installed its new Silversheet, it printed this on the front page of its program

"In keeping with its desire to give its patrons the best possible entertainment, the management has had a new "SILVERSHEET" projection screen installed in the Buckingham Theatre. The new screen is the finest projection screen that money can buy."

"The surface is scientifically designed to reproduce all details the camera has caught in the picture. The perfection of this screen can best be appreciated by watching such small objects as eyes, eyelashes and leaves on trees. It shows the picture uniformly bright to all sections of the house, making all seats equally desirable. We invite you to make such comparison and observe the remarkable brilliancy of 'Buckingham' pictures."

Radio-Phonograph Supplies Musical Accompaniments

Home-Assembled Combination Provides Overtures and Scores at Regent Theatre in St. Paul

JULIUS HIELBRON, manager of the Regent theatre, St. Paul, always has plenty of good music in his theatre. His patrons can always hear the best orchestras and bands in the country, afternoons or evenings. They can hear stirring marches, or dreamy waltzes or the latest jazz hit played just as it should be played. And the best part of it is—from Mr. Hielbron's point of view—that he doesn't have to hire an orchestra or band to provide this music.

The Regent has a radio-phonograph combination which Mr. Hielbron believes is just about unbeatable. Those who have listened to it say that volume and tone are about as perfect as you could wish, and that the accompaniment provided for the pictures is up to the standard provided at many of the larger houses with orchestra.

But let Mr. Hielbron explain his radio-phone, as he calls it:

"I had a table made about four feet high with a 2 x 5 top, on which I have two turntables such as are used on phonographs, each one of which has a small electric motor underneath. Between the two tables is located a so-called Bristophone, which is an electric device or pickup onto which the needle is fastened the same as on the arm of a phonograph. This Bristophone can be turned, as it is small, and fastened on a swivel, so it can be placed on either record on the turntables. These records I pick out for the particular comedy or feature on the screen.

"The entire outfit is located in a small room adjoining our booth, from which a wire leads to a loudspeaker located beneath the screen at a distance of about 110 feet. This reproduces the sound from the record to perfection, so it can be distinctly heard all over the auditorium. A small rheostat on the outfit regulates the volume of sound.

"In addition to the phonograph, I also have a No. 20 R. C. radio receiver which also uses the same loudspeaker, and by simply throwing the switch, we can have either radio or phonograph music. The sound is so much alike that it is difficult to distinguish one from the other. Having a small loudspeaker on top of the receiver, before throwing in the switch we can tell if the radio music is suitable to the picture on the screen.

"The cost of operation is about $2.50 a month for electricity. The outfit is working in highly satisfactory fashion, and I would not be without it at any price. The entire cost of installation amounted to about $600."

Putting Variety in the Drive With Accessories

did accessories such as pennants, banners, buttons, paper masks and hats, post cards of stars and novelties such as door-knob hangers and lobby streamers. These are all excellent in going after stagnant patronage.

For instance, to give you a better idea of what I mean: On the Denny productions, whether you play the most recent or one of his pictures released several months ago, you can make use of the colorful banner—which has been prepared in such a way that it is adaptable for all of his pictures. Then, there are paper and linen pennants, also usable for any and all of the Denny product.

For Hoot Gibson pictures, there is a stock banner also. The same procedure of saving money—and getting the benefit of worthwhile advertising—can be resorted to here.

On "The Collegians" Universal has issued pennants and banners, along with a line of advertising accessories. On Stern Brothers Comedies, there are buttons, post cards and heralds. Who knows but many of your patrons can be urged to attend your theatre on the strength of "Buster Brown"? There are post cards and many other novelties prepared to help you make known the fact that you are playing "Snookums," "Keeping Up With the Joneses," "Mike and Ike," "Let George Do It." There is an "Oswald, the Lucky Rabbit" button, and a line of material for "Blake of Scotland Yard," including a cardboard badge.

So the showman has many things to choose from. You can make your campaigns varied—you can bring to the attention of patrons and would-be patrons a different advertising accessory every day.
